  29. In the case of the Multi-State Cooperative Societies Bill, 1977, Proviso to Rule 74 was not suspended as the Speaker held that the Proviso to Rule was superfluous and in case of Financial Bills its suspension was not necessary. On the same day, another Financial Bill of Category ‘A’, the Mental Health Bill, 1978 which was listed for reference to Joint Committee after suspending the Proviso to Rule 74, was referred to the Joint Committee without suspension of the Proviso— L.S. Deb., 15-5-1978, cc. 265-77.
  30. The Bill provided inter alia for making of contributions by the Union Government to the Integration and Development Fund to be maintained by the State Bank of India, and also for appointment of auditors to examine and report on the accounts of the Bank.
  31. There was likelihood of some increase in the workload of the Forward Markets Commission, which might necessitate the strengthening of the Commission by appointment of a fourth member and some additional staff.

Unlike a Money Bill or a Financial Bill of Category 'A', a Financial Bill containing proposals which involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India, i.e., of Category 'B' may be introduced in either House and it does not require any recommendation of the President for its introduction. However, a separate recommendation of the President is essential for its consideration by each House and unless such recommendation has been received, the House can not pass the Bill<sup>38</sup>.

In case a Bill of Category 'B' passed by Lok Sabha with the President's recommendation is returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments, a fresh recommendation would not be necessary for consideration of the amendments made by Rajya Sabha even if there is an increase in the expenditure involved. Likewise, a fresh recommendation of the President for consideration of a Bill, as reported by Select Committee/Joint Committee and a revised financial memorandum thereto, are not necessary even if the expenditure involved is likely to increase as a result of the changes made by the Committee in the Bill.

The recommendation of the President for the consideration of a Bill has to be obtained by the member in-charge before a motion for consideration of the Bill is made.

The Minister of Law has expressed the view that although the constitutional requirements would be met if the recommendation of the President is obtained before the motion for passing of a Bill is moved, the possibility of the President refusing to recommend could not be ruled out. Hence, immediately before the stage of consideration begins, the mover should produce the recommendation so that the House might not engage itself on labours which ultimately might turn out to be fruitless<sup>39</sup>.

32. The Bill provided for an increase in the maximum strength of the Supreme Court by four more Judges.

33. The Bill contemplated, inter alia, the establishment of a Board for the planning and integrated implementation of measures for the control of floods and erosion of banks of the river in the Brahmaputra valley.

34. The Bill provided for the constitution of an armed force of the Union for combating terrorist activities named the National Security Guards and for deeming the existing force as a statutory one.

35. The Bill provided for extending the term of the expiring law from five to ten years. The Union Government had to bear expenditure in regard to the enforcement machinery set up under the parent Act for five more years.

36. The Bill provided, inter alia, for setting up of appropriate mechanism to provide need-based maintenance to the parents and senior citizens, provisions of better medical facilities and setting up of old age homes in every district.

37. The Bill provided inter alia for incorporation of the Rajiv Gandhi National Institute of Youth Development and to declare it as an institution of national importance.

38. Art. 117 (3); see also L.S. Deb., 29-9-1955, cc. 15760-813.

39. P. Deb., (II), 12-4-1951, cc. 6727-28.

In the case of a Government Bill, the recommendation of the President may, however, be obtained while discussion on the Bill continues<sup>40</sup>.

In case of doubt as to whether a Bill, if enacted, would involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India, the Minister concerned is asked to furnish the recommendation of the President for consideration of the Bill or, in the alternative, a no-expenditure certificate.

The recommendation of the President for consideration of a Bill is required even where the Bill would, if enacted, involve expenditure indirectly<sup>41</sup>.

A Financial Bill (of Category 'A'), if enacted, may also involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India. In such a case, the recommendation of the President would be required both for its introduction and consideration<sup>42</sup>.

Financial Memoranda to Bills Involving Expenditure

A Bill involving expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India is required to be accompanied by a financial memorandum which outlines the objects on which the expenditure is likely to be involved. The memorandum has to invite particular attention to the clauses involving expenditure and also to give an estimate of the recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved in case the Bill is passed into law. However, where, it is not possible to give the estimates of recurring and non-recurring expenditure, the Speaker may permit the introduction/consideration of the Bill<sup>43</sup>. Such clauses or provisions in the Bill are printed in thick type or in italics. Where, however, a clause in a Bill involving expenditure has not been printed in thick type or in italics,

42. Examples of such Bills are: the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959; the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Second Amendment Bill, 1959; the Tripura Land Revenue and Land Reforms Bill, 1960; the Estate Duty (Amendment) Bill, 1960; the National Housing Bank Bill, 1987; the Interest on Delayed Payments to Small Scale and Ancillary Undertakings Bill, 1993; the National Tax Tribunal Bill, 2004; the Science and Engineering Research Board Bill, 2008; the High Court and Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Amendment Bill, 2008; the Life Insurance Corporation (Amendment) Bill, 2008; the Companies Bill, 2011; and the Agricultural Biosecurity Bill, 2013.

43. On 9 September 1965, during the discussion on motion for consideration of the Union Territories (Direct Election to House of People) Bill, 1965, an objection was raised by a member that the Financial Memorandum appended to the Bill did not give an estimate of recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved. The Speaker held that normally such estimate should be given but failure to do so did not throw out the Bill. – L.S. Deb., 9-9-1965, cc. 4769-72.

The Financial Memorandum appended to the Universities for Research and Innovation Bill, 2012 inter alia stated that at that stage it was difficult to make any estimate of the expenditure which might be involved as it would depend upon the number of public funded Universities for Research and Innovation that the Government might decide to establish. Though the Financial Memorandum did not give estimates of recurring and non-recurring expenditure, in view of the ruling given by the Speaker and the position stated in the Financial Memorandum, revised Financial Memorandum was not asked for and the Bill was allowed to be introduced on 21 May 2012.

the member in-charge of the Bill shall, with the permission of the Speaker, bring such clauses to the notice of the House<sup>44</sup>.

If the financial memorandum relating to a Government Bill is found to be incomplete, the Minister concerned is asked to furnish all the details, and copies of the revised memorandum are circulated separately to members for their information<sup>45</sup>.

In a case where recurring expenditure is involved but no non-recurring expenditure or vice versa, and this fact is not mentioned in the financial memorandum

The Financial Memorandum appended to the Street Vendor (Protection of Livelihood and Regulation of Street Vending) Bill, 2012 inter alia stated that the total financial implication in terms of recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved in carrying out various functions under the Bill would be borne by local authorities, State Governments and the Central Government and it was not possible to estimate the exact recurring and non-recurring expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India at that stage. Though the Financial Memorandum did not give estimates of recurring and non-recurring expenditure, in view of the ruling given by the Speaker and the position stated in the Financial Memorandum, revised Financial Memorandum was not asked for and the Bill was allowed to be introduced on 6 September 2012.

44. Rule 69.

The Chair has, in his discretion, permitted the consideration of a Bill [The West Bengal State Legislature (Delegation of Powers) Bill, 1968 as passed by Rajya Sabha], the clauses of which involving expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India were not printed in thick type or in italics—L.S. Deb., 22-3-1968 and 25-3-1968.

In the case of the Shipping Development Fund Committee (Abolition) Amendment Bill, 1987, the Minister, while introducing the Bill, brought clause 2, which involved expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India but not printed in thick type, to the notice of the House.—L.S. Deb., 24-8-1987.

45. In the case of the State Finance Corporations (Amendment) Bill, 1965, the financial memorandum attached to the proof copy of the Bill was incomplete as it did not give an estimate of the recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved in case the Bill was passed into law. The Minister was asked to furnish a detailed statement giving the particulars of recurring expenditure. The original memorandum was, however, printed with the Bill and circulated to members. When the revised financial memorandum was received, it was also circulated to members.

During discussion on the motion for reference of the Essential Commodities (Second Amendment) Bill, 1967 to a Select Committee, a point of order was raised that the financial memorandum appended to the Bill was incomplete as it did not give an estimate of the recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved. The point of order was upheld by the Chair and further consideration of the Bill was postponed with a view to enabling the Government to furnish a revised financial memorandum giving particulars of recurring and non-recurring expenditure involved. The revised financial memorandum furnished by Government was circulated to members separately. A letter conveying fresh recommendation of the President for consideration of the Bill received from the Minister was also published in the Bulletin. L.S. Deb., 29-11-1967, cc. 3631-68; Bn. (II), 4-12-1967, para 399. On examination of the Commodities Board and Development Authorities (Exemption from Income-tax) Bill, 1998, copies of which had already been circulated to the Members, it was found that provisions of the Bill involved expenditure from Consolidated Fund of India. On the matter being brought to notice of the Government, the Financial Memorandum furnished by the Government was separately circulated to members on 16 December 1998 and the Bill was introduced on 21 December 1998.

During Fifteenth Session of Fourteenth Lok Sabha, in view of the recommendation of the Standing Committee of Transport, Tourism and Culture in their report on the National Waterway (Lakhipur-Bhanga Stretch of the Barak River) Bill, 2007, the Minister-in-charge of the Bill furnished a revised Financial Memorandum. The revised Financial Memorandum was circulated to the members on 12 February 2009.

appended to the Bill, the Minister is asked to furnish a letter to that effect and the letter, on receipt, is published in the Bulletin<sup>46</sup>.

If no financial memorandum is attached to a Bill and later at the consideration stage the Speaker holds that the same is necessary, the financial memorandum may be permitted to be read out by the Minister in the House<sup>47</sup> and, in exceptional cases, the rule regarding financial memorandum may be suspended in its application to the introduction of a Bill<sup>48</sup>.

Salient Features of a Bill

Title

Every Bill has a title succinctly describing the nature of the proposed measure. The title, generally referred to as the long title, is prefixed to the Bill and retained in the Act, and is different from the short title which is embodied in the first section of the Act itself. Care is taken to see that the title is sufficiently wide to cover all the provisions of the Bill, and that it is not vague, for, otherwise it may invite amendments outside the scope of the proposed measure.<sup>49</sup>

Preamble

The preamble is a clause at the beginning of a Statute, following the title and preceding the enacting clause. The proper function of the preamble is to explain certain facts which are necessary to be explained before the enactments contained in the Act can be understood. Inclusion of a preamble in a Bill has now become out of fashion; rarely a preamble is now-a-days added to a Bill<sup>50</sup>.

46. See, for instance, Bn. (II), 29-7-1968, 26-8-1968, and 31-5-1971.

47. L.S. Deb., 22-11-1956, cc. 729-31.

48. Ibid., 30-8-1957, cc. 10920-32.

49. General Clauses Act, 1987—Notes by J. Bartley, p. 159.

50. Shakhder, op. cit., p. 96.

Since the coming into force of the Constitution, only a few Bills have been passed containing preambles: e.g. the Chartered Accountants Bill, 1949; the Hyderabad Export Duties (Validation) Bill, 1955; the Prize Competitions Bill, 1956; the Public Debt (Amendment) Bill, 1956; the Kerala Local Authorities Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1959; the Small Coins (Offences) Bill, 1971; the Asian Refractories Ltd. (Acquisition of Undertaking) Bill, 1971; the Defence of India Bill, 1971; the Emergency Risks (Goods) Insurance Bill, 1971; the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Bill, 1976; the Caltex [Acquisition of Shares of Caltex Oil Refining (India) Limited and of the Undertakings in India of Caltex (India) Limited] Bill, 1977; the Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works Limited (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Bill, 1980; the Commission of Sati (Prevention) Bill, 1987; the Acquisition of Certain Area at Ayodhya Bill, 1993; the Persons with Disabilities (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Participation) Bill, 1995; the National Capital Territory of Delhi Laws (Special Provisions) Bill, 2007; the Tyre Corporation of India Limited (Disinvestment of Ownership) Bill, 2007; the Prohibition of Employment as Manual Scavengers and their Rehabilitation Bill, 2012; the Biotechnology Regulatory Authority of India Bill, 2013; and the Agricultural Biosecurity Bill, 2013.

Previously, the general practice was to prefix one or more preambles to a Bill. For instance, the Murshidabad Estate Administration Act, 1933, contained as many as five preambles.

At one time the preamble was not considered to be a part of the Bill, but later a contrary view was taken<sup>51</sup>. A preamble is subject to amendment like any part of the Bill<sup>52</sup>.

Enacting Formula

The enacting formula is a short paragraph preceding the clauses of a Bill. The form of the enacting formula, adopted by the Lok Sabha in 1954, is:

‘Be it enacted by Parliament in the year ... of the Republic of India as follows....’ Prior to 1950, the enacting formula used to be in one of the following forms:

Be it enacted that...<sup>53</sup>

It is enacted as follows....<sup>54</sup>

It is hereby enacted that or as follows....<sup>55</sup>

During the Budget Session, 1950, the following form was adopted:

Be it enacted by Parliament as follows....<sup>56</sup>

On 27 April 1954, on the suggestion of the Ministry of Law, it was decided to have the following enacting formula:

Be it enacted by Parliament in the year... of the Republic of India as follows...

The Speaker, soon after, suggested that the words ‘the Republic of India’ be substituted for ‘our Republic’ as the expression ‘our’ was, he said, imperial in character. A few days later, on an amendment formally moved in and adopted by the House, the words “the Republic of India” were substituted for the words ‘our Republic’ occurring in the enacting formula of the Himachal Pradesh and Bilaspur (New State) Bill, 1954<sup>57</sup>.

Short Title

Every Bill has a short title. It has to be short for it is merely a label or indexing to the enactment in question and has also to be apposite. It is cited in the first clause of the Bill—‘This Act may be called the....Act, 20__’.

51. Bartley, op. cit., p. 161.

52. The Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1924; the Indian Naval Armament (Amendment) Act, 1931; and the Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Bill, 1993 contained preambles which were adopted in amended form.

53. See the Dekhan Assistant Agents Appointment Act, 1835.

54. See the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

55. See the Dower Act, 1839 and the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1949.

56. See the Rehabilitation and Finance Administration (Amendment) Bill, 1950.

57. The expression, ‘Our Republic’ occurred in the following three Bills only which had already been passed and assented to by the President: the Prevention of Disqualification (Parliament and Part C States Legislatures) Amendment Bill, 1954; the Voluntary Surrender of Salaries (Exemption from Taxation) Amendment Bill, 1954; and the Factories (Amendment) Bill, 1954.

An enactment is cited by reference to the short title conferred thereon or by reference to the number and year thereof. Where in any enactment it is necessary to cite or refer to another Act, its short title is cited in the body and reference to the number and year thereof made in the margin.

Where two or more Bills seek to amend the same principal Act and are passed in the same year, the amending Acts are numbered consecutively<sup>58</sup>.

Extent Clause

A law passed by Parliament is applicable throughout the country except where it is otherwise expressly provided for in the Statute itself. It is, however, usual and convenient and at times necessary to specify the extent explicitly<sup>59</sup>.

With regard to their extent, Acts may be divided into the following categories:

Acts which apply to the whole of India;

Acts which apply to the whole of India, excepting the State of Jammu and Kashmir<sup>60</sup>;

Acts which apply only to Union territories; and Acts pertaining to matters enumerated in List II of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution, which are applicable only to those States the Legislatures of which have passed resolution to that effect<sup>61</sup>.

An extent clause may, however, be rendered unnecessary by the nature of the Act when it indicates the areas to which it will apply, or denotes the persons who will be subject to it, or signifies things which will come under its purview<sup>62</sup>.

Commencement Clause

The commencement clause forms an important provision of a Bill. The practice is to place the short title, the extent clause and the commencement clause, if any, in a single section divided into three sub-sections<sup>63</sup>.

58. For example, the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1987 and the Representation of the People (Second Amendment) Bill, 1987. However, in the case of Acts amending the Constitution, the numbers in the short titles are given consecutively irrespective of the year, e.g. the Constitution (First Amendment) Act, 1951; the Constitution (Second Amendment) Act, 1952; the Constitution (Third Amendment) Act, 1954, and so on.

59. Bartley, op. cit., p. 164.

60. The entries in the Union List of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution in respect of which Parliament has power to make laws for Jammu & Kashmir are set out in the Constitution (Application of Jammu & Kashmir) Order, 1954, as amended. Central laws relating to some of these matters have been extended to that State under the State of Jammu and Kashmir (Extension of Laws) Act, 1956.

61. See art. 252—Examples of such Acts are the Estate Duty Act, 1953 (in its application to agricultural lands situated in the States mentioned in the First Schedule to the Act); the Prize Competitions Act, 1955; the Indian Veterinary Council Act, 1984; the Estate Duty (Amendment) Act, 1986; and the Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Act, 1993.

62. For instance, the Indian Air Force Act, 1950; the Naga Hills Tuensang Area Act, 1958; the Government Savings Certificates Act, 1959.

63. Bartley, op. cit., p. 164.

The general rule regarding the coming into operation of enactments is that in the absence of any express provision to the contrary an Act comes into operation on the day on which it receives the assent of the President<sup>64</sup>. In view of the above general provision, Acts which are intended to take effect at once need not, and do not usually, have a commencement clause<sup>65</sup>.

In some cases, it is necessary to give retrospective effect to an enactment. The form usually adopted for this purpose is—

In certain other cases it may be necessary to postpone the operation of an Act and bring it into force on some convenient date in the future. However, it may not always be possible or convenient to fix the date at the time the Act is passed by Parliament; the device adopted in such cases is to give power to the Government to appoint, by notification in the Gazette, the date when the Act shall come into operation. In all these cases the Act becomes operative only on the specified date or the date appointed by notification, although the Act was all the time on the Statute Book<sup>67</sup>.

In respect of laws which become operative on a future date, whether that date is specified in the Act itself or is to be notified by the Government, different wordings are adopted in the commencement clause depending on the needs and circumstances of each case. The variation is due to the fact that all the provisions of the Act may not be intended to be brought into force at the same time or in all the areas to which the Act extends. In such cases, if the exact date or dates could not be foreseen, power is, of course, taken to fix the date or dates by notification<sup>68</sup>.

When an Act is to be brought into force on a future date by notification, it does not seem necessary that the section under which the notification is to be issued should be expressed to come into force at once, although the practice in regard to this matter has not been uniform<sup>69</sup>.

64. General Clauses Act, 1897, s. 5(1).

65. For instance, the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958; the Banaras Hindu University (Amendment) Act, 1958; and the Supreme Court Judges (Conditions of Service) Act, 1959.

66. For instance, the Customs Tariff (Amendment) Bill, 1995 was introduced on 14 February 1995 and came into force with retrospective effect from 1 January 1995.

67. For instances, the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987; the All India Council for Technical Education Act, 1987; the Mahatma Gandhi Antarrashtriya Hindi Vishwavidyalaya Act, 1996; the Life Insurance Corporation (Amendment) Bill, 2011 and the Prevention of Money-Laundering (Amendment) Bill, 2012.

68. The National Housing Bank Act, 1987; the Commission of Sati (Prevention) Act, 1987; the Factoring Regulation Bill, 2011; and the Enforcement of Security Interest and Recovery of Debts Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2012.

69. It has been held by the Supreme Court in T.K. Mudaliar v. Potti that the section under which the notification is to be issued comes into force immediately on the passing of the Act — S.C.J. 1956, 333-34.

Interpretation or Definition Clause

The interpretation or definition clause usually comes immediately after the short title or the citation clause<sup>70</sup>. Where the expressions defined occur only in a single section, the definitions are given in that section<sup>71</sup> and where the definitions are necessary only for a particular part or chapter, they are given in that part or chapter<sup>72</sup>.

Definitions are required to avoid tedious paraphrases, explain terms which are of ambiguous or uncertain meaning, give to a term which has been judicially interpreted a sense other than that given by such interpretation<sup>73</sup> or include or exclude, for the purposes of the Act, something in regard to the inclusion or exclusion of which there might otherwise be doubt. The definitions are arranged in alphabetical order.

Most of the definitions in common use are now contained in section 3 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 and apply mutatis mutandis to Acts and Regulations, unless expressly excluded<sup>74</sup>.

Duration Clause

Certain laws are of limited duration and are enacted for a short stipulated period. Such enactments cease to be effective after the expiry of the period stipulated therein<sup>75</sup>.

The duration clause is embodied as one of the sub-clauses in the first clause of a Bill. The form used may be different in different Bills, as the situation demands.

Declaratory Clause

Certain Bills also contain a declaratory clause<sup>76</sup>. The declaratory clause, which

70. In earlier Indian Acts, i.e. those passed before 1859, interpretation clause was included at the end of the Act. — Bartley, op. cit., p. 172. Deviating from the usual practice in the Direct Taxes Code, 2010, introduced in Lok Sabha on 30 August 2010, the definition clause was included at the end of the Bill.

71. See sec. 45 of the Delhi Municipal Corporation Act, 1957, sec. 23 of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957, and sec. 441 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958.

72. See sections 357 and 390 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958.

73. See the Himachal Pradesh Legislative Assembly (Validation of Constitution and Proceedings) Act, 1958.

74. Bartley, op. cit.

75. Whenever it is desired to continue a Temporary Act, an Expiring Law Continuance Bill extending its life to a specified date is brought before Parliament. The duration clause of the expiring Act is amended so as to alter the date originally fixed for its expiry. For instance, the Essential Commodities (Special Provisions) Continuance Act, 1987 and the Essential Commodities (Special Provisions) Amendment Bill, 1993.

An Act limited in duration is made permanent by means of an amending Act which seeks to omit the duration clause of the expiring Act with the result that the expiring Act is no more limited in duration. For examples of such amending Acts, see the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1935; the Foreign Exchange Regulation (Amendment) Act, 1957; the Prevention of Corruption (Amendment) Act, 1957.

76. Generally, legislation contemplated under the following eight entries in the Union List of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution contains a declaratory clause:

Entries 7, 23, 27, 52, 53, 54, 56 and 67.

comes after the citation clause (clause 1) of the Bill, is that part of the statute “which declares or states the need or requirement which the statute was framed to fulfil”<sup>77</sup>.

Rule-making Clause

The provisions delegating the power to the Executive to make rules and regulations for administering the various laws are contained in the rule-making clause of a Bill

The general principles on which the rule-making clause is based are—

That the rules or regulations should be laid before Parliament;

That the rules, etc., should be laid before Parliament for a specified period before, or as soon as possible after, their publication; that the rules should be subject to modification by Parliament.

Now-a-days, all Bills involving delegation of power contain the following clause<sup>78</sup>—

Every rule made under this section shall be laid as soon as may be after it is made, before each House of Parliament while it is in session for a total period of thirty days which may be comprised in one session or in two successive sessions and if, before the expiry of the session in which it is so laid or the session immediately following, both Houses agree in making any modification in the rule or both Houses agree that the rule should not be made, the rule shall thereafter have effect only in such modified form or be of no effect, as the case may be; so however, that any such modification or annulment shall be without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done under that rule<sup>79</sup>.

The Speaker may refer the points arising out of the rule-making clause to the Committee on Subordinate Legislation for examination and report<sup>80</sup>.

The rules made under an Act have statutory force<sup>81</sup>.

The power to make rules conferred by the rule-making clause includes the power to add, amend, vary or rescind the rules<sup>82</sup>. The definitions given in the Act are

77. There is no set form of a declaratory clause. For specimen of the different forms used, see the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951; the Ancient and Historical Monuments and Archaeological Sites and Remains (Declaration of National Importance) Act, 1951; the Essential Goods (Declaration and Regulation of Tax on Sale or Purchase) Act, 1952; the Inflammable Substances Act, 1952; the National Highways Act, 1956; the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957; the Indian Statistical Institute Act, 1959; the Rampur Raza Library Act, 1975, etc.

78. Model clause drafted by the Ministry of Law and circulated to State Governments (vide para 45 of the Seventh Report of the Committee on Subordinate Legislation, presented to Lok Sabha on 22 December, 1959).

81. This is also borne out by the definition of “existing law” as given in the Constitution vide art. 366(10).

82. The General Clauses Act, 1897, s. 21.

imported into the rules made under it so that it is not necessary to repeat them in the rules<sup>83</sup>. Rules made under an enactment which is repealed cease to have effect and are themselves virtually repealed. If rules have been made under an Act which is repealed and re-enacted, they will continue in force so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions so re-enacted and are superseded by fresh rules<sup>84</sup>.

Repeal and Savings Clause

The provisions regarding both repeal and savings are embodied in the same clause. The clause is invariably placed at the end of a Bill, so that the structure of the enactment in which it is contained may remain unimpaired when the clause itself is repealed<sup>85</sup>.

When an enactment is repealed, the repeal, unless a different intention appears from the context, does not —

Revive anything not in force or existing at the time at which the repeal takes effect; or

Affect the previous operation of any enactment so repealed or anything duly done or suffered thereunder; or

Affect any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment so repealed; or

Affect any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against any enactment so repealed; or

Affect any investigation, legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right, privilege, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture or punishment as aforesaid; and

Any such investigation, legal proceeding or remedy may be instituted, continued or enforced, and any such penalty, forfeiture or punishment may be imposed as if the Repealing Act had not been passed<sup>86</sup>.

With the repeal of an enactment, all rules, etc., made thereunder are ipso facto repealed, unless provision is made to the contrary in the Repealing Act.

The savings clause reserves something which would be otherwise included in the words of the enacting part. This clause only preserves things which were in esse at the time of its enactment and therefore cannot affect transactions which were complete on the date of the Repealing Statute. It is inserted in the Statute in order to protect or save a person as regards rights which he may have acquired under the then existing law<sup>87</sup>.

Schedules

Some Bills have Schedules appended to them. As a rule, matters of detail are relegated to Schedules, e.g., illustrations of forms, agreements and plans. When the constitution of an organization is declared in the Bill itself, the mode of appointment and rules governing meetings of that organisation are placed in a Schedule. It is sometimes convenient to indicate in a Schedule where several Acts or parts of several Acts are being repealed or where a considerable number of minor amendments are being made<sup>88</sup>.

The expression used is 'First Schedule', 'Second Schedule', etc., and not 'Schedule I', 'Schedule II'. Where a Schedule is referred to in the Bill or Act, it is spelt with a capital letter 'S' to catch the reader's eye and to distinguish this Schedule from any other Schedule which may be referred to in the Bill or Act, for the sake of facility, a reference to the clause or clauses of the Bill which refer to a Schedule is inserted at the head of the Schedule.

The Schedule is as much a part of the statute and as much an enactment as any other part. It must be read together with the other provisions of the Act for all purposes of construction<sup>89</sup>.

Apart from the salient features described above, a Bill is accompanied by a Statement of Objects and Reasons and, wherever necessary, by Notes on Clauses, a Financial Memorandum<sup>90</sup>, a Memorandum on Delegated Legislation, a Memorandum regarding modifications contained in the Bill to replace an Ordinance and an Annexure reproducing extracts from the provisions of an Act sought to be amended, all of which, though not forming part of a Bill, serve a positive purpose. These appended documents to a Bill are omitted when the Bill is passed by the Lok Sabha and transmitted to the Rajya Sabha for consideration and vice versa.

Statement of Objects and Reasons

It has been the uniform practice since 1862 to append to every Bill a Statement of Objects and Reasons, briefly explaining the purpose of the proposed legislation. The Statement is explanatory of the contents and objects of a Bill and helps in understanding the necessity and scope of the Bill but the courts cannot rely on it in construing an Act for the reason that it refers to the Bill as introduced and the Bill may undergo considerable alteration before it is passed. The meaning of the legislation must be deduced from the language it has actually used, and not from its presumed intentions. It has, therefore, to be excluded from consideration when construing an Act.<sup>91</sup>

88. For example, see the Trade and Merchandise Bill, 1958 and the Trade Marks Bill, 1993.

89. Dhonessur Kooer v. Roy Gooder Sahoy, I.L.R. 2 Calcutta 337, 339 F.B.; Altap Ali v. Jamsur Ali, A.I.R. 1926 Calcutta 638.

90. For Financial Memorandum, see this Chapter under Financial Memoranda to Bills involving Expenditure, supra.

91. Mahalakshmi v. Shamrangini, I.L.R. (1941) 1 Calcutta 499; A.I.R. 1941 Calcutta 673.

The Supreme Court observed that nevertheless such a statement can certainly be looked at for the purpose of seeing any alleged infringement of Article 14 (dealing with equality before law) Jullundhar Rubber Goods Manufacturers Association v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1589.

The Statement of Objects and Reasons has to be framed in non-technical language. It should not be unduly long nor should it contain anything of an argumentative character, and it can be revised if the Speaker so desires<sup>92</sup>. Moreover, it is to be signed by the member in-charge of the Bill.

The Statement can be amended by the member in-charge of the Bill with the permission of the Speaker at the time of introducing the Bill<sup>93</sup>. Any lacuna in the Statement of Objects and Reasons must be pointed out at the time of introduction of the Bill; a point raised in that regard at the consideration stage of the Bill is not valid<sup>94</sup>. However, changes suggested by a Parliamentary Committee in the Statement of Objects and Reasons while making a report on the Bill may be incorporated in the Statement and revised copies thereof circulated to the Members<sup>95</sup>.

Notes on Clauses

In some cases, Bills are also accompanied by Notes on Clauses which explain the various provisions in a Bill and their significance. They outline the basis on which particular provisions of the Bill are framed. The Notes are elucidatory in nature and facilitate consideration of the clauses in their right perspective.

Memorandum regarding Delegated Legislation

All Bills involving proposals for the delegation of subordinate legislative power are required to be accompanied by a memorandum explaining such proposals. The memorandum draws attention to the scope of the proposals and also states whether they are of normal or exceptional character.

In case a Bill involving proposals for the delegation of subordinate legislative power is received without a memorandum explaining such proposals, the Minister concerned is asked to furnish the relevant memorandum and in case the memorandum

Introduction of the Bill was deferred. Revised Statement was circulated to members on 19 December 2005 and the Bill was introduced on 20 December 2005.

The Bills were referred to the Standing Committee on Home Affairs for examination and report. The Committee in their Reports on the Bills recommended modification of the Statement of Objects and Reasons to these Bills. The copies of the revised Statement of Objects and Reasons received from the Ministry of Law through Rajya Sabha Secretariat were circulated to members of Lok Sabha.

(ii) The Joint Committee on the Central Vigilance Commission Bill, 1999 recommended for omission of para 7 of the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill. In case memorandum regarding delegated legislation is sought to be revised by the Government, a copy thereof shall be laid on the Table of Lok Sabha and thereafter circulated to members<sup>97</sup>.

Memorandum re: Modifications contained in a Bill to replace an Ordinance

Whenever a Bill seeking to replace an Ordinance with modifications of the provisions of that Ordinance is introduced in the House, the modifications contained in the Bill are explained in a memorandum appended to the Bill<sup>98</sup>.

Annexure

Where certain sections of the parent Act are sought to be amended, the text thereof is generally appended to every amending Bill in the form of an annexure. In case the number of sections involved is large, on request made by the Minister incharge of the Bill, the sections may not be reproduced as an annexure but copies of the original Act are supplied by the Ministry concerned for circulation to members<sup>99</sup>. But where the original Acts themselves are bulky, copies of the acts are not circulated to members but a few copies of the Acts received from the Ministry concerned are placed in the Parliament Library for reference by members<sup>100</sup>. A para in this regard is issued in the Bulletin-Part II.

Before 1950, the text of sections of an Act sought to be amended by an amending Bill was not printed along with the Bill.

100. For example, the Customs Tariff (Amendment) Bill, 1985 and the Direct-Tax Law (Amendment) Bill, 1987.

On 14 August 1950, when the Bill further to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, came up for consideration before the House, a point was raised that along with an amending Bill the relevant sections of the original Act which are sought to be amended should also be printed for the purpose of facilitating the work of members. On this, the Speaker directed:

In future whenever amending Bills are presented to amend original Acts, a schedule of the relevant sections from the original Acts should be given with the Bill<sup>101</sup>.

Such an annexure is, however, not added to a secret Bill<sup>102</sup>.

Legislative Competence of the House

The Constitution provides for a three-fold distribution of legislative power between the Union and the States: the Union List enumerates topics of legislation with respect to which Parliament has exclusive power to make laws; the State List enumerates topics of legislation with respect to which the Legislature of a State has exclusive power to make laws; and the Concurrent List enumerates topics with respect to which both Parliament and the Legislature of a State have the power to make laws<sup>103</sup>. The residuary power of legislation, i.e. the power to make law with respect to any matter not enumerated in the Concurrent List or the State List is vested in Parliament, and this power includes the power of making a law imposing any tax not mentioned in either of those Lists<sup>104</sup>.

In the hierarchy of legislation, a higher place is accorded to laws passed by Parliament. Inconsistency between laws made by Parliament and those made by a State Legislature, both acting under the Concurrent List, is resolved by making the law made by Parliament to prevail over the law made by the Legislature of the State which, to the extent to repugnancy, will be void<sup>105</sup>. However, if the law made by the State Legislature has been reserved for the consideration of the President and received his assent, it shall prevail in that State notwithstanding the inconsistency<sup>106</sup>.

The entries in the three Lists are only legislative heads or fields of legislation: they demarcate the area over which the appropriate Legislatures can operate. The widest amplitude is given by the Courts to the language of the entries, the reason being that the allocation of subjects is not by way of scientific or logical definition but is a mere enumeration of broad and comprehensive categories. Where entries in An annexure was for the first time appended to the Assam Rifles (Amendment) Bill, 1950, introduced on 15 November 1950.

102. For example, annexures were not appended to the Indian Tariff (Second Amendment) Bill, 1957; the Estate Duty (Amendment) Bill, 1958; the Reserve Bank of India (Amendment) Bill, 1959; the Finance Bill, 1960; and the Compulsory Deposit Scheme (Income-tax Payers) Amendment Bill, 1985.

103. Art. 246.

104. Art. 248(1) and Entry 97 of the Union List.

the different Lists or in the same List overlap or appear to be in direct conflict with each other, the Courts reconcile the entries and bring about a harmonious construction, by reading the two entries together and by interpreting and, where necessary, modifying the language of the one by that of the other<sup>107</sup>.

The legislative power includes the subsidiary or auxiliary power to validate laws found to be invalid for one infirmity or another. It is competent to the appropriate Legislature to cure the said infirmity and pass a validating law so as to make the provisions of the said earlier law effective from the date when it was passed<sup>108</sup>. Likewise, the power to legislate for validating actions taken under a statute which were not sufficiently comprehensive is ancillary or subsidiary to the power to legislate on any subject within the competence of Parliament or a State Legislature<sup>109</sup>.

Arising from the classification of matters into the three Lists, points of order have been raised, time and again, regarding the competence of the Lok Sabha to legislate on a particular matter before the House.

The question of 'vires' was raised for the first time in the Central Legislative Assembly in 1937<sup>110</sup> with the coming into force of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, relating to Provincial Autonomy. Earlier such a question could not be raised because the power to decide whether a matter related to a Central or Provincial subject, transferred subject or reserved subject, was vested in the Governor-General in Council, or the Governor, as the case might be, and the jurisdiction of the courts over these matters was barred.

It is the accepted practice in Lok Sabha that the Speaker does not give any ruling on a point of order raised whether a Bill is constitutionally within the legislative competence of the House or not. The House also does not take a decision on the specific question of vires of a Bill. It is open to members to express their views in the matter and to address arguments for and against the vires for the consideration of the House. The members take this aspect into account in voting on the motion for leave to introduce the Bill or on the subsequent motions on the Bill<sup>111</sup>.

Before 1942, whenever a question was raised in the Central Legislative Assembly as to whether a Bill, clause or amendment fell outside the competence of the House to enact, the Speaker took upon himself to uphold or rule out the point of order after hearing arguments on both sides. Ruling that a question of legislative competence of the Assembly should not be decided by the House itself, Speaker Abdur Rahim observed as under:

A question relating to the legislative competence of the Assembly which may often involve much difficulty and complexity should not be summarily settled by the Chair on a point of order. In fact, the Federal Court has been established for the very purpose of dealing with these questions and the Chair has really not the facilities or the time and the material on which to come to a satisfactory conclusion on a point of this character so as to be able to hold finally whether the Assembly should or should not consider the particular legislative proposal.

I, therefore, hold that this is not a question which should be settled by a ruling of the Chair on a point of order<sup>112</sup>.

There have, however, been occasions when the Speaker, leaving the ultimate decision on the matter to the House, has expressed his own views on the vires of Bills<sup>113</sup>.

If the motion for leave to introduce a Bill is opposed on the ground of legislative competence of the House, a full discussion on the point may be permitted<sup>114</sup>.

Where the fulfilment of a constitutional requirement is essential for the passing of a Bill, the Speaker may permit discussion on the Bill for the intervening stages and ask the Government to meet that requirement in the meantime.

On 25 April 1958, when the motion for reference of the Estate Duty (Amendment) Bill to a Select Committee was under discussion, a member contended that as the Bill proposed to levy estate duty in respect of agricultural land which was a State subject, Parliament could proceed in the matter only after resolution, as required under the Constitution, had been passed by two or more States<sup>115</sup>.

After hearing arguments on both sides, the Speaker upheld the contention. However, he felt that the constitutional prohibition referred only to the 'passing' of the Act. Since the House was at the time only at the stage of referring the Bill to a Select Committee, it could proceed with the matter so that in the meanwhile Government could ensure that at least two State Legislatures passed resolutions as contemplated by the Constitution whereafter the Bill could be passed by the House in conformity with constitutional provisions<sup>116</sup>.

During consideration of clause 2 of the Essential Services Maintenance Bill, 1968, a point was raised that transport services for carriage of passengers or goods by land, water or air referred to in sub-clause (1) of clause 2 were mostly State subjects and were not necessarily within the Central field. The Chair upheld the objection and suggested that the clause might be made clear and precise. Consequently, the Minister moved an amendment for insertion in the clause of the words 'with respect to which Parliament has power to make laws' after the word 'air', which was adopted by the House. *L.S. In order to help the Lok Sabha and the Speaker to decide issues with reference to legislative proposals before the House, the Attorney-General has on occasions addressed the House at the suggestion of the Speaker or of the House and given his opinion on the legal and constitutional aspects of the matters before the House<sup>117</sup>.

Bills Originating in Lok Sabha

Examination of Bills before Introduction

Two authenticated proof copies of a Bill<sup>118</sup> except in the case of a secret Bill, are received from the Ministry of Law about a week before the day on which the Bill is proposed to be introduced in the Lok Sabha.

The proof copy is scrutinized in the Secretariat with a view to ensuring that the Bill conforms to the various constitutional provisions and the rules, viz.:

Whether the Bill contains a Statement of Objects and Reasons<sup>119</sup>;

Whether recommendation of the President is required either for introduction or consideration of the Bill under any of the provisions of the Constitution and, if so, whether it has been received from the Minister concerned<sup>120</sup>;

Whether other constitutional requirements have been complied with<sup>121</sup>;

117. For instance, the Attorney-General has addressed the House in connection with the following Bills: The Preventive Detention Bill, 1950, on 25-2-1950:

The Vindhya Pradesh Legislative Assembly (Prevention of Disqualification) Bill, 1953, on 9-5-1953;

The Indian Cattle Preservation Bill, 1952 (a private member's Bill), on 1-5-1954. The Sales Tax Validation Bill, 1956, on 28-2-1956;

The Finance Bill, 1969 (to give clarification on his opinion pertaining to clause 24 thereof), on 1-5-1969.

