STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

A Doctor is considered equivalent to God as provider of second life to the dying person, but he is also a human being. Many times the relatives, attendants or friends of a patient assault and/or use criminal force against medical and health service professionals for delay in attending patient or other petty reasons intimidate medical and health service professionals to face severe consequences, if they fail in curing the patient from illness. Every day such incidents of assault, using criminal force or intimidation against medical and health service professionals take place in many Government hospitals, private hospitals, clinics and nursing homes, etc.

At present there is no legislation to curb the acts of assault, use of criminal force or intimidation against medical and health service professionals in medical or service institutions, etc.

In the wake of repetitive incidents of assault, criminal force or intimidation against medical and health service professionals, it is the need of hour to enact a specific legislation for protection of medical and other healthcare service persons from any form of assault, criminal force or intimidation by any person and making such acts as a punishable offence, so as to create a deterrence among offenders.
