- (b) The fellowship amount was provided by the Department of Biotechnology to the implementing agencies under their respective Biotech-KISAN Hub projects, which was further distributed to the beneficiary farmers by the implementing agencies. Any digital barriers faced by woman farmers, when applying for and utilizing these fellowships, have been taken care by the implementing agencies themselves.
- (c) & (d) The Biotech-KISAN scheme provides provision for financial assistance to the Biotech-KISAN Hubs at the rate of Rs. 6.0 lakhs/annum to support fellowship for a minimum five farmers including Mahila Biotech-KISAN fellowships to promote them as lead farmers and grass-root trainers. The measures and strategies have been laid down by the implementing agencies to ensure equitable distribution of Mahila Biotech-KISAN fellowships, particularly for marginalized and rural women. In order to enlarge the coverage and impact of the projects, some of the implementing agencies modified the criteria of financial assistance depending upon the availability of funds and eligible farmers.