118. One copy is marked "original" and the other "duplicate".

119. Rule 65.

120. For details of these constitutional provisions. See Chapter XXXI-'General Rules of Procedure' under the sub-heading Recommendation of the President.

121. For instance, if a Bill relates to any matter specified in the State List, it has to be seen whether the Statement of Objects and Reasons indicates that the procedure laid down in art. 249 and 252 has been followed. Further, such a Statement (in the case of a Bill providing for any of the matters mentioned against Entries 7, 23, 52-54, 56 and 67 of the Union List) is required to contain an explanation as to why it has been found expedient for Parliament to legislate on that matter. Moreover, a Bill creating an All-India Service, common to the Union and the States, is required, under art. 312 to be based on a specific resolution passed by Rajya Sabha by a specified majority.

In the case of a Bill dealing with any of the provisions of art. 3, a further point for examination is whether the Bill has been referred by the President to the State Legislature or Legislatures concerned for expressing views thereon within the period specified in the reference.

The Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Bill, 1976, the Estate Duty (Amendment) Bill, 1986, the Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Amendment Bill, 1988, and the Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Bill, 1993, were brought forward in pursuance of resolutions passed under article 252 by the States mentioned in sub-cl.(2) of cl. 1 of the Bill.

Whether clauses or provisions in the Bill involving expenditure from public funds have been printed in italics or in thick type<sup>122</sup>;

Whether the Bill requires a Financial Memorandum and, if so, whether it has been attached to the Bill<sup>123</sup>;

Whether a Memorandum on Subordinate Legislation, if necessary, has been appended to the Bill<sup>124</sup>;

Whether a Memorandum re. modifications contained in the Bill to replace an Ordinance, if necessary, has been appended to the Bill;

Whether sections of the parent Act sought to be amended, in the case of an amending Bill, have been reproduced in the Annexure;

Whether the 'Arrangement of Clauses', where a Bill contains more than 25 clauses, accompanies the Bill;

Whether the corrections carried out in the proof copies bear the seal of the Ministry of Law.

When the Bill satisfies all these requirements, a 'Bill Number' is indicated at the top of the Bill<sup>125</sup> and the docket page is prepared and attached to the Bill<sup>126</sup>. The 'original' proof copy is then sent to the press with instructions to print copies with the numbers.

Copies of the Bill are printed in two lots; copies with superscription "To be introduced in Lok Sabha" are printed first for circulation to members at least two days before the date of introduction; and as soon as the date of introduction is fixed but before the Bill is actually introduced, copies of the Bill "As introduced in Lok Sabha" are printed with the date of introduction shown on the cover page<sup>127</sup>.

122. Rule 69(2).

123. Rule 69(1).

124. Rule 70.

125. Bill number is indicated as follows:

"Bill No....of 20...."

Serial number are allotted to Bills consecutively for one calendar year.

126. Prior to 1963, the Bills used to have a cover page which contained the Bill number, its short title and an indication of the stage of the Bill, i.e. "To be introduced in Lok Sabha" or "As introduced in Lok Sabha". However, since January 1963, the cover page has been dispensed with as an economy measure.

The docket page contains the word "Lok Sabha" at the top, the long title of the Bill in the middle and name and designation of the Minister in-charge in the right hand corner of the bottom.

Since April 1963, the letter from the Ministry concerned, conveying the recommendation or sanction of the President, is reproduced in extenso after the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill and no indication is given on the docket page of a Bill.

127. Since February 1963, copies with both the superscriptions "To be introduced in Lok Sabha" and "As Introduced in Lok Sabha" are printed in one lot. The date of introduction is left blank and is stamped on the copies with the subscription "As Introduced in Lok Sabha" after the Bill has been introduced.

On receipt of printed copies, a copy is minutely compared with the original proof copy. A corrected copy is then sent to the Draftsman, Ministry of Law, for scrutiny. If necessary, a corrigendum (including the corrections pointed out by the Draftsman) is circulated to members, either with the Bill or separately thereafter<sup>128</sup>.

Two copies of proof of the Hindi version of a Bill, authenticated by the Draftsman, are also received from the Official Language Wing<sup>129</sup>, Ministry of Law.

As and when proof copies of the Hindi version of a Bill are received, they are printed and circulated to those members who get their parliamentary papers in Hindi. Copies are also sent to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat, the Ministry concerned and the Official Language Wing of the Ministry of Law.

Publication of Bills before Introduction

On a request made by the member in-charge of a Bill, the Speaker may order the publication of a Bill in the Gazette although no motion for leave to introduce it in the House has been made<sup>130</sup>. It is not the practice to publish a Bill before introduction when the House is in session, but in special cases, the Speaker may so permit.

The Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1953, was permitted to be published when the House was in session to enable the Minister to release contents of the Bill to the public at his press conference and collect opinions thereon so that, if necessary, an amended Bill might be introduced during the following session.

128. Only printing mistakes, grammatical, arithmetical or patent errors can be corrected through corrigenda. For other changes, additions or alterations, amendments should be moved in the House—L.S. Deb., 19-8-1974, cc. 265-66. In the case of the Export-Import Bank of India Bill, 1981 and the Motor Vehicles Bill, 1987, major corrections other than grammatical, arithmetical and patent mistakes were not accepted. In the latter case, the Bill had to be withdrawn on the ground that it contained numerous mistakes.

129. The Hindi version of a Bill was received for the first time during the Sixth Session of the Third Lok Sabha 1963 in respect of the Delhi (Delegation of Powers) Bill, 1963.

130. Rule 64. The Bill is published along with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, Notes on Clauses, Memorandum on Subordinate Legislation and Financial Memorandum, etc., if any. The contents page (Arrangement of Clauses) and annexure to the Bill, containing extracts from the Parent Act sought to be amended are, however, not published in the Gazette.

In the following cases, requests for publication of the Bill in the Gazette were received from the Ministers in-charge of the Bills and were acceded to—

- (1) The Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1955, published on 12-11-1955.
- (2) The Taxation Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1969, published on 20-5-1969.
- (3) The Comptroller and Auditor-General's (Duties, Powers and Conditions of Service) Bill, 1969, published on 20-5-1969.

In the case of the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1983, the request of the Minister of Finance for publication of the Bill before introduction was not acceded to on the ground that Government had ample time to bring forward the Bill in the preceding session as the decision to reorganise the Life Insurance Corporation was announced in 1981 and the Minister had even sent the notice of introduction of the Bill and the President's recommendation for its being taken into consideration by the Lok Sabha in the Monsoon Session, 1983 itself.

In the case of the Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Bill, 1954, permission was granted subject to the condition that it might be published only after the termination of the session, if the Bill had not been introduced meanwhile. However, this Bill was not published in the Gazette before introduction.

When a Bill has been published in the Gazette before introduction, members cannot, later on, oppose its introduction in the House<sup>131</sup>.

It is not necessary to move a motion for leave to introduce a Bill which has already been published in the Gazette under orders of the Speaker. The next step in respect of such a Bill is for introduction as distinguished from leave to introduce. However, if changes are made in the Bill after it has been published, it becomes a new Bill and the motion for leave to introduce the Bill has to be moved as in the case of any other Bill.

If advance publicity is considered desirable regarding a Bill which is proposed to be introduced in the House, the Speaker may permit the issue of a press communiqué during the inter-session period.

During the inter-session following the First Session of the Second Lok Sabha, the Speaker permitted the Minister of Finance to issue a press communiqué pending introduction in Lok Sabha of a Bill to amend the Indian Income-Tax Act which sought to provide for exemption from income-tax, in certain circumstances, interest paid to non-residents on loans advanced by them and brought into India<sup>132</sup>.

Advance publicity to the provisions of a Bill by a member before its introduction in the House is contrary to established parliamentary conventions.

Introduction of Government Bills

A Minister who desires to introduce a Bill has to give seven days' notice in writing of his intention to move for leave to introduce the Bill.

The Speaker may, however, allow the motion for leave to introduce to be made at a shorter notice<sup>133</sup>.

Notice of intention to move for leave to introduce a Bill does not lapse upon prorogation of the House and a fresh notice is not necessary if the Bill is sought to be introduced in the next session<sup>134</sup>. However, a fresh notice is required in the case of a Bill in respect of which sanction or recommendation granted under the Constitution has ceased to be operative<sup>135</sup>.

Till the end of the First Lok Sabha, there was no uniform practice for giving of notices by Ministers for introduction of Bills. In some cases notice was received, while in others no notice was received but only the proof copy of the Bill was received from the Ministry of Law and the item was included in the List of Business at the instance of the Department of Parliamentary Affairs. In the First Session of the Second Lok Sabha, it was decided that practice should be uniform for giving notices for introduction of Bills, whether they were Bills from Ministers or from private members. Accordingly, this Direction was issued by the Speaker. Since then, Ministers also give notice in writing to the Secretary-General in respect of all Bills for introduction.

Introduction of a Bill by another Minister is not invalid where the Minister who had originally given notice for introduction of the Bill and had conveyed the President's recommendation therefor was no longer a Minister<sup>136</sup>.

A Bill is not included in the List of Business for introduction until copies of the Bill have been made available to members at least two days before the day on which it is proposed to be introduced<sup>137</sup>. This requirement is waived by the Speaker in respect of Appropriation Bills. Finance Bills and such secret<sup>138</sup> Bills as are not included in the List of Business. In case of other Bills, if the Minister concerned gives adequate reasons in a memorandum for consideration of the Speaker as to why the Bill is proposed to be introduced without copies being made available to members, the Speaker may permit introduction of the Bill without prior circulation or after circulation for a shorter period<sup>139</sup>.

Prior to the issue of this Direction in 1957, the practice was to circulate copies of Bills to members after their introduction in the House although a few copies were kept in the Lobby at the time of introduction for the information of members. Since provision existed under Rule 72 for any member to oppose a motion for leave to introduce a Bill, demand was made now and then that Bills for introduction should be circulated in advance so that members might be aware of the contents of a Bill at the time of voting on the motion for introduction; in compliance with the wishes of the House, this Direction was issued by the Speaker on 13 September 1957.

If the Minister is absent from the House, his Deputy or any other Minister may move the motion on his behalf if the Speaker has permitted him to do so on a written request from the Minister.

138. Dir. 19B. For instance, the Oil Industry (Development) Bill, 1974 and the Compulsory Deposit Scheme (Income-tax Payers) Amendment Bill, 1985 were introduced as secret Bills— L.S. Deb., 22-7-1974 and 16-3-1985, respectively.

139. Some instances of Bills put down for introduction with less than two days' prior circulation of copies are:

- (1) The Comptroller and Auditor-General's (Duties, Powers and Conditions of Service) Amendment Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 23-3-1976);
- (2) The Departmentalisation of Union Accounts (Transfer of Personnel) Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 23-3-1976);
- (3) The Life Insurance Corporation (Modification of Settlement) Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb. 31-3-1976, 1-4-1976);
- (4) The Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Amendment Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 7-5-1976);
- (5) The Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 21-5-1976);
- (6) The Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes Orders (Amendment) Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 21-5-1976);
- (7) The Banking and Public Financial Institutions Laws (Miscellaneous Provisions) Amendment Bill, 1976 (L.S. Deb., 24-5-1976).
- (8) The Central Excise Tariff Bill, 1985 (L.S. Deb., 13-12-1985);
- (9) The State of Arunachal Pradesh (Amendment) Bill, 1987, (L.S. Deb., 8-5-1987);

The proof copies of the Essential Commodities (Amendment) Bill, 1957, were received on 29 May 1957, and the Bill was sought to be introduced on 30 May 1957. Printed copies were accordingly obtained and distributed to members in the Chamber on 30 May 1957 during the Question Hour. When a point of order was raised, the Speaker explained that he had permitted the Bill to be introduced on a representation made to him by the Government about the urgency of the measure. The Bill was, thereafter, introduced.

On the day appointed for introduction of the Bill, the Speaker calls the Minister in-charge who moves the motion for leave to introduce the Bill. After the Speaker has put the question and the motion is adopted, the Bill is introduced by the Minister. At the introduction stage, the Minister who has given notice for leave to introduce a Bill can alone introduce it, unless he has previously written to the Speaker to allow another Minister to move for leave to introduce the Bill on his behalf.

Since the Minister in whose name the India Tariff (Amendment) Bill, 1969, stood was not present in the House and had not previously written to the Speaker, the Deputy Minister concerned was not permitted to introduce the Bill on behalf of the Minister<sup>140</sup>.

If the motion for leave to introduce the Bill is opposed, the Speaker, after permitting, if he thinks fit, brief statements from the member who opposes the motion and the member who moved the motion, may, without further debate, put the question<sup>141</sup>. Where the motion is opposed on the ground that the Bill initiates legislation outside the legislative competence of the House, a full discussion may be permitted thereon<sup>142</sup>. A motion for leave to introduce a Finance Bill or an Appropriation Bill is, however, forthwith put to vote<sup>143</sup>.

By convention, the motion for introduction is not ordinarily opposed, but there have been several instances when motions for introduction of Government Bills were opposed in the House<sup>144</sup>. The member who wishes to oppose must give notice, addressed to the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha, in advance (before the commencement of the sitting by 10.00 hrs.), on the day the Bill has been included in the List of Business for introduction, to the Secretary-General. With effect from 10 December 2004, sub-rule (2) of rule 72 has been amended making it mandatory for members, who wish to oppose the introduction of a Bill, to specify clearly and precisely the objections to be raised in the notice<sup>145</sup>. Members who table notices for opposing the Bills after 10.00 hours are not normally permitted to oppose the introduction<sup>146</sup>. However, in exceptional cases, the Speaker may permit a member to oppose the introduction of the Bill even if his notice has been received after 10.00 hours<sup>147</sup>. The Minister in-charge of the Bill and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs are informed by the Lok Sabha Secretariat as soon as a notice for opposing the Bill has been received. In case two or more members have given such notices, the Speaker calls the member whose intimation was received first in point of time and if intimation from all the members is received at the same point of time, their names are balloted<sup>148</sup>. In exceptional cases, more than one member may be allowed to oppose introduction

Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Bill, 1986, the Illegal Migrants (Determination by Tribunals) Amendment Bill, 1987, the Oilfield (Regulation and Development) Amendment Bill, 1993, the Constitution (Eightieth Amendment) Bill, 1993, the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1993 and the Biotechnology Regulatory Authority of India Bill, 2013.

145. During the Third Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, K. Yerrannaidu, a member, tabled a notice to oppose introduction of Andhra Pradesh Legislative Council Bill, 2004 listed for introduction on 16 December 2004. As the notice did not specify reasons for opposing introduction, the Speaker did not admit the notice. When the member desired to oppose the motion to introduce the Bill in the House, Speaker did not permit the member and observed:—

“... we have consciously changed the Rules, and you were a party to it. It has been stated that merely giving notice of opposition is not sufficient. The hon. Member has to indicate the grounds on which he is opposing. You have not chosen to do so, and you want me to violate the Rules. We have already amended it, and you were a party to it. You cannot expect me to violate it.”

On 17 May 2007, several members gave notices at the Table to oppose introduction of the Tyre Corporation of India Limited (Disinvestment of Ownership) Bill, 2007. As notices did not specify reasons for opposing introduction, members were not permitted to oppose introduction of the Bill— L.S. Deb. 17-5-2007, c. 336.

146. On 1 December 1983 a member who had tabled a notice for opposing the introduction of the Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Bill, 1983 at 10.25 hours was not permitted to oppose the introduction. In another instance, on 25 January 1985, a member who had tabled notice to oppose the introduction of the Administrative Tribunals Bill, 1985 at 10.50 hours was not permitted to oppose the introduction of the Bill.
147. Some members who had tabled notices to oppose the introduction of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Bill, 1986 after 10.00 hours on the day the Bill was included in the List of Business were permitted to oppose the introduction— L.S. Deb., 25-2-1986, cc. 321-56.

In another instance, a member who had tabled notice to oppose the introduction of the National Security (Amendment) Bill, 1987 after 10.00 hours was allowed to oppose it—L.S. Deb., 31-7-1987, cc. 253-73.

Again, a member who had tabled notice to oppose the introduction of the Constitution (Sixty-eighth Amendment) Bill, 1990 at 10.40 hours was allowed to oppose it—L.S. Deb., 23-5-1990, c. 420.

148. On an occasion, the names of members from whom intimations had been received were balloted and the member whose name was drawn at the ballot was allowed to oppose the motion for leave to introduce the Bill—L.S. Deb., 22-7-1975, c. 15.

of the Bill<sup>149</sup>. When motion for leave to introduce a Bill is sought to be opposed by a large number of members, normally, the Speaker permits the members of major Parties and other Groups to oppose the introduction.

On 18 May 1979, when a large number of members who had given notices for opposing the introduction of the Constitution (Fiftieth Amendment) Bill, 1979, the Chair allowed only two members each from major Parties and one or two members from other Groups (eleven members in all) to make submissions to oppose the introduction of the Bill. After the Minister had clarified the points raised by the members, motion for introduction was adopted after a division and the Bill was introduced.

When the Bill is sought to be opposed on the ground of legislative competence of the House, a full discussion is held thereon. Members are permitted to make brief statements without going into the merits of the Bill<sup>150</sup>.

A Bill cannot be introduced if it is substantially identical with another Bill on which the House has given a decision in the same session. Such a Bill can be introduced only after the House agrees to suspend the Rule barring the repetition of identical motions<sup>151</sup>.

Bills dealing with the same subject but different in substance may, however, be allowed to be introduced during the same session<sup>152</sup>.

Normally, a Bill before the House cannot be withdrawn to facilitate the Government to re-introduce the same Bill without any change in the same session. However, in the case of the Constitution (Twenty-second Amendment) Bill, the Speaker gave his consent, as a special case and not to be taken as a precedent for the future, to the moving of a motion for suspension of the rules which stood in the way of its withdrawal<sup>153</sup>.

149. The Essential Services Maintenance Bill, 1981 was allowed to be opposed by twenty-five members. The Bill was introduced after division—L.S. Deb., 10-9-1981, cc. 348-423.

The Citizenship (Amendment) Bill, 1985 was allowed to be opposed by six members—L.S. Deb., 18-11-1985, cc. 353-58.

The Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Bill, 1986 was allowed to be opposed by ten members. The Bill was introduced after division—L.S. Deb., 25-2-1986, cc. 321-56.

152. See the Hindu Mutts Bill, 1950 (two Bills) — P. Deb., (II), 12-12-1950, cc. 1548 and 1552-53. These were Private Members' Bills.

153. L.S. Deb., 2-4-1969, cc. 151-59. On 25 March 1969, clause 2 of the Constitution (Twenty-second Amendment) Bill was not adopted by the House, as on division it did not get the special majority required for the purpose. Subsequently, in order to enable the Government to re-introduce the same Bill without making any change therein, the motion for suspension of Rule 110(c) in its application to the said Bill was included in the List of Business for 2 April 1969.

A Bill which is dependent wholly or partly on another Bill pending before the House may be introduced in anticipation of passing of the Bill on which it is dependent, but the second Bill can be taken up for consideration and passing only after the first Bill has been passed by Parliament and assented to by the President<sup>154</sup>.

The Constitution (Twenty-second Amendment) Bill, passed by the Lok Sabha on 15 April 1969, and by the Rajya Sabha on 30 April 1969, was pending assent by the President. A Bill which sought to amend it and of which notice had been given by a private member, on 24 April, was allowed to be introduced on 25 July 1969 although the other Bill, on which it was dependent, had not, by then, been assented to.

Bills which are inter-dependent have been considered and passed by suspending the proviso to the relevant rule<sup>155</sup>; where a Bill is dependent upon a Bill seeking to amend the Constitution and both the Bills are required to be taken up together, the Constitution (Amendment) Bill has to be disposed of before the other Bill<sup>156</sup>.

In exceptional cases, a Bill which is dependent on another Bill pending before the House may be allowed to be considered and passed before the Bill

In another instance, on 22 August 1984, Motion for consideration of the Constitution (Forty-seventh Amendment) Bill, 1982 was not adopted as on division it did not get the special majority required for the purpose. Subsequently, two motions under Rule 388 for suspension of Rule 338 in its application to the introduction and consideration of the Bill were adopted. On 23 August 1984, however, it enabled the Government to re-introduce the same Bill without making any change therein except of the title, viz., the Constitution (Fifty-third amendment) Bill, 1984.—L.S. Deb., 23-8-1984, cc. 619-60.

In yet another instance, on 30 March 1990, Motion for consideration of the Constitution (Sixty-fourth Amendment) Bill, 1990, as passed by Rajya Sabha, was not adopted as on division it did not get the special majority required for the purpose. Subsequently, on 4 April 1990, a Motion under Rule 388 for suspension of Rule 338 in its application to the introduction and consideration of that Bill was adopted in order to facilitate the Government to re-introduce the same Bill without making any change therein except of the title, viz. the Constitution (Sixty-fifth Amendment) Bill, 1990.—L.S. Deb., 4-4-1990, c. 962.

154. Rule 66. P. Deb. (II), 24-8-1953, cc. 1368-70.

155. Rule 66, Proviso.—The Constitution (Thirteenth Amendment) Bill, 1962 and the State of Nagaland Bill, 1962, were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 28-8-1962, cc. 4483-98 and 4498-648; 29-8-1962, cc. 4794-813. Similarly, the Technology Development Board Bill, 1995 and the Research and Development Cess (Amendment) Bill, 1995 were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 25-8-1995, cc. 376-94.

The Iron Ore Mines and Manganese Ore Mines Labour Welfare Cess Bill, 1976, and the Iron Ore Mines and Manganese Ore Mines Labour Welfare Fund Bill, 1976, which were inter-dependent, were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 25-3-1976, c. 224 and 26-3-1976, cc. 152-53. The Beedi Workers Welfare Cess Bill, 1976, and the Beedi Workers Welfare Fund Bill, 1976, which were inter-dependent, were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 26-3-1976, c. 153. The Jute Manufacturers Cess Bill, 1983 and the Jute Manufacturers Development Council Bill, 1983, which were inter-dependent, were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 5-8-1983, cc.368-69; 8-8-1983, cc.388-415 and 9-8-1983, cc. 404-16. The Constitution (Fifty-third Amendment) Bill, 1986 and the State of Mizoram Bill, 1986, which were inter-dependent, were considered and passed together—L.S. Deb., 5-8-1986, cc. 259-414.

156. The Constitution (Twenty-first Amendment) Bill, 1966 and the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1966.—L.S. Deb., 8-11-1966, c. 1963. The Constitution (Fifty-fifth Amendment) Bill, 1986 and the State of Arunachal Pradesh Bill, 1986—L.S. Deb., 8-12-1986, cc. 24-141.

on which it is dependent is passed by both the Houses and assented to by the President, after a motion for suspension of the Proviso to the Rule in its application to the Bill is adopted by the House<sup>157</sup>.

A motion for leave to introduce a Bill may be made and the Bill introduced on a day notwithstanding that day has been allotted for financial business<sup>158</sup>.

There is no restriction on the number of Government Bills which may be introduced on any particular day, or by any one Minister.

Publication of Government Bills after Introduction

As soon as possible after a Bill has been introduced, unless it has already been published before introduction, the Bill is sent for publication in the Gazette of the same date on which the Bill is introduced<sup>159</sup>. If a Bill is introduced on the recommendation of the President or the President has recommended to the Lok Sabha for consideration of a Bill, the letter from the Minister conveying the President's recommendation is reproduced in extenso after the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill and is published in the same manner in the Gazette.

157. The Emergency Risks (Goods) Insurance Bill and the Emergency Risks (Factories) Insurance Bill, where the latter was dependent on the former, were considered together and passed—L.S. Deb., 5-12-1962, c. 4388; 7-12-1962, cc. 4760-837.

The Departmentalisation of Union Accounts (Transfer of Personnel) Bill, 1976, was considered and passed after a Motion for suspension of the Proviso to Rule 66 was adopted by the House—L.S. Deb., 25-3-1976, cc. 199-200.

Again, due to emergency in 1971, the same procedure was adopted in respect of; (i) the Emergency Risks (Goods) Insurance Bill and the Emergency Risks (Undertakings) Insurance Bill—L.S. Deb., 8-12-1971, cc. 57-58; (ii) the Personal Injuries (Emergency Provision) Amendment Bill and the Personal Injuries (Compensation Insurance) Amendment Bill—L.S. Deb., 15-12-1971, c. 12; and 16-12-1971, c.131; (iii) the Constitution (Twenty-seventh Amendment) Bill, 1971.— (L.S. Deb., 21-12-1971, cc. 7-8), which was dependent on the North-Eastern Areas (Reorganisation) Bill, 1971 passed by Lok Sabha on 15 December 1971 and not assented to by the President on the date of consideration of the dependent Bill; (iv) the Government of Union Territories (Amendment) Bill, 1971 (L.S. Deb., 21-12-1971), which was dependent on the North-Eastern Areas (Reorganisation) Bill, 1971 and the Constitution (Twenty-seventh Amendment) Bill, 1971 passed by Lok Sabha on 15 December 1971 and 21 December 1971, respectively, and not assented to by the President on the date of consideration of the dependent Bill; and (v) the North-Eastern Council Bill, 1971 (L.S. Deb., 22-12-1971, c. 47), which was dependent on the North-Eastern Areas (Reorganisation) Bill, 1971; the Constitution (Twenty-seventh Amendment) Bill, 1971 and the Government of Union Territories (Amendment) Bill, 1971 passed by Lok Sabha on 15 December 1971, 21 December 1971, respectively, and not assented to by the President on the date of consideration of the dependent Bill.

158. Rule 220. There have been several instances when Bills were introduced on the days allotted for financial business. On 15 March 1954, the day allotted for discussion of the Budget (General) 1954-55, a Government. Bill, viz., the Untouchability (Offences) Bill, 1954, was introduced and on 23 March 1985, the day allotted for discussion of the Budget (General) 1985-86, the National Security (Amendment) Bill, 1985 was introduced. On 23 March 1987, the Prevention of Corruption Bill, 1987 was introduced when the Budget (General) for 1987-88 was being discussed.

159. Rule 73; Bills are published in Gaz. Ex. (II)(2).

As in the case of a Bill directed by the Speaker to be published before introduction, the contents page and annexure to the Bill are not published in the Gazette.

Identical Bills when re-introduced on the ground that recommendation of the President had not been obtained in the first instance are not required to be re-published in the Gazette.

Publication of a Bill in the Gazette does not obviate the necessity of circulating copies of the Bill to members<sup>160</sup>.

Reference of Bills to Departmentally Related Standing Committees

The year 1993 ushered in a new era in the history of Indian Parliament when 17 Departmentally Related Standing Committees were constituted. Each Committee had 45 members, 30 members nominated by the Speaker from amongst the members of Lok Sabha and 15 members nominated by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha from amongst members of Rajya Sabha. In order to facilitate the Standing Committee to expeditiously examine and make report to the Houses on executive policies, legislative and budgetary proposals, etc., the number of Standing Committees has been increased from 17 to 24 in the year 2004. Each Standing Committee now consists of 31 members, 21 members to be nominated by the Speaker from amongst the members of Lok Sabha and 10 members to be nominated by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, from amongst the members of Rajya Sabha<sup>161</sup>. All the Ministries/Departments have been brought under the jurisdiction of these standing Committees<sup>162</sup>. Out of the 24 Departmentally Related Standing Committees, 8 are under the jurisdiction of Rajya Sabha and 16 under the jurisdiction of Lok Sabha.

Besides consideration of Demands for Grants of each Ministry/Department, these Committees have been entrusted with the task of examining such Bills pertaining to a Ministry/Department falling under their jurisdiction, as are referred to them by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha or the Speaker, Lok Sabha, as the case may be<sup>163</sup>. The following procedure shall be followed by each of the Standing Committees in examining the Bills and making a report thereon<sup>164</sup>.

- (a) the Committee shall consider the general principles and clauses of the Bills referred to them and make report thereon;

160. See L.A. Deb., 6-9-1928, pp. 299-305.

162. Rule 331 C.

163. Rule 331 E (1) (b). Before May 2005, while referring the Bills to Standing Committees, no time was fixed for presentation of the report on Bills. In May 2005 it was decided by Speaker that at the time of reference of the Bill, the Committee may be requested to make a report on the Bill within three months. The Committee would, however, be at liberty to make a report earlier than three months and may also seek extension of time for presentation of report from the Presiding Officer if it requires more than three months time.

164. Rule 331H.

- (b) the Committee shall consider only such Bills<sup>165</sup> introduced<sup>166</sup> in either of the Houses as are referred to them by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha or the Speaker, as the case may be; and
- (c) the Committee shall make report on the Bills in the given time.

In case a Bill is introduced in the Lok Sabha and is to be referred to a Committee which falls under the jurisdiction of the Rajya Sabha, the Bill will be referred by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha on a request being made to that effect by the Speaker, Lok Sabha and vice versa<sup>167</sup>.

The reports of the Standing Committees shall have persuasive value and shall be treated as considered advice by the Committees. In case the Government accepts any of the recommendations of the Committee, it may bring forward official amendments at the consideration stage of the Bill, or it may withdraw the Bill and bring forward a fresh Bill incorporating the recommendations of the Committee<sup>168</sup>.

165. All Bills except Bills of technical and trivial nature are referred to the Committees. Ordinances replacing Bills and Bills of urgent nature are also not referred to the Committees, as these are required to be enacted by a target date. However, during the Fourth Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, an exception was made when the Electricity Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1995 seeking to replace the Electricity Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 1997 was referred to the Standing Committee on Energy for examination and to report upon, on a demand made by several members in the House. The Committee, however, could not present its report on the Bill before the dissolution of the Eleventh Lok Sabha on 4 December 1997.

166. The Public Sector Iron and Steel Companies (Restructuring) and Miscellaneous Provisions (Amendment) Bill, 1993 was referred to the Committee even before introduction.

167. To begin with, letter of requests for reference of such Bills were exchanged at the Presiding Officers' level; later on, it was decided to exchange such letters at the level of Secretaries-General of both the Houses.

168. A. Instances when official amendments were brought forward in pursuance of recommendations of the Standing Committees:—

- (i) The National Commission of Safai Karamcharis Bill, 1993.
- (ii) The Payment and Settlement Systems Bill, 2006.
- (iii) The Banking Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2012;
- (iv) The Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Amendment Bill, 2012; and
- (v) The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Bill, 2013

B. Instances when new Bill was introduced after incorporating the recommendations of the Standing Committee:—

- (i) The Securities Contracts (Regulation) Amendment Bill, 2005 was introduced in Lok Sabha on 16 December 2005 and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance. Since the approach recommended by the Standing Committee and agreed to by the Government was different from that envisaged in the Bill, the Government withdrew the earlier Bill and introduced on the same day a fresh Bill, namely, the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Amendment Bill, 2006, after incorporating the recommendations of the Committee.
- (ii) The Competition (Amendment) Bill, 2006 was introduced in Lok Sabha on 9 March 2006 and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance. Keeping in view a large number of amendments required in the Bill as a result of the recommendations of the Committee, the Bill was withdrawn and the Competition (Amendment) Bill, 2007 was introduced on 29 August 2007.

Motions after Introduction of Bills

After a Bill has been introduced, the member in charge of the Bill concerned may move any of the following motions<sup>169</sup>.

that the Bill be taken into consideration; Select Committee of the House; or that the Bill be referred to or that the Bill be referred to a Joint Committee of the Houses with the concurrence of Rajya Sabha; or that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon.

Any member may object to any such motion being moved by the Minister if copies of the Bill have not been made available to the members at least two days before the day on which the motion is made, and such objection prevails, unless the Speaker allows the motion to be made<sup>170</sup>. Since copies of a Bill are required to be circulated to members two days before its introduction<sup>171</sup>, the next motion can technically be made on the day the Bill is introduced. However, by convention, the next motion in respect of a Bill is not made on the same day on which the Bill is introduced<sup>172</sup>.

Where copies of a Bill are circulated after introduction, e.g., in the case of Finance Bills and secret Bills, or in any other case where it has not been possible to circulate the copies two days before introduction, the next motion after introduction can be moved only when copies of the Bill have been in the hands of members for at least two days. Where, however, a request is made to the Speaker by the member in-charge of a Bill for moving the next motion earlier than two days after making

- (iii) The Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2009 was introduced in Lok Sabha on 3 August 2009 and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance. In view of large number of amendments required to be carried into the Bill due to recommendations of the Standing Committee and the suggestions of various stakeholders, the Bill was withdrawn and a fresh Bill, namely, the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2011, was introduced on 14 December 2011.

Private Members' Bills: the Temple Entry Bill—L.A. Deb., 24-3-1933, pp. 2532-39;

The Indian Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill—L.S. Deb., 3-9-1936, p. 394; and

The Muslim Intestate Succession Bill—L.A. Deb., 15-9-1939, pp. 605 and 607.

Govt. Bills:

The Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament (Amendment) Bill, 1975—L.S. Deb., 6-8-1975; cc. 4-54;

The Constitution (Fortieth Amendment) Bill, 1975—L.S. Deb., 7-8-1975, cc. 6-116; available to members copies thereof, the Speaker may, in his discretion, waive the period of notice and allow the motion to be moved after taking all the facts into consideration as also the sense of the House.

The Reserve Bank of India (Amendment) Bill was introduced as a secret Bill. The House agreed to its consideration the following day, on the Minister explaining the urgency of the measure. However, when the motion for consideration of the Bill was moved the next day, objection was taken to its consideration, and further consideration thereof was accordingly postponed<sup>173</sup>.

In the case of Appropriation Bills, however, the requirement of prior circulation of copies is not insisted upon by the Speaker on grounds of urgency and the convention that the next motion in respect of a Bill should not be made on the same day on which it is introduced is also generally waived by the Speaker on requests made by Minister-in-charge of Appropriation Bills. Accordingly, the Speaker normally allows Appropriation Bills to be introduced, considered and passed on the same day on specific requests made in this behalf by the Minister concerned<sup>174</sup>.

Motion for Consideration

When the motion 'that the Bill be taken into consideration' is moved or on any subsequent day to which the discussion thereof is postponed, the principle of the Bill and its provisions are discussed generally, but the details of the Bill are not discussed further than is necessary to explain its principles<sup>175</sup>. In the case of amending Bills, the discussion is confined to the provisions of the amending Bill, and other substantive provisions of the principal Act are not touched upon unless the clauses of the amending Bill necessarily lead to the amendment or modification of any other section of the parent Act<sup>176</sup>.

Where two Bills of a similar nature are pending before the House, a joint discussion on motions for consideration of the two Bills is permissible, but the motions are put to the vote of the House separately<sup>177</sup>.

When a Bill has been introduced, the member in-charge of the Bill may move that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon. If so, no amendment can then be moved to the effect that the Bill be taken into consideration or that it be referred to a Select Committee of the House or a Joint Committee of the Houses<sup>178</sup>.

A motion that the Bill be circulated for eliciting opinion thereon can also be moved by way of an amendment to a motion moved by a member in-charge either for consideration of the Bill or for its committal to a Select or Joint Committee.

It is permissible for a member to move a motion for circulation of a Bill which requires the President's recommendation for consideration, but which has not been obtained at that stage by the member in-charge or which has been withheld by the President<sup>179</sup>.

Previously where the President had withheld his recommendation for consideration of a Bill, notice of a motion for circulation of the Bill was held to be out of order. The member in-charge of the Bill could, however, apply to the President for reconsideration of his decision.

Adoption of the motion for circulation of a Bill does not commit the House to the principle of the Bill, and if that motion is negatived by the House, the Bill is not killed<sup>180</sup>.

The motion for circulation of a Bill specifies the period for eliciting public opinion<sup>181</sup>. After the motion has been adopted, no variation can be made in the specified date except with the consent of the House.

The Bill is circulated to the State Governments who are asked to publish it in their Gazettes and to forward in duplicate their opinion on the provisions of the Bill, and the opinions of members of the State Legislatures and of such public bodies, selected officers and any other persons as the State Governments may think fit to consult, within the period specified in the motion. In certain cases, the State Governments may also be asked to obtain the views of the High Courts.<sup>182</sup>

After opinions on a Bill have been received, they are examined in the Secretariat<sup>183</sup> to see that they do not contain any statements which are defamatory or libellous or derogatory to the dignity of Parliament or State Legislatures. Opinions are edited to eliminate redundant matter and to ensure that the language used is decorous and temperate. After editing and consolidation, these opinions are printed as 'Papers to the Bill'<sup>184</sup> and are laid on the Table by the members in-charge of the Bill. All opinions so laid are printed and copies thereof are made available to members of both the Houses. If Lok Sabha is not in session, the opinions are circulated to members before they are laid on the Table, under orders of the Speaker. In that case, the opinions are laid on the Table as soon as possible after the commencement of the next session of Lok Sabha<sup>185</sup>.

In the case of opinions received by the State Governments in a language other than Hindi or English, they are required to have such opinions translated into either Hindi or English before forwarding the same to the Secretariat. If, however, any State Government omits to comply this requirement, such opinions are treated as representations on the Bill and are kept in the Parliament Library after showing them to the Ministry concerned of the Government of India. Members are informed about such representations through a paragraph in the Bulletin<sup>186</sup>.

At the time of laying 'Papers to the Bill', the member in-charge confines himself to a statement to that effect and, if he wishes to proceed with the Bill thereafter, moves that the Bill be referred to Select Committee of the House or a Joint Committee of the Houses<sup>187</sup>, unless the Speaker allows a motion to be made that the Bill be taken into consideration<sup>188</sup>.

After the Bill circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the direction of the House has been referred to a Select or Joint Committee, opinions laid on the Table are summarized and the precis is made available to members of the Committee on the Bill<sup>189</sup>.

Motion for Reference to Select or Joint Committee

According to the general practice, the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select Committee sets out the names of members of the House proposed to be appointed on the Committee. When a Bill has already been referred to a Select Committee additional members can subsequently be appointed to the Committee by a motion moved to that effect by the member in-charge of the Bill and adopted by the House<sup>190</sup>.

Bills are mainly circulated for eliciting public opinion by the direction of Lok Sabha. Bills that have been circulated for eliciting public opinion under an Executive order are: the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1953; and the Hindu Succession Bill, 1954.

Consent of the members whose names are included in the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee is not presumed but has to be expressly obtained by the mover of the motion<sup>191</sup>.

In the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select Committee, names of members of Lok Sabha only are included. However, names of Ministers who are members of Rajya Sabha may also be included in the motion but the Ministers so appointed as members of the Committee have no right to vote.

In the case of a Government Bill, the name of the Minister in-charge is always included in the motion for reference of the Bill to a Select or Joint Committee, while in the case of Private Members' Bills, the names of both the member in-charge and the Minister to whose Ministry the subject matter of the Bill pertains are included in the motion. The number of members whose names may be set out in the motion for appointment on the Committee is not fixed and varies from committee to committee. The composition of the Committee, as reflected in the motion, generally represents the Party and Group divisions in the House.

