(b) With a view to check volatile inflows and outflows of foreign portfolio investment, appropriate prudential measures to limit such flows have been put in place. These, inter-alia, include restrictions on the eligible securities that an FPI can invest in, limits for purchase of shares in a company, government securities and corporate bonds, minimum maturity restrictions for purchase of debt securities and priority to long term investors. For incentivizing long-term investors, separate investment limits have been carved out for them.