It is not obligatory that the name of the member who moves the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee be included in the list of members embodied in the motion for appointment of the Committee<sup>192</sup>.

It is a convention that members proposed to be appointed on the Committee are not permitted to speak on the motion for reference of the Bill to a Select or Joint Committee<sup>193</sup>. However, in exceptional cases, a departure from the convention has been made<sup>194</sup>.

The motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee may include instructions to the Committee to consider matters other than those dealt with in the Bill but relating to the subject-matter of the Bill<sup>195</sup>.

Instructions to the Committee for amendment of such sections of the parent Act as are not covered by the amending Bill, whenever given, are to be specific and clear<sup>196</sup>.

The motion appointing the Committee mentions a specific date by which, or indicates the period within which, its report is to be presented to the House. Where

A private member's Bill may be referred to the same Select or Joint Committee to which a Government Bill or Bills dealing with a cognate subject has/have been referred or, vice versa, by means of a single motion<sup>197</sup> or separate motions<sup>198</sup>.

A combined discussion on motions for reference to Select or Joint Committee in respect of two Bills of a similar nature is permissible<sup>199</sup>.

As already stated, a motion for reference to a Joint Committee cannot be moved in respect of Money Bills or Financial Bills containing any of the provisions calculated to make a Bill a Money Bill<sup>200</sup>.

A Select or Joint Committee becomes functus officio as soon as it presents its final report to the House and thereafter a motion to refer another Bill to that Committee cannot be moved<sup>201</sup>. The Joint Committee also becomes defunct in case the Government does not reconstitute it with the intention of discontinuing with the Committee after dissolution of Lok Sabha<sup>202</sup>.

After the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee is adopted by the House, the House is committed to the principle of the Bill<sup>203</sup>.

When a motion for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee is adopted by Lok Sabha, it is transmitted to Rajya Sabha for concurrence along with a message. The motion gives the names of members of Lok Sabha appointed to the Committee and also fixes the number of members from Rajya Sabha who may join the Committee. The Rajya Sabha is requested to nominate their members on the Committee and communicate their names to the Lok Sabha. The proportion of members on a Joint Committee from Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha is generally 2:1.

While concurring in the recommendation of the Lok Sabha to refer a Bill to a Joint Committee if the Rajya Sabha makes a recommendation extending the time for presentation of the report of the Joint Committee, then such recommendation is

On the dissolution of the Ninth Lok Sabha on 13 March 1991, the Committee became defunct and it remained defunct even after the constitution of the Tenth Lok Sabha as the Government with the intention of discontinuing with the Committee did not reconstitute the same. ### Amendments to Motions Moved after Introduction of Bills

When the member in-charge moves that the Bill “be taken into consideration”, or “be referred to a Select or Joint Committee”, or “be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion”, the principle of the Bill and its provisions are discussed generally but the details of the Bill are not discussed further than is necessary to explain its principles. At this stage amendments to any of the clauses of the Bill are not permitted to be moved. But if the member in-charge moves that the Bill be taken into consideration, any other member may move as an amendment that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee of the House or to a Joint Committee of the Houses with the concurrence of Rajya Sabha, or that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by a date specified in the amendment. If the member in-charge moves that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee of the House, any member may move as an amendment that it may be referred to a Joint Committee of the Houses and vice versa, or that it may be circulated for eliciting opinion<sup>205</sup>.

An amendment for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee, or for its circulation, has to be moved immediately after the motion for consideration of the Bill is moved<sup>206</sup>. After the motion for consideration of a Bill and certain clauses thereof have been adopted by the House, an amendment for referring the Bill to a Select Committee is out of order<sup>207</sup>.

On some occasions after the motion for consideration of a Bill had been moved and part-discussed, the member in-charge of the Bill, in deference to the suggestions made by certain members, himself moved an amendment for reference of the Bill to a Joint or Select Committee<sup>208</sup>.

When an amendment seeking circulation of the Bill for eliciting opinion, moved to the motion for consideration, is dilatory and defeats the purpose of the Bill, it is ruled out of order<sup>209</sup>. Further, in the case of Expiring Laws Continuance Bills, amendments for circulation thereof for eliciting opinion by dates falling after the dates of expiry of the principal Acts are inadmissible<sup>210</sup>.

205. Rule 75.

206. If such an amendment has not been moved at that stage, it can be moved at a later stage only by suspending sub-rule (2) of Rule 75—L.S. Deb., 3-4-1969, c. 402; 18-4-1969, c. 366.

If the motion before the House is that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee of the House or to a Joint Committee of the Houses, an amendment can be moved that the House give instructions to the Select or Joint Committee, as the case may be, to make some particular or additional provision in the Bill and, if necessary or convenient, to consider and report on amendments that may be proposed to the original Act which the Bill seeks to amend. Such an amendment can also be moved if the motion before the House is that the Bill be taken into consideration and a member has moved an amendment for reference of the Bill to a Select or Joint Committee<sup>211</sup>. An amendment to motion for reference of Bills to Select/Joint Committee can be moved but in such case first the amendment is disposed of and then the main motion is put to vote<sup>212</sup>.

An amendment seeking reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee may be put by the Chair in an amended form after taking the sense of the House<sup>213</sup>.

An amendment for reference of a Bill to a Select Committee which does not propose the names of members for appointment on the Committee is ruled out of order<sup>214</sup>.

A member whose name has been proposed in the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee is not permitted to move an amendment to the motion<sup>215</sup>.

When a motion for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee has been moved, it is not permissible to move an amendment that the Bill be taken into consideration forthwith<sup>216</sup>.

Procedure after Presentation of Report of the Select or Joint Committee

After the Report of the Select or Joint Committee on a Bill has been presented to the Lok Sabha, the member in-charge may make any one of the following motions<sup>217</sup>:

that the Bill, as reported, be taken into consideration; or that the Bill, as reported, be recommitted to the same Committee or to a new Committee, either without limitation or with respect to particular clauses or amendments only, or with instructions to the Committee to make some particular or additional provision in the Bill; or that the Bill, as reported, be circulated or recirculated, as the case may be, for the purpose of eliciting opinion or further opinion thereon.

In case the member in-charge seeks to move that the Bill, as reported by the Select or Joint Committee, be taken into consideration, any member may object to the motion being made on the ground that copies of the report of the Committee, as required, have not been made available to the members at least two days before the day on which the motion is made<sup>218</sup>. The objection prevails but the Speaker may allow the report of the Committee to be taken into consideration in urgent cases.

The debate on the motion that the Bill as reported by the Select or Joint Committee be taken into consideration is confined to the consideration of the report of the Committee and the matters referred to therein, but members can advance any alternative suggestions consistent with the principle of the Bill<sup>219</sup>. It has been ruled that the scope of the discussion on the Bill as reported is limited to the Bill as reported by the Committee, and the principle of the Bill is not open to discussion again<sup>220</sup>.

Members other than those who served on the Committee are generally given preference to speak during the discussion on the Bill as reported by the Committee. Members of the Committee may be given a chance to speak if a reply is called from them to the points raised by other members<sup>221</sup>.

If the member in-charge moves that the Bill, as reported, be taken into consideration, any member can move an amendment that the Bill be recommitted or be circulated or recirculated for eliciting opinion or further opinion, as the case may be<sup>222</sup>. However, such an amendment is inadmissible if it is of a dilatory nature.

Notice of motion that a clause (or clauses) of a Bill be referred or recommitted to a Select Committee is in order provided the notice specifies the points on which the Committee has to apply its mind. Such a motion may be moved by the member concerned at the stage when the particular clause (or at the first stage where a number of clauses or inter-connected clauses) is before the House. In such a case the motion is first disposed of before other amendments to the clauses or clause are taken up. Sometimes the discussion on an inter-dependent clause may be postponed until the main clause or clauses to which the notice relates are reached<sup>223</sup>.

Amendments for restoration of clauses of a Bill which have been omitted by the Select or Joint Committee are in order during the consideration of the Bill as reported by the Committee<sup>224</sup>. An amendment can also be moved to restore status quo if the Select Committee has, by going beyond the scope of an amending Bill, deleted a section or sections from the principal Act<sup>225</sup>.

If the motion before the House is that the Bill be recommitted to the same Committee an amendment to the effect that a particular clause be deleted and rest of the Bill be recommitted cannot be moved<sup>226</sup>. In fact, no further amendment to such a motion can be moved<sup>227</sup>.

Clause-by-Clause Consideration of the Bill

After the motion that the Bill, or the Bill as reported by the Select or Joint Committee, be taken into consideration has been voted upon and carried, the Bill is taken up for consideration clause-by-clause<sup>228</sup>. The Speaker may call each clause separately and when the amendments relating to a particular clause are disposed of, he puts the question<sup>229</sup>.

The Speaker may, if he thinks fit, postpone consideration of a clause<sup>230</sup>, or direct some part of a clause of a Bill to be considered and voted separately before the clause as a whole is put to the vote of the House<sup>231</sup>.

Where discussion on a clause of a Bill has concluded, the voting thereon may be postponed under certain circumstances.

Discussion on clause 4 of the Hindu Succession Bill, 1956, was concluded on 2 May 1956. But voting thereon was deferred till the next day to enable the Government to examine the necessity of making provisions so as to avoid anomaly due to difference in customs prevalent in the Punjab and other States regarding the right of a son to enforce partition of Mitakshara coparcenary property<sup>232</sup>.

In exercise of his inherent powers, the Speaker may not put a clause of a Bill or a motion in respect of a Bill to the vote of the House<sup>233</sup>.

During the clause-by-clause consideration of the Hindu Succession Bill, 1956, it was brought to the notice of the Speaker that clauses 12 and 13 of the Bill were not necessary in view of the clauses 8(c) and 8(d) which had already been adopted by the House. Accordingly, the Speaker did not put clauses 12 and 13 of the Bill to the vote of the House<sup>234</sup>.

233. During Ninth Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha, on 27 December 2011, motion for consideration of the Constitution (One Hundred Sixteenth Amendment) Bill, 2011 was carried by a special majority. However, the motions for adoption of the operative clauses 2 and 3 and clause 1 could not be carried by a special majority in accordance with the provisions of Rule 155. Since all the clauses of the Bill were negatived, the motion for passing of the Bill having become infructuous was not permitted to be moved by the Speaker.

234. Ibid., 7-5-1956, cc. 7391-92.

If the member in-charge of the Bill desires to omit a clause from the Bill, the normal procedure is to put the clause to the vote of the House and have it negated<sup>235</sup>.

In the case of the Government Bill, the Minister concerned is informed in writing to get such clauses negated by the House. It is not permissible to move for withdrawal of a clause, because after a Bill has been introduced the Bill as a whole is before the House<sup>236</sup>.

Schedule or Schedules, if any, are generally taken up for consideration after the clauses are disposed of<sup>237</sup>. Schedules may be amended in the same manner as clauses. Consideration of new schedules follows consideration of the original schedules. However, the Speaker may permit any schedule or schedules being considered before the clauses are disposed of or along with a clause or otherwise as he may think fit<sup>238</sup>. Where a clause of a Bill relates to certain amendments embodied in the schedule, the schedule is disposed of first and then the clause<sup>239</sup>. On occasions, when consideration of particular clauses are dependent on any relevant schedule, the clauses and the related schedule are taken up and considered together.

In the case of the State Reorganisation Bill, 1956, which contained 114 clauses and 6 schedules, clauses 16-49 and schedules I, II and III and clauses 71-114 and schedules IV, V and VI were taken up for consideration together.

Clauses of a Bill, its schedules, or both of them, may be put together as one question by the Speaker to the vote of the House if he thinks fit unless a request by a member is made for any clause or schedule to be put separately<sup>240</sup>.

Clause one, the Enacting Formula, the Preamble, if any, and the title of the Bill are taken up for consideration after other clauses and schedules (including new clauses

In another instance, amendments seeking to omit clauses 49 and 53 of the Finance Bill, 1987 were held to be not in order, being negative in character. The Prime Minister, who was holding the Finance portfolio also was apprised of the position and requested in writing to get these clauses negated by the House. Accordingly, these clauses were got negated by the House—L.S. Deb., 4-5-1987, cc. 433-34. Similarly, amendments seeking to omit clauses 59, 74 and 101 of the Finance Bill, 1992 were held to be not in order, being negative in character. Ministry of Finance was informed to get these clauses negated by the House and accordingly, these clauses were got negated by the House on 6 May 1992—L.S. Deb., 6-5-1992, cc. 584-659. ### Amendments to Bills

Notice of Amendments

Notice of an amendment to a Bill, like any other notice, is required to be given in writing, addressed to the Secretary-General, duly signed by the member giving notice and handed in at the Parliamentary Notice Office between the notified hours<sup>242</sup>.

It is open to members to give notice of amendments to a Bill as soon as it is introduced without waiting for inclusion of the next motion in regard to that Bill in the List of Business.

Amendments tabled by members suspended from the service of the House are not accepted during the period of their suspension even though they relate to the Bills which are likely to be taken up after the period of suspension is over.

Period of Notice

Notice of an amendment is required to be given at least one day before the day on which the Bill is to be considered in Lok Sabha<sup>243</sup>. Any member may object to the moving of an amendment of which the requisite notice has not been given and such objection prevails unless the Speaker allows the amendment to be moved<sup>244</sup>. In the case of Bills taken up for consideration at short notice, the period of notice of amendments has been waived by the Speaker<sup>245</sup>.

As amendments are circulated to members both in English and Hindi simultaneously, the Rules Committee (Fourth Lok Sabha) decided that members might be requested to table notices of amendments at least two days before the day the Bill was to be taken up in the House. Accordingly, a few days before the commencement of each session, members are requested through Bulletin to table such notices at least two days before the day the Bill is to be taken up in the House<sup>246</sup>.

242. The Parliamentary Notice Office (P.N.O.) of the Secretariat receives notices from members between 10.00 and 15.15 hours on all working days. Notices left at the Notice Office after 15.15 hours are treated as given at 10.00 hours on the next working day. Rule 332; Bn. (II), 30-1-1988, para 2048.

As the members did not get sufficient time to study the Bill and table amendments thereto, Speaker waived the notice period and allowed members to table notices of amendments to the Bill upto the day of its consideration.

An amendment of which due notice has not been given may be allowed to be moved when adequate notice of an identical amendment has been given by another member and that member declines to move his amendment<sup>247</sup>.

The Speaker may also waive the notice period for an amendment provided the House is agreed upon it<sup>248</sup>. Government amendments may be allowed to be moved even without notice<sup>249</sup> unless public interest is vitally affected in any way. Where Government amendments are allowed to be moved at short notice, amendments to these amendments have also been permitted at short notice<sup>250</sup>. A last-minute amendment to a Bill may also be admitted, if agreed to and accepted by the mover of the Bill<sup>251</sup>.

On 23 August 2006, Minister-in-charge of the Salary, Allowances and Pension of Members of Parliament (Amendment) Bill, 2006, handed over an amendment to the Bill at the Table shortly before the clause by clause consideration of the Bill was to commence. Due to paucity of time, the amendment was examined at the table and verbal approval of Secretary-General for its admittance was obtained. The amendment was circulated in the House, put to vote and adopted. The Bill, as amended, was passed the same day.

On 18 December 2012, the Minister of State for Home Affairs gave notice of an amendment to the Constitution (One Hundred-Eighteenth Amendment) Bill, 2012 at the Table shortly before the clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill was to commence. The amendment was consequential in nature and after seeking verbal approval of Secretary-General, it was admitted and circulated in the Chamber. The Bill, as amended, was passed the same day.

250. In the case of the Land Acquisition (Amendment) Bill, amendments of which notice was given after 15.15 hours on 29 August as well as on 30 August 1962, were permitted to be moved on 30 August 1962, as the notice of Government amendments to which there were amendments or with which they were directly connected was given on the same date, i.e. 30 August 1962—L.S. Deb., 10-9-1991, cc. 21291-98. On 23 August 2005, Minister-in-charge of the National Rural Employment Guarantee Bill, 2004 tabled an amendment which was admitted and circulated in the House as the Bill was listed for further consideration and passing on that day. While clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill was in progress, a member tabled an amendment to this government amendment. The Minister of Rural Development tabled an amendment to the National Rural Employment Guarantee Bill, 2004 on the day the Bill was listed for further consideration and passing. The amendment was circulated in the Chamber. Prof. Vijay Kumar Malhotra tabled in the House, an amendment to this government amendment. The amendment to government amendment tabled by Prof. Malhotra was admitted, but could not be circulated due to paucity of time. Amendment to government amendment moved by Prof. Malhotra was put to vote and negatived. L.S. Deb., 23-8-2005.

During the consideration of the Lokpal and Lokayuktas Bill, 2011 on 27 December 2012, last minute amendments tabled by Sushma Swaraj, V. Narayanasamy (Minister-in-charge) and Vishnu Pada Ray were admitted and circulated in the Chamber.

Form of Amendments

An amendment to a motion on a Bill or to a clause (or schedule) of a Bill should be in a form in which it can be put by the Speaker to obtain a complete and clear decision from the House<sup>252</sup>.

If a member does not give notice of an amendment in the proper form, the amendment is suitably edited by the Secretariat in consultation with the member concerned<sup>253</sup> before it is printed and circulated to members.

Admissibility of Amendments

The following conditions govern the admissibility of amendments to clauses and schedules of a Bill:

(a) Amendments should be within the scope of the Bill and relevant to the subject matter of the clause to which it relates<sup>254</sup>.

An amendment must not introduce new or foreign matter into the Bill<sup>255</sup>. Amendments enlarging the scope of the Bill or going beyond its intentions have been ruled out of order<sup>256</sup>. However, amendments limiting the scope of a Bill can be moved provided the limitation is not of such a character as to destroy altogether the whole basis and scope of the Bill<sup>257</sup>.

The Speaker has in certain cases permitted the moving of motion for suspension of Rule 80(i) to enable the Minister-in-Charge to move amendments which were beyond the scope of the Bill<sup>258</sup>.

252. L.A. Deb., 21-3-1923, p. 3816.

253. Generally, the members agree to the change in the form suggested by the Secretariat. There have, however, been cases where the members have requested that the amendments be circulated in the form in which they had given notice, in such cases, the amendments are circulated in the same form.

On 10 May 2002, the Minister of State for Finance gave notice of 18 amendments to the Negotiable Instruments (Amendment) Bill, 2001 seeking to amend Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. The notice of amendments given by the Minister sought to amend, in addition to the above Act, "the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891" and "the Information Technology Act, 2000". The Ministers' request for waiving the requirement of the Rule 80(i) in respect of the amendments which were outside scope of the Bill, was not acceded to since the Negotiable Instruments (Amendment) Bill, 2001, as introduced, did not touch the above two Acts and extracts of the said Acts had not been appended to the Bill. The concerned Ministry was asked to withdraw the Bill and to bring forward a fresh comprehensive Bill incorporating amendments.

Maintenance and Welfare of Parents and Senior Citizens Bill, 2007.—L.S. Deb., 5-12-2007.

(b) An amendment should not be inconsistent with any previous decisions of the House on the same question<sup>259</sup>.

Amendments to insert new provisions inconsistent with the provisions of a clause of the same Bill already adopted by the House have been ruled out of order<sup>260</sup>. Thus, an amendment to Clause 1 of a Bill which is inconsistent with a decision taken on other clauses of the Bill is out of order<sup>261</sup>.

(c) An amendment should not be such as to make the clause which it proposes to amend unintelligible or ungrammatical<sup>262</sup>.

If an amendment refers to, or is not intelligible without, a subsequent amendment or schedule, notice of the subsequent amendment or schedule has to be given before the first amendment is moved so as to make the series of amendments intelligible as a whole<sup>263</sup>.

(d) An amendment should not be frivolous or meaningless<sup>264</sup>.

(e) An amendment which has merely the effect of a negative vote is not allowed<sup>265</sup>.

On this principle, amendments purporting to omit a clause of a Bill are disallowed<sup>266</sup>; the proper course is to vote against the clause. Amendments seeking to omit certain words from a clause which would, in effect, mean the omission of the clause are also out of order.

(f) An amendment should not be dilatory in nature<sup>267</sup>.

Normally, the Chair does not disallow an amendment on the ground that it is ultra vires the Constitution<sup>268</sup>.

Amendments to the schedule of a Bill which confirms an international agreement are inadmissible. The House can reject the agreements as a whole but alterations in the agreement by way of amendments are not allowed<sup>269</sup>.

Two amendments tabled by the Prime Minister who was also the Minister of Finance for omission of clauses 49 and 53 of the Finance Bill, 1987 were withheld from circulation. Later clauses 49 and 53 were negatived by the House on 4 May 1987.

269. L.S. Deb., 24-9-1958, c. 8448.

Amendments to marginal headings to a Bill are not permissible, as marginal headings do not form part of a Bill<sup>270</sup>.

An amendment to an Appropriation Bill for omission of a grant is out of order on the ground that the demand for grant has already been voted by the House<sup>271</sup>.

An amendment may be moved to an amendment which has already been proposed by the Speaker<sup>272</sup>.

Amendments to Amending Bills

The scope of amendments to a Bill seeking to amend an Act is limited. Normally, amendments to sections of the principal Act which are not touched by the amending Bill are inadmissible<sup>273</sup>. Even in the case of amendments to sections which are touched, it is essential that such amendments should be within the scope of the amending Bill<sup>274</sup>. Thus, if there are several parts of a “definition” section of the principal Act and the amending Bill touches only one particular definition which has no relation to the other parts, an amendment relating to the other parts or seeking to insert an operative part in the definition which is sought to be amended is out of order<sup>275</sup>.

If an amending Bill seeks to amend a clause of a section in the principal Act, the other clauses of that section are not automatically open to amendment unless the amendment proposed is ancillary to, or dependent on, provisions in the amending Bill, or is consequential<sup>276</sup>.

Amendments to sections of the principal Act which are not touched by the amending Bill have, therefore, been allowed, if such amendments are consequential upon the amendments sought to be made through the amending Bill or, being intimately connected, fall within the scope of the Bill<sup>277</sup>.

On 8 August 2001, the Minister-in-Charge of the Protection of Plant Varieties and Farmers’ Rights Bill, 2000, as reported by Joint Committee, tabled notice of amendments, some of which either sought to amend chapter heading, sub-heading or were related to insertion/omission of sub-headings. The amendments relating to chapter heading, sub-heading or those related to insertion/omission of sub-headings tabled by the Minister were not admitted and withheld from circulation on the ground that such changes do not form part of the clauses. These changes were later allowed to be incorporated in the Bill by the Speaker, on the request made by the Draftsman, as consequential changes.

A member (Basudeb Acharia), tabled amendments to the Lokpal and Lokayuktas Bill, 2011 which, inter alia, sought to amend chapter heading of the Bill. The amendment was not admitted on the ground that such changes do not form part of the clauses of the Bill.

In the case of a Repealing and Amending Bill, it has been held that amendments to the Acts which are sought to be repealed or amended do not come within the scope of the Bill<sup>278</sup>.

Amendments to Expiring Laws Continuance Bills

When it is desired to continue a temporary Act, a separate Bill extending its life to a specified date is brought before Parliament. The scope of amendments to such Bills is very limited. Amendments which seek to amend the sections of the Parent Act not covered by the Bill are outside the scope of the Bill<sup>279</sup>; but it is open to the House to criticize the working of the Act and to suggest directions in which it should be improved as it is the only opportunity when members can ventilate their grievances in this regard.

Amendments seeking to circulate an Expiring Law Continuance Bill for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by a date before the date of expiry of the Expiring Law are admissible<sup>280</sup>. However, amendments seeking to refer such Bills to a Select or Joint Committee with or without instructions to the Committee have been disallowed on the ground that a Bill can be referred to a Select or Joint Committee only when the principles of the Bill are accepted by the House<sup>281</sup>.

Amendments seeking to curtail the period of operation of the Expiring Law mentioned in the Continuance Bill are admissible<sup>282</sup>.

If a Bill, apart from seeking to extend the life of the Expiring Act, also seeks to make certain amendments in that Act, amendments to those sections of the Expiring Act which are sought to be amended may also be moved. Amendments relating to matters outside the particular section sought to be amended but closely related to the new scheme of the Act and arising from sections sought to be amended may also be permitted if they are otherwise in order<sup>283</sup>.

During the consideration of the Delhi and Ajmer-Mewar Rent Control (Amendment) Bill, 1951, when a member sought to move amendments for substitution of certain clause in the original Act, Speaker Mavalankar observed:

“I have come to the conclusion that, broadly speaking in cases where a Bill is brought to continue an expiring law, it would not be competent to move any amendments seeking to alter or modify the substantive provisions of the expiring law. To this general rule, there are some exceptions depending upon the nature of the continuing Bill which seeks to continue the expiring law. But, they are of a very limited and also of a procedural character; the vital point being that, no expiring law sought to be continued can be taken as an occasion to amend or alter the substantive provisions of the law, which is sought to be continued.”

Amendments Requiring President's Recommendation

In certain cases, amendments to Bills cannot be moved in the House or in the Committee without the recommendation of the President<sup>284</sup>; if a member desires to move such an amendment, he has to annex to the notice given by him the recommendation conveyed through a Minister and the notice is not treated as valid until this requirement is complied with<sup>285</sup>.

Members generally apply to the Secretariat for obtaining recommendation of the President on their behalf. A copy of the member's letter along with a copy of the amendment requiring recommendation is forwarded to the Ministry concerned for obtaining the requisite recommendation. The order of the President granting/withholding the recommendation is communicated to the Secretariat by the Minister concerned which is then published in the Bulletin<sup>286</sup>.

The recommendation of the President is required for moving, inter alia, an amendment which seeks—to impose a new tax<sup>287</sup>;

to increase the imposition of tax<sup>288</sup>;

to prevent the proceeds from the duty imposed in the Bill from being carried to the Consolidated Fund in order to appropriate these for other purpose<sup>289</sup>;

to extend the tax indefinitely, when the Bill proposes a tax for a particular period<sup>290</sup>;

to transfer one item from one part of the Schedule of a Finance Bill to another, which has the effect of increasing the duty<sup>291</sup>; and to raise the incidence of tax<sup>292</sup>;

284. The recommendation of the President for such amendments is necessary under articles 117 and 274.

285. Rule 81. Generally, in actual practice, such amendments are printed and circulated to members but are ruled out of order if sought to be moved without the requisite recommendation of the President—See L.S. Deb., 19-1-1976, cc. 260-61, 265-66.

286. On 8 August 1986 and 11 August 1986, several members tabled certain amendments to some clauses of the High Court and Supreme Court Judges (Conditions of Service) Amendment Bill, 1986, which required the President's recommendation. The requests of members for obtaining the President's recommendation were sent to the concerned Ministry. As the recommendation was not received when clause to which notice of amendment had been given was taken up for consideration on 12 August 1986 at 1700 hrs., the Speaker did not allow members to move their amendments. Members insisted that it was for the Minister to obtain and communicate the President's recommendation. Agreeing with the views of the members, the Speaker postponed the discussion on the Bill. Further discussion was resumed at 18 00 hrs. on the same day after the recommendation of the President was communicated to the Speaker by the Minister. Members were then allowed to move their amendments.

Further, amendments which seek to impose or vary a tax or duty in which States are interested cannot be moved in the House without the recommendation of the President<sup>293</sup>. Such amendments, when sought to be moved without the requisite recommendation, have been ruled out of order by the Speaker<sup>294</sup>.

In respect of income-tax or excise duty on certain items, amendments seeking to vary the tax or the duty, i.e., either raising or lowering the rate prescribed in the Bill before the House, would require the recommendation of the President<sup>295</sup>.

Recommendation of the President is, however, not necessary for moving, inter alia, an amendment which seeks—to abolish or reduce the limits of the tax proposed in the Bill, or increase such tax upto the limits of an existing tax<sup>296</sup>; to maintain status quo, i.e., if a Bill proposes to remove an existing duty an amendment for the deletion of that provision would maintain the status quo although the apparent effect of the amendment would be to increase taxation<sup>297</sup>;

to increase the rate of duty in one particular item but reduce it in another so that the total effect of the amendment is to reduce the tax<sup>298</sup>; and to restore provisions in a Bill which have been modified by the Select Committee, thus appearing to have the effect of increasing the tax<sup>299</sup>.

Fresh recommendation of the President is not required for moving amendments to a Bill by a member when recommendation has already been received in respect of identical amendments tabled by other members<sup>300</sup>.

As notices of amendments lapse on prorogation, fresh recommendation of the President is required even for moving identical amendments tabled in a subsequent session<sup>301</sup>.

For determining whether an amendment to a Bill seeking to vary a tax or duty in which States are interested would require the recommendation of the President for moving, the provisions of the Bill, and not of the parent Act which it seeks to amend, are to be taken into consideration—L.S. Deb., 1-9-1958, cc. 3993-94.

300. On 26 April 1969, President's recommendation under arts. 117(1) and 274(1) was received for moving of amendments tabled by a member to the Finance Bill, 1969. It was held that fresh recommendation would not be necessary for moving identical amendments tabled by other members if the member for whose amendments recommendation had been received was not present in the House to move them or did not want to move them.

301. L.S. Deb., 9-11-1970, cc. 244-45.

Amendments which, if adopted, would involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India do not require further recommendation if the President has already recommended the consideration of the Bill.

List of Amendments

Amendments of which notice has been given are, as far as practicable, arranged in the list of amendments issued from time to time in the order in which they may be called in House. In arranging amendments which seek to raise the same question at the same point of a clause, precedence is given to the amendment of which a notice has been received from the member in-charge of the Bill; if no notice has been received from him, then in respect of such notices from others, precedence is given to the amendment of which notice has been received earlier. Subject to this, amendments are arranged in the order in which notices thereof have been received<sup>302</sup>.

Amendments are arranged in the list in the following order—dilatory motions; motions to refer a Bill to the President for obtaining the opinion of the Supreme Court under article 143 of the Constitution; amendments to circulate a Bill for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon; amendments to refer a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee; amendments to substitute a new clause for an existing clause; amendments to omit a sub-clause or a sub-paragraph; amendments to substitute a sub-clause or sub-paragraph for an existing sub-clause or sub-paragraph; amendments to omit certain words; amendments to add or insert certain words; and amendments to add or insert a new clause.

If a member tables an amendment which is identical with the one admitted earlier in the name of another member, the names of the members are bracketed.

Amendments relating to clauses and schedules of a Bill are listed separately from those to the motion for consideration of the Bill.

Indications of the President's recommendation required in respect of amendments is given in the list of amendments in case the intimation thereof is received before the list is sent for printing<sup>303</sup>. Several lists of amendments may be issued in respect of a Bill but, as far as practicable, amendments received on a day may be consolidated and issued as one list<sup>304</sup>.

302. Rule 84.

303. The following indication is given as a foot-note to the list of amendments:

“The President has, in pursuance of clause (1) of article 117 and clause (1) of article 274 of the Constitution of India, recommended to Lok Sabha the moving of amendments contained in this List.”

In case such recommendation is received after the list has been printed, necessary indication is given in the Speaker's and Officers' sets of agenda papers. Time permitting, the recommendation is also published in the Bulletin.

304. All amendments of which notices have been received in the Secretariat by 15.15 hours and which are otherwise admissible, are ordinarily printed the same night if the Bills to which these relate have been included in the List of Business, and the amendments are circulated to members at their residences.

The lists of amendments are supplied to all Ministers, members of Lok Sabha and the Ministries concerned with the Bills.

Where a large number of amendments is received to a Bill which has a large number of clauses, one day before the day on which clause-by-clause consideration is taken up, a key to amendments showing the order in which amendments are to be moved is prepared and circulated to all members. This also indicates the position about amendments requiring the President's recommendation<sup>305</sup>.

Selection of Amendments and New Clauses

The Speaker is empowered to select the new clauses or amendments to be proposed and may, if he thinks fit, call upon any member who has given notice of an amendment to give such explanation of the object of the amendment as may enable him to form a judgment upon it<sup>306</sup>.

Where a particular amendment is selected by the Speaker from amongst several similar amendments, his decision is to be accepted by the House<sup>307</sup>.

Mode of Moving Amendments

When a motion that a Bill be taken into consideration has been carried, any member may, when called upon by the Speaker, move an amendment to the Bill of which he has previously given notice of. In order to save time and repetition of arguments, a single discussion is generally allowed to cover a series of inter-dependent amendments<sup>308</sup>.

Amendments to a clause of a Bill has to be moved immediately after the clause is placed before the House<sup>309</sup>. The mere intimation from a member that he would move an amendment to a particular clause is not enough for treating it as moved. The member should be present in the House to move his amendment when the clause to which it relates is taken up<sup>310</sup>. No amendment can be moved by a member on behalf of another<sup>311</sup>. Likewise, an amendment of which notice has been given by a Minister 311. Ibid., 5-9-1957, cc. 12142-43; 6-9-1957, c. 12382.

If a member, when called by the Speaker to move his amendments, is not present in the House, he loses his chance to move them—L.S. Deb., 9-9-1957, c. 12889; see also C.A. (Leg.) Deb., (II), 2-12-1949, c. 200.

On one occasion, an amendment in the name of an absent member was, with the consent of the House, allowed to be moved by another member on his behalf as the amendment in question was acceptable to the Government.—L.S. Deb., 2-12-1968, c. 299.

cannot be moved by another Minister<sup>312</sup>, unless advance notice therefor is given by him<sup>313</sup>.

When a large number of amendments to a Bill have been circulated, in order to save the time of the House, members are asked by the Speaker to hand over at the Table slips indicating the serial numbers of the amendments sought to be moved. The Speaker, thereafter, announces the numbers of the amendments which are taken as moved<sup>314</sup>.

Moving of identical amendments is not in order, but members who have tabled identical amendments can speak in support of the amendments moved earlier<sup>315</sup>.

While moving his amendment, the mover can, with the permission of the Chair, amend it<sup>316</sup>.

Consideration of Amendments

When amendments to a particular clause have been moved, the members who catch the Speaker's eye speak on the clause to which the amendments relate and on the amendments. Although tabling of an amendment does not confer a right on the member to speak<sup>317</sup>, members tabling amendments do, if time permits, get an opportunity to speak in favour of their amendments<sup>318</sup>.

Amendments are ordinarily considered in the order of the clauses of the Bill to which they relate. After the discussion on a clause is over, the Speaker puts the amendments which have been moved to the vote of the House. First the Government amendments are put to vote. The Speaker then puts as one question all the remaining amendments to a clause which are not barred by adoption of Government amendment, unless a member requests that his amendments be put separately<sup>319</sup>. Where a clause

318. There has been an instance when certain members who could not get an opportunity to speak on their amendments were allowed to submit a written memorandum each in support of their amendments.

On 2 August 1956, during the clause-by-clause consideration of the States Reorganisation Bill, 1956 a member who for want of time could not get an opportunity to speak on his amendments requested the Speaker that he might be allowed to submit a written memorandum. The Speaker agreed to the suggestion and announced in the House that members who could not get an opportunity to speak on their amendments might send written memoranda, not exceeding two pages, containing arguments in support of their amendments. Certain members submitted memoranda which were forwarded to the Ministry of Home Affairs so that the Minister might reply to them or take them into consideration. L.S. Deb., 2-8-1956, c. 2044.

of a Bill relates to certain amendments embodied in a schedule to the Bill, the schedule is disposed of first and then the clause<sup>320</sup>.

Withdrawal of Amendments

An amendment which has been moved can be withdrawn only by leave of the House, on specific request to that effect by the mover. If leave to withdraw the amendment is opposed, it has to be put to the vote of the House for disposal. If an amendment has been proposed to an amendment, the original amendment cannot be withdrawn until the amendment proposed to it has been disposed of<sup>321</sup>.

Third Reading of the Bill

When all the clauses and schedules, if any, of the Bill have been considered and voted upon by the House, the member in-charge of the Bill can move that the Bill be passed<sup>322</sup>. Where a Bill has undergone amendments, the motion that the Bill, as amended, be passed is not generally moved on the same day on which the consideration of the Bill has concluded<sup>323</sup>. An objection can be taken to the motion being moved on the same day on the ground that members would like to study the Bill as amended, and if such an objection prevails the motion is brought forward on any future date<sup>324</sup>.

However, in normal cases, the Speaker has permitted the motion to be moved on the same day<sup>325</sup>.

In April 1977, in the Rajya Sabha, the Minister of Home Affairs did not move the motion that the Bill as amended be passed in the case of the Government of Union Territories (Amendment) Bill, 1977, as passed by Lok Sabha, and the Delhi Administration (Amendment) Bill, 1977, as passed by Lok Sabha.—*L.S. 324. The restriction applies only when a large number of substantial amendments have been carried out in the Bill at the second reading stage and time is needed for members to become familiar with those changes and get ready to make their comments on the Bill during the third reading.—L.S. Deb., 2-6-1964, cc. 682-84; 16-12-1967, cc. 7573-78; 4-8-1969, c. 440.

The motion for passing a Bill which has been reported by a Select or Joint Committee, with or without amendments, and has not been amended by the House, is in the following form:

“That the Bill, as reported by Select/Joint Committee, be passed.”

When a Bill has been amended by the House irrespective of whether it has been amended or not by the Committee, the form of the motion is:

“That the Bill, as amended, be passed.”

No amendments, except formal, verbal or consequential upon amendments adopted by the House, can be moved to the motion that the Bill be passed<sup>326</sup>.

If the Government desires any amendments of substantial character to be considered, they may, after the Bill has been passed but before it is assented to by the President, cause a message to be sent to the House by the President for consideration of such amendments.

The discussion on the motion “that the Bill (or the Bill as amended) be passed” is confined to the submission of arguments either in support of or for the rejection of the Bill as a whole. Members must not refer to the details of the Bill further than is necessary for the purpose of their arguments which should be of a general character<sup>327</sup>.

Correction of Patent Errors

No alteration can be made in a Bill as introduced or as reported by a Select or Joint Committee except by way of an amendment adopted in the House. However, the Speaker has the power to correct any obvious printing or clerical error at any stage of a Bill by issue of a corrigendum to the Bill, provided such a correction does not relate to an error affecting taxation in a secret Bill printed by the Ministry concerned before introduction<sup>328</sup>.

After introduction of the Finance Bill, 1956, a written request was made to the Speaker by the Government for carrying out corrections of certain printing errors, one of which had the effect of altering the duty on certain goods from 55 per cent to 155 per cent. The Speaker did not accept this correction.

With the permission of the Chair, the Minister of Finance made a statement on the floor of the House drawing attention to the printing error<sup>329</sup>.

Amendments must be verbal in the sense that they do not materially alter the effect of the Bill if it becomes a statute. Whether an amendment alters the effect of the Bill or not is a point to be decided by the Speaker H.C. Deb., 22-2-1961, cc. 724-25.

For instance, consequential amendments were moved and adopted at the third reading stage in the case of the Special Marriage Bill, 1954—L.S. Deb., 17-9-1954; the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1954—L.S. Deb., 18-12-1954; the State Bank of India Bill, 1955—L.S. Deb., 30-4-1955; the Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Bill, 1969—L.S. Deb., 4-8-1969, cc. 460-61; the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1969—L.S. Deb., 17-11-1970, c. 316.

At this stage, only the amendments are put to vote. After amendments are adopted, clauses to which they pertain are not put to vote as these having been adopted are already part of the Bill to be passed.

On an occasion, Rule 93(3) was suspended to enable the House to reopen discussion on certain clauses of the Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament (Amendment) Bill, 1969, which had been adopted by the House earlier—L.S. Deb., 7-8-1969, c. 257.

327. Rule 94; see also L.A. Deb., 24-2-1932, p. 1154; 28-2-1946, p. 1691; P. Deb., (II), 31-3-1950, p. 237; 19-12-1950, cc. 876-77; 29-2-1952, c. 1551; L.S. Deb., 8-8-1962, c. 700.

328. Dir. 32. For instances, see the Finance (No. 2) Bill, 1980, the Finance Bill, 1982, the Drugs and Cosmetics (Amendment) Bill, 1982 and the Motor Vehicles Bill, 1987.

329. L.S. Deb., 3-3-1956, cc. 1460-61; 30-8-1965, cc. 2641-42.

Later, during the clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill, he moved a formal amendment for substituting the figure “155” for “55” which was adopted by the House<sup>330</sup>.

Major corrections in the nature of drafting improvements suggested by the Draftsman are not accepted for inclusion in the corrigenda. In such cases, the Draftsman is requested to advise the Ministry concerned to sponsor official amendments.

The Motor Vehicles Bill, 1987 was allowed to be introduced in the Lok Sabha without its scrutiny on 11 May 1987 as a special case. The Draftsman made major corrections in the scrutinized copy which were in the nature of drafting improvements. Most of the corrections suggested by the Draftsman were not accepted and hence not included in the corrigenda. The Draftsman was requested to advise the Ministry concerned to sponsor official amendments.

Government had to table three hundred and five amendments to rectify such mistakes. The Bill could not be considered and passed during the session in which the amendments were tabled. In the Winter Session, 1987, the Minister of Surface Transport gave a notice for withdrawal of the Bill on the ground that it contained numerous printing mistakes. The Bill was withdrawn by leave of the House on 15 December 1987.

Even after a Bill has been passed by the Lok Sabha, the Speaker has the authority to correct patent errors and make such other changes in the Bill as are consequential upon the amendments accepted by the House.<sup>331</sup>

On occasions when a number of new clauses are inserted in or the existing clauses are omitted from a Bill, the Speaker, after the Bill has been passed, orders re-serialisation of the clauses wherever required<sup>332</sup>.

Bills passed by the Lok Sabha are referred to the Draftsman, Ministry of Law, for scrutiny with a view to assisting the Speaker in correcting such patent errors, etc. On occasions, the Speaker may, on a request by the Minister-in-charge accept correction of printing errors of patent nature in the copies of a Bill during debate on the Bill<sup>333</sup>. As a rule, patent errors pointed out by

An amendment re: consequential renumbering of clauses and of internal references, tabled by the Minister of Law to the Election Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1975, was not moved “as the Speaker was authorised to make the necessary corrections—L.S. Deb., 5-8-1975, c. 39. In another instance, amendment regarding consequential renumbering of clauses to the Cine-Workers and Cinema Theatre Workers (Regulation of Employment) Amendment Bill, 1981 was not tabled by the Minister and not pressed by the Lok Sabha Secretariat as the Speaker was authorised to make the necessary corrections.—L.S. Deb., 24-11-1981, cc. 418-55.

332. See L.S. Debate dated 19-3-2013, cc. 687-89 on the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2013; L.S. debate dated 30-4-2013, cc. 781-820 on the Finance Bill, 2013.

333. On 2 May 2002, while replying to the combined debate on the motion for consideration of the Constitution (Scheduled Castes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 2002 and the Constitution (Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes) Orders (Amendment) Bill, 2002, the Minister-in-charge informed the Draftsman and accepted by the Speaker are carried out in Bills before they are transmitted to Rajya Sabha. In urgent cases, the Bill is transmitted immediately after being passed by Lok Sabha, and any suggestions or corrections pointed out by the Draftsman and accepted by the Speaker are thereafter communicated to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat. Bills passed by both the Houses and last in possession of Lok Sabha are invariably scrutinized before they are presented to the President for assent<sup>334</sup>.

All corrections suggested by the Draftsman must be authenticated by him.

The power of the Speaker to carry out consequential alterations in a Bill or a motion cannot extend beyond the decisions of the House in respect of that Bill or motion; it is exercised only to give effect to those decisions<sup>335</sup>. Substitution of words in an amendment accepted by Lok Sabha, by way of correction, is permissible only on an authority given by the House therefor. In the nature of things it is not proper to permit any recasting of a clause as that would be tantamount to legislating<sup>336</sup>. However, re-wording of a formula to a clause to make it more clear may be permitted by the Speaker<sup>337</sup>.

The exercise of power to alter is thus limited to correcting formal, verbal, grammatical and printing errors, to rectifying obvious omission or errors in the numbering of clauses, sub-clauses, etc., and to effecting changes which are purely consequential and clarificatory in nature.

When a Bill which originated in Rajya Sabha is returned to that House by Lok Sabha with amendments, no consequential or patent error is corrected except when it may occur in the amendments made by Lok Sabha. It is only in exceptional cases that corrections suggested by the Draftsman in portions of the Bill not amended by Lok Sabha are accepted as patent errors by the Speaker<sup>338</sup>.

that there was a printing error in the English version of the Constitution (Scheduled Castes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 2002, as introduced in Lok Sabha, which may be accepted as patent error. Thereupon, Speaker agreed to accept the error as patent error— L.S. Deb., 2-5-2002, cc. 306-78.

334. Since the Fourth Session of Second Lok Sabha, a practice has been started to send the Bill to the Draftsman for scrutiny a second time after the assent copy has been finally printed and before it is signed by the Speaker. At this stage, the Draftsman can point out only printing errors in the Bill.

335. P. Deb., (II), 9-6-1951, cc. 10610-14.

336. Consent was withheld by the Speaker on this ground to the suggestion of the Draftsman for re-drafting clause 45 of the Vishva Bharati Bill, 1951.

337. During Fifteenth LS, the Draftsman, Ministry of Law suggested the following improvement in the assent copy of the National Council for Teacher Education (Amendment) Bill, 2011.

for “(ii) after clause (k), insert” substitute “(ii) after clause (k), the following clause shall be inserted, namely:-”

As the suggestion of Draftsman was only technical in nature and did not make any substantial change, request of Draftsman was accepted as patent error by the Speaker.

Consequential Corrections in Debates

Where an amendment to a clause has been moved in and adopted by the House and subsequently any correction relating to the amendment has been accepted by the Speaker as a patent error, the correction is incorporated in the body of the amendment itself without any foot-note in the printed debates<sup>339</sup>.

Where the Speaker has accepted a correction relating to a clause and not to an amendment thereto and the clause has been adopted by the House, the correction is indicated with an appropriate foot-note in the printed debates<sup>340</sup>.

Adjournment of Debates on Bills

At any stage of a Bill which is under consideration in the House, a motion that the debate on the Bill be adjourned can be moved with the consent of the Speaker<sup>341</sup>.

The Speaker may withhold his consent<sup>342</sup>. He may permit more than one member to oppose the motion for adjournment of debate on a Government Bill<sup>343</sup>. When a motion for adjournment of debate on a Bill is negatived, discussion on the Bill continues<sup>344</sup>.

the Draftsman who made certain corrections in portions of the Bill not amended by Lok Sabha. The Speaker accepted these corrections as patent errors and they were incorporated in the Bill returned to Rajya Sabha alongwith the message.

The Minimum Wages (Amendment) Bill, 1961, as passed by Rajya Sabha was passed with an amendment by Lok Sabha, on 10 August 1961. While scrutinizing the Bill, the Draftsman made a correction in the portion of the Bill not amended by Lok Sabha. The Speaker accepted the correction as a patent error and it was incorporated in the Bill which was returned to Rajya Sabha along with the message.

In the Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Bill, 1965, and the Banaras Hindu University (Amendment) Bill, 1965, the Draftsman suggested certain corrections in the portions of the Bills not amended by Lok Sabha. The Speaker accepted the corrections as patent errors and these were incorporated in the Bills which were returned to Rajya Sabha along with the messages.

In these cases, a separate communication was also sent to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat requesting that the changes made in the Bills might be brought to the notice of the Chairman.

Motions for adjournment of debate on a Bill may be moved more than once during the same session<sup>345</sup> and it can be moved even though motion for consideration of the Bill has not actually been moved<sup>346</sup>.

Debates on private members' Bills have been adjourned on motions moved in and adopted by the House<sup>347</sup>. The requests for such adjournments were based on the assurance that the Government contemplated bringing forward, in due course, a similar or comprehensive piece of legislation incorporating the provisions sought to be enacted by the Bill in question. In certain cases, debate was postponed on a request made by the Minister concerned and agreed to by the House and no motion, as such, was moved in the House<sup>348</sup>.

Further discussion on a private member's Bill has been adjourned on an amendment adopted by the House to the motion for adoption of the report of the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions which related inter alia to allocation of time for further discussion on that Bill<sup>349</sup>.

There have also been occasions when the debate on a Government Bill was adjourned, either on a motion or without a motion having been moved and adopted, in order to enable the Government to have informal discussion with the members interested in the Bill<sup>350</sup>, or to meet the demands of the House for the supply of certain data or additional information<sup>351</sup>, or to consider the suggestions and criticisms offered by members during the discussion on a Bill<sup>352</sup>, or to consider the suggestion for reference of the Bill to a Joint Committee<sup>353</sup>.

Motion to adjourn debate on an item of business in order merely to enable another item to be taken up earlier is not allowed<sup>354</sup>.

It is for the Speaker to decide whether reasonable time has elapsed since the motion for adjournment of debate was made last<sup>355</sup>.

The mere fact that the attendance in the House is very thin is not sufficient ground for the Speaker to accept the motion for adjournment of debate<sup>356</sup>.

Resumption of Adjourned Debate

On a motion being carried, the debate on a private member's Bill is adjourned to the next day allotted for private member's Bills in the same or next session, but it is not set down for further discussion unless it has gained priority at the ballot<sup>357</sup>.

Where the debate on a private member's Bill is adjourned sine die, the member in-charge of the Bill may, if he wishes to proceed with that Bill on a subsequent day allotted for private members' Bills, give notice for resumption of the adjourned debate and on receipt of such notice the relative precedence of such notice is determined by ballot<sup>358</sup>.

Where notice of resumption of the adjourned debate on a Bill is received after a ballot has been held, such Bill is entered in the List of Business below the Bills balloted earlier<sup>359</sup>.

However, where debate on a private member's Bill is adjourned to a specific date and time allotted for Government Business, no motion for resumption of the adjourned debate may be moved<sup>360</sup>.

In the case of a Government Bill, it is necessary to give notice of a motion for resumption of debate only if the debate thereon was adjourned in pursuance of a motion adopted by the House<sup>361</sup>.

Dilatory Motion

If the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion for the adjournment of a debate on a motion relating to a Bill is an abuse of the rules, he may either forthwith put the question thereon or decline to propose the question<sup>362</sup>.

Where the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion for recirculation of a Bill to elicit further opinion thereon is in the nature of a dilatory motion inasmuch as the original circulation was adequate or comprehensive or that no circumstance has arisen since the previous circulation to warrant recirculation of the Bill, he may forthwith put the question thereon or decline to propose the question<sup>363</sup>.

362. Rules 109 and 341(1).

Similarly, if the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion for recommittal of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee or for circulation or recirculation of the Bill after the Select or Joint Committee has reported thereon is in the nature of a dilatory motion inasmuch as the Select or Joint Committee, as the case may be, has dealt with the Bill in a proper manner or that no unforeseen or new circumstance has arisen since the Bill emerged from such Committee, he may forthwith put the question thereon or decline to propose the question<sup>364</sup>.

When the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion is of a dilatory character, he has in his discretion put the motion forthwith to the vote of the House<sup>365</sup>.

Amendments for reference of a Bill replacing an Ordinance to a Select or Joint Committee or for circulation with a view to eliciting opinion thereon by a date later than the date by which the Bill must be passed have not been held to be dilatory in nature.

Amendments seeking postponement of discussion on a Bill or its reference to a Select Committee are not of a dilatory nature if the effect of such amendments is not to delay the passage of the Bill but to 'kill' the Bill<sup>366</sup>.

Withdrawal of Bills

The member in-charge of a Bill may, at any stage<sup>367</sup> of the Bill, move for leave to withdraw the Bill on the ground that—the legislative proposal contained in the Bill is to be dropped; or the Bill is to be replaced subsequently by a new Bill which substantially alters the provisions contained therein; or

366. A member gave notice of two amendments to the motion for consideration of the Prevention of Corruption (Amendment) Bill, 1957, as passed by Rajya Sabha. The first amendment sought to postpone the consideration of the Bill to the next session, while the second amendment sought to refer the Bill to a Select Committee with instructions to report before the first day of the next session. In view of the impending dissolution of Lok Sabha, the acceptance of either amendment would have in effect amounted to the killing of the Bill. It was held that the amendments were not of a dilatory nature inasmuch as the effect of these amendments was not to delay the passage of the Bill but to 'kill' it under the parliamentary procedure where on dissolution all pending Bills lapse. The amendments were circulated but were, however, not moved in the House on the assurance given by the Government that a comprehensive Bill would be brought forward at the earliest possible opportunity—L.S. Deb., 28-2-1957, cc. 1248-54.

367. During clause-by-clause consideration of the Insurance Regulatory Authority Bill, 1996, after a few clauses were adopted, the Minister, after taking the sense of the House, moved a motion for leave to withdraw the Bill. The motion was adopted and the Bill was withdrawn—L.S. Deb., 6-8-1997, cc. 252-53. The Indian Post Office (Amendment) Bill, 1986, passed by Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha on 18 November 1986 and 10 December 1986, respectively, was returned to the Rajya Sabha on 7 January 1990 by President under article 111 of the Constitution for reconsideration by the Houses. The Bill was not reconsidered by Rajya Sabha in terms of Presidential message for more than 12 years. On 13 March 2002, Rajya Sabha adopted a motion recommending to Lok Sabha that Lok Sabha do agree to leave being granted by Rajya Sabha to withdraw the Bill. On 16 March 2002, Lok Sabha concurred in the motion. The Bill was ultimately withdrawn in Rajya Sabha on 21 March 2002.

the Bill is to be replaced subsequently by another Bill which includes all or any of its provisions in addition to other provisions; and if such leave is granted, no further motion is made with reference to the Bill<sup>368</sup>.

After a Bill has been withdrawn, a new Bill can be introduced immediately thereafter—the expression “subsequently” being held to include ‘immediately after’<sup>369</sup>.

Where a Bill is under consideration by a Select Committee of the House or a Joint Committee of the Houses, as the case may be, notice of any motion for the withdrawal of the Bill automatically stands referred to the Committee and after the Committee has expressed its opinion in a report to the House, the motion is set down in the List of Business<sup>370</sup>.

If a Bill passed by Rajya Sabha is pending in Lok Sabha, a motion recommending withdrawal of the Bill, on being adopted by the House, is transmitted to Rajya Sabha for concurrence. If Rajya Sabha concurs in the motion, the motion for withdrawal of the Bill is moved in Lok Sabha and proceeded with in the usual manner<sup>371</sup>, and when the motion is adopted, a message to that effect is sent to Rajya Sabha.

When a Bill pending in Lok Sabha is sought to be withdrawn by Government, a statement containing the reasons for which the Bill is being withdrawn is circulated

(ii) Some instances when a new Bill was introduced immediately after a Bill has been withdrawn:

(a) On 13 March 2003, the Minister of Law moved for leave to withdraw the Election and Other Related Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2002. Leave was granted and Bill withdrawn. A new Bill, namely, the Election and Other Related Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2003 was introduced on the same day.—L.S. Deb., 13-3-2003, cc. 363-64.

(b) On 19 March 2013, the Minister of Home Affairs moved for leave to withdraw the Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill, 2012. Leave was granted and Bill withdrawn. A new Bill, namely, the Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill, 2013 was introduced on same day. L.S. Deb., 19-3-2013, cc. 687-89.

to members by the Minister concerned sufficiently in advance of the date on which the motion for withdrawal is sought to be made<sup>372</sup>.

If a motion for leave to withdraw a Bill is opposed, the Speaker permits, if he thinks fit, the member who moves and the member who opposes the motion to make brief explanatory statements and thereafter puts the question without further debate<sup>373</sup>.

Register of Pending Bills

For proper record, the Secretariat maintains a Register of Bills pending in the House for each session. Bills pending include—a Bill introduced in the House and not disposed of<sup>374</sup> a Bill transmitted to Rajya Sabha and returned by Rajya Sabha with amendment or recommendation, as the case may be, and laid on the Table<sup>375</sup>; a Bill originating in Rajya Sabha and transmitted to Lok Sabha and laid on the Table<sup>376</sup>; and a Bill returned by the President with a message<sup>377</sup>.

A Bill introduced in Rajya Sabha and referred to a Joint Committee by that House in respect of which a message requesting Lok Sabha to concur in the motion and communicate the names of members to serve on the Joint Committee has been received, is not classified as a Bill pending before Lok Sabha, and as such, is not included in the statement of Bills pending before Lok Sabha, issued after the prorogation of the House.

Where any of the motions in regard to the various stages of a Bill is made by the member in-charge and is rejected by the House, such Bill is removed from the Register of Bills pending in the House<sup>378</sup>. A Bill pending before the House is also removed from the Register of Bills in case a measure substantially identical is passed

Bills other than Money Bills Returned by Rajya Sabha with Amendments

If a Bill other than a Money Bill passed by Lok Sabha and transmitted to Rajya Sabha is returned to Lok Sabha with amendments, it is laid on the Table<sup>381</sup>, and the amendments made by Rajya Sabha are circulated to members on the same night the Bill is so laid. Printed copies of the Bill, as passed by Lok Sabha, are also made available to members.

After the amended Bill has been laid on the Table, any Minister in the case of a Government Bill, or in any other case, any member may, after giving two days' notice, or with the consent of the Speaker without notice, move that the amendments be taken into consideration<sup>382</sup>. When notice of motion regarding consideration of

The Constitution (Twenty-eighth Amendment) Bill, 1971, introduced in Lok Sabha on 22 December 1971, was removed from the Register of Pending Bills as provisions thereof had been incorporated in the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Bill, 1976, which was enacted as the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976—See Bn. (II), 27-12-1976, para 3020.

The Forest (Conservation) Amendment Bill, 2004 (Insertion of new section 2A) by C.K. Chandrappan, member was removed from Register of Bills pending in Lok Sabha as its object was achieved by Scheduled Tribes and Other Traditional Forest Dwellers (Recognition of Forest Rights) Bill, 2006 (Government Bill) passed by Lok Sabha on 15 December 2006.

The High Court of Tripura Bill, 2010 by a member (Khagen Das) was removed from Register of Bills pending in Lok Sabha as its object was achieved by North-Eastern Areas (Reorganisation) and Other Related Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2012 (Government Bill) passed by Lok Sabha on 11 May 2012.

380. Dir. 37.

For removal of the private members' Bill from the Register of Bills, see this Chapter under Private Members' Bills.

381. Rule 98.

The following are some of the Bills passed by Lok Sabha which were returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments:

The Faridabad Development Corporation Bill, 1955; the Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 1957; the Estate Duty and Tax on Railway Passenger Fares (Distribution) Bill, 1957; the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Bill, 1957; the Dowry Prohibition Bill, 1959; the Telegraph Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1960; the Motor Transport Workers Bill, 1960; the Payment of Bonus (Amendment) Bill, 1980; the High Court at Bombay (Extension of Jurisdiction to Goa, Daman and Diu) Bill, 1981; the Oilfields (Regulation and Development) Amendment Bill, 1984; the Goa, Daman and Diu Reorganisation Bill, 1987; the Prevention of Money-Laundering Bill, 1999; the Institutes of Technology (Amendment) Bill, 2012; the National Institutes of Technology (Amendment) Bill, 2012; the Constitution (One Hundred Eighteenth Amendment) Bill, 2012; and the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Bill, 2013.

382. Rule 99.

Amendment made by Rajya Sabha in the Payment of Bonus (Amendment) Bill, 1980, were taken up for consideration in Lok Sabha without two days' notice with the consent of the Speaker—L.S. Deb., 2-2-1980, cc. 192-93.

amendments is received, it is included in the List of Business<sup>383</sup> and circulated to members.

If a motion that the amendments made by Rajya Sabha be taken into consideration is carried, the Speaker puts the amendments to the House, in such manner as he thinks most convenient for their consideration<sup>384</sup>.

An amendment relevant to the subject matter of an amendment made by Rajya Sabha may be moved, but no further amendment can be moved to the Bill unless it is consequential upon, or an alternative to, an amendment made by Rajya Sabha<sup>385</sup>.

In certain cases amendments were allowed to be moved not only to the amendments made by Rajya Sabha but also to other clauses of the Bill as being consequential upon the amendments made by Rajya Sabha<sup>386</sup>, or which were necessitated by the efflux of time<sup>387</sup>.

If Lok Sabha agrees to the amendment made in a Bill by Rajya Sabha, it sends a message to Rajya Sabha to that effect, but if it disagrees with that amendment or proposes further amendment or an alternative amendment, it returns the Bill or the Bill as further amended to Rajya Sabha with a message to that effect<sup>388</sup>.

If the Lok Sabha makes further amendment besides agreeing to the amendment made in the Bill by the Rajya Sabha, it sends a message with message copy after including further amendment to the Rajya Sabha so that the Rajya Sabha may agree to the further amendment made by the Lok Sabha<sup>389</sup>.

If the Bill is returned to Lok Sabha with a message that Rajya Sabha insists on an amendment or amendments to which Lok Sabha has disagreed, the Houses are deemed to have finally disagreed as to the amendment or amendments<sup>390</sup>. In such a case, the President may notify his intention to summon both the Houses to meet in joint sitting for the purpose of deliberating and voting on the Bill<sup>391</sup>.

383. The Prevention of Money-Laundering Bill, 1999, which was passed by Lok Sabha on 2 December 1999, was returned by Rajya Sabha with 235 amendments on 25 July 2002. As number of amendments to be considered and agreed to by Lok Sabha was quite large, instead of the usual practice of including the text of amendments (given notice of by the Minister) in the List of Business, amendments were circulated separately to the members and indication thereof was given in the List of Business.—L.S. Deb., 28.11.2002, cc 411-510. It was also decided that if the amendments could not be disposed of on the day they were listed for consideration, list of amendments may be circulated separately each time the Bill is listed for consideration of amendments.

The Rajya Sabha agreed to the further amendments made by the Lok Sabha on 17 August 1990.

If more than six months elapse from the date of receipt of the Bill by the other House without the Bill being passed by it, the President may also summon a joint sitting of the two Houses<sup>392</sup>. However, this is only an enabling provision and there have been instances when Bills passed by Rajya Sabha and laid on the Table were passed by Lok Sabha after expiry of six months from the date of receipt of the Bills in Lok Sabha<sup>393</sup>, or even lapsed at the dissolution of Lok Sabha<sup>394</sup>.

Money Bills Returned By Rajya Sabha

If a Money Bill passed by Lok Sabha and transmitted to Rajya Sabha is returned to Lok Sabha without any recommendation, the message to that effect is reported to the House by the Secretary-General; if the House is in session otherwise it is published in the Bulletin. In case of urgency, messages received when the House is not sitting are also published in the Bulletin<sup>395</sup>. After such reporting or publication, the Bill is presented to the President for his assent<sup>396</sup>.

A money Bill returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha is, on receipt, laid on the Table by the Secretary-General<sup>397</sup>.

The amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha are circulated to members on the same day in a separate list with an appropriate foot-note indicating the dates on

There have been only three instances of a joint sitting of the two Houses being convened, namely, in regard to the Dowry Prohibition Bill, 1959, the Banking Service Commission (Repeal) Bill, 1978 and the Prevention of Terrorism Bill, 2002. (ii) The Railway Stores (Unlawful Possession) Bill, 1954, passed by Rajya Sabha on 31 August 1954, and laid on the Table on 2 September 1954, was passed by Lok Sabha with amendments on 1 December 1955.

(iii) The Rampur Raza Library (Amendment) Bill, 1980, passed by Rajya Sabha on 20 November 1980 and laid on the Table of Lok Sabha on 24 November 1980, was passed by Lok Sabha on 30 November 1981.

(iv) The Sales Promotion Employees (Conditions of Service) Amendment Bill, 1980, passed by Rajya Sabha on 11 December 1980 and laid on the table of Lok Sabha on 15 December 1980, was passed by Lok Sabha on 16 October 1982.

394. The Indian Sale of Goods (Amendment) Bill, 1960, as passed by Rajya Sabha on 29 February 1960, and laid on the Table on 4 March 1960, lapsed on the dissolution of the Second Lok Sabha on 4 April 1962.

The Constitution (Forty-first Amendment) Bill, 1975, as passed by Rajya Sabha on 9 August 1975 and laid on the Table on 5 January 1976, lapsed on the dissolution of the Fifth Lok Sabha on 18 January 1977.

396. Art. 111.

397. Rule 104.

which the Bill was passed by Lok Sabha, considered by Rajya Sabha and returned to Lok Sabha with recommendations<sup>398</sup>

After the Bill with amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha is laid on the Table, the Minister in-charge may, after giving two days' notice or with the consent of the Speaker without notice, move that the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha be taken into consideration.<sup>399</sup>

On the adoption of the motion, the Speaker puts the amendments as recommended by Rajya Sabha to the House for consideration in such manner as he thinks most convenient<sup>400</sup>. For this purpose, a motion is moved that the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha be agreed to<sup>401</sup>. The Lok Sabha may either accept or reject all or any of the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha<sup>402</sup>. If the motion is adopted and Lok Sabha accepts any of the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha, the Bill is deemed to have been passed by both the Houses with the amendment or amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha and accepted by Lok Sabha<sup>403</sup>.

If the House does not accept any of the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha, the Bill is deemed to have been passed by both the Houses in the form in which it was passed by Lok Sabha without any of the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha<sup>404</sup>.

A message is sent to Rajya Sabha intimating the decision of Lok Sabha in regard to the amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha<sup>405</sup>.

398. The Travancore-Cochin Appropriation (Vote on Account) Bill, 1956, the Union Duties of Excise (Distribution) Bill, 1957, returned by Rajya Sabha recommending amendments, were laid on the Table on 30 April 1956, and 19 December 1957, respectively, and amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha were circulated to the members in separate lists on the same dates.

In 1985, five Appropriation Bills, namely, the Appropriation (Railways) Bill, 1985, the Appropriation (Railways) No. 2, Bill, 1985, the Appropriation Bill, 1985, the Appropriation (No. 2) Bill, 1985 and the Punjab Appropriation Bill, 1985, returned by Rajya Sabha recommending amendments in each of the Bills, were laid on the Table on 30 January 1985 and amendments recommended by Rajya Sabha was circulated to the members on the same day.

401. On 3 May 1956, after the motion for consideration of the amendment recommended by Rajya Sabha to the Travancore-Cochin Appropriation (Vote on Account) Bill, 1956, was adopted by the House, the following motion was moved by the Minister of Revenue and Civil Expenditure:

The motion was put to the vote of the House and adopted—L.S. Deb., 3-5-1956, cc. 7093-100; 30-1-1985, cc. 280-86.

404. Art. 109(4). The Finance Bill, 1978 was passed by Lok Sabha on 29 April 1978 and transmitted to Rajya Sabha. The Bill was returned by Rajya Sabha with one amendment on 9 May 1978. The amendment recommended by Rajya Sabha was considered and rejected by Lok Sabha on 11 May 1978. A message to that effect was sent to Rajya Sabha on the same day. The Bill was deemed to have been passed by both the Houses of Parliament in the form in which it was passed by Lok Sabha and was assented to by the President on 12 May 1978—*L.S. ### Procedure in Lok Sabha regarding Bills Originating in Rajya Sabha

Any Bill, excepting a money Bill or a Bill making provision for any of the matters specified in regard to a Money Bill, can be introduced in Rajya Sabha<sup>406</sup>.

After a Bill has been introduced in the Rajya Sabha, copies thereof are, as soon as possible, circulated<sup>407</sup> to members of Lok Sabha for their information.

Before a Bill introduced in the Rajya Sabha is passed by that House, the Rajya Sabha may adopt a motion referring the Bill to a Joint Committee of the Houses and recommending to Lok Sabha to join in the Joint Committee. The message from the Rajya Sabha to that effect is reported to the House by the Secretary-General. Subsequently, the Minister in-charge of the Bill may move, after due notice, a motion concurring in the recommendation of the Rajya Sabha and resolving at the same time that such and such members of Lok Sabha be nominated to serve on the Joint Committee.

In case it is considered necessary to amend the names of members as given in a motion already adopted by the House for concurrence in the recommendation of Rajya Sabha for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee, the following motions are required to be moved in the Lok Sabha:

motion for suspension of Rule 338 in its application to the motion for concurrence adopted by the House; motion for rescinding the decision of the House on the motion for concurrence adopted by the House; and motion amending the motion for concurrence as originally moved—the motion as originally moved to be circulated to members in advance<sup>408</sup>.

The motion, while concurring in the recommendation of the Rajya Sabha to join in the Joint Committee, may also make recommendations to the Rajya Sabha<sup>409</sup>. The motion for concurrence adopted by the Lok Sabha and communicated to the Rajya Sabha by means of a message may be amended by a further motion adopted by the Lok Sabha<sup>410</sup>. The subsequent motion is also communicated to the Rajya Sabha by a message.

By concurring in the motion of the Rajya Sabha to refer the Bill to a Joint Committee, the Lok Sabha is not committed to the principle of the Bill<sup>411</sup>.

406. Arts. 109 and 117(1). See also this Chapter under the headings 'Money Bills' and 'Financial Bills', supra.

407. An arrangement exists between the two Houses of Parliament wherein copies of the Bills as introduced in one House are sent to the other House for circulation to the members of that House.

408. L.S. Deb., 13-8-1968, cc. 2044-45; 28-8-1968, c. 5207; 29-8-1968, cc. 2986-89; 13-5-1988, c. 302.

409. L.S. Deb., 8-12-1954, cc. 2232-76.

410. L.S. Deb., 7-9-1962, cc. 6787-95, regarding the Limitation Bill, 1962; L.S. Deb., 13-5-1988, c.302, regarding the Shipping Agents Licensing Bill, 1987.

411. L.S. Deb., 17-12-1953, cc. 2427-28.

When a Bill originating in the Rajya Sabha has been passed by that House and transmitted to the Lok Sabha, the message forwarding the Bill as passed by Rajya Sabha is reported by the Secretary-General and the Bill is laid on the Table. Thereafter, copies of the Bill as passed by Rajya Sabha are circulated to members of Lok Sabha<sup>412</sup>.

If the message is received while Lok Sabha is not in session, the message is published in the Bulletin. In that case copies of the Bill may be circulated to members before the Bill is laid on the Table on the commencement of the next session.

At any time after the Bill has been laid on the Table, the Minister concerned may give notice of his intention to move that the Bill be taken into consideration<sup>413</sup>. Unless the Speaker otherwise directs, the motion is not included in the List of Business earlier than two days from the receipt of the notice<sup>414</sup>.

On the day the motion is set down in the List of Business, the Minister moves that the Bill be taken into consideration. On that day, or on any subsequent day to which the discussion is postponed, the principle of the Bill and its general provisions are discussed. At this stage, the details of the Bill further than what is necessary to explain its principle are not discussed<sup>415</sup>.

If the Bill has not already been referred to a Joint Committee of the Houses, any member can at this stage move an amendment that it may be referred to a Select Committee<sup>416</sup>. If the amendment is adopted by the House, the Bill stands referred to the Select Committee and undergoes the same process in the Committee as any other Bill introduced in Lok Sabha and referred to a Select Committee<sup>417</sup>.

If the motion that the Bill as passed by Rajya Sabha be referred to a Select Committee (and not the amendment moved by a member) is negatived, the Bill is deemed to have been rejected by the Lok Sabha<sup>418</sup>.

412. Rule 114—If a new Lok Sabha has been constituted after the general election when a Bill as passed by Rajya Sabha is laid on the Table; copies of the Bill, as introduced in Rajya Sabha, are also made available to the members.

413. Rule 115.

414. Rule 116.

415. Rule 117.

416. Rule 118.

417. The following Bills introduced in Rajya Sabha and passed by that House were referred to Select Committees of Lok Sabha:

The Railway Stores (Unlawful Possession) Bill, 1954.

The Seeds Bill, 1964.

The Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 1967 by Diwan Chaman Lal.

The Advocates (Second Amendment) Bill, 1968.

The Transplantation of Human Organs Bill, 1993.

418. Rule 127(ii).

Amendment for recommitment<sup>419</sup> of the Bill to a Select or Joint Committee or for circulation<sup>420</sup> of the Bill for eliciting opinion thereon are out of order.

If the motion that the Bill as passed by Rajya Sabha be taken into consideration is negatived, the Bill is deemed to have been rejected by the House<sup>421</sup>. If the motion is carried, the Bill is taken up clause-by-clause for consideration. The procedure regarding consideration of the amendments and passing of the Bill is the same as provided in the Rules relating to Bills originating in the Lok Sabha<sup>422</sup>. If the Bill is passed without any amendment, the Rajya Sabha is informed by means of a message that the House has agreed to the Bill without any amendment. If the Bill is passed with amendments, it is returned to Rajya Sabha with a message asking the concurrence of that House in the amendments. The Bill is returned to the Rajya Sabha for concurrence even if purely consequential or formal amendments are adopted by the Lok Sabha. The amendments adopted by the Lok Sabha are carried out in the copy of the Bill returned to the Rajya Sabha along with the message. No consequential or patent errors are corrected in the Bill unless the Lok Sabha specifically adopts amendments to that effect<sup>423</sup>.

If the Rajya Sabha disagrees with the amendments made by the Lok Sabha or with any of them, or agrees to any of the amendments made by the Lok Sabha with further amendments, or proposes further amendments in place of the amendments made by the Lok Sabha, the Bill, as further amended is, on receipt by the House, laid on the Table. Thereafter, any Minister in the case of a Government Bill, or, in any other case, any member, after giving two days' notice or with the consent of the Speaker without notice, may move that the amendments be taken into consideration<sup>424</sup>.

If the motion that the amendments be taken into consideration is carried, the Speaker puts the amendments to the House for consideration in such manner as he thinks most convenient. Amendments relevant to the subject matter of the amendments made by the Rajya Sabha may be moved but no further amendments can be moved to the Bill, unless they are consequential upon, or alternative to, amendments made by the Rajya Sabha<sup>425</sup>. The Lok Sabha may either agree to the Bill as originally passed by the Rajya Sabha or as further amended by the Rajya Sabha, as the case may be, or may return the Bill with a message that it insists on the amendment or amendments to which the Rajya Sabha has disagreed. If a Bill is returned to the Rajya Sabha with a message intimating that the Lok Sabha insists on amendment or amendments to which the Rajya Sabha is unable to agree, the Houses are deemed to have finally disagreed as to the amendments<sup>426</sup>.

Assent to Bills

After a Bill has been passed by both the Houses of Parliament, it is presented to the President for his assent<sup>427</sup>.

The President may either assent to the Bill<sup>428</sup>, withhold his assent<sup>429</sup>, or return the Bill if it is not a Money Bill with a message for reconsideration of the Bill, or any specified provisions thereof, or for consideration the desirability of introducing any such amendments as he may recommend in his message<sup>430</sup>.

427. Art. 111.

The Lok Sabha Secretariat obtains assent of the President on Bills in the following cases: All Money Bills;

Bills originating in and transmitted by Rajya Sabha and passed by Lok Sabha without any amendment;

Bills originating in Lok Sabha and returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments and finally passed by Lok Sabha; and Bills passed at joint sittings of both Houses.

Two assent copies are endorsed by the Speaker with a certificate to the effect that the Bill has been passed by the Houses of Parliament.

In the absence of the Speaker from New Delhi, the Secretary-General may, in case of urgency, authenticate the Bill on behalf of the Speaker. This was done in the case of the Delhi Road Transport Authority (Amendment) Bill, 1953, and the Prevention of Disqualification (Parliament and Part C State Legislatures) Bill, 1953.

428. The assent is given in the following form: "I assent to this Bill. President."

If for any reasons, the functions of the President are being discharged by the Vice-President or the Vice-President acts as President, for the word "President", the following words are substituted in the above endorsement :

"Vice-President discharging the functions of the President," or "The Vice-President acting as President", as the case may be.

429. The President withheld his assent to the Patiala and East Punjab States Union Appropriation Bill, 1954, passed by the Houses of Parliament, as the President had revoked the Proclamation assuming to himself the function of the Government of the Patiala and East Punjab States Union before the Bill was submitted to him for assent.

In the case of a Bill seeking to amend the Constitution within the meaning of article 368, the President has no option but to accord his assent to the Bill passed by the Houses by the requisite special majority.

430. Art. 111, Proviso.

The Constitution is silent on the points as to the time for which the President can keep the Bill pending with him. The Indian Post Office (Amendment) Bill, 1986 was presented to the President on 19 December 1986 for his assent by the Rajya Sabha Secretariat. The President returned the Bill along with a message to reconsider the Bill, specifically clause 16 thereof, to the Rajya Sabha on 7 January 1990. The Bill was not reconsidered by the Rajya Sabha in terms of Presidential message for more than 12 years. On 13 March 2002, Rajya Sabha adopted a motion recommending to Lok Sabha that Lok Sabha do agree to leave being granted by Rajya Sabha to withdraw the Bill. On 16 March 2002, Lok Sabha concurred in the motion. The Bill was ultimately withdrawn in Rajya Sabha on 21 March 2002.

The Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Amendment Bill, 2006, as passed by Houses, was returned by President on 30 May 2006 for reconsideration of Houses with a message containing his observations. The Bill was reconsidered and passed again by Rajya Sabha on 27 July 2006. The Bill, as passed again by Rajya Sabha, was laid on the Table of Lok Sabha on 28 July 2006.

In case the Bill has originated in Lok Sabha, the procedure is that the message of the President is read out by the Secretary-General in the House if the Lok Sabha is in session; otherwise it is published in the Bulletin. The Bill as passed by the Houses and returned by the President is, thereafter, laid on the Table<sup>431</sup>. If the Bill is returned by the President without specifying definite amendments thereto, the procedure applicable to the Bill after introduction applies mutatis mutandis in the case of such a Bill. Where amendments have been recommended by the President, any Minister in the case of a Government Bill or any member in the case of a Private member's Bill may give notice of his intention to move that the amendments be taken into consideration<sup>432</sup> and the procedure that would follow thereafter is similar to that in the case of any ordinary Bill.

If the motion that the amendments recommended by the President be taken into consideration is not carried, the member giving notice of the motion may at once move that the Bill as originally passed by the Houses be passed again without amendment<sup>433</sup>. When the Bill is passed again by the Lok Sabha with or without amendment, as the case may be. It is transmitted to the Rajya Sabha for concurrence along with a message to that effect<sup>434</sup>. The procedure thereafter corresponds to that in the case of any ordinary Bill until the Bill is passed by the two Houses or they are deemed to have finally disagreed as to the amendment or amendments.

When the Bill so returned by the President has been reconsidered by the Houses and is again passed by the Houses with or without amendment and presented to the President for assent, the President shall not withhold assent therefrom<sup>435</sup>.

When a Bill is passed again by the Houses and is in possession of the Lok Sabha, it is signed in duplicate by the Speaker and presented to the President in the following form<sup>436</sup>:

“The above Bill has been passed again by the Houses of Parliament in pursuance of the proviso to article 111 of the Constitution.

As the Bill was being reconsidered in the light of observations made in the President's Message, it was decided that only those amendments which were within the scope of matters referred to in the President's Message would be admitted. The Bill, as passed again by Rajya Sabha, was passed by Lok Sabha on 31 July 2006. The Bill was assented to by the President on 18 August 2006.

431. Rule 129(2).

432. See Rule 130.

433. Rule 136.

434. Rule 137.

435. In Purushothaman v. State of Kerala, the Supreme Court held that a Bill passed by a Legislative Assembly pending assent of the President does not lapse on dissolution of the Assembly. If such a Bill is returned for reconsideration, the successor House can reconsider it and if it is passed by the successor House (with or without amendments), it will be deemed to have been passed “again”—A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 694.

436. Rule 154.—In the absence of the Speaker from New Delhi, Secretary-General may authenticate the Bill on his behalf, in case of urgency.

An assented or authenticated<sup>437</sup> copy of each Bill is laid on the Table by the Secretary-General<sup>438</sup>.

Special Procedural Features regarding Private Members' Bills

As regards Bill sponsored by private members, while the general procedure is the same as in the case of Government Bills, there are some special procedural features which are described below.

Notice of Bills

The period of notice of a motion for leave to introduce a private member's Bill is one month unless the Speaker allows the motion to be made at shorter notice<sup>439</sup>.

The period of notice is counted from the date on which the notice of a Bill is received in the Secretariat. In the case of Bills which under the Constitution cannot be introduced without the recommendation of the President, the period of notice is reckoned from the date of receipt in the Secretariat of the President's recommendation where the date of receipt of the President's recommendation is later than the date of receipt of the notice of the Bill.

As in the case of a Government Bill, the notice of a Bill from a private member is accompanied by a copy of the Bill together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons. A Bill not accompanied by the Statement of Objects and Reasons is returned to the member. In such a case, the period of one month is counted from the date on which the Statement of Objects and Reasons is received from him<sup>440</sup>. In case it is considered necessary to revise the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the Bill, it is revised under the directions of the Speaker and the concurrence of the member concerned is invariably obtained<sup>441</sup>.

437. In the case of a Bill to which assent is obtained by the Rajya Sabha Secretariat, the Bill, as assented to by the President, is authenticated by the Secretary-General of Rajya Sabha and supplied to the Secretariat for being laid on the Table.

438. Dir. 35.

439. Rule 65(3).

The summons for the Twelfth Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha were issued on 5 November 2007 and the second day allotted to Private Members' Bills during that session was 30 November 2007. As interval between date of issue of summons and the day allotted to Private Members' Bills was less than a month, the Speaker waived prescribed notice period of one month for Bills. Accordingly notices of Bills for introduction received till 8 November 2007 were accepted, and the Bills were permitted to be introduced on 30 November 2007.

A similar relaxation was also made in the First Session of the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Lok Sabha in 1957, 1962, 1967, 1971, 1977, 1980, 1984, 1989 and 1991, respectively.

440. Instances: (i) The Pensions Bill, 1982; and (ii) The Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Amendment Bill, 1988.

441. For instance, the Statements of Objects and Reasons in the following cases were revised and concurrence of the members obtained:

the Old Marriage Restraint Bill, 1958; the Union Territories (Laws) Amendment Bill, 1958; the All India Maternity Benefit Bill, 1958; the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation)

A member can give notice of not more than four Bills during a session<sup>442</sup>.

When different members give notices separately or conjointly to introduce an identical Bill, the names of all those members are appended to the Bill in the order in which the notices have been received in point of time, and are included in the List of Business against the motion for leave to introduce the Bill. However, if two or more members give notices of an identical Bill at the same point of time, a ballot is held to determine their inter se priority<sup>443</sup>. The member whose name appears first is called to move the motion for leave to introduce the Bill. In case the first member is absent, the second member or the third member and so on, as the case may be, who is present moves the motion<sup>444</sup>. The member who moves the motion becomes the member in charge of the Bill.

When a Bill is pending before Lok Sabha, notice of an identical Bill, whether received before or after the introduction of the pending Bill, is removed from, or not entered in, the list of pending notices, as the case may be, unless the Speaker otherwise directs<sup>445</sup>.

Bills dealing with the same subject have, however, been allowed to be introduced<sup>446</sup> and there is no bar to a Bill being introduced in Lok Sabha when an identical Bill is pending before Rajya Sabha.

Drafting of Bills

The primary responsibility for drafting of private members' Bills is that of the members concerned. Nevertheless, the Secretariat renders all possible technical

Amendment Bill, 1959; the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill (Amendment of Sections 207-A and 437) 1967; the Tobacco Board (Amendment) Bill, 1987 (Amendment of Section 8, etc.); and the Youth Bill, 1987.

442. Recommendation to this effect was made by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions of the Third Lok Sabha in their 14th Report, presented to the House on 7 March 1963 and adopted on 8 March 1963.

443. Notices of "The Railway Protection Force (Amendment) Bill, 1994 (Substitution of new Long Title for Long Title, etc.)" were given by 10 members on 28 February 1994 at 1650 hours; identical notices of the Bill were also given by two more members on 4 March 1994 at 1625 hours. Since all the Bills were due for introduction on the same date (22 April 1994), two separate ballots were held to determine the inter se priority of the names of members from whom notices were received on the same date and at the same point of time.

444. Dir. 28.

445. Rule 67.

Before 1953, i.e., before this rule was framed, notices of identical private members' Bills were permitted because all private members' Bills were then balloted even for introduction. With the abolition of ballot for introduction of private members' Bills in that year, every private member's Bill was assured introduction. This created an anomalous position, for although identical Bills could not be introduced in the same session, there was no bar to the introduction of an identical Bill in a subsequent session. The result was that the House could be seized simultaneously of a number of identical private members' Bills at various stages of progress. The present Rule thus avoids such a situation while at the same time it vests power in the Speaker to entertain in his discretion notices of identical Bills in special cases where such a course is necessary.

446. See P. Deb. (II), 12-12-1950, cc. 1548, 1552-53; L.S. Deb., 24-8-1956, cc. 4330-31; 27-3-1987, cc. 232-33.

assistance and advice to members so that the Bills are not rejected on technical grounds<sup>447</sup>.

Where a Bill has not been properly drafted by the member and is too obscure to be edited and the member is not willing to revise that Bill when requested to do so, the procedure is to print the Bill in the form in which it was received from the member<sup>448</sup>.

Introduction of Bills

On the day allotted for the disposal of private members' Bills, Bills for introduction are set down as the first item in the List of Private Members' Business for that day<sup>449</sup>. Where in respect of a Bill the motion is that leave be granted to withdraw it, the Bill is set down immediately after the Bill for introduction<sup>450</sup>.

A member who has given notice of introduction of a Bill may authorise another member to introduce it on his behalf provided the authority is given in writing and specifically states that all subsequent motions in respect of the further stages of the Bill will be made by the member so authorised<sup>451</sup>. Thus, the person who introduces the Bill becomes the member in-charge of the Bill. Where a Bill is sought to be introduced by another member, the letter of authority must be sent to the Secretary-General in advance<sup>452</sup>.

By convention, the motion for introduction of a Bill is not opposed, but there are several instances where motions for introduction of private members' Bill were opposed and also negatived by the House<sup>453</sup>.

In case the introduction of a private member's Bill is opposed on the ground that the Bill initiates legislation outside the legislative competence of the House, it may be referred to the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions for examination, if the Speaker considers such objection prima facie tenable<sup>454</sup>.

447. The Secretariat takes no responsibility for the contents of the Bill whatever the nature or quantum of the secretarial help rendered.

448. The same procedure was followed in the case of the Income-Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1985 (Amendment of Section 2, etc.) by Mool Chand Daga, M.P.

449. Rule 27 (I) (a)—In exceptional cases, members have, however, been allowed to introduce Bills after the disposal of private members' business for the day. See L.S. Deb., 7-3-1958; 2-5-1958; 27-3-1987, cc. 276-77; 24-4-1987, c. 332.

Motions after Introduction

As in the case of Government Bills, the next motion in respect of a private member's Bill is not made on the same day on which it has been introduced. The relative precedence of private members' Bills after their introduction, as regards the subsequent legislative stages, is determined by ballot held in accordance with the directions of the Speaker<sup>455</sup>.

There is one ballot each month for determining the relative precedence of pending private members' Bills covering two consecutive days allotted for such Bills and the ballot is held at least seven days before the first day so allotted<sup>456</sup>. Depending upon the priority secured in the Ballot, the member in-charge may move any of the next motions in respect of his Bill.

Since the relative precedence of private member's Bills after their introduction is determined by ballot, notices have to be given by members in advance as to the next motion which they desire to move in respect of their Bills<sup>457</sup>. However, in actual practice only such members whose Bills have secured the first twenty places in the ballot are requested to give notices of next motions. Where notices of next motions are received after the List of Business for the first of the two allotted days has been finalised, the Bills concerned are included in the List of Business for the next allotted day at their appropriate places as determined by the ballot held in respect of the two days.

All private members' Bills are balloted category-wise in the following order:

Bills classified by the House on the recommendation of the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions under category 'A'.

Bills classified [likewise] as category 'B'.

Bills which have been introduced but not yet classified by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions. The result of the ballot is announced in the Bulletin.

However, if there are more than twenty Bills in category 'A', ballot of only category 'A' Bills is held and ballot of category 'B' Bills is not held<sup>458</sup>.

Of all the Bills balloted, it is the practice to include in the List of Business<sup>459</sup> only four Bills<sup>460</sup> (excluding any part-discussed Bill, or Bills for withdrawal or Bills

455. Rule 27 and Dirs. 3-8.

456. Dir. 3.

Prior to August 1955, when this and other cognate directions were issued by the Speaker, ballot was held with respect to each day allotted for discussion of private members' Bills, necessitating a constant reshuffling of the relative priorities of Bills as a result of which a Bill which had gained priority for a particular day allotted to Bills lost the same for the next sitting.

457. Dir. 8. Members are reminded at different stages to give such notices through the Bulletin.

458. Dirs. 5 and 6.

459. Rule 27(2), Proviso.

460. On 9 November 1962, in view of the Emergency, it was decided by the House that only four resolutions would be included in the List of Business for private members' resolutions. Under directions of the Speaker, the same principle was applied to private members' Bills.

requiring the President's recommendation, but of which recommendation has not been received) in the order of priority determined by ballot in respect of which the next motions have been received and for the moving of which the members in-charge have also intimated their intention to be present in the House<sup>461</sup>.

An unclassified Private Members' Bill which has been balloted and subsequently classified as Category 'A' is set down in the List of Business after the Bills in Category 'A'. However, an unclassified Bill which has not been balloted, but which is subsequently classified as category 'A', is set down in the List of Business for the next allotted day after the part-discussed Bill in case there are no other category 'A' Bills balloted earlier and set down in that list, and the member in-charge gives notice of the next motion in respect thereof.

In the case of Bills falling under the same category, a Bill which has been balloted is given precedence in the List of Business over a Bill which has not been balloted.

A member who has introduced a Bill may at a subsequent stage, with the permission of the Speaker, nominate another member to pilot the remaining stage or stages of the Bill<sup>462</sup>.

A Private Member's Bill may be referred to the same Select or Joint Committee to which a Government Bill dealing with a cognate subject has been referred<sup>463</sup>.

In a case where a Bill sponsored by a private member requires the recommendation of the President, it is open to the member concerned to apply direct to the President for such recommendation. Where, however, a request is received by the Secretariat from the member for obtaining the recommendation of the President, a copy of the letter is forwarded to the Ministry concerned for necessary action. It is open to the President's Secretariat or the Minister concerned to communicate the orders of the President to the member direct under intimation to the Secretariat. Where intimation regarding the President's order is received by the Secretariat through the Minister concerned, it is communicated to the member and published in the Bulletin.

Allotment of Time to Private Members' Bills

Allotment of time for discussion of private members' bills included in the List of Business for a particular day is recommended by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions. Initially, two hours are allotted for discussion for each Private Member's Bill. However, time allotted to a Bill may be increased with the consent of the House.

Adjournment of Debate

At any stage of a private member's Bill which is under consideration in the House, the debate thereon may be adjourned on a motion moved to that effect with the consent of the Speaker. Debates on such Bills have been adjourned on motions moved in and adopted by the House<sup>464</sup>.

Register of Pending Bills

In addition to the rules applicable to Government Bills in this connection, a private member's Bill pending before the House is also removed from the Pending Bills Register in case the member in-charge ceases to be a member of the House or is appointed a Minister<sup>465</sup>.

A private member's Bill in respect of which the recommendation of the President for its consideration has been withheld is not removed from the Register but is excluded from the ballot.

Amendment to the Constitution

The scope of Parliament's power to amend the Constitution has been a subject of controversy<sup>466</sup>. Until the case of I.C. Golak Nath v. State of Punjab, the Supreme Court had been holding that no part of the Constitution was unamendable and that Parliament might, by passing a Constitution Amendment Act in compliance with the requirements of article 368, amend any provision of the Constitution<sup>467</sup>. But in Golak Nath's Case, the Supreme Court, by a majority of 6:5 held that the earlier decisions had not properly interpreted the scope and effect of article 368 and that the said article did not confer power on Parliament to amend Part III of the Constitution in any event<sup>468</sup>.

As a result of the judgement of the Supreme Court in Golak Nath Case, Parliament thought it necessary to pass, in 1971, the Constitution (Twenty-fourth 464. On 6 December 1985, debate on the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1985 (Amendment of Sections 125 and 127) was adjourned to the next day allotted to Private Member Bills, i.e. 20 December 1985, by suspending Proviso to Rule 29 and Rule 30(1), see also L.S. Deb., 12-3-1993, cc. 388-89; 23-4-1993, cc. 295-97; 1-12-1995, c. 340; 2-5-1997, cc. 160-62. On 12 March 1993, debate on the Railway Protection Force (Amendment) Bill, 1991 (Substitution of new Long Title for Long Title, etc.) was adjourned to the next day allotted to Private Members' Bills, i.e. 26 March 1993, by suspending Proviso to Rule 29 and Rule 30(1). Debate on the same Bill was again adjourned on 23 April 1993 to the next day allotted to Private Members' Bills, i.e. 7 May 1993 by suspending the same rules.

466. See, Constitution Amendment in India, Lok Sabha Secretariat, New Delhi, 2007.

467. A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1643.

468. In Shankari Prasad Singh Deo v. Union of India (A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 458), the Supreme Court unanimously held that the terms of article 368 are perfectly general and empower Parliament to amend the Constitution without any exception whatever.

In Sajjan Singh v. State of Rajasthan (A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 845), the Supreme Court reiterated the same view by a majority of three judges and held that when article 368 confers on Parliament the right to amend the Constitution, the power in question can be exercised over all the provisions of the Constitution.

Amendment) Act. This Act amended the Constitution to provide expressly that Parliament has power to amend any part of the Constitution, including the provisions relating to Fundamental Rights. In His Holiness Kesavananda Bharati Sripadagalvaru v. State of Kerala<sup>469</sup>, the Supreme Court reviewed the decision in the Golak Nath's Case and held that article 368 does not enable Parliament to alter the basic structure or framework of the Constitution. The theory of basic structure of the Constitution was reaffirmed and applied by the Supreme Court in Smt. Indira Nehru Gandhi v. Raj Narain<sup>470</sup> and certain amendments to the Constitution were held void<sup>471</sup>.

Subsequently, in Minerva Mills Ltd. v. Union of India<sup>472</sup>, the Supreme Court, while declaring section 55<sup>473</sup> of the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976 as unconstitutional and void, held:

“Since the Constitution had conferred a limited amending power on the Parliament, the Parliament cannot under the exercise of that limited power enlarge that very power into an absolute power. Indeed, a limited amending power is one of the basic features of our Constitution and, therefore, the limitations on that power cannot be destroyed. In other words, Parliament cannot, under article 368, expand its amending power so as to acquire for itself the right to repeal or abrogate the Constitution or to destroy its basic and essential features. The donee of a limited power cannot by the exercise of that power convert the limited power into an unlimited one.”

It has also been observed that the claim of any particular feature of the Constitution to be a ‘basic’ feature would be determined by the court in each case that comes before it. The concept of ‘basic structure’ has been further developed by the Supreme Court in subsequent cases. More and more new essential features of basic structure have been added in Waman Rao v. Union of India<sup>474</sup>, Bhim Singh v. Union of India<sup>475</sup>, S.P. Gupta v. President of India<sup>476</sup>, S.P. Sampath Kumar v. Union of India<sup>477</sup>, P. Sambamurthy v. State

471. In this case came up for challenge article 329A inserted by the Constitution (Thirty-ninth Amendment) Act, 1975. Article 329A put the Prime Minister's and the Lok Sabha Speaker's elections outside the purview of the Judiciary and provided for determination of disputes concerning their elections by an authority to be set up by a legislation. The Supreme Court struck down clauses (4) and (5) of the article 329A which made the existing election law inapplicable to the Prime Minister's and Speaker's elections and declared the pending proceedings in respect of such elections null and void.

Unlike many written constitutions which have one uniform procedure for effecting “any change of any kind in any part of the Constitution”, the Constitution of India provides for a variety in the amending process — a feature which has been commended for the reason that uniformity in the amending process imposes “quite unnecessary restrictions” upon the amendment of parts of a Constitution<sup>484</sup>.

The Constitution provides for three categories of amendments: articles which are open to amendment by simple majority; articles which require special majority for their amendment; and articles amendments to which are required to be passed by special majority and are also to be ratified by Legislatures of not less than one-half of the States<sup>485</sup>.

In addition, there are several articles in the Constitution which leave matters subject to laws made by Parliament<sup>486</sup>. By passing ordinary laws Parliament may, in effect, modify or annul the operation of certain provisions of the Constitution, without actually amending them<sup>487</sup>. However, as such laws do not in fact make any change whatsoever in the letter of the Constitution, they cannot be regarded as amendments of the Constitution nor categorised as such.

In India, the procedure for the amendment of the Constitution is distinguished by the following special features:

478. A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 663.

479. (1992) 1 S.C.C. 309.

480. A.I.R. 1997 S.C. 1125.

486. C.A. Deb., Vol. IX, p. 1660; see also Chapter I, The Authority and Jurisdiction of Parliament.

487. For instance. Parliament may, under article 11, make any provision relating to citizenship notwithstanding anything in articles 5 to 10.

For further examples of similar articles, see: Part XXI of the Constitution — “Temporary, Transitional and Special Provisions” whereby “notwithstanding anything in this Constitution” power is given to Parliament to make laws with respect to certain matters included in the State List (art. 369); art. 370(1)(d) which empowers the President to modify by order provisions of the Constitution in their application to the State of Jammu and Kashmir: provisos to arts. 83(2) and 172(1) empower Parliament to extend the life of Lok Sabha and of the State Legislative Assemblies beyond the period of five years during the operation of a proclamation of Emergency; and art. 171(2) which provides that the composition of Legislative Councils of the States as laid down in clause (3) of the same article will hold good only “until Parliament by law otherwise provides”.

There is no separate constituent body for the purposes of amendment of the Constitution, constituent power also being vested in Parliament.

Except that Parliament cannot alter the basic structure or framework of the Constitution, there is no other limitation placed upon the amending power.

The role of the States in regard to amendment of the Constitution is limited. Apart from being associated in the process of constitutional amendment by the ratification procedure laid down in the Constitution, all that is open to them is:

(i) to give their views on a proposed Bill seeking to affect the area, boundaries or name of any State or States<sup>488</sup> which has been referred to them by the President — a reference which does not fetter the power of Parliament to make any further amendments to the Bill<sup>489</sup>; and (ii) to initiate the process for creating or abolishing Legislative Councils in their Legislatures<sup>490</sup>.

Bills seeking to amend the Constitution

A Bill seeking to amend the Constitution may be brought forward by a Minister or private member. In the latter case, the Bill, apart from being subject to the normal rules applicable to private members' Bills, has also to be examined and recommended by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions before a motion for leave to introduce, it is included in the List of Business<sup>491</sup>.

It is a well-settled convention that Bills seeking to amend the Constitution brought forward by Ministers are introduced in the Lok Sabha<sup>492</sup>.

Bills to amend the Constitution introduced by Ministers are distinguished by consecutive numbers irrespective of the year of their introduction. This applies equally to the Bills when they are passed and become Acts of Parliament.

Amendment by Simple Majority

A Bill in respect of any of the following subjects is treated as an ordinary Bill, that is, it is passed by simple majority:

admission or establishment of new States, formation of new States and alteration of areas, boundaries or names of existing ones<sup>493</sup>;

492. The Constitution (Forty-first Amendment) Bill, 1975, was, however, introduced in Rajya Sabha. The Bill, as passed by Rajya Sabha, lapsed on the dissolution of the Fifth Lok Sabha on 18-1-1977. The Constitution (Fifty-ninth Amendment) Bill, 1988 was also introduced in Rajya Sabha. The Bill, as passed by Rajya Sabha, was laid on the Table of Lok Sabha on 16-3-1988 and passed by Lok Sabha on 23-3-1988. The Constitution (Seventy-ninth Amendment) Bill, 1992 was introduced in the Rajya Sabha on 22-12-1992.

493. Art. 4. In pursuance of this article, the undermentioned Acts (involving amendment of the Constitution) have been passed by Parliament as ordinary laws:

creation or abolition of Legislative Councils in the States<sup>494</sup>, administration and control of Scheduled Areas and Scheduled Tribes<sup>495</sup>; and administration of Tribal Areas in the States of Assam, Meghalaya and Mizoram<sup>496</sup>.

Though normal legislative procedure holds good so far as this class of amendments is concerned, certain conditions, however, do attach to Bills providing for the formation of new States and for the alteration of areas, boundaries or names of existing States. No Bill of this nature can be introduced in either House of Parliament except on the recommendation of the President and unless, where the proposal contained in the Bill affect the area, boundaries or name of any of the States, the Bill has been referred by the President to the Legislature of that State for expressing its views thereon within such period as may be specified in the reference or within such further period as the President may allow and the period so specified or allowed has expired<sup>497</sup>.

494. Art. 169. The Legislative Assembly of Andhra Pradesh passed a resolution on 5 December 1956, in accordance with this article, recommending the creation of a Legislative Council for that State. The Legislatures of Bombay, Madhya Pradesh, Madras, Mysore, Punjab and Uttar Pradesh passed resolutions for increasing the strength of the Legislative Councils in their Legislatures. To provide for these matters, a Bill was introduced in the Second Session of the Second Lok Sabha which inter alia contained provisions (cl. 3) for amendment of article 168. This Bill was passed by Parliament as the Legislative Councils Act, 1957, by a simple majority. Similarly, the West Bengal Legislative Council (Abolition) Bill, 1969, the Punjab Legislative Council (Abolition) Bill, 1969, the Andhra Pradesh Legislative Council (Abolition) Bill, 1985, the Tamil Nadu Legislative Council (Abolition) Bill, 1986 and the Andhra Pradesh Legislative Council Bill, 2005 were brought forward and passed by Parliament in pursuance of a resolution for abolition of the Legislative Councils passed by the respective State Assemblies in accordance with this article. The Tamil Nadu Legislative Council Bill, 2010 was brought forward and passed by Parliament in pursuance of a resolution passed on 12 April 2010 in the Tamil Nadu Assembly for creation of a Legislative Council in the State.

495. Para 7 of the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution. This Schedule was amended by the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution (Amendment) Bill, 1976, which was passed by simple majority.

496. Para 21 of the Sixth Schedule to the Constitution.

The Sixth Schedule was amended by the following Bills which were passed by a simple majority: the Lushai Hills District (Change of Name) Bill, 1954; the Naga Hills — Tuensang Area Bill, 1957; the North-Eastern Areas (Reorganisation) Bill, 1971; the State of Mizoram Bill, 1986; and the Sixth Schedule to the Constitution (Amendment) Bill, 2003, to create an autonomous self-governing body to be known as Bodoland Territorial Council (BTC) within the State of Assam.

497. Article 3.

Further, Parliament's power to provide by law for the abolition or creation of Legislative Council in the States is exercisable only if the Legislative Assembly of the particular State passes a resolution to that effect by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members of the Assembly present and voting<sup>498</sup>.

Where such a resolution has been passed by Legislative Assembly of a State and Parliament is seized of it, Parliament is not bound blindly to implement the resolution but has to exercise its discretion and judgment; because the word used in the constitutional provisions is 'may' and not 'shall'. Parliament may not only choose the time for implementation of the resolution but also decide against it. If the Legislative Assembly of the State concerned were to revoke or modify its earlier resolution, before Parliament has approved the proposal made by the Legislative Assembly, it shall be more appropriate for Parliament not to invoke the constitutional provisions in this regard<sup>499</sup>.

The resolution passed by a Legislative Assembly does not lapse if the Lok Sabha is dissolved before Lok Sabha has considered it or given its decision thereon.

There is no time-limit within which Parliament is required to consider the resolution which may remain pending indefinitely.

Amendment by Special Majority

Barring the specific articles and schedules of the Constitution which can be amended by simple majority, a Bill seeking to amend any other of the part of Constitution has to be passed in either House of Parliament by a special majority, i.e., a majority of the 'total membership' of that House and by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members of that House present and voting<sup>500</sup>. Except for the conditions

499. Statement of the Minister of Law and Social Welfare. L.S. Deb., 8-12-1970, cc. 216-18. The Andhra Pradesh Legislative Assembly had passed a resolution under article 169 for the abolition of the Legislative Council in that State on 24 March 1983 and sent the same to the Union Government. Government did not bring forward a Bill in Parliament to give effect to the resolution. A question of privilege was referred to the Committee of Privileges of the Legislative Assembly against the then Union Minister of Law, Justice and Company Affairs, who was a member of Lok Sabha, for turning down the resolution passed by the Assembly. On a question of privilege raised by a member in the Lok Sabha, the Speaker observed inter alia that article 169 of the Constitution, under which the resolution for abolition of the Legislative Council of Andhra Pradesh was passed by the Legislative Assembly, does not have the effect of imposing any obligation on the Government of India to take action for initiating legislation in Parliament for the purpose. It was exclusively for the Government to choose the time and occasion to initiate legislation on a particular subject and bring it before Parliament.

'Total membership' stipulated in the Constitution has been defined to mean the total number of members comprising the House irrespective of the fact whether there are vacancies or absentees on any account—Rule 159, Explanation.

'Abstentions' in any voting are not taken into consideration in declaring the result on any question. A member who votes "abstention" either through the electronic vote recorder or on a voting slip or any other manner, does so only to indicate his presence in the House and his intention to abstain from voting; he does not record his vote within the meaning of the words "present and voting". The expression "present and voting" refers to those who vote for "ayes" or for "noes"—Min. (RC), 8-9-1970.

as to the special majority and ratification of certain Bills by the State Legislatures, the Constitution does not lay down any other procedure to be followed with respect to Bills amending the Constitution in their legislative stages through the two Houses of Parliament<sup>501</sup>.

Taking a strict interpretation of the constitutional provision, the special majority prescribed therein may be required only for voting at the third reading stage, but by way of caution the requirement for special majority has been provided for in the rules in respect of all the effective stages of the Bill, e.g., motion that the Bill be taken into consideration; motion that the Bill as reported by the Select or Joint Committee be taken into consideration; for passing of clauses and schedules to the Bill; and the motion that the Bill be passed. Thus, motions that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon or that the Bill be referred to a Select or Joint Committee are passed by simple majority only<sup>502</sup>.

Whenever a motion has to be carried by a special majority, voting is always by division<sup>503</sup>. The Speaker, while announcing the result of the voting, makes a special mention of the fact that the motion has been earned by a special majority<sup>504</sup>.

501. It has been held by the Supreme Court that “having provided for the constitution of a Parliament and prescribed a certain procedure for the conduct of its ordinary legislative business to be supplemented by rules made by each House (article 118), the makers of the Constitution must be taken to have intended Parliament to follow that procedure so far as it may be applicable, consistently with the express provisions of article 368 when they entrusted to it the power of amending the Constitution”—Shankari Prasad v. Union of India, S.C.R. 1952, 102-03.

502. Rule 157. In reply to reference made in May 1951 by Speaker Mavalankar on the interpretation of article 368, the Attorney-General gave his opinion as follows:

“The expression ‘when the Bill is passed in each House’ has reference to the passing of the Bill at the final stage. The majority insisted upon by article 368 is, therefore, applicable only to the voting at the final stage. It is, however, better to err on the safer side and take stricter view insisting on the requisite majority at all stages of the passage of the Bill. The expression ‘by majority of the total membership of that House’ means that it is not actual number of members existing as at a given point of time which has to be considered but the membership meaning the totality of the members that should exist whether they in fact do exist or not.

This aspect is emphasised by the use of the words ‘the total’ and also by omission of the qualifying words ‘present and voting’.”

Before the rule was amended to its present form in 1956, a special majority was insisted upon in the case of motions for circulation of the Bill for eliciting opinion and for reference of the Bill to Select or Joint Committee as well. Special majority at these stages was dispensed with as (i) in the case of the motion for circulation, the House was not committed to the principle of the Bill by such circulation, and (ii) in the case of the motion for reference of the Bill to Select or Joint Committee, the report of the Select or Joint Committee would in any case be subsequently considered by the House, and further, as a convention the Constitution Amendment Bills are always referred to Select or Joint Committee—Min. (RC), 17-4-1956.

503. In connection with voting on the clauses of the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Bill, 1976, the House agreed with the suggestion made by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs that on each day the clauses disposed of might be put to vote between 17.30 and 18.00 hours—L.S. Deb., 28-10-1976, cc. 64-65.

Each clause or schedule is put to the vote of the House separately and earned by a special majority<sup>505</sup>.

In December, 1959, clause 2 of the Constitution (Eighth Amendment) Bill, 1959, when put to the vote of the House, failed to secure the special majority. However, clause 3 was adopted by the special majority, as also the motion ‘that the Bill with the omission of clause 2 be passed’<sup>506</sup>.

The Speaker may, with the concurrence of the House, put any group of clauses or schedules together to the vote of the House.

On 23 September 1954, before the resumption of discussion on the Constitution (Third Amendment) Bill 1954, the Speaker made the following observation regarding the procedure for voting on the clauses of the Bill:

Though there is more than one clause, practically the matter is one and I propose to put before the House all the clauses, the Enacting Formula, and the Title at the same time, so that we shall be saving time on divisions.

On the motion for adoption of clauses 1, 2, the Enacting Formula and the Long Title, the House divided. The motion was carried by special majority.

On 6 September 1956, during the clause-by-clause consideration of the Constitution (Ninth Amendment) Bill, groups of clauses, namely, clauses 17, 19, 21, 22, 23 and the Schedule, as amended, and clauses to which no amendments had been moved, namely, clauses 18, 20 and 26 to 29, were put together to the vote of the House and adopted by the special majority prescribed, and the result of the division was made applicable separately to individual clauses and the schedule.

On 23 July 1975, clauses 2 to 8 of the Constitution (Thirty-ninth Amendment) Bill, 1975, were put to vote together and adopted by the special majority prescribed, and the result of division was made applicable separately to individual clauses.

505. Rule 155. The reason behind this rule is that “in the case of omnibus Bills involving amendments of articles on different aspects or subjects of the Constitution, members might be divided on the different provisions on different lines. In such a case, if voting by a special majority was taken only at the last stage, the position of the members would become anomalous and their vote would not reflect their true views on the different provisions”. Min. (RC-1LS), 17-4-1956, para 7.

A matter was raised in the House regarding the vires of Rules of 155, 157 and 158 on the contention that according to article 368 special majority was required only at the stage of passing. The matter was referred to the Rules Committee which came to the conclusion that in accordance with the correct legal interpretation of articles 100(1) and 368, special majority for Bills seeking to amend the Constitution should be required only at the final stage of passing the Bill when the motion in respect of such a Bill is “that the Bill, or the Bill as amended, as the case may be, be passed”. However, the Committee warned that in the case of a Constitution Amendment Bill which included more than one matter, it might be difficult for members opposed to certain parts of the Bill to vote truly and correctly at the final stage, which facility they have if special majority is on clauses separately. The Committee suggested that in case voting by special majority was to be taken only at the final stage, the Bill should be confined to one matter only.—5R (RC-4LS), laid on the table on 9 December 1970. However, the report lapsed with the dissolution of the Lok Sabha on 23 December 1970, and no effect could be given to its recommendations.

On 1 November 1976, the House agreed that in view of the very large number of divisions involved, the remaining clauses of the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Bill might be put together to vote, unless members wanted any particular clause or clauses to be put separately. Accordingly, (i) clauses 13 to 16; (ii) 18 to 20, clause 21 as amended, clauses 22 to 28, clauses 29 and 30 as amended, clauses 31 to 33, clause 34 as amended, clauses 35 to 41, clause 42 as amended; and (iii) clauses 47 to 50 and clauses 51 and 52 as amended, were put to the vote of the House in three separate groups and adopted by the special majority prescribed and the result of the division was made applicable separately to individual clauses<sup>507</sup>.

However, the Short Title<sup>508</sup>, Enacting Formula and the Long Title of the Bill as also amendments to clauses or schedules are adopted by a simple majority<sup>509</sup>.

Constitution Amendment Bills passed by one House and returned by the other House with amendments.

During Sixth Lok Sabha, the Constitution (Forty-fifth Amendment) Bill, 1978 was passed by Lok Sabha on 23 August 1978 and transmitted to Rajya Sabha on the same day. The Bill, as passed by Lok Sabha, was passed by Rajya Sabha with six amendments on 31 August 1978 and returned to Lok Sabha on 12 September 1978.

A reference was made to the Ministry of Law regarding the procedure which might be followed for disposal of amendments made by Rajya Sabha in the Bill. On receipt of opinion of the Ministry of Law, it was decided to follow the following procedure:

- (i) motion that the amendments made by Rajya Sabha be taken into consideration to be moved by the Minister shall require special majority for adoption;
- (ii) after adoption of motion at (i), amendments made by Rajya Sabha to be proposed by the Chair shall require special majority for agreeing to by Lok Sabha; and
- (iii) after amendments made by Rajya Sabha are agreed to by Lok Sabha, the Minister shall move that the Bill, as amended by amendments agreed to, be passed, which shall also require special majority for adoption.

The Bill was enacted as the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Act, 1978. Similar procedure was followed while agreeing to the amendments in respect of other Constitution Amendment Bills<sup>510</sup>.

Lok Sabha returned the Bill with amendments on 7 May 1992, which were agreed to by Rajya Sabha on 12 May 1992. The Bill was enacted as the Constitution (Seventieth Amendment) Act, 1992.

Amendment of the Constitution by Special Majority and Ratification by States

If an amendment of the Constitution seeks to make any change in articles relating to—the election of the President<sup>511</sup>; or the extent of the executive power of the Union and the States<sup>512</sup>;

the Supreme Court and the High Courts<sup>513</sup>; or distribution of legislative powers between the Union and the States<sup>514</sup>;

or representation of States in Parliament; or the very procedure for amendment as specified in the Constitution<sup>515</sup>;

the amendment, after it is passed by the special majority, has also to be ratified by Legislatures of not less than one-half of the States by resolutions to that effect passed by those Legislatures before the Bill making provision for such an amendment is presented to the President for assent<sup>516</sup>.

The Constitution does not contemplate any time-limit within which the States must signify their ratification or disapproval of the amendments referred to them<sup>517</sup>.

(ii) The Constitution (Ninety-third Amendment) Bill, 2001 was passed by Lok Sabha on 28 November 2001 and returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments on 14 May 2002, which were agreed to by Lok Sabha on 27 November 2002. The Bill was enacted as the Constitution (Eighty-sixth Amendment) Act, 2002.

(iii) The Constitution (One Hundred and Thirteenth Amendment) Bill, 2010 was passed by Lok Sabha on 9 November 2010 and returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments on 24.3.2011, which were agreed to by Lok Sabha on 6 September 2011. The Bills was enacted as the Constitution (Ninety-sixth Amendment) Act, 2011.

(iv) The Constitution (One Hundred Eighteenth Amendment) Bill, 2012 was passed by Lok Sabha on 18 December 2012 and returned by Rajya Sabha with amendments on 19.12.2012, which were agreed to by Lok Sabha on 20 December 2012. The Bill was enacted as the Constitution (Ninety-eighth Amendment) Act, 2012.

512. Arts. 73 and 162.

513. Art. 241, Chapter IV of Part V and Chapter V of Part VI of the Constitution.

514. Chapter I of Part XI and Seventh Schedule to the Constitution.

515. Art. 368.

516. When a Bill seeking to amend the Constitution is before a State Legislature for ratification, “there is no scope for moving any amendment to the Bill and no such amendment (is) allowed. Similarly, no amendment to the statutory motion as such is admissible, because the only thing before the House is whether the motion for ratification should or should not be accepted”. —Ruling of the Chairman of the Maharashtra Legislative Council (J.P.I., April 1970, pp. 23 8-39).

The resolution of a State Legislature ratifying a Bill for amendment of the Constitution does not require the assent of the Governor.—Jatin Chakrovarty v. Mr. Justice Himansu Kumar Bose, A.I.R. 1964. Calcutta 500.

517. As regards the corresponding provision in the U.S. Constitution, article V, which also does not prescribe any time-limit for ratification, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ratification must be within a reasonable time after the proposal (Dillon v. Gloss, 65 Law Ed. 9945), but that the Court has no power to determine what is a reasonable time (Coleman v. Miller, 83 Law Ed. 1385).

The method to be adopted by the Lok Sabha Secretariat in connection with ratification of Constitution Amendment Bills by State Legislatures was examined by the Rules Committee of the House which was of the opinion that the procedure of sending direct communication from the Secretariat to the Secretariats of Legislatures of States would be preferable to the procedure of getting the amendments ratified through the Ministry of Law<sup>518</sup>, especially “in a contingency where there was a difference of opinion with the States in the ratification of amendments and where, as a result of resolutions received from the States, they had to be reconsidered by Parliament and an agreement reached through messages between Parliament and the State Legislatures. It would also be a more suitable procedure in case of a Bill introduced by a private member and passed by both the Houses in spite of the opposition by the Government and where Government might not be interested in pushing the Bill through”. The Committee came to the conclusion that “ratification of amendments to the Constitution by the States, where required, should be obtained by direct communication between the House and the Secretariats of the State Legislatures” and desired that “this procedure which was more appropriate should be followed by Lok Sabha<sup>519</sup>”.

518. Except in case of the Constitution (Forty-fifth Amendment) Bill, 1978, and the Constitution (Ninety-Fifth Amendment) Act, 2009, Rajya Sabha has so far been in last possession of Bills to amend the Constitution. Prior to the Constitution (Twenty-fourth Amendment) Bill, 1971, after such a Bill was passed by Rajya Sabha, it was sent to the Ministry of Law for taking necessary steps to get it ratified by the State Legislatures as required under article 368. The Ministry of Law informed the Rajya Sabha Secretariat when the required number of State Legislatures had ratified the Bill, enclosing copies of the letters received from the Governments of these States indicating that the necessary resolutions had been passed by the respective Legislatures. Thereafter, the Bill, duly endorsed by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, was sent to the President for his assent, through the Secretary, Ministry of Law. In the case of the Constitution (Twenty-fourth Amendment) Bill, 1971 and subsequent Bills, the necessary ratification was obtained by the Rajya Sabha Secretariat direct.

In case of the Constitution (Forty-fifth) Amendment Bill, 1978, necessary ratification was obtained by the Lok Sabha Secretariat. The Bill was introduced in and passed by Lok Sabha. The Rajya Sabha, however, returned the Bill after six amendments. These amendments were considered and agreed to by the Lok Sabha on 7 December 1978. While forwarding the Bill to the State Legislatures for ratification, the following form of resolution was also communicated to them;

‘That this House ratifies the amendments to the Constitution of India falling within the purview of the proviso to clause (2) of article 368 thereof, proposed to be made by the Constitution (45th Amendment) Bill, 1978, as passed by the two Houses of Parliament and the Short Title of which has been changed into “The Constitution (44th Amendment) Bill, 1978”.’

After intimation regarding ratification of the Bill had been received from 13 States out of the then total of 22 States (more than one-half of the State Legislatures), assented copies of the Bill were submitted to the President. Two photostat copies each of the letters received from the State Legislatures ratifying the Bill were also sent to the Ministry of Law alongwith assented copies of the Bill.

519. Min. (RC-ILS), 18-3-1957.

In the case of the Constitution (One Hundred and Ninth Amendment) Act, 2009 [enacted as the Constitution (Ninety-fifth Amendment) Act, 2009] also, necessary ratification was obtained by Lok Sabha Secretariat through direct communication with the States.

CHAPTER XXIII

Ordinances and Proclamations by the President

Ordinances

The Ordinance-making power of the President has been discussed in the Lok Sabha on a number of occasions. Members have objected to the frequent resort to this power by the Government, particularly on dates too close to a session of Parliament, and expressed the view that Ordinances should be promulgated only when it is absolutely necessary. Strong objection has been taken to the issue of fiscal Ordinances<sup>1</sup> on the ground that no impost partaking of the nature of a tax can be levied by the Government without coming before the House and taking its approval. Anyway, the test of emergency in the case of a fiscal Ordinance, it has been said, should be much stricter than in the case of other Ordinances.

The Speaker has held that the promulgation of an Ordinance depends on the satisfaction of the President that immediate action is called for. While advising the President of the need for immediate action, Government cannot share the responsibility with anyone; the power of Parliament to look into the desirability or otherwise of the Ordinance is only ex post facto<sup>2</sup>.

1. Instances when Ordinances were promulgated by the President for the purpose of levying taxes or duties include the Dhoties (Additional Excise Duty) Ordinance, 1953; the Uttar Pradesh Terminal Tax on Railway Passengers Ordinance, 1954; the Uttar Pradesh Terminal Tax on Railway Passengers (Amendment) Ordinance, 1954; the Madras Terminal Tax on Railway Passengers Ordinance, 1956; the Mineral Oils (Additional Duties of Excise and Customs) Ordinance, 1958; the Sugar (Special Excise Duty) Ordinance, 1959; the L.J.P. Sugarcane Cess (Validation) Ordinance, 1961; the Mineral Products (Additional Duties of Excise and Customs) Amendment Ordinance, 1966; the Stamp and Excise Duties (Amendment) Ordinance, 1971; the Railway Passenger Fares Ordinance, 1971; the Tax on Postal Articles Ordinance, 1971; the Inland Air Travel Tax Ordinance, 1971; the Income-tax (Amendment) Ordinance, 1972; the Central Excise and Salt (Amendment) Ordinance, 1973; the Income-tax (Amendment) Ordinance, 1975; the Additional Duties of Excise (Textiles and Textile Articles) Ordinance, 1978; the Punjab Excise (Delhi Amendment) Ordinance, 1979; the Central Excise and Salt and Additional Duties of Excise (Amendment) Ordinance, 1979; the Compulsory Deposit Scheme (Income-tax payers) Amendment Ordinance, 1981; the Income Tax (Amendment) Ordinance, 1981; the Customs Tariff (Amendments) Ordinance, 1981; the Central Excise Laws (Amendment and Validation) Ordinance, 1982; the Finance (Amendment) Ordinance, 1987; the Union Duties of Excise (Distribution) Ordinance, 1995, and the Additional Duties of Excise (Goods of Special Importance) Amendment Ordinance, 1995. For details, also see Presidential Ordinances, 1950-2008, Lok Sabha Secretariat, New Delhi, 2009.

Referring to the issue of Ordinances as far back as in 1947, Speaker Mavalankar observed at the Presiding Officers Conference:

“It was obviously a wrong convention for the Executive Government to promulgate Ordinances merely because of shortage of time. That power was to be exercised only when there was an emergency and the Legislature could not meet. It was not a desirable precedent to promulgate Ordinances for want of time, as inconvenient legislation might also be promulgated in that manner.”

The issue of promulgation of Ordinances by the President had been the subject matter of correspondence between Speaker Mavalankar and Prime Minister Nehru.

Writing to the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs on 25 November 1950, Speaker Mavalankar said:

The procedure of the promulgation of Ordinances is inherently undemocratic. Whether an Ordinance is justifiable or not, the issue of a large number of Ordinances has psychologically, a bad effect. The people carry an impression that Government is carried on by Ordinances. The House carries a sense of being ignored, and the Central Secretariat perhaps gets into the habit of slackness, which necessitates Ordinances, and an impression is created that it is desired to commit the House to a particular legislation as the House has no alternative but to put its seal on matters that have been legislated upon by Ordinances. Such a state of things is not conducive to the development of the best parliamentary traditions.

In reply to the above letter, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru wrote on 13 December 1950:

I think all of my colleagues will agree with you that the issue of Ordinances is normally not desirable and should be avoided except on special and urgent occasions. As to when such an occasion may or may not arise, it is a matter of judgment. Not only the Government of a State, but private members of Parliament are continually urging that new legislation should be passed. Parliamentary procedure is sufficient to give the fullest opportunities for consideration and debate and to check errors and mistakes creeping in. That is obviously desirable. But, all this involves considerable delay. The result is that important legislation is held up. Every Parliament in the world has to face this difficult problem and various proposals have been made to overcome it.

Again, in his letter of 17 July 1954 to the Prime Minister, Speaker Mavalankar stated:

The issue of an Ordinance is undemocratic and cannot be justified except in cases of extreme urgency or emergency.

...We, as first Lok Sabha, carry a responsibility of laying down traditions. It is not a question of present personnel in the Government but a question of precedents; and if this Ordinance issuing is not limited by convention only to extreme and very urgent cases, the result may be that, in future, the Government may go on issuing Ordinances giving Lok Sabha no option but to rubber-stamp the Ordinances.

I may invite your attention to one more aspect, namely, the financial aspect involved in the amendment to the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922. It is not directly a taxation measure, but it is intended for the purpose of collection of taxes. Indirectly, it affects the finances and it would be a wrong precedent to have an Ordinance for such a purpose.

The Prime Minister, in his reply on 19 July 1954, wrote:

We have been reluctant to issue Ordinances and it is only when we have felt compelled to do so by circumstances that we have issued them. You will appreciate that it is the responsibility of the Government to decide what steps should be taken in a particular contingency. The Constitution itself has provided for the issue of Ordinances where such necessity arises, and that discretion has to be exercised by Government.

We have issued in the past a very limited number of Ordinances and we have always placed before Parliament the reasons for having issued each one of them.

I am myself unable to see why this should be considered undemocratic. Of course, this power, like any other power, may be abused and Parliament will be the ultimate judge as to whether the use of this power has been right or wrong.

Successive Speakers also did not fail to criticise the Government when occasions warranted for its frequent and large-scale resort to executive legislation by Ordinances.

On 15 November 1971, when the Deputy Minister of Parliamentary Affairs sought to lay on the Table copies of the thirteen Ordinances issued by the President during the preceding inter-session period, an objection was raised that never before in the history of Parliament, so many Ordinances were issued during any particular inter-session period. Thereupon, the Speaker observed:

I agree with you that so many Ordinances should not have been issued... I personally think it is not a light matter to be ignored. Certain observations have been made by my predecessor Shri Mavalankar based on very sound judgment. I would invite the attention of the Government to see that there is real emergency or urgency, justifying the issue of an Ordinance<sup>3</sup>.

When some members again raised the matter on 22 November 1971, particularly in regard to the Ordinances which had imposed certain levies, the Speaker observed:

If you think that there should be some distinction between financial and non-financial, tax and non-tax Ordinances, there is nothing in my knowledge on which I can base my ruling. All I can say is that I do not approve of an Ordinance just at the time when the House is about to meet<sup>4</sup>.

Again, on 13 November 1973 the Speaker observed:

Ordinances by themselves are not very welcome, specially so when the date (for session of the House) is very clear. It is not only clear but is also near. In such cases, unless there are very special reasons, Ordinances should be avoided. This is the ruling which I gave on 22 November 1971—and the same was given by my predecessors<sup>5</sup>.

On objection being raised regarding promulgation of Ordinances on the eve of Parliament Session, the Speaker, on 17 November 1980 reiterated:

My distinguished predecessors have made observations in regard to these matters from time to time in the past. They did not approve of the issue of Ordinances on the eve of Parliament Session. I agree with them<sup>6</sup>.

Promulgation of Ordinances

If at any time, except when both Houses of Parliament are in session<sup>7</sup>, the President is satisfied that circumstances exist which render it necessary for him to take immediate action, he may promulgate such Ordinances as the circumstances appear to him to require<sup>8</sup>.

An Ordinance so promulgated by the President has the same force and effect as an Act of Parliament, but every such Ordinance has to be laid before both the Houses of Parliament and it ceases to operate at the expiration of six weeks from the reassembly of Parliament, or, if before the expiration of that period resolutions disapproving it are passed by both Houses, then, upon the passing of the second of those resolutions. It can also be withdrawn at any time by the President<sup>9</sup>.

Since an Ordinance has the force of law, the validity of the Ordinance cannot be decided by a ruling of the Speaker<sup>10</sup>.

The Ordinance making power of the President arises as soon as either House is prorogued. If an Ordinance is promulgated before the order of prorogation is made and notified, the Ordinance is void<sup>11</sup>. The action of the President in proroguing

Parliament simply for the purpose of making an Ordinance cannot be challenged<sup>12</sup> and the courts have no power to question the jurisdiction either as to the occasion or purpose or the subject matter of an Ordinance even if the Ordinance is not made in good faith, except on the justiciable ground of exceeding the legislative powers conferred on the Union by the Constitution<sup>13</sup>.

The President may issue an Ordinance to enforce the provisions of a Bill introduced in, and pending before, a House or one of its Committees<sup>14</sup>, or to enforce the provisions of a Bill already passed by one House but not yet passed by the other House<sup>15</sup> or on an entirely new matter to be replaced subsequently by a Bill to be

The satisfaction of the President regarding the existence of circumstances that render it necessary for him to take immediate action is a subjective matter which cannot be probed or questioned in a court of law; and the precise nature of the action that he may decide to take in such circumstances is also left to his discretion and cannot be challenged.

As regards the Ordinance making power of the Governor, the Supreme Court in M/s. S.K. G. (P) Ltd. v. State of Bihar (A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1533) observed:

It is... well-settled that the necessity of immediate action and of promulgating an Ordinance is a matter purely for the subjective satisfaction of the Governor. He is the sole judge as to the existence of the circumstances necessitating the making of an Ordinance. His satisfaction is not a justiciable matter. It cannot be questioned on ground of error of judgement or otherwise in court.

The Sugar Crisis Enquiring Authority Ordinance, 1950; the Press (Objectionable Matters) Amendment Ordinance, 1954; the Railway (Employment of Members of Armed Forces) Ordinance, 1965; the Criminal Law Amendment (Amendment) Ordinance, 1966; the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property (Amendment) Ordinance, 1968; the Indian Patents and Designs (Amendment) Ordinance, 1968; the Customs (Amendment) Ordinance, 1969; the Indian Railways (Amendment) Ordinance, 1969; the National Capital Region Planning Board Ordinance, 1984; the Income Tax (Amendment), Ordinance, 1997; the Essential Commodities (Special Provisions) Ordinance, 1997; the National Capital Territory of Delhi Laws (Special Provisions) Second Ordinance, 2007; the High Court and Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Amendment Ordinance, 2009; and the Criminal Law (Amendment) Ordinance, 2013.

Instances of Ordinances issued in terms of Bill introduced and pending in the Rajya Sabha or a Committee of the House—

The Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Amendment Ordinance, 1968; the Essential Commodities (Amendment) Continuance Ordinance, 1969; the Calcutta Port (Amendment) Ordinance, 1970; the Delhi University (Amendment), Ordinance, 1970; the Cable Television Networks (Regulation) Ordinance, 1994; the Employees Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions (Amendment) Ordinance, 1997; the Payment of Gratuity (Amendment) Ordinance, 1997; and the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions (Amendment) Ordinance, 2006—also see fn. 7, supra.

15. Instances of Ordinances issued in terms of Bill passed by one House but not yet passed by the other House—brought before the House or for a purpose not requiring permanent legislation<sup>16</sup>.

The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Ordinance, 1966; the Arms (Amendment) Ordinance, 1983; the Bharat Petroleum Corporation Limited (Determination of Conditions of Services of Employees) Ordinance, 1988; and the National Highways (Amendment) Ordinance, 1992—also see fn. 7, supra.

Bill Seeking to Replace Ordinance

Ordinances promulgated by the President are required to be laid before both Houses of Parliament<sup>17</sup>. Normally, Ordinances are laid on the first day of the sitting of the House held after the promulgation of the Ordinances on which formal business is transacted. In the case of an Ordinance containing the provisions of a Bill pending before the House with or without modifications, a statement explaining the reasons for promulgation of the Ordinance is also laid along with the Ordinance<sup>18</sup> and copies thereof are circulated to members.

Ordinarily, an Ordinance promulgated in respect of a State under President's rule is also to be laid on the Table at the first sitting of the House held after the issue of the Proclamation but any delay in doing so cannot stand in the way of its being laid on the Table later. However, the reason for the delay in laying the Ordinance has to be explained to the House<sup>19</sup>. Ordinances promulgated by the Governor of a State under President's rule are also laid on the Table in the same manner<sup>20</sup>. An Ordinance promulgated by the Governor of a State before issue of the Proclamation by the President in relation to that State can be laid before the House in case it could not be laid before the State Legislature<sup>21</sup>.

If the Government wants to continue the provisions of an Ordinance for a longer period or to make it permanent, a Bill to replace it is brought forward. Where in respect of a State under President's rule, Parliament has delegated the authority to the President to make Acts for the State, the question of replacing the Ordinances issued by the President or the Governor in relation to the State by Bills introduced in Parliament does not arise. The Ordinances are replaced by President's Acts<sup>22</sup>.

Whenever a Bill seeking to replace an Ordinance with or without modification is introduced in the House, a statement explaining the circumstances which had Certain examples are—The Police (Incitement to Disaffection) (Gujarat Second Amendment) Ordinance, 1980; The Essential Services Maintenance (Maharashtra) Ordinance, 1980; the Gujarat Essential Services Maintenance (Amendment) Ordinance, 1980; the Essential Services Maintenance (Orissa) Ordinance, 1980; the Representation of the People (Amendment) Ordinance, 1985; and the State of Mizoram (Amendment) Ordinance, 1986. For other instances, see 'Presidential Ordinances' by Lok Sabha Secretariat, 2009.

19. L.S. Deb., 23-8-1966, cc. 6437-49.

20. For example, the Punjab Panchayat Samities and Zila Parishads (Temporary Supersession) Amendment Ordinance, 1983 and the Gangtok Municipal Corporation (Amendment) Ordinance, 1984 were such Ordinances.

22. See, for example, the Punjab Requisitioning of Immovable Property (Amendment and Validation) Ordinance, 1951; the East Punjab Public Safety (Amendment) Ordinance, 1951; the Code of Criminal Procedure (Assam) Amendment Ordinance, 1980; the Uttar Pradesh Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Ordinance, 1993; the Himachal Pradesh Electricity (Duty) Amendment Ordinance, 1993; the Madhya Pradesh Lottery Pratibandh Ordinance, 1993.

necessitated immediate legislation by Ordinance is laid on the Table along with the Bill<sup>23</sup> and copies of the statement are circulated to members. It is not obligatory under the Rules of the House to lay a statement explaining the reason for promulgation of an Ordinance, if a Bill replacing the Ordinance is introduced in the Rajya Sabha. If the Minister seeks to lay the statement, it can be laid as an ordinary paper. Whenever a Bill<sup>24</sup> seeking to replace an Ordinance with modifications of the provisions of the Ordinance is introduced in the House, the modifications contained in the Bill are required to be explained in a memorandum appended to the Bill<sup>25</sup>. If two or more Ordinances relating to allied matters are intended to be replaced, a single Bill can be introduced<sup>26</sup>.

It has been held that refusal of leave to introduce a Bill seeking to replace an Ordinance does not amount to disapproving the Ordinance and the Ordinance does not cease to operate<sup>27</sup>.

Statutory Resolutions seeking Disapproval of Ordinances

If notice<sup>28</sup> of a statutory resolution given by a private member seeking disapproval of an Ordinance is admitted by the Speaker, time has to be provided by Government

23. Rule 71(1); L.S. Deb., 21-8-1962, cc. 3206-07.

24. See, for example, the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Amendment Ordinance, 1968—L.S. Deb., 22-7-1968; the State of Nagaland (Amendment) Ordinance, 1981—L.S. Deb., 27-8-1981; the Punjab Panchayat Samities and Zila Parishads (Temporary Supersession) Amendment Ordinance, 1983—L.S. Deb., 6-12-1983; the General Insurance Business (Nationalisation) Amendment Ordinance, 1984; the National Capital Region Planning Board Ordinance, 1984; the Sugar Undertakings (Taking Over of Management) Amendment Ordinance, 1984; the Gangtok Municipal Corporation (Amendment) Ordinance, 1984—L.S. Deb., 18-1-1985; the Bhopal Gas Leak Disaster (Processing of Claims) Ordinance, 1985—*L.S. 25. Certain recent examples are—The Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Amendment Bill, 1985; the Bhopal Gas Leak Disaster (Processing of Claims) Bill, 1985, as introduced in the Rajya Sabha; the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1986, as introduced in the Rajya Sabha; the Administrative Tribunals (Amendment) Bill, 1986, as introduced in the Rajya Sabha; the Coal Mines Nationalisation Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1986; the Terrorists and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Bill, 1987; the Finance (Amendment) Bill, 1987; the Acquisition of Certain Area at Ayodhya Bill, 1993; the New Delhi Municipal Council Bill, 1994; the Patents (Amendment) Bill, 1995; and the Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill, 2013.

26. L.S. Deb., 16-11-1962, cc. 2030-35. For example, the Companies (Temporary Restrictions on Dividends) Bill, 1974 replaced the Companies (Temporary Restrictions on Dividends) Ordinance, 1974, and the Companies (Temporary Restrictions on Dividends) Amendment Ordinance, 1974; the Maintenance of Internal Security (Amendment) Bill 1975 replaced the Maintenance of Internal Security (Amendment) Ordinance, 1975 and the Maintenance of Internal Security (Second Amendment) Ordinance, 1975; the Payment of Bonus (Second Amendment) Bill, 1985 replaced the Payment of Bonus (Amendment) Ordinance, 1985 and the Payment of Bonus (Second Amendment) Ordinance, 1985.

27. Bhupendra Kumar Bose Vs. State of Orissa, A.I.R. 1960, Orissa 46.

28. The notice is to be given after the summons for the session has been issued. Notices received during the interregnum, i.e. between dates of prorogation of a session and issue of summons for the next session are not treated valid for the next session and members are advised to give fresh notices after issue of summons. On 1 January 1970, three members gave notices of Statutory Resolutions for disapproval of the Essential Commodities (Amendment) Continuance Ordinance, for discussion thereof<sup>29</sup>. However, the resolution and a motion for consideration of a Government Bill seeking to replace that Ordinance may be discussed together. Earlier, when this was permitted by the Speaker, the resolution after discussion, was put to vote first; because of the view that if the resolution was adopted, it would mean disapproval of the Ordinance and the Bill would automatically fall through<sup>30</sup>. If the resolution was negatived, the motion for consideration of the Bill was then put to vote and further stages of the Bill were proceeded with<sup>31</sup>.

However, in the year 2002, in view of the opinion of the Ministry of Law, it was decided that that the motion for consideration of the Bill seeking to replace an Ordinance might be proceeded with even if the Statutory Resolution seeking disapproval of the Ordinance was adopted by the House<sup>32</sup>.

Similarly, a resolution seeking disapproval of an Ordinance and a motion on a cognate matter can be discussed together<sup>33</sup>. Where no Bill seeking to replace an 1969 promulgated on 30 December 1969. As the summons for the next session had not been issued, the notices were not treated valid and they were advised in writing to give fresh notices after the issue of summons.

29. On 8 August 1957, a member gave notice of a resolution seeking disapproval of the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1957. Since notice of the resolution was given under a constitutional provision, the Speaker decided that such statutory resolutions should be treated differently from the ones tabled by private members in the ordinary course under Rule 28 and time for discussion of statutory resolutions should be provided by Government.
30. During the Tenth Lok Sabha, a Statutory Resolution seeking disapproval of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Ordinance, 1991 (No. 4 of 1991) promulgated by the President on 2 March 1991 was adopted on 5 August 1991 in Rajya Sabha and the Bill to replace the said Ordinance which was under consideration in the Rajya Sabha fell through.

In the Eleventh Lok Sabha, a Statutory Resolution seeking disapproval of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections (Amendment) Ordinance, 1997 (No. 13 of 1997) promulgated by the President on 5 June 1997 was adopted on 7 August 1997 in the Rajya Sabha and the Bill seeking to replace the said Ordinance which was under consideration in the Rajya Sabha fell through. The Bill was again introduced in the Lok Sabha on 12 August 1997 as the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections (Second Amendment) Bill, 1997.

31. L.S. Deb., 22-11-1957, cc. 1894-97; 21-8-1974, c. 283; 22-8-1974; cc. 320-21.
32. After prorogation of Eighth Session of Thirteenth Lok Sabha, the Prevention of Terrorism (Second) Ordinance, 2001 (No. 12 of 2001) was promulgated by the President on 30 December 2001. The Prevention of Terrorism Bill, 2002, which sought to replace the ordinance, was introduced in Lok Sabha on 8 March 2002. The Bill was passed by Lok Sabha after the Statutory Resolution seeking disapproval of the ordinance was negatived by Lok Sabha on 18 March 2002. While the Statutory Resolution was yet to be discussed in Rajya Sabha, a reference was made by Lok Sabha Secretariat to the Ministry of Law to furnish opinion as to whether the Bill might be treated as rejected by the other House within the meaning of article 108(1)(a) of the Constitution in case the Statutory Resolution seeking disapproval of the ordinance is adopted by Rajya Sabha. The Ministry of Law opined that there was no specific provision in the Constitution dealing with the above situation. If, however, the Statutory Resolution and the Bill were taken up separately, after the resolution was rejected, the Bill would require to be taken up separately and voted upon. Whether the two should be taken up together or otherwise was for the Chairman to decide. On 21 March 2002, after the Statutory Resolution was adopted by Rajya Sabha, the motion for consideration of the Bill, as passed by Lok Sabha, was put to vote and negatived. The Bill was accordingly treated as rejected by Rajya Sabha.
33. L.S. Deb., 8-8-1960, cc. 1391-1536; and 9-8-1960, cc. 1662-1800.

Ordinance is forthcoming, the resolution seeking disapproval of the Ordinance can be discussed separately<sup>34</sup>.

A resolution seeking to disapprove an Ordinance cannot bar the progress of a Government Bill which seeks to replace that Ordinance<sup>35</sup>, and such a resolution becomes infructuous after the Ordinance has been withdrawn<sup>36</sup>. The fact that an Ordinance has been challenged in a court of law and the court issued a rule nisi to Government is no bar to taking up the Bill seeking to replace that Ordinance<sup>37</sup>.

As regards the scope of amendments to a resolution seeking disapproval of an Ordinance, it has been ruled that an amendment having the effect of approving the Ordinance is not permissible. Further, an amendment is out of order if it contains argument.

Ordinance for Appropriation out of the Consolidated Fund

An Ordinance for the appropriation of any money out of the Consolidated Fund is invalid if the related Demands for Grants have not been placed before the Lok Sabha and considered and assented to by the House<sup>38</sup>.

According to existing practice, for the appropriation of money for a State, the administration of which has been taken over by the President under a Proclamation issued by him, the budget for that State, is not certified by Ordinance. The underlying principle is that no money can be spent out of the Consolidated Fund without the sanction of the Parliament. Hence if a contingency arises, for passing an Appropriation Bill for such a State when the Rajya Sabha is not in session, that House is specially summoned for this purpose<sup>39</sup>.

However, in respect of the State of Meghalaya, which was under the President's rule, Ordinances seeking appropriation of moneys were promulgated without prior approval of the related Demands<sup>40</sup> by Lok Sabha.

Proclamations

The Constitution contemplates three types of emergencies and, correspondingly, three kinds of Proclamations which the President can issue:

34. The Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1960—L.S. Deb., 9-8-1960, c. 1794.
  35. L.S. Deb., 24-5-1957, cc. 1890-1900.
  36. Ibid., 11-9-1957, cc. 13269-81.
  37. Case of the Metal Corporation of India (Acquisition of Undertaking) Bill—L.S. Deb., 22-11-1965, cc. 3125-29; case of the Indian Railways (Amendment) Bill, 1968—L.S. Deb., 15-11-1968, cc. 270-71.
  38. L.S. Deb., 4-3-1961, cc. 2929-33; 6-3-1961, c. 3237; 10-3-1961, cc. 4188-92; 13-3-1961, cc. 4459-60, 4462; 14-3-1961, cc. 4779-80.
  39. This was done in the case of the Orissa Appropriation (Vote on Account) Bill—L.S. Deb., 27-3-1961, cc. 7339-50; 28-3-1961, cc. 7769-70; R.S. Deb., 27-3-1961, c. 33; 30-3-1961, cc. 375-89.
  40. The State of Meghalaya was brought under the President's rule vide Proclamation dated 19 March, 2009. Two Ordinances viz., (i) The Meghalaya Appropriation (Vote on Account) Ordinance, 2009; and (ii) The Meghalaya Appropriation Ordinance, 2009 were promulgated by the President on 31 March 2009. However, Bill replacing the above Ordinances were not introduced in Lok Sabha as the Proclamation was revoked by a subsequent Proclamation dated 13 May 2009.

Proclamation of emergency arising out of war, external aggression or armed rebellion<sup>41</sup>;

Proclamation issued on the failure of constitutional machinery in the States<sup>42</sup>; and Proclamation arising out of threat to financial stability or credit of India or of any part of the territory thereof.<sup>43</sup>

Proclamation of Emergency

If the President is satisfied that a grave emergency exists whereby the security of India or of any part of the territory thereof is threatened whether by war or external aggression or armed rebellion, he may, by proclamation, make a declaration to that effect in respect of the whole of India or of such part of the territory thereof as may be specified in the Proclamation<sup>44</sup>. The President's satisfaction about the existence of emergency need not be stated in the Proclamation. In this connection, the Supreme Court observed:

Article 352 requires only a declaration of emergency threatening the security of India by one of the causes mentioned. The power to make the declaration can no doubt be exercised only when the President is satisfied about the emergency, but the article does not require the President's satisfaction to be stated in the declaration<sup>45</sup>.

The only condition precedent for the President to issue a Proclamation of Emergency or a Proclamation varying one in operation is that the decision of the Union Cabinet in that behalf must be communicated to the President in writing before the issue of the Proclamation<sup>46</sup>.

The Proclamation of Emergency may be made before the actual occurrence of war or of any external aggression or armed rebellion if the President is satisfied that there is imminent danger thereto<sup>47</sup>.

A Proclamation of Emergency may be varied or revoked by a subsequent Proclamation<sup>48</sup>.

41. Art. 352.

42. Art. 356.

43. Art. 360.

44. Articles 352 and 356 shall apply to the State of Jammu and Kashmir with such modifications as are contained in sub-clause (13) of Clause 2 of the Constitution (Application to Jammu and Kashmir) Order, 1954.

45. P.L. Lakhanpal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 243.

Before enactment of the Constitution (Forty-fourth) Amendment Act, 1978, the satisfaction of the President as to the declaration of emergency under article 352 was final and conclusive and the courts had no jurisdiction to entertain any question on any ground regarding the validity of the issue of or continuance in operation of a Proclamation of Emergency. S. 38(d) of the said Act omitted the then existing art. 352(5) which precluded judicial review.

46. Art. 352(3).

48. Art. 352(2). The Proclamation issued on 26 October 1962, was revoked on 10 January 1968.

The power of the President to declare emergency includes the power to issue different Proclamations on different grounds, being war or external aggression or armed rebellion or imminent danger of war or external aggression or armed rebellion, whether or not there is a Proclamation already in existence and in operation<sup>49</sup>.

A Proclamation, after it is issued, has to be laid before each House of Parliament<sup>50</sup> and except in the case of a Proclamation revoking a previous Proclamation, it ceases to operate at the expiration of one month unless before the expiration of that period it has been approved by resolutions of both Houses of Parliament<sup>51</sup>. If any such Proclamation is issued at a time when the Lok Sabha has been dissolved or its dissolution takes place during the period of one month referred to above, and if a resolution approving the proclamation has been passed by the Rajya Sabha, but no resolution with respect to such Proclamation has been passed by the Lok Sabha before the expiration of that period, the Proclamation ceases to operate at the expiration of thirty days from the date on which the Lok Sabha first sits after its reconstitution, unless before the expiration of the period of thirty days a resolution approving the Proclamation has been passed by the Lok Sabha<sup>52</sup>.

A Proclamation so approved shall, unless revoked, cease to operate on the expiration of a period of six months from the date of passing of the second of the resolutions approving the Proclamation.

If and so often resolutions approving the continuance in force of such a Proclamation is passed by the Houses of Parliament, the Proclamation shall, unless revoked, continue in force for a further period of six months from the date on which it would otherwise have ceased to operate. In case the dissolution of the Lok Sabha takes place during the period of six months and a resolution approving continuance in force of a Proclamation has been passed by the Rajya Sabha, the Proclamation shall cease to operate at the expiration of thirty days from the date on which the Lok Sabha first sits after its reconstitution unless before the expiration of the period

49. Art 352(9).

50. Art. 352(4). The Proclamation of Emergency issued on 26 October 1962, was laid on the Table of both Houses of Parliament on 8 November 1962, the first day of the commencement of the session of both the Houses—L.S. Deb., 8-11-1962, c. 97; R.S. Deb., 8-11-1962, c. 190. The Statutory Resolution seeking approval of Proclamation was adopted by Lok Sabha on 14 November 1962.

Following Pakistan's attack on India on 3 December 1971, a Proclamation of Emergency was issued on that day. It was laid on the Table of both Houses of Parliament on 4 December 1971. The Statutory Resolution seeking approval of proclamation was adopted by Lok Sabha on 4 December 1971. The Proclamation of Emergency issued on 25 June 1975, was laid on the Table of both Houses of Parliament on 21 July 1975 and Statutory Resolution seeking approval of Proclamation was adopted by Lok Sabha on 23 July 1975.

52. Art. 352(4), Proviso; L.S. Deb., 8-11-1962, c. 196; 14-11-1962, c. 1672; R.S. Deb., 8-11-1962, c. 196; 13-11-1962, c. 993; L.S. Deb., 4-12-1971, c. 37; R.S. Deb., 4-12-1971, c. 46; 22-7-1975, c. 124; L.S. Deb., 23-7-1975, c. 40.

of thirty days, a resolution approving the continuance in force of the Proclamation has also been passed by the Lok Sabha<sup>53</sup>.

The resolutions for approval of or for further continuance in force of a Proclamation of Emergency may be passed by either House of Parliament only by a majority of the total membership of that House and by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members present and voting in that House<sup>54</sup>.

When a notice in writing of a resolution seeking disapproval of a Proclamation or its continuance in force, signed by not less than one-tenth of the total number of members of the Lok Sabha has been given to the Speaker, if the Lok Sabha is in session, or, to the President, if it is not in session, a special sitting of the Lok Sabha shall be held within fourteen days from the date of receipt of the notice for considering the resolution<sup>55</sup>.

A Proclamation of Emergency shall be revoked by the President if the Lok Sabha passes a resolution disapproving the Proclamation or its continuance in force<sup>56</sup>.

Effects of Proclamation of Emergency: While a Proclamation of Emergency is in operation, the executive power of the Union extends to the giving of directions to any State as to the manner in which the executive power thereof is to be exercised; and the power of Parliament to make laws with respect to any matter, during the period of Emergency, includes the power to make laws conferring powers and imposing duties, or authorising the conferring of powers and the imposition of duties, upon the Union or officers and authorities of the Union as respects that matter, notwithstanding that it is one which is not enumerated in the Union List.

Where a Proclamation of Emergency is in operation only in any part of the territory of India, the executive power of the Union to give directions and the power of Parliament to make laws shall also extend to any State other than a State in which or in any part of which the Proclamation is in operation if, and insofar as, the security of India or any part of the territory thereof is threatened by activities in or in relation to the part of the territory of India in which the Proclamation is in operation<sup>57</sup>.

The President may, while a Proclamation of Emergency is in operation, by order direct that all or any of the provisions of the Constitution which provide for the distribution of revenues between the Union and the States<sup>58</sup> shall for such period, not extending in any case beyond the expiration of the financial year in which such Proclamation ceases to operate, as may be specified in the order, have effect subject to such exceptions or modifications as he thinks fit. Every such order has to be laid before each House of Parliament as soon as may be after it is made<sup>59</sup>.

53. Art. 352(5).

54. Art. 352(6).

55. Art. 352(8).

56. Art. 352(7).

57. Art. 353.

58. Arts. 268 to 279.

59. Art. 354. No such order has so far been issued by the President.

While a Proclamation of Emergency on account of war or external aggression is in operation, the State gets power to make any law or to take any executive action notwithstanding the provisions contained in article 19 guaranteeing certain fundamental rights to citizens. But any law so made, to the extent of the incompetency, ceases to have effect as soon as the Proclamation ceases to operate, except as respects things done or omitted to be done before the law so ceases to have effect<sup>60</sup>. During the Proclamation of Emergency, article 19 is suspended. But it does not authorise the taking of detrimental executive action during the emergency affecting the fundamental rights in article 19 without any legislative authority or in purported exercise of power conferred by any pre-emergency law which was invalid when enacted. Every act done by the Government or by its officers must, if it is to operate to the prejudice of any person, be supported by legislative authority<sup>61</sup>.

The President may, by order, declare that the right to move any court for the enforcement of such of the fundamental rights as may be mentioned in the order except the rights under articles 20 and 21, and all proceedings pending in any court for the enforcement of the rights so mentioned shall remain suspended for the period during which the Proclamation is in force or for such shorter period as may be specified in the order. Such an order may extend to the whole or any part of the territory of India.

However, where a Proclamation of Emergency is in operation only in a part of the territory of India, any such order does not extend to any other part of the territory of India unless the President, being satisfied that the security of India or any part of the territory thereof is threatened by activities in or in relation to the part of the territory of India in which the Proclamation is in operation, considers such extension to be necessary. Every such order has to be laid before each House of Parliament as soon as may be after it is made<sup>62</sup>.

60. Art. 358. The Defence of India Act, 1962—the Defence of India Rules, 1962, the Defence and Internal Security of India Act, 1971 and the Defence and Internal Security of India Rules, 1971, made under art. 358, imposed certain restrictions on the fundamental rights guaranteed in article 19. For effects of the Proclamation of Emergency, see State of Madhya Pradesh v. Thakur Bharat Singh, A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1170; Mohd. Yaqub v. State of Jammu and Kashmir, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 765; P. Venkateshamma v. State of Andhra Pradesh, A.I.R. 1976 Andhra Pradesh 1; Krishna Kumar Modi v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1976 Calcutta 26.

61. Bennett Coleman and Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 106; Shree Meenakshi Mills Ltd. v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 366; Sri Laxmi Touring Talkies v. The State of Karnataka, A.I.R. 1975 Karnataka 37; Partap Singh v. State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1975 Punjab and Haryana, 324.

For interpretation of articles 352 and 359 and validity of the order and the Defence of India Act, 1962, and rules framed thereunder, see the judgement of the Supreme Court in Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. The State of Punjab, A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 381.

In view of the above judgement of the Supreme Court, doubts arose as to the effect of an order made under article 359. To remove these doubts, a Bill—the Constitution (Eighteenth Amendment) Bill 1964, inserting a new clause in article 359, was introduced in the Lok Sabha on 24 April 1964. However, in view of the criticism of the Bill by members at the time of its introduction, Government decided not to proceed with the Bill—L.S. Deb., 28-4-1964.

During the continuance of the Proclamation of Emergency, the validity of an order suspending the right to move any court for enforcement of any of the fundamental rights cannot be challenged<sup>63</sup>.

While an Order suspending the right to move any court for the enforcement of any fundamental rights conferred by Part III of the Constitution except the rights under articles 20 and 21 is in operation, nothing in that Part conferring those rights restricts the power of the State to make any law or to take any executive action, which the State would, but for the provisions contained in that Part, be competent to make or to take, but any law so made, to the extent of the incompetency, ceases to have effect as soon as the order aforesaid ceases to operate, except as respects things done or omitted to be done before the law so ceases to have effect<sup>64</sup>.

The life of the Lok Sabha may, while a Proclamation of Emergency is in operation, be extended beyond its normal period by Parliament by law for a period not exceeding one year at a time and not extending in any case beyond a period of six months after the Proclamation has ceased to operate<sup>65</sup>.

Proclamation of Emergency in relation to Punjab

The Constitution (Fifty-ninth Amendment) Act, 1988, which came into force on 30 March 1988, inserted article 359A in the Constitution containing special provisions for issuing a Proclamation of Emergency in respect of Punjab. The Act empowered the President to issue a Proclamation of Emergency in respect of the whole or any part of Punjab if the integrity of India was threatened by internal disturbance in the whole or any part of Punjab. During the operation of a Proclamation of Emergency under the Act, the President was empowered to suspend all fundamental rights except the rights conferred by article 20. This provision was to remain in force for a period of two years from the commencement of the Act. However, this Act was repealed by the Constitution

65. Art. 83(2), Proviso.

While the Proclamations of Emergency issued on 3 December 1971 and 25 June 1975 were in operation:

- (i) The duration of the Fifth Lok Sabha, which was due to expire on 18 March 1976, was extended for a period of one year by the enactment of the House of the People (Extension of Duration) Act, 1976. The House of the People (Extension of Duration) Amendment Act, 1976, extended the duration of the Fifth Lok Sabha for a further period of one year, i.e. upto 18 March 1977. However, the Fifth Lok Sabha was dissolved on 18 January 1977.
- (ii) The duration of the Legislative Assembly of Kerala, which was in normal course to expire on 21 October 1975, was extended for a period of six months by the enactment of the Kerala State Legislative Assembly (Extension of Duration) Act, 1975; the duration of the Assembly was again extended for a further period of six months by the enactment of the Kerala Legislative Assembly (Extension of Duration) Amendment Act, 1976. The Kerala Legislative Assembly (Extension of Duration) Second Amendment Act, 1976 extended the duration of the Assembly for a further period of six months with effect from 22 October 1976. On 22 March 1977, the Assembly was dissolved and a new House, elected after the poll, was formally constituted on the same day.

(Sixty-third Amendment) Act, 1989 which received the assent of the President on 6 January 1990.

Proclamation on Failure of Constitutional Machinery in States

It is the duty of the Union to ensure that the government of every State is carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution<sup>66</sup>. If the President, on receipt of a report<sup>67</sup> from the Governor of a State or otherwise<sup>68</sup>, is satisfied that a situation has arisen in which the government of the State cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, the President may by Proclamation:—

66. Art. 355.

Under the Government of India Act, 1935, the Governor-General, in case of failure of the constitutional machinery of the Federation, could assume all or any of the powers vested in or exercisable by any federal body or authority vide section 45 of the Act. This section was not adopted by the India (Provisional Constitution Order), 1947. There is no such provision in the Constitution; the President has no power to suspend the constitutional machinery at the Union.

67. In the following cases the courts held that Governor's decision and report are not justiciable (Bijayananda Patnaik v. President of India, A.I.R. 1974 Orissa 52) and that the courts, could exercise minimal judicial review if the power was abused by the Executive, i.e., it was overtly mala fide exercise of power or exercise on irrelevant considerations (State of Rajasthan v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1361).

However, in S.R. Bommai v. Union of India (A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1931), the Supreme Court held that the exercise of power by the President under article 356(1) to issue Proclamation is justiciable and subject to judicial review at least to the extent of examining whether the conditions precedent to the issuance of the Proclamation have been satisfied or not. This examination will necessarily involve the scrutiny as to whether there existed material for the satisfaction of the President that a situation had arisen in which the Government of the State could not be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution. Although the sufficiency or otherwise of the material cannot be questioned, the legitimacy of inference drawn from such material is certainly open to judicial review.

Again, the Supreme Court in Rameshwar Prasad v. Union of India (A.I.R. 2006 S.C. 980) held that it is open to the court, in exercise of judicial review, to examine the question whether the Governor's report is based upon relevant material or not; whether it is made bona fide or not; and whether the facts have been duly verified or not.

68. On 30 April 1977, on the advice of the Union Council of Ministers, the Vice-President, acting as the President, signed nine Proclamations under article 356 of the Constitution dissolving the Legislative Assemblies of the States of Bihar, Haryana, Himachal Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa, Punjab, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal and placing them under President's Rule till the completion of fresh elections. This was the first time that the President had taken action on his own, that is, without waiting for the reports of the Governors concerned.

Earlier, the Union Government had suggested to the Chief Ministers of the nine States that they advise the respective Governors to dissolve the State Assemblies. The suggestion was not accepted. Instead, some States filed suits and injunction applications before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court, however, refused to interfere and on 29 April 1977, dismissed the suits and applications against the move to dissolve Legislative Assemblies.

On 17 February 1980, Proclamations were issued in respect of nine States, viz. Bihar, Haryana, Himachal Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa, Punjab, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal placing them under President's Rule. There was no mention of the report of the Governor having been received by the President.

assume to himself all or any of the functions of the Government of the State and all or any of the powers vested in or exercisable by the Governor or any body or authority in the State other than the Legislature of the State; declare that the powers of the Legislature of the State shall be exercisable by or under the authority of Parliament; and make such incidental and consequential provisions as appear to the President to be necessary or desirable for giving effect to the objects of the Proclamation, including provisions for suspending in whole or in part the operation of any provisions of the Constitution, relating to any body or authority in the State. (This, however, does not authorise the President to assume to himself any of the powers vested in or exercisable by a High Court, or to suspend in whole or in part the operation of any provisions of the Constitution relating to High Courts)<sup>69</sup>.

Any such Proclamation may be revoked or varied by a subsequent Proclamation as in the case of a Proclamation of Emergency<sup>70</sup>.

The Constitution (Thirty-eighth Amendment) Act, 1975 which inserted clause 5 in article 356 had provided: "Notwithstanding anything in this Constitution, the satisfaction of the President mentioned in clause (1) shall be final and conclusive and shall not be questioned in any court on any ground." However, the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Act, 1978 substituted clause 5 and provided that a resolution with respect to the continuance in force of a proclamation shall not be passed by either House of Parliament unless a proclamation is in operation at the time of passing of such resolution and the Election Commission certifies that such continuance is necessary on account of difficulties in holding general elections to the Legislative Assembly of the State concerned. The omission means that judicial review of the satisfaction of the President mentioned in clause (1) is now possible<sup>71</sup>.

The power of the President to declare the failure of the constitutional machinery in States is not 'Executive action' of the Government of India under article 77(1) of the Constitution. But that does not mean that the President acts wholly independent of the Cabinet. It is the duty of the Council of Ministers to aid and advice the Similarly, on 31 January 1991 and 6 December 1992, Proclamations were issued in respect of the States of Tamil Nadu and Uttar Pradesh placing them under President's Rule. There was no mention of any report of the Governor having been received by the President.

The Supreme Court in Rameshwar Prasad v. Union of India, supra, held that it is permissible to reach a conclusion that the Government of the State cannot be carried on in accordance with the Constitution even without the report of the Governor in case the President has other relevant material for reaching the satisfaction contemplated by Art.356. The expression 'or otherwise' is of wide amplitude.

70. Art. 356 (2). Between 1951 and December 2013, President's Rule was proclaimed on 122 occasions in States and Union Territories. Also see for details, President's Rule in the States and Union Territories, Lok Sabha Secretariat, New Delhi, 2010.

71. S.R. Bommai v. Union of India, supra and Rameshwar Prasad v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1931.

President on every matter relating to the discharge of his function<sup>72</sup> and in issuing the Proclamation for assuming to himself the functions of the Government of a State, the President is bound to act on the aid and advice of the Council of Ministers<sup>73</sup>.

Thus, the power of the President to issue such a Proclamation is not a discretionary power; he must act as advised by the Council of Ministers to his satisfaction that a situation has arisen in which the Government of a State cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution<sup>74</sup>. Further, there is no provision in the Constitution which enjoins upon the President to consult Parliament, when it is in session, before issuing such a Proclamation<sup>75</sup>.

The Proclamations issued by the President may contain an express provision that the Legislative Assembly of the State concerned is dissolved<sup>76</sup>. In cases where there are still some chances for the formation of a Government, the Assembly is not dissolved but kept 'in a state of suspended animation'<sup>77</sup>. If subsequently it is considered necessary to dissolve the Assembly, another Proclamation varying the former Proclamation is issued by the President, or he may issue an Order dissolving the Assembly<sup>78</sup>. The revocation of the Proclamation, where the Legislative Assembly of the State has been dissolved, follows fresh elections in the concerned State.

(1) of article 356. The dissolution of the Assembly prior to the approval of the proclamation by the Parliament under cl. (3) of the said article will be per se invalid.

78. For instance, on 15 April 1968, the President issued a Proclamation regarding U.P. varying the Proclamation issued on 25 February 1968, which had not contained the provision for the dissolution of the Assembly.

In the case of the State of Mysore, the President, under art. 174(2) (b), read with the Proclamation, dated 27 March 1971, issued an Order on 14-4-1971 dissolving the Legislative Assembly.

By a Proclamation issued on 23 January 1971, the President dissolved the Legislative Assembly of Orissa which had been kept in a state of suspended animation by the Proclamation issued on 11 January 1971. The Gujarat Legislative Assembly, which had been kept in a state of suspended animation by the Presidential Proclamation issued on 9 February 1974, was dissolved on 15 March 1974. In case of Nagaland, the President, in exercise of the power vested in him under art. 174(2) (b), read with the Proclamation dated 22 March 1975, issued under art. 356, dissolved the Nagaland Legislative Assembly. Similarly, the Punjab Legislative Assembly, which had been kept in a State of suspended animation by the Proclamation issued on 11 May 1987, was dissolved on 6 March 1988 by the President in exercise of the power vested in him under article 174 (2)(b), read with the Proclamation dated 11 May 1987.

There is nothing unconstitutional if the Legislative Assembly of a State which has been duly constituted on the issue of a notification by the Election Commission is dissolved by a Proclamation even before the Assembly has been summoned to meet<sup>79</sup>.

In certain cases, the Governor dissolved the Legislative Assembly of the State concerned before sending the report to the President that the Government of the State cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution<sup>80</sup>.

Every Proclamation issued by the President has to be laid before each House of Parliament<sup>81</sup>. While laying a Proclamation on the Table, no obligation is cast on the Government to lay also a copy of the report of the Governor of the State concerned in cases where the President has acted on such report<sup>82</sup>. However, a summary of the Governor's report or the Governor's report in extenso has generally been laid on the Table.

The life of a Proclamation, unless revoked earlier by the President, is two months<sup>83</sup>. There is no provision under which Parliament can cut it short<sup>84</sup>. It is only if the Proclamation is to continue in force beyond two months that both Houses of Parliament have to approve of it by resolutions adopted by simple majority<sup>85</sup>.

It has been held that an amendment to the resolution seeking to approve the President's Proclamation is out of order if the amendment is negative in character<sup>86</sup>

79. For details, see Chapter IX—Summoning, and Prorogation of the Houses of Parliament and Dissolution of Lok Sabha.

80. Before the issue of a Proclamation by the President, on 4 August 1970, assuming to himself all functions of the Government of Kerala, the Governor of the State had issued on 26 June 1970, under article 174(2) (b), a notification dissolving the Legislative Assembly.

On 13 June 1971, the Governor of Punjab issued an Order dissolving the Legislative Assembly. Later, on 15 June the President issued a Proclamation assuming to himself all functions of the Government of that State.

In the case of West Bengal, the Proclamation was issued by the President on 29 June 1971, after the Assembly was dissolved by the Governor by an Order under article 174(2) (b), on 25 June 1971.

In the case of Kerala also, the Proclamation was issued by the President on 5 December 1979, though the Assembly was dissolved by the Governor earlier on 30 November 1979.

As soon as the President issues a proclamation under article 356(1), the Lok Sabha Secretariat asks in writing for a copy of it and ascertains from the Ministry of Home Affairs the date on which the proclamation is to be laid on the Table of the House. On receipt of the copy, necessary action is taken for laying it on the Table by the Secretariat. After the proclamation has been laid on the Table, it is ascertained from the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs the date on which a resolution for approval of the proclamation is to be brought before the House—for detailed procedure see Instructional Order No. 1282, 18-8-2008, L.B, L.S.S.

or is beyond the scope of the resolution<sup>87</sup>, or is contradictory to the text of the resolution<sup>88</sup>. An amendment seeking to give conditional approval to the Proclamation is also inadmissible<sup>89</sup>.

The House may either adopt or not adopt a resolution which seeks to approve the Proclamation. The resolution before the House cannot take any other form. As such, no amendments/substitute motions can be moved to such a resolution<sup>90</sup>. A resolution seeking disapproval of the Proclamation is inadmissible as there is no provision under article 356 for such a resolution.

A Proclamation approved by both Houses of Parliament, unless revoked, ceases to operate on the expiration of a period of six months from the date of issue of the Proclamation. However, if and so often as a resolution approving the Proclamation is passed by both Houses of Parliament, the Proclamation unless revoked, continues in force for a further period of six months from the date on which it would otherwise normally have ceased to operate but no such Proclamation can in any case remain in force for more than three years. However, in the case of the States of Punjab and Jammu and Kashmir, it was extended beyond three years<sup>91</sup>. If the dissolution of the Lok Sabha takes place during any such period of six months and a resolution approving the continuance in force of such Proclamation is passed by the Rajya Sabha during the said period, the Proclamation ceases to operate at the expiration of thirty days from the date on which the Lok Sabha first sits after its reconstitution unless before the expiration of the said period of thirty days a resolution approving the continuance in force of the Proclamation has also been passed by the Lok Sabha<sup>92</sup>.

A resolution, of which a notice is given by a member, seeking disapproval of the continuance in force of a Proclamation for a further period of six months is inadmissible.

Where the Proclamation declares that the powers of the Legislature of the State shall be exercisable by or under the authority of Parliament, it is competent—

The Proclamation remained in force till 25 February 1992 when it was revoked as a popular Government came into being after the Assembly elections.

In the case of the Proclamation issued by the President on 18 July 1990 in respect of the State of Jammu and Kashmir, the period of three years was construed as four years, five years, six years and seven years, respectively, by making four successive amendments to the Constitution (Application to Jammu and Kashmir) Order, 1954 through Presidential notifications. The Proclamation remained in force till 9 August 1996 when it was revoked as a popular Government came into being after the Assembly elections.

for Parliament to confer on the President the powers of the Legislature of the State to make laws, and to authorise the President to delegate, subject to such conditions as he may think fit to impose, the power so conferred to any other authority to be specified by him in that behalf; for Parliament, or for the President or other authority in whom such power to make laws is so vested, to make laws conferring powers and imposing duties, or authorising the conferring of powers and the imposition of duties, upon the Union or officers and authorities thereof; for the President to authorise, when the Lok Sabha is not in Session, expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of the State pending the sanction of such expenditure by Parliament<sup>93</sup>.

Approval of a Proclamation by both the Houses of Parliament is followed by an Act delegating certain powers to the President, including the power to make laws for the State concerned. The Act delegating powers to the President also provides that before making any law for the State, the President should, whenever he considers it practicable to do so, consult a parliamentary committee constituted for the purpose. Such a committee may include members of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha who at the time fill the seats allotted to the State concerned in the two Houses. Such laws, called the President's Acts, are required to be laid before both Houses of Parliament and Parliament has the power to amend these Acts within a period of thirty days after they are so laid<sup>94</sup>.

There may be a combined discussion on the resolution approving the Proclamation issued by the President in respect of a State and on the motion for consideration of the Bill for delegation of powers of the Legislature of that State<sup>95</sup>, or there may be combined discussion on such a resolution and on the Budget of the State in question<sup>96</sup>. In the latter case, after the combined discussion, the resolution is

94. A President's Act has to be laid on the Table even though the Proclamation has been revoked in the meantime.

In respect of one of the President's Acts, viz. The Punjab Security of the State Act, 1951, a resolution for amending the Act was adopted by the Provisional Parliament—see P. Deb., (II), 28-9-1951, c. 3748. These amendments were later incorporated in the Act.

In another instance, viz. The Kerala University (Amendment) Act 1966, a resolution for amending the Act was adopted by the Lok Sabha on 12 April 1966; the Rajya Sabha concurred with the Resolution on 12 May 1966. On receipt of a message from the Rajya Sabha, in this regard a copy of the resolution was forwarded to the Ministry concerned for necessary action—L.S. Deb., 12-4-1966, cc. 10626-655; *R.S. put to vote and after it is adopted, the Demands for Grants are disposed of<sup>97</sup>. A combined discussion has also been held on the resolution approving the Proclamation and on the motion admitted under Rule 189.

On 21 November 1967, a combined discussion was held on a motion moved by a member regarding non-rejection of the report of the Governor of Haryana recommending the issue of Proclamation and a statutory resolution approving the Proclamation issued by the President in relation to that State.

First the motion was moved by the member, and then the resolution by the Minister of Home Affairs. After the combined discussion, the motion and the resolution were put to the vote of the House in the same order<sup>98</sup>.

The Proclamations so far issued have declared that the powers of the Legislature of the State would be exercisable by or under the authority of Parliament. On account of this declaration:

Parliament has voted grants<sup>99</sup> and passed Appropriation Bills for the withdrawal of moneys from the Consolidated Fund of the States concerned; and the papers which by statutory obligation are required to be laid before the State Legislature have instead been laid before Parliament<sup>100</sup>.

The Budget of a State presented to the House in pursuance of a Proclamation issued by the President in respect of that State does not lapse and further discussion thereon can be resumed if, soon after revocation of that Proclamation a fresh Proclamation is issued in respect of that State<sup>101</sup>.

Any law made in exercise of the power of the Legislature of the State by Parliament or the President or other authority which Parliament or the President or such other authority would not, but for the issue of a Proclamation under article 356, have been competent to make shall, after the Proclamation has ceased to operate, continue in force until altered or repealed or amended by a competent Legislature or other authority<sup>102</sup>.

Proclamation of Financial Emergency

If the President is satisfied that a situation has arisen whereby the financial stability or credit of India or of any part thereof is threatened, he may, by Proclamation, make a declaration of financial emergency<sup>103</sup>. A Proclamation so issued shall be laid before each House of Parliament and may be revoked or varied by a subsequent Proclamation.

It shall cease to operate at the expiration of two months, unless before the expiration of that period it has been approved by resolutions of both Houses of Parliament. The Proclamation approved by Parliament shall be in operation until it is revoked by the President<sup>104</sup>. A Proclamation issued subsequently by the President revoking or varying the Proclamation of financial emergency in operation is not, however, required under the Constitution to be laid before each House of Parliament.

When a Proclamation of financial emergency is in operation, the executive authority of the Union shall extend to the giving of directions to any State to observe such canons of financial propriety as may be specified in the directions, and to the giving of such other directions as the President may deem necessary and adequate for the purpose.

Giving the reasons for the incorporation of the provisions relating to financial emergency in the Constitution, Dr. B.R. Ambedkar observed: "having regard to the present economic and financial situation in this country there can hardly be any Member of this Assembly who would dispute the necessity of some such provision as is embodied in this new article 280A and I, therefore, do not propose to spend any time on giving any justification for the inclusion of this article in our Draft Constitution. All that I propose to say is this, that this article more or less follows the pattern of what is called the National Recovery Act of the United States passed in 1930 or thereabout, which gave the power to the President to make similar provisions in order to remove the difficulties, both economic and financial, that had overtaken the American people as a result of the great depression from which they were suffering. The reason why, for instance, we have thought it necessary to include such a provision in the Constitution is because we know that under the American Constitution within a very short time the legislation passed by the President was challenged in the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court declared the whole of that legislation to be unconstitutional, with the result that after that declaration of the Supreme Court, the President can hardly do anything which he wanted to do under the provisions of the National Recovery Act. A similar fate perhaps might overwhelm our President if he were to grapple with a similar financial and economic emergency. In order to prevent any such difficulty we thought it was much better to make an express provision in the Constitution itself and that is the reason why this article has been brought forth."—C.A. Deb., Vol. X, p. 361.

The provisions in article 360 shall not apply to the State of Jammu and Kashmir in view of sub-clause (13) of clause 2 of the Constitution (Application to Jammu and Kashmir Order) 1954.

There has, however, been no occasion so far to make use of the emergency provisions under this article.

Before enactment of the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Act, 1978, the provisions regarding revocation, duration, etc. applicable to a Proclamation of emergency applied to a Proclamation of financial emergency [art. 360(2) before substitution]. Further, the satisfaction of the President as to the declaration of a financial emergency was final and conclusive. Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain any question on any ground regarding the validity of the issue of or continuance in operation of a Proclamation of financial emergency [art. 360(5)] before omission. (S. 42 of the said Act substituted clause 2 of art 360 by a new clause and omitted clause 5 thereof).

Under any such direction, a State may be required to reduce salaries and allowances of all or any class of persons serving in connection with the affairs of that State.

All money or financial Bills passed by the State Legislature may be required to be reserved for the consideration of the President.

It shall also be competent for the President during such financial emergency to issue directions for the reduction of salaries and allowances of all or any class of persons serving in connection with the affairs of the Union, including the Judges of the Supreme Court and the High Courts<sup>105</sup>.

CHAPTER XXIV

Subordinate Legislation

The expression ‘subordinate legislation’ means the act of making statutory instruments by a body subordinate to the Legislature and in exercise of the power, within specific limits, conferred by the Legislature. The term also connotes and covers the statutory instruments themselves.

Legislation is either supreme or subordinate. The former is that which proceeds from the supreme or sovereign power in the State, and which is therefore incapable of being repealed, annulled or controlled by any other legislative authority. Subordinate legislation is that which proceeds from any authority other than the sovereign power, and is, therefore, dependent for its continued existence and validity on some superior or supreme authority. The idea is to supplement Acts of Supreme Legislative Body by prescribing detailed rules required for their operation<sup>1</sup>.

When a legislative body passes an Act, it has exercised its legislative function. The essentials of such function are the determination of the legislative policy and its formulation as a rule of conduct. These essentials are the characteristics of a Legislature itself. After a Law is made by the Legislature, it is clear that every detail for working it out and for carrying the enactment into operation and effect, may be done by the Legislature or may be left to another subordinate agency or to some executive officer. While this is sometimes loosely described as a ‘delegation’ of legislative power, in essence, it is different from delegation of legislative power which means a determination of the legislative policy and formulation of the same as a rule of conduct<sup>2</sup>. Explaining the meaning of the expressions “delegated legislation” and “delegating legislative power”, Fazl Ali, J. in Delhi Laws Act case observed:

... the expressions “delegated legislation” and “delegating legislative power” are sometimes used in a loose sense, and sometimes in a strict sense. These expressions have been used in the loose sense or popular sense in the various treatises or reports dealing with the so called delegated legislation... There can be no doubt that if the Legislature completely abdicates its functions and sets up a parallel Legislature transferring all its power to it, that would undoubtedly be a real instance of delegation of its power. In other words, there will be delegation in the strict sense if legislative power with all its attributes is transferred to another authority<sup>3</sup>.

In a modern Welfare State, governmental activity has pervaded almost every field of human endeavour, thus, necessitating enactment of multifarious laws to regulate this ever-widening activity. The Legislature does not have enough time to deliberate upon, discuss and approve all the regulatory measures required to implement the enacted law. Moreover, law-making has now become a complicated and technical matter, and law has to be flawless in technical details.

In the nature of things, what the Legislature does, and can do, is to lay down the policy and purpose of any legislation in hand, leaving it to the Executive to frame, in conformity with those principles, formal and procedural details of that measure in the form of 'orders'<sup>4</sup>.

Emphasizing the necessity of subordinate legislation, the Supreme Court in Gwalior Rayon Mills Mfg. (Wvg.) Co. Ltd. v. Asstt. Commissioner of Sales Tax observed:

Most of the modern socio-economic legislations passed by the Legislature lay down the guiding principles and the legislative policy. The Legislatures because of limitation imposed upon by the time factor hardly go into matters of detail. Provision is, therefore, made for delegated legislation to obtain flexibility, elasticity, expedition and opportunity for experimentation. The practice of empowering the executive to make subordinate legislation within a prescribed sphere has evolved out of practical necessity and pragmatic needs of modern welfare State<sup>5</sup>.

This power of delegation is a constituent element of the legislative power as a whole<sup>6</sup>. So long as the Legislature indicates in the operative provisions of the statute the policy and purpose of the enactment, the mere fact that the legislation is skeletal or the fact that a discretion is left to those entrusted with administering the law, is no basis for a contention that there has been excessive delegation of legislative power, if the power or discretion has been conferred in a manner which is legal and constitutional<sup>7</sup>.

On the basis of judicial pronouncements, it may be taken as an established law now in India, that the Legislature is not competent to delegate to the executive or any other body its essential legislative function, namely, the determination of the legislative policy and its formulation, as a rule of conduct<sup>8</sup>. But it has been conceded that the Legislature can take the assistance of other bodies in subsidiary matters and that the cases in which such assistance can be taken would fall broadly into two types of legislations known as conditional legislation and ancillary or subordinate legislation<sup>9</sup>.

As to the meaning of conditional legislation, it may be broadly described as legislation, the operation of which is conditional upon the decision of a specified authority, as distinguished from legislation which is absolute and comes into operation of its own force and independently of the will of any other authority. In this connection, it has been observed:

In a conditional legislation, the law is full and complete when it leaves the legislative chamber, but the operation of the law is made dependent upon the fulfilment of a condition, and what is delegated to an outside body is the authority to determine, by the exercise of its own judgment, whether or not the condition has been fulfilled<sup>10</sup>.

As regards subordinate or ancillary legislation, it refers to cases in which the Legislature lays down the policy in more or less general terms and confers on an extraneous authority the power to make rules and regulations to carry out the legislative policy. It is open to the Legislature to formulate the policy as broadly and with as little or as much details as it thinks proper and it may delegate the rest of its work to a subordinate authority who will work out the details within the framework of that policy<sup>11</sup>. In this regard, Mukherjea, J. in Delhi Laws Act case observed:

Delegation of legislative authority could be permissible but only as ancillary to, or in aid of the exercise of law-making powers by the proper Legislature, and not as a means to be used by the latter to relieve itself of its own responsibility or essential duties by devolving the same on some other agent or machinery. A constitutional power may be held to imply a power of delegation of authority which is necessary to effect its purpose; and to this extent delegation of a power may be taken to be implicit in the exercise of that power<sup>12</sup>.

The principle enunciated above has been stressed by the Supreme Court in a number of other cases decided after the Delhi Laws Act case. For instance, in M/s. Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. v. Workmen of M/s. Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd., the Supreme Court observed:

The legal position as regards the limitation of this power is, however, no longer in doubt. The delegation of legislative power is permissible only when the legislative policy and principle are adequately laid down and the delegate is only empowered to carry out the subsidiary policy within the guidelines laid down by the Legislature. The Legislature, it must be borne in mind, cannot abdicate its authority and cannot pass on to some other body the obligation and the responsibility imposed on it by the Constitution. It can only utilise other bodies or authorities for the purpose of working out the details within the essential principles laid down by it. In each case, therefore, it has to be seen if there is delegation of the essential legislative function or if it is merely a case in which some authority or body other than the Legislature is empowered to work out the subsidiary and ancillary details within the essential guidelines, policy and principles, laid down by the legislative wing of the Government<sup>13</sup>.

The “subordinateness” in subordinate or ancillary legislation refers to the nature of legislation itself which is delegated, and not only to the subordinate character of the agency which is entrusted with the power to legislate. Hence, so far as legislative policy is concerned it must be determined by the Legislature itself and it is only the task of working out the policy by appropriate rules and regulations that can be delegated to a subordinate agency<sup>14</sup>.

In recent years an increasing use of the technique of sub-delegation has been resorted to in India. Sub-delegation takes place when the rule-making authority delegates either to itself or to some other subordinate agency a further power to issue rules or directions or other instruments of a legislative character. The process may be repeated with the result that law-making may also take place at four or five removes from the original enabling Act<sup>15</sup>.

Though framed by the executive but under the specific authority delegated to it by Parliament, the rules, regulations, etc. (hereinafter referred to as ‘orders’) have the force of law and the same binding power as any provision of the principal enactment. In conferring this authority upon a subordinate agency, Parliament does not abdicate its powers, for it can at any time disable the agency it had created, set up another, or take the matter in its own hands.

Control over Subordinate Legislation

The major problem of subordinate legislation is not whether it is necessary but how this process can be reconciled with democratic consultation, scrutiny and control. The Lok Sabha exercises this scrutiny and control by asserting itself at any one or all of the following stages:

when the legislative measure in the form of a Bill delegating the powers is under consideration of the House, the scope and character of these orders as well as their purpose can be debated, precisely defined and limited<sup>16</sup>; or

16. For example, on 8 May 1973, during further consideration of the North Eastern Hill University Bill, 1973, certain members raised some points regarding the scope of delegation of legislative powers sought to be made through the Bill. Giving his ruling on 9 May 1973, the Speaker said that unlike the earlier Central Universities Acts, the Bill in question had not provided for the

when the orders themselves are proposed or made, the Lok Sabha may specify that they shall be laid in draft or final form for Parliament to approve or annul them; or after the orders are made, the House may revoke or vary them by subsequent legislation or question their propriety or adequacy through the machinery of questions or motions in the House; and above all, through the medium of the Committee on Subordinate Legislation<sup>17</sup>.

All orders made under statutory authority by executive or administrative agencies are, moreover, subject to examination by courts at the instance of a third party on the plea of ultra vires.

Validity of a Rule, whether it is declared to have effect as if enacted in the Act or otherwise, is always open to challenge on the ground that it is unauthorised<sup>18</sup>.

In order to be valid, subordinate legislation must be intra vires of the statute, which authorized the making of the orders by the executive and should not violate any provision of the Constitution. Further, the orders made under a power conferred by the Legislature must be reasonable<sup>19</sup>. Moreover, to be valid or effective, these orders must be duly and properly published<sup>20</sup>.

Where the statute violates some provision of the Constitution, or instead of delegating the power of making orders the Legislature parts with its essential legislative functions to others, the statute itself becomes void, and with it, the orders made thereunder<sup>21</sup>.

As a corollary to the general rule of ultra vires, the power of subordinate legislation can be exercised only in the manner laid down in the parent Act and not in any other way.

constitution of various University authorities but had left it to be prescribed by the statutes. He observed that whenever any statute was issued, amended or discontinued, a copy thereof should be laid on the Table of the House for 30 days and it should be subject to modification by Parliament, or the Government should come forward after a year or so with an amendment to bring the Act at par with the other Central Universities Acts so that nothing was left purely to delegated legislation without parliamentary check. The Speaker felt that even at this stage, if the Minister of Education was prepared, the Bill might be placed before the Committee on Subordinate Legislation for a report on 16 May 1973 (the date on which the session was to end), but the time was short. Thereupon, the Minister of Education assured the House that when the Visitor framed the final statutes, Government would come forward with a motion for consideration thereof, so that the House would have an opportunity of making changes as it deemed necessary—L.S. Deb., 8-5-1973, cc. 314-23; 9-5-1973, cc. 198-200.

17. Rules 317-322. The Committee on Subordinate Legislation looks into every order made by the Executive to satisfy itself that there has been no executive excess or trespass in the exercise of its delegated rule-making power—For details, see Chapter XXX—‘Parliamentary Committees’, under Committee on Subordinate Legislation.

The court of law, as a general rule, will not give effect to the rules made, unless satisfied that all the conditions precedent to the validity of the rules have been fulfilled<sup>22</sup>.

Unlike legislation made by a sovereign Legislature, subordinate legislation made by a delegate cannot have retrospective effect unless the rule-making power in the concerned statute expressly or by necessary implication confers powers in this behalf<sup>23</sup>.

Laying of Orders on the Table

Where any order framed in pursuance of the Constitution or of the legislative functions delegated by an Act of Parliament to subordinate authority is required to be laid on the Table for a period specified in this behalf in the Constitution or the relevant statute, this specified period has to be completed before the Lok Sabha is adjourned sine die and later prorogued, unless otherwise provided in the Constitution or the relevant statute. If the specified period is not so completed, the order is required to be re-laid in the succeeding session or sessions until the said period is completed in one session<sup>24</sup>.

All notifications containing these rules, regulations, etc. are required to be laid on the Table within a period of fifteen days after their publication in the Gazette, if the Lok Sabha is in session. If it is not in session, they are to be laid on the Table as soon as possible, but in any case within fifteen days of the commencement of the next session<sup>25</sup>.

A notification once issued under an Act which contains provision for its being laid on the Table has to be so laid. It cannot be withheld merely on the ground that it is to be amended and will be laid on the Table in the amended form. In such cases, both copies have to be laid<sup>26</sup>.

Whenever there is undue delay in laying a notification on the Table, the Minister concerned is required to lay on the Table along with the

The Committee on Subordinate Legislation in their Second Report (5th Lok Sabha) approved a 'laying formula' for incorporation in all Bills providing for delegation of legislative power. According to this formula, every rule made by the Union Government under an Act shall be laid as soon as may be after it is made, before each House of Parliament while it is in session for a total period of 30 days which may be comprised in one session or in two or more successive sessions, and if before the expiry of the session immediately following the session or the successive sessions aforesaid, both Houses agree in making any modification to the rule or both Houses agree that the rule should not be made, the rule shall thereafter have effect only in such modified form or be of no effect, as the case may be; however, any such modification or annulment shall be without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done under that rule.

notification, a statement giving reasons for such delay. However, in exceptional circumstances, such statement may be laid afterwards<sup>27</sup>.

Normally orders are laid on the Table only after they have been notified in the Gazette. An exception has, however, been made in a case where there was no provision in the Constitution about orders being notified in the Gazette and the ground of 'security' was pleaded by the Minister as an argument for not publishing notification<sup>28</sup>.

Modification of Orders

After an order is laid on the Table, any member may give notice of his intention to move a motion or motions for modification of that order. "Modification" used in this and subsequent paragraphs of this Chapter includes "amendment" of the orders.

Even if the statute under which certain rules or regulations have been framed does not provide for their laying on the Table or for their modification by Parliament, the Lok Sabha has the inherent power to recommend modification to such statutory rules after they are laid on the Table by Government whether in compliance with a demand from the House or in reply to a question or suo motu<sup>29</sup> and a member is

27. On 10 May 1973, when the Iron and Steel (Control) Amendment Order, 1973, published in Gazette, dated 12 April 1973, was laid on the Table, a member raised a point of order regarding delay in laying the order on the Table and demanded that the Minister should explain reasons for delay. The Deputy Speaker observed that as recommended by the Committee on Subordinate Legislation, all statutory rules and orders should be laid on the Table within 15 days of their publication and as there was delay in the present case, a statement regarding delay should be laid as soon as possible. The statement explaining reasons for delay was accordingly laid on the Table on 11 May 1973.

The Examination of Masters and Mates (Amendment) Rules, 1973, published in the Gazette, dated 17 March 1973, were laid on the Table on 14 May 1973. A statement explaining the reasons for delay was laid on the Table on 16 May 1973.

28. For example, on 25 August 1970, the Cabinet Secretariat forwarded copies of the UPSC (Exemption from Consultation) Supply Regulations, 1970 framed under Proviso to art. 320(3) of the Constitution for being laid on the Table under art. 320(5) thereof. On enquiry regarding, date of publication of notification in the Gazette and application of Rule 319, the Ministry stated that on considerations of security it was not desirable to publish regulations in Gazette and there was also no provision in art. 320 for the publication of regulations in the Gazette. In view of the reasons given by the Cabinet Secretariat, the said regulations were laid on the Table on 28 August 1970, without their being published in the Gazette as required under Rule 319.

29. 1R (CSL-1LS), Para 10.

The Working Journalists (Fixation of Rates of Wages) Rules, 1958 framed under the Journalists (Fixation of Rates of Wages) Ordinance, 1958 were laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha on 22 August 1958 although the Ordinance did not provide that rules should be laid. The Bill replacing the Ordinance also did not contain any provision regarding laying of rules. On a notice of amendment of these rules given by a member, it was held that in accordance with para 10 of the First Report of the Committee on Subordinate Legislation (First Lok Sabha) the House had the power to recommend modifications to such rules. Motions, however, could not be discussed during that session for want of time and subsequently lapsed on prorogation of the House.

Similarly, the Central Civil Services Conduct Rules, 1955, as amended upto 3 March 1959, which were made by the President in exercise of powers conferred on him by Proviso to art. 309 and clause(5) of art. 148 of the Constitution were laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha on 13 March 1959 by the Government in reply to S.Q. No. 1223. The Constitution does not provide for laying entitled to give notice of amendments for their modification<sup>30</sup>.

Notices of motions are given in writing and, after being admitted by the Speaker, are published in the Bulletin<sup>31</sup>. A copy of the admitted motion is sent to the Minister concerned and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs and the item is included in the List of Business for a suitable date.

In case several notices of motions are given, texts of admitted motions may be circulated to members in one or more lists of motions in the same way as lists of amendments to a Bill and the texts of these motions may not be published in the Bulletin and included in the List of Business<sup>32</sup>.

Where the Constitution or the parent Act provides that the orders framed thereunder are to be laid on the Table for a specified period and will be subject to such modification as Parliament may make<sup>33</sup>, the motion in the Lok Sabha consists of two parts, the first part being a resolution of the House and the second part a recommendation to the Rajya Sabha to concur in the resolution<sup>34</sup>.

Where, however, the Constitution or the parent Act simply provides that the orders framed thereunder are to be laid on the Table, that is, it does not provide for their modification<sup>35</sup>, the motion is admitted in the form of a recommendation to the Government.

of Rules. Notices of Motions for amendment of Rules were admitted and circulated in the form of recommendations. Motions were taken up for discussion in the House on 9 May 1959 and were negatived—L.S. Deb., 9-5-1959, cc. 16170-96.

30. Notice of amendment to the regulations laid on the Table under art. 320(5) need not necessarily be given within fourteen days—the period for which the regulations are to be so laid—but can be given at any time before the end of the session in which they are laid on the Table.
31. The practice of publication in the Bulletin was started with effect from the Tenth Session of the Second Lok Sabha [vide Bulletin (II), 26-4-1960]. Prior to that, it was the practice to circulate the admitted motions separately, like amendments to Bills, resolutions, etc.
32. During the Twelfth Session of the Fourth Lok Sabha, several notices of motions for modifications of the Nationalized Banks (Management and Miscellaneous Provisions) Scheme, 1970, were received from members. In the first instance, some of the admitted motions were published in the Bulletin and texts of admitted motions were reproduced in full in the advance List of Business for 9 December 1970. Later, it was decided that texts of motions should not be reproduced in full in the List of Business and that a brief entry should be included in the List of Business. Accordingly, all motions which were earlier admitted and published in the Bulletin and also motions received and admitted later were circulated to members, etc. in separate lists of motions.
33. For example, see art. 320(5); sec. 40(3) of the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Act, 1954; sec. 28(3) of the Representation of the People Act, 1950; and section 28(3) of the Railway Protection Force Act, 1957.
34. L.S. Deb., 14-9-1955, cc. 13639-885; 7-9-1956, cc. 6173-236; 6-9-1961, cc. 7497-566.
35. On 22 December 1959, motion for modification of the Petroleum and Natural Gas Rules, 1959 was discussed in the form of recommendation and was negatived. The rules had been laid on the Table in pursuance of sec. 10 of the Oilfields (Regulation and Development) Act, 1948, which merely provided for laying of rules on the Table and not for their modification. L.S. Deb., 22-12-1959, c. 6613.

The position has since been changed. Sec. 10 of the Act was amended in 1984 as per the recommendation of the Committee on Subordinate Legislation (5th Lok Sabha). Now this section also provides for modification of rules which are laid in pursuance of this section.

Allotment of Time for Discussion and Moving of Motions

Where a statute provides that the orders shall be subject to modification by Parliament, Government is bound to find time for discussion of the motion, if notice of a motion for their modification is admitted<sup>36</sup>. Where there is no such provision in the statute and notice of a motion for modification of the orders is admitted, Government is not bound to find time for discussion of the motion but time is generally made available.

At the appropriate time on being called by the Chair, the member concerned moves the motion standing in his name, for modification of the orders. The mover of the motion has the right of reply<sup>37</sup>.

In order to avoid repetition of debate, the Speaker may permit a combined discussion on a motion for modification of a Statutory rule, order etc. and a motion under rule 184 if the subject matter of both the motions is same<sup>38</sup>.

When a motion for modification of a statutory rule, order, etc. is negatived by the House, a similar or identical motion in a subsequent session may again be admitted and discussed provided the notice of such a motion is given within the time limit prescribed under the relevant statute<sup>39</sup>.

When there is a provision in an Act that the rules made thereunder are not to come into force until they have been approved, with or without modification by the Lok Sabha<sup>40</sup>, it is the responsibility of the Government to move a resolution for the approval of such rules, soon after these rules are laid on the Table. Where an Act provides that draft rules or regulations framed by the Government would be subject to modification by the Lok Sabha or both Houses of Parliament within a specified period<sup>41</sup>, the rules or the regulations can be promulgated only after the stipulated

During Twelfth Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha, two motions for modification of Notification the G.S.R. 795(E) dated 19 October 2012 relating to Foreign Direct Investment in Retail Trade were admitted and published in Bulletin Part-II dated 3 December 2012. The motions were included for combined discussion in the List of Business dated 4 December 2012 together with a motion under Rule 184 on FDI in multi-brand retail trade. However, immediately before the combined discussion on the motions, objections were raised for discussing the motions for modification together with motion under Rule 184. Thereupon, the Speaker observed "...though the effect of adoption of the motion under Rule 184 is different from that of motions for modification..., Yet the subject matter of the motion under Rule 184 and the motions for modification of the Notification is same. Therefore, in order to avoid repetition of debate on the subject, I, in my discretion, decided to allow a combined debate on the three motions...." Accordingly, all the three motions were discussed together on 4 and 5 December 2012. On 5 December 2012, the motion under rule 184 was first put to vote and negatived. Thereafter, the first motion for modification was put to vote and negatived. The second motion for modification was not put to vote as its text was covered by first motion on which House had already given its decision.

39. During the Third Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha, notices of motions identical to the motions for modification admitted during Twelfth Session, were admitted and published in Bulletin-Part II dated 1 and 22 April 2013. Time was also allocated by Business Advisory Committee for discussion on these motions. However, the motions would not come up for discussion due to repeated adjournment of the House.

40. See for example, sec. 7 of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957 and sec. 11(1) of the Salaries and Allowances of Ministers Act, 1952. For the form of motion, see L.S. Deb., 31-8-1956, cc. 5045-46.

period, either as framed or with such modifications as are agreed to by the Lok Sabha or both Houses of Parliament, as the case may be.

In one instance, motions for modification of certain orders (which under the provisions of the Constitution were subject to modification by both Houses of Parliament during the session in which they had been laid on the Table) were, due to want of time, allowed to be discussed in the following session, and one of the motions as amended was adopted in the form of a resolution of the House<sup>42</sup>.

A combined debate can be held on two motions for amendment of two different orders, provided the motions deal with allied matter<sup>43</sup>.

Notices of motions for modification of orders or statutory rules which have been admitted and published in the Bulletin but not discussed during the session lapse on the prorogation of the Lok Sabha<sup>44</sup>.

Motions for modification of orders, which are moved in the House but discussion thereon is not concluded, lapse upon dissolution of the House.

Transmission of Amendments as adopted by the Lok Sabha, to the Rajya Sabha and the Minister Concerned

In case an order is subject to modification by Parliament and any amendment is adopted by the Lok Sabha, it is transmitted to the Rajya Sabha for its concurrence and on receipt of a message from the Rajya Sabha agreeing to the amendment, it is forwarded by the Secretariat to the Minister concerned<sup>45</sup>.

If the Rajya Sabha disagrees with the amendment passed by the Lok Sabha or agrees subject to a further amendment thereof or proposes an amendment in substitution thereof, the Lok Sabha may either drop the amendment or agree with the Rajya Sabha in the proposed amendment or insist on the original amendment passed by the House. A message in each case is sent to the Rajya Sabha. In case the Lok Sabha agrees to the amendment as further amended by the Rajya Sabha, the amendment is forwarded by the Secretariat to the Minister concerned<sup>46</sup>.

If the Rajya Sabha agrees to the original amendment passed by the Lok Sabha, it is sent by the Secretariat to the Minister concerned but if the Rajya Sabha disagrees or insists on an amendment to which the Lok Sabha has not agreed, the Houses are deemed to have finally disagreed and all further proceedings thereon are dropped<sup>47</sup>.

If an order is modified in accordance with the amendment passed by the Houses, the amended order has to be laid on the Table<sup>48</sup>.

Where, however, the order is not subject to modification by Parliament, the amendment adopted by the Lok Sabha is forwarded direct to the Minister concerned.

CHAPTER XXV

Resolutions

A resolution is a formal expression of the sense, will or action of a deliberative Assembly, e.g., a Legislative Body<sup>1</sup>. Every question, when agreed to, becomes either an order or a resolution of the House. By its orders the House directs its Committees, its members, its officers, the order of its own proceedings and the acts of all persons whom they concern; by its resolutions the House declares its own opinions and purposes<sup>2</sup>.

A member or a Minister may, subject to the Rules, move a resolution in the Lok Sabha relating to a matter of general public interest<sup>3</sup>.

The Minto-Morley Reforms of 1909 allowed, for the first time, the Legislative Council to discuss matters of general public interest by way of resolutions in the form of specific recommendations<sup>4</sup>. The rules framed for this purpose not only circumscribed matters which could be discussed but also empowered the Governor-General, inter alia, to disallow notice of any resolution or part thereof on the ground that it could not be moved consistently with the public interest.

This position remained practically unaltered till 1947 when, on attaining Independence, the rule empowering the Governor-General to disallow notices of resolutions was omitted and the rule regarding restrictions on subjects for discussion was amended to provide that all matters, except those sub judice, could be discussed in the form of a resolution.

Resolutions may be broadly divided into three categories—

Resolutions which are mere expression of opinion by the House: Since the purpose of such a resolution is merely to obtain an expression of opinion of the House, the Government is not bound, as convention has it, to give effect to opinions expressed in these resolutions. It entirely rests on the discretion of the Government whether or not to take action suggested in such resolutions.

Resolutions which have statutory effect: The notice of a statutory resolution is given in pursuance of a provision in the Constitution or an Act of Parliament<sup>5</sup>. Such a resolution, if adopted, is binding on the Government and has the force of law.

3. Rule 172.

4. The first resolution was moved on 25 February 1910, recommending prohibition of indentured labour for Natal. (The Indentured Labour Agreement of 1860 was signed between India, Natal and Britain. This enabled the contract labour being sent by ship to Natal. On being indentured, they were assigned a number by which they were identified, for all purposes, during their stay in Natal).

5. Resolutions, for instance, under articles 61(4), 67(b), 90(c), 94(c), 123(2), 169(1), 179(c), 183(c), 213(2), 249, 252, 312, 315(2), 352, 356 and 368 of the Constitution, fall under this category.

Resolutions which the House passes in the matter of control over its own proceedings: A resolution of the House in the matter of control over its own proceedings has the force of law and its validity cannot be challenged in any court of law. The House by such a resolution evolves, sometimes, its own procedure to meet a situation not specifically provided for in its Rules<sup>6</sup>.

There are three types of resolutions viz., Private Members' Resolutions, Government Resolutions and Statutory Resolutions.

Private Members' Resolutions

Notices of Resolutions and Ballot

A private member, who desires to move a resolution, has to give notice to that effect in the first instance. The notice, addressed to the Secretary-General may be handed over to the Parliamentary Notice Office at least two days before the date of the ballot<sup>7</sup>.

The names of members from whom such notices are received are balloted and the members securing the first three places in the ballot for any particular day allotted for private members' resolutions are asked to give notice of one resolution each within two days after the date of the ballot<sup>8</sup>. These resolutions, if admitted, are then included in the List of Business. Notices of resolutions received from members after the prescribed time period are treated as time-barred. A separate ballot is held for each day allotted for private members' resolutions<sup>9</sup>. The dates and time for holding the ballot are notified in Bulletin-Part II before the commencement of a session. The first ballot of a session is held on the second day of the session and subsequent ballots on the specified days preceding such allotted days.

If, on examination, the resolution, of which a notice has been given by a member, is found to be inadmissible, the member concerned is asked to table another resolution.

Form and Content of Resolutions

A resolution may be in the form of a declaration of opinion or a recommendation; or it may be in the form so as to record either approval or disapproval by the House of an act or policy of Government or convey a message; or commend, urge or request an action; or call attention to a matter or situation for consideration by Government; or in such other form as the Speaker may consider appropriate<sup>10</sup>. A resolution must purport to convey the opinion of the House as a whole and not only of a section thereof. Moreover, the subject-matter of a resolution should relate to a matter of general public interest, and only those matters which are primarily the concern of the Government of India can form the subject-matter of a resolution.

Conditions of Admissibility

Notices of resolutions received from members are examined in the Secretariat to see whether they are in proper form and satisfy the conditions of admissibility. The admissibility of a resolution is to be decided only in terms of the condition of admissibility laid down in the Rules<sup>11</sup>.

In order that a resolution may be admissible, it should—be clearly and precisely expressed<sup>12</sup>; raise substantially one definite issue<sup>13</sup>; contain no arguments, inferences, ironical expressions, imputations or defamatory statements, not refer to the conduct or character of persons except in their official or public capacity; not relate to any matter which is under adjudication by a court of law having jurisdiction in any part of India; not seek to raise any discussion on a matter pending before any statutory tribunal or statutory authority performing any judicial or quasi-judicial functions or any commission or court of inquiry appointed to inquire into, or investigate, any matter<sup>14</sup> (however, the Speaker may, in his discretion, allow such matter to be raised in the House as is concerned with the procedure or subject or stage of inquiry, if he is satisfied that it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of such matter by the statutory tribunal, statutory authority, commission or court of inquiry<sup>15</sup>); not relate to a matter which is under consideration of a Parliamentary Committee (it is permissible only after submission of the report by the Committee); and make no reference to any matter where no ministerial responsibility is involved<sup>16</sup>.

After a resolution has been moved in the House, no resolution or amendment thereto raising substantially the same question can be moved within one year from the date of the moving of the earlier resolution<sup>17</sup>. When the discussion on a resolution is continued from session to session for a number of days, the period of one year is computed from the date on which the resolution was moved. This restriction operates

12. A resolution admitted and moved in the House was later held to be not in order as it was not clearly and precisely worded, and further discussion thereon was accordingly withheld—L.S. Deb., 8-3-1968, cc. 2671-84; 23-3-1968, cc. 2693-2710.

13. A resolution consisting of more than one matter, provided they are illustrative of a single definite issue, is admissible—L.S., Deb., 4-2-1946, pp. 435-36. See Resolution re. economic policies by Bhattam Srirama Murty in List of Business for 28-11-1986.

14. Rule 175; For discussion on matters sub judice, see Chapter XLIII—Parliament and Judiciary.

17. Rule 182.

only within the life of one House and does not apply to resolutions, notice of which is given by members of a new House after a general election.

If a resolution has been withdrawn or is deemed to be withdrawn with the leave of the House, no resolution raising substantially the same question can be moved during the same session<sup>18</sup>. A resolution raising a question substantially identical with the one raised in a resolution pending for further discussion before the House during the same session is inadmissible. The rule of anticipation does not apply when the chances of discussion on the anticipated matter are remote<sup>19</sup>. A resolution should not also raise a question substantially identical with the one on which the House has given a decision in the same session<sup>20</sup>. Thus, a resolution raising a question substantially identical with the one raised in a Bill, on which the House has given a decision in the same session, is inadmissible. However, a cut motion on which the House has given a decision does not bar the moving, in the same session, of a resolution raising the question discussed earlier on the cut motion, as at the time of voting on the cut motion, the subject is not put to the vote of the House and the decision of the House is taken only on the cut motion.

A resolution recommending to the Government to bring forward a new legislation or an amendment of an existing enactment is admissible<sup>21</sup>. A resolution containing a suggestion opposed to the declared policy of the Government is also admissible, as a member is entitled to seek a reversal of such policy.

A resolution, based on presumptions or hypothetical in character, is inadmissible as also one dealing with a matter which is primarily the concern of the State Government and seeks to interfere with its autonomy<sup>22</sup>. In the latter case, on any doubt, a reference is made to the Minister concerned who is asked to state the extent of the responsibility of the Union Government involved in the subject-matter of the resolution. However, a resolution on a State subject is admissible when the Proclamation of Emergency is in operation and powers of the State Legislature are vested in the Parliament<sup>23</sup>. A resolution seeking to implement a constitutional directive is also admissible although the matter raised therein is primarily a State subject<sup>24</sup>.

When a resolution has been discussed and then withdrawn with the leave of the House, another resolution raising substantially the same question can be moved within one year but not during the same session.

23. In 1976, a resolution concerning a State subject (namely, Forest) was held admissible as the Proclamation of Emergency was in operation and Parliament was empowered under article 250 to legislate with respect to any matter in the State List; see List of Business for 14-5-1976.

In 1986, a resolution concerning a State subject (namely, steps to restore communal peace and harmony in J&K) was held admissible since the State was under Governor's Rule and the State Legislature was in a state of suspended animation; see List of Business for 25-3-1986.

The Resolutions, inter alia, on the following subjects have been disallowed:

severance of diplomatic relations in normal peace time; amendments to the Rules; events in another country<sup>25</sup>; taxation measures<sup>26</sup>; amendment of the Constitution; suggesting actions hostile to friendly countries; appointment of a committee to examine the conventions developed in the two Houses of Parliament and State Legislatures since the commencement of the Constitution; construction of new railway lines, restoration of line dismantled during the war, conversion of metre gauge into broad gauge lines, changes in the zonal set-up of Railways and the like, which are primarily of local interest; calling upon the Government to set aside Assembly elections and enforcement of party discipline; those in the nature of no-confidence motion in the Council of Ministers and those seeking to discuss action of Chief Election Commissioner in withholding bye-elections in a State.

The Speaker decides whether a resolution or a part thereof is admissible or not under the Rules and may disallow any resolution or a part thereof when in his opinion it is an abuse of the right of moving a resolution or calculated to obstruct or prejudicially affect the procedure of the House, or is in contravention of the Rules<sup>27</sup>.

A resolution relating to any matter under the administrative jurisdiction of the Speaker is not admitted.

After the resolutions are admitted, a copy each of the admitted resolutions is forwarded to the Minister concerned<sup>28</sup>.

Resumption of Adjourned Debate on Private Members' Resolutions

When the debate on a private member's resolution is adjourned sine die, the mover of the resolution may, if he wishes to proceed with such resolution on a subsequent day allotted for private members' resolutions, give notice for resumption of the adjourned debate and on receipt of the notice the relative precedence of such resolution is determined by balloting the name of the member along with the names of other members<sup>29</sup>. Debate on a private member's resolution is not adjourned to a fixed date<sup>30</sup>.

27. Rule 174.

28. Rule 183.

29. L.S. Deb., 12-11-1965, cc. 1658-63.

30. Rule 30(2).

In an exceptional case, the debate on a private member's resolution was adjourned to the next day allotted for private members' resolutions after suspending the provisions of Rule 30(1) and the Proviso to Rule 29, to enable the resolution to be set down in the List of Business without ballot as the first item<sup>31</sup>. There has been an instance when debate on a private member's resolution was adjourned to a day to be fixed later without altering the order of the resolution by suspending Proviso to Rule 29<sup>32</sup>.

The Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions considered the question of adjournment of debate on private member's bill/resolution and simultaneous suspension of Rule 30(1) in its application to that bill/resolution, in pursuance of an observation made by the Chair during the course of discussion on a private member's bill<sup>33</sup>. After considering all aspects of the matter, the Committee, in their report to the Speaker, observed that consent should not normally be given to move a motion for suspension of Rule 30(1) in its application to the debate on a private member's bill or resolution so as to enable the item to be set down for further discussion on the next day allotted to that category of business without having to go through ballot. The request for suspension of Rule 30(1) might, therefore, be considered only if there were extraordinary circumstances, complete unanimity in the House and no other alternative course was available to meet the situation.

Once a resolution is moved in the House, any one of the following five contingencies may arise: it may be adopted, or it may be negatived, or it may be withdrawn, or it may remain part-discussed or the debate thereon may be adjourned.

Admitted Resolutions

The List of Business for a day allotted for private members' resolutions generally contains three resolutions in the names of those members who have been successful in the ballot, in addition to a part-discussed resolution, if any. However, if a member, securing a place in the ballot does not give notice of a resolution or after giving notice intimates that he would not be present on the allotted day, the List of Business may not contain such resolution(s).

The resolutions are put down in the List of Business in the order in which the names of members-in-charge of resolutions appear in the result of ballot, and the order of business as determined by ballot is not changed<sup>34</sup>. A resolution which remains

The entire private members' business (resolutions) for 28-4-1995 was transferred to a day originally not allotted for transaction of private members' business. Part-discussed resolution of 28-4-1995 was not included in the Lists of Business for the intervening allotted days for private members' resolutions (12-5-1995 and 26-5-1995) but was included as the first item for discussion on the day the business was transferred to (30-5-1995), notwithstanding that another resolution remained part-discussed on 26-5-1995—the intervening day originally allotted to private members' resolutions, by suspending Proviso to Rule 29.

33. L.S. Deb., 11-12-1981, cc. 465-70; [35 & 36R(7LS)]; Also see Manual on Rules, Rule 30, pp. 177-78, note XX.

34. The time allotted for private members' resolutions on 24 September 1965, was utilized for a short duration discussion on U.N. Security Council resolution for a cease-fire between India and Pakistan.

part-discussed at the end of the day has precedence over all other resolutions set down for the next day allotted for private members' resolutions<sup>35</sup>. If a resolution set down in the List of Business for a day is not taken up on that day, it is treated as lapsed and is not set down for discussion on any subsequent day.

If the time allotted for discussion of a part-discussed resolution entered in the List of Business for a day is increased by the House or by the Speaker and as a result thereof the next resolution entered in the List of Business on the basis of the first priority obtained at the ballot is not moved on that day, the said resolution is set down as the first item for the next day allotted during the same session for private members' resolutions after the part-discussed resolution, if any<sup>36</sup>.

Allotment of time to Resolutions

The last two and a half hours of a sitting on every alternate Friday starting from the second Friday of the session are allotted for the discussion of private members' resolutions. The Speaker may, in consultation with the Leader of the House, allot any day other than a Friday for the transaction of such business. If there is no sitting of the House on a Friday allotted for private members' resolutions, the Speaker may direct that two and a half hours on any other day in the week may be allotted for private members' resolutions<sup>37</sup>.

Thus, discussion on private members' resolutions has, with the unanimous consent of the House, been held on a day other than Friday in order to enable the House to dispose of some other urgent work<sup>38</sup>. Where the House is not unanimous in this respect, private members' business is not transferred<sup>39</sup>. In case, a sitting of the Lok Sabha is cancelled and in the absence of any specific decision by the House about treatment of resolutions included in the List of Business for that day, all resolutions, except the part-discussed resolution, are treated as having lapsed<sup>40</sup>.

However, with the unanimous consent of the House, a private member's resolution re. India quitting the Commonwealth was also discussed together with the short duration discussion on that day although the resolution appeared at item No. 3 in the List of Business of private members' resolutions for that day.

- (ii) Friday, 15 April 1988, was allotted to private members' resolutions. On the recommendation of Business Advisory Committee [51 R(BAC-8LS)], the sitting fixed for that day was cancelled. On 4 April 1988, when the motion for adoption of the Report was moved, suggestion made by a member that the private members' business to be taken up on 15 April 1988 might be transferred to 29 April 1988 was agreed to and private members' business was transferred accordingly.

In exceptional cases, discussion on private members' resolutions may be taken up earlier or later than the scheduled hour on an allotted day<sup>41</sup>. With the unanimous consent of the House, the time may be extended beyond the normal duration of two and a half hours<sup>42</sup>, or curtailed<sup>43</sup>.

Time-limit for Resolutions

Time-limit for the discussion of individual resolutions included in the List of Business for an allotted day is recommended by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions<sup>44</sup>. If a sitting of the Committee cannot be held for any reason, time is allotted by the House itself on the day when the resolutions are to be taken up<sup>45</sup>. The maximum time recommended by the Committee for the discussion of a private member's resolution is four hours<sup>46</sup>. However, there are instances when resolutions were discussed for even more than ten hours<sup>47</sup>.

No speech on a resolution can, except with the permission of the Speaker, exceed fifteen minutes in duration. However, the mover of a resolution and the Minister concerned, when speaking for the first time, may speak for thirty minutes or for such

If the time recommended by the Committee for discussion of a resolution is desired to be varied, it is open to a member to move an amendment to the relevant report of the Committee when the motion for its adoption comes up before the House<sup>49</sup>.

Allocation of Time, Order and Disposal of Outstanding Matters

The allocation of time in respect of resolutions, as approved by the House, takes effect as if it were an Order of the House<sup>50</sup>. After the allocation of Time Order has been notified, the time allotted for the discussion of a resolution can be extended<sup>51</sup> or reduced<sup>52</sup> only on a motion moved by a member and adopted by the House. In a number of cases, however, time has been extended after taking the sense of the House, without a formal motion being moved for that purpose<sup>53</sup>.

At the appointed hour, in accordance with the allocation of Time Order, unless the time is extended by the House, the Speaker may put the resolution<sup>54</sup> and amendment, if any, to the vote of the House. Amendment will be put to the vote first and then the resolution.

When a point of order relating to a resolution under discussion in the House is raised, the time taken in the disposal of the point of order is also counted towards the total time allotted for the resolution<sup>55</sup>.

Moving of Resolutions

When called upon, the member in whose name a resolution stands on the List of Business moves the resolution, unless he wishes to withdraw it<sup>56</sup>. The mover commences his speech by a formal motion in the terms appearing in the List of Business<sup>57</sup>. It is not, however, out of order if a member speaks on a resolution before he formally moves it<sup>58</sup>.

56. A statutory resolution re. approval of Proclamation under art. 356 of the Constitution in relation to Manipur was included in the List of Business for 20 March 1972 in the name of the Minister of State for Home Affairs. When the business was to be taken up, the Minister did not move the resolution explaining that it was not necessary, as the Proclamation had since been revoked and the Ministry sworn-in in Manipur. see, L.S. Deb., 20-3-1972, c. 223.

A resolution must be moved as it stands on the List of Business<sup>59</sup>. If the mover desires to omit a certain portion thereof, he can do so only by the Order of the House<sup>60</sup>. There have, however, been instances where a resolution as it stood in the List of Business was allowed to be moved in an amended form, by the Speaker<sup>61</sup>.

Unlike a motion, a resolution can be moved, with the permission of the Speaker, by another member, listed in the List of Business, authorized by and on behalf of the one in whose name the resolution stands<sup>62</sup>. The unfinished speech of the mover of a resolution is treated as concluded if he is absent on the next day when the resolution is taken up<sup>63</sup>. Unless the resolution is placed before the House by the Chair after the mover has concluded his speech, there is no motion before the House<sup>64</sup>.

A member has no prescriptive right to move his resolution on the ground that extension of time to a resolution earlier in the List of Business would block his resolution next on the list from being taken up<sup>65</sup>. While an earlier resolution is still under discussion, another resolution appearing later in the List of Business is not allowed to be moved<sup>66</sup>.

However, there have been a few occasions when debate on a private member's resolution was adjourned to a day allotted to resolutions and simultaneously Rule 30(1) and the Proviso to Rule 29 were suspended in their application to that resolution. Thereafter, the next resolution was moved<sup>67</sup>.

Notice of Amendments

After a resolution has been moved, any member may, subject to the rules relating to resolutions, move an amendment to the resolution, but the tabling of amendment does not confer upon him the right to speak<sup>68</sup>. If notice of the amendment, as required, has not been given one day previous to the day on which the resolution is moved, any member may object to the moving of the amendment, and such objection prevails, unless the Speaker allows the amendment to be moved<sup>69</sup>. The period of notice may be waived in respect of an amendment to a resolution if it is acceptable to the mover of the resolution and the Government<sup>70</sup>.

Lists of amendments of which notices have been received are circulated to members from time to time<sup>71</sup>.

Admissibility of Amendments

An amendment to be admissible must not be vague or indefinite<sup>72</sup> nor should it be negative in character<sup>73</sup>. It should not be unduly long nor should it raise multiple issues<sup>74</sup>. An amendment should not seek to widen the scope of the resolution<sup>75</sup>. Hence an amendment proposing to raise an altogether new subject beyond the scope of the resolution is out of order<sup>76</sup>. If an amendment is in substance the same as the original resolution, it is out of order<sup>77</sup>. Amendments, which raise a question, in full or in part, identical in substance or phraseology with a resolution already decided in the same session, are inadmissible<sup>78</sup>. Objection in regard to the admissibility of an amendment can be taken when the amendment is moved; it cannot be raised after discussion on the resolution is over and the amendment is being put to vote<sup>79</sup>.

The Speaker may, in his discretion, disallow tabling of amendments as the debate proceeds from day to day<sup>80</sup>. There is, however, no objection to tabling agreed amendments or those, which are really necessary for the purpose of debate, subject to the discretion of the Speaker<sup>81</sup>.

In addition to the above, general conditions of admissibility of amendments relating to Bills and motions apply mutatis mutandis in the case of amendments to resolutions also.

Scope of Discussion

The discussion on a resolution must be strictly relevant to and within the scope of the resolution<sup>82</sup>. Where a general question is raised through a resolution, individual cases without names may be mentioned by way of illustration, but not by way of appeal to the Government for redress<sup>83</sup>.

It is in order for the member-in-charge to express, in the course of his speech on the resolution, his views, in general, on amendments, which are still to be moved<sup>84</sup>.

Right to Reply

The mover of a resolution has the right of reply but he has to protect his right by rising in his place and the Speaker does not undertake the responsibility of ascertaining in every case before putting the question whether the mover wishes to speak in reply or not<sup>85</sup>. It is not permissible for any other member to reply to the debate on a resolution on behalf of the mover. In the case of a private member's resolution, the debate is treated as concluded after the Minister's speech if the mover of the resolution is not present to reply to the debate<sup>86</sup>.

A copy of every resolution which has been adopted by the House is forwarded by the Secretary-General to the Minister concerned<sup>87</sup>.

Withdrawal of Resolution

A member in whose name a resolution stands, on the List of Business, when called upon to move it, may inform the Speaker that he does not wish to move it and in doing so he confines himself to a mere statement to that effect; but if the resolution or an amendment thereto has been moved, the resolution can be withdrawn only by leave of the House<sup>88</sup>. The member cannot ask for leave to withdraw the resolution if division on an amendment proposed thereto is in progress. Motion for withdrawal of resolution can be moved only after the amendments have been disposed of by being agreed to, withdrawn, or negatived. An amended resolution can, however, be withdrawn by leave of the House.

Government Resolutions

Though no period of notice has been prescribed for Government resolutions, in actual practice, Ministers give notices of their resolutions several days in advance of the date on which the item is proposed to be included in the List of Business. In respect of admission, Government resolutions are subject to the same rules as the private member's resolutions. If a Government resolution is not properly worded or raises more than one definite issue<sup>89</sup>, the Minister concerned is asked to give a revised notice. After a resolution, a notice of which is given by a Minister, has been admitted by the Speaker, it is published in the Bulletin. The Speaker, in consultation with the Leader of the House, fixes a date for discussion of the resolution. Before inclusion of the resolution in the List of Business, the Minister concerned ensures that all relevant documents and literature, where necessary, are circulated to members well in advance.

Allotment of Time and Discussion

Time for discussion of a Government resolution is allotted by the House on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee<sup>90</sup>. The resolution may be moved by the Minister-in-charge or, in his absence, by any other Minister on his behalf after prior intimation to the Speaker. The rest of the procedure regarding moving of amendments and disposal thereof as well as the disposal of the resolution is the same as in the case of private members' resolutions.

A joint discussion may take place on a Government resolution and motion for consideration of a Government Bill<sup>91</sup> or certain other items<sup>92</sup>.

The three broad categories under which Government resolutions may be classified are:

Resolutions approving international treaties, conventions or agreements of which the Government is a party: Under the Constitution, the Government of India can enter into treaties and agreements with foreign countries and has the power to implement any treaty, agreement or convention with any other country or countries or any decision made at any international conference, association or other body<sup>93</sup>. Resolutions for this purpose are occasionally tabled by Ministers seeking approval of the Lok Sabha to the conventions or its recommendation or for ratification of conventions or agreements by the Government of India<sup>94</sup>.

It is within the purview of the Government of India to enter into and ratify treaties, but it is not obligatory for the Government, under the Constitution, to seek approval of Parliament to such treaties<sup>95</sup>. However, where there is a provision in a treaty itself for ratification thereof by the Legislatures of the contracting parties, the

93. See art. 253 and entries 13 and 14 of the Seventh Schedule (List I—Union List). The Calcutta High Court observed :

Entry 14 of List I in Schedule VII provides for all legislation in connection with entering into treaties. This does not, however, mean that no treaty should be entered into unless Parliament has legislated on the matter. The power of legislation on the matter of entering into treaties leaves untouched the executive power of entering into treaties—Union of India v. Manmull Jain, A.I.R., 1954, Calcutta 615.

treaty is submitted to the House for approval<sup>96</sup>. Further, no cession of Indian territory can take place without a constitutional amendment. A settlement of a boundary dispute has not been held to be a cession of territory. In this connection, the Supreme Court observed:

Ordinarily an adjustment of a boundary which International Law regards as valid between two Nations, should be recognised by the Courts and the implementation thereof can always be with the Executive unless a clear case of cession is involved when Parliamentary intercession can be expected and should be had. This has been custom of Nations whose constitutions are not sufficiently elaborate on this subject<sup>97</sup>.

Resolutions declaring or approving certain policies of the Government: A Government resolution may seek to record approval of the House to an act or policy of the Government. Resolutions seeking approval of the House to the principles, objectives and programmes of development contained in the Five-year Plans of the Government, National Health Policy, Draft National Policy on Education and Programme of Action on National Policy on Education, were, for instance, brought before the House and adopted<sup>98</sup>.

Similarly, resolutions expressing reaction of the Government towards incidents in the international field have also been brought before the House and adopted<sup>99</sup>.

Resolutions approving recommendations of certain Committees: Sometimes resolutions are brought forward by the Government to seek the approval of the House to the recommendations contained in the reports of certain Committees<sup>100</sup>.

Resolutions are also brought forward by the Government seeking approval of the House to reject the awards given by the Board of Arbitration which are constituted in terms of para 21 of the Scheme for Joint Consultative Machinery and Compulsory Arbitration on the ground that the implementation of the awards would adversely affect the national economy<sup>101</sup>.

Statutory Resolutions

Resolutions tabled ‘in pursuance of a provision in the Constitution or an Act of Parliament’ are termed Statutory Resolutions<sup>102</sup>. Notice of such resolutions may be given either by a Minister or by a private member. Certain enactments, however, expressly require the Government to bring forward a resolution within a specified period of time<sup>103</sup>.

There is no particular period of notice for moving a statutory resolution unless the period itself is prescribed in the particular article of the Constitution or in the section of the Statute under which it is tabled<sup>104</sup>. The procedure regarding admission of a Statutory Resolution, moving of amendments thereto and its disposal is the same as for other resolutions<sup>105</sup>.

A Statutory Resolution, after it has been admitted by the Speaker, is published in the Bulletin under the heading ‘Statutory Resolution’ for information of the members and even if a private member has given notice of it, the resolution is not subject to ballot<sup>106</sup>.

After a Statutory Resolution has been admitted and published in the Bulletin, notices of identical Statutory Resolution tabled subsequently by members are not again published in the Bulletin. Instead, when the Statutory Resolution is included in the List of Business, below the names of members published in the Bulletin.

Time for discussion of a statutory resolution is provided by the Government from the time allocated for Government business. The allocation of time for each such resolution is made by the House on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee which, after considering the state of business in the House and the importance of the resolution, recommends the time necessary for discussion of the resolution<sup>107</sup>.

Resolutions under the Constitution

The Constitution provides for resolutions to be moved in Parliament for the following purposes:

Impeachment of the President

Removal of the Vice-President

The Vice-President may be removed from his Office by a resolution of the Rajya Sabha passed by a majority of all the then members of the Rajya Sabha and agreed to by the Lok Sabha; but no resolution for this purpose can be moved unless at least fourteen days' notice has been given of the intention to move the resolution<sup>108</sup>.

Removal of the Deputy Chairman of Rajya Sabha

A member holding office as Deputy Chairman of the Rajya Sabha may be removed from his office by a resolution of the Rajya Sabha passed by a majority of all the then members of the Rajya Sabha; but the resolution can be moved only when at least fourteen days' notice has been given of the intention of moving<sup>109</sup>.

Removal of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker

(See Chapter VII—Presiding Officers of Lok Sabha)

Disapproval of the Ordinances Promulgated by the President

(See Chapter XXIII—Ordinances and Proclamations by the President)

Legislation by Parliament with Respect to a matter in the State List

If the Rajya Sabha declares by resolution supported by not less than two-thirds of the members present and voting that it is necessary or expedient in the national interest that Parliament should make laws with respect to any matter enumerated in the State List specified in the resolution, it shall be lawful for the Parliament to make laws for the whole or any part of the territory of India with respect to that matter while the resolution remains in force<sup>110</sup>. Such a resolution remains in force for a period not exceeding one year as may be specified therein. However, the Rajya Sabha may pass successive resolutions for the continuance in force of the original resolution, but each such resolution will have a limited duration of one year only<sup>111</sup>.

A law made by Parliament by virtue of the powers conferred on it by the resolution ceases to have effect on the expiration of a period of six months after the resolution ceases to be in force, except in respect of things done or omitted to be done before the expiration of the said period<sup>112</sup>.

national interest to do so, Parliament may by law provide for the creation of one or more All-India Services common to the Union and the States. The services known at the commencement of the Constitution as the Indian Administrative Service and the Indian Police Service were deemed to be services created by Parliament under the Constitution<sup>113</sup>.

Approval of Proclamation of Emergency and Proclamation issued in case of failure of constitutional machinery in a State

Resolutions under Acts of Parliament

Certain statutes provide that the rules or notifications made thereunder must be approved by resolutions of Parliament within a specified period and these rules have effect in such modified form, or cease to have effect, as Parliament may by virtue of the resolutions direct<sup>114</sup>.

Status and Effect of Resolutions

In respect of resolutions tabled in pursuance of a provision of the Constitution or a Statute of Parliament, the precise phraseology and the words used in the statute are the deciding factors for the Government whether to implement it or not. For instance, a resolution adopted by a State Legislative Assembly under article 169 of the Constitution for the abolition of the State Legislative Council does not impose an obligation on the Union Government to take action for initiating legislation in Parliament as the word used in the article is ‘may’.

A resolution moved by a private member, though not statutory, may attract the provision of a Statute and may become statutory through an amendment adopted by the House and may be binding on the Government<sup>115</sup>.

When, in July 1953, a question was raised in the Madras Legislative Council with regard to a resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly, the then Chief Minister, C. Rajagopalachari made a statement to the effect that the resolution passed 115. A member moved the following resolution in the Lok Sabha on 24 April 1981:

“This House recommends to the Government that any action by signs, words or publications, which tarnishes the image of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of our Nation, be made a cognizable offence”. The Resolution was adopted on 28 August 1981 in the following amended form:

“This House recommends to the Government that any action to tarnish the name of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of our Nation, be taken serious note of and a Commission of Enquiry be appointed under the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952 to enquire into the acts and activities including publications and sources and misuse of funds, of the Gandhi Peace Foundation, the Gandhi Smarak Nidhi and the All India Serva Seva Sangh and other closely connected organisations and report to the Government within a period of six months”.

In pursuance of this resolution, the Government appointed a Commission of Inquiry under the Chairmanship of Justice P.D. Kudal—L.S. Deb., 28-8-1981, cc. 306-54.

by the Assembly fell under the category of “mere expressions of opinion”. He clarified that with the exception of statutory resolutions and resolutions in the matter of control by the House of its own proceedings, all resolutions are in the nature of mere expressions of opinion and have no force of law. Through a resolution the opinion of the House may be sought either by the Government or by private members. While a law has to be passed by the two Houses and assented to by the President, a resolution gives expression to the views of only one of the two Houses<sup>116</sup>.

Expression of opinion by the House may assist the Government in evolving its policies or in decision-making but the resolution cannot have more than recommendatory value. The House does not and cannot itself govern or administer and its resolutions cannot in any way bind the Government to any policy or course of action<sup>117</sup>. It rests entirely on the discretion of the Government whether or not to act on the suggestions contained in such a resolution. But a situation may arise where a resolution may be passed by the House against the expressed will of the Government. If such a development takes place in the Lok Sabha to which the Government is constitutionally responsible, the question would arise whether it amounted to a censure. However, the Rajya Sabha has no power of passing a vote of censure or no-confidence in the Government and a resolution passed in that House against the wishes of the Government may have no consequences except those that the Government themselves may prefer.

On 10 August 1978, a motion urging the Government that the allegations of corruption mentioned in the correspondence between the Prime Minister and the Home Minister should be referred to a Commission of Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952 was moved in the Rajya Sabha after it was admitted by the Chairman. An amendment called upon the Government either to seek forthwith the guidance and advice from a Committee comprising fifteen members of the House to be appointed by the Chairman for appropriate and necessary action to be taken on the allegations or alternatively to straightaway appoint without delay two separate Commissions of Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952. The Motion as amended was adopted by the House. On 17 August 1978, when some members pressed for the implementation of the motion, the Chairman observed that the motion was a recommendation addressed to the Government and that the question of appointment of a Committee would depend on which of the two alternatives mentioned was acceptable to the Government. On 22 August 1978, by his statement in the House, the Prime Minister said that while the Government was not prepared to accept either of the two alternatives mentioned in the motion, if any specific charges of corruption in the context of the Resolution were made in writing by any member, they would be referred to the Chief Justice of India for being examined by him. Again, on 29 August 1978, the Chairman ruled that the constitution of a Committee by him was dependent upon the Government showing willingness to seek advice and guidance from it, which the Government had declined.

CHAPTER XXVI

Motions

The term ‘motion’ in its wider sense means any proposal submitted to the House for eliciting a decision of the House. One of the main functions of the House is to ascertain its own will in regard to various matters, and for this purpose, every question to be decided by the House must be proposed by a member in the form of a motion.

The form in which a motion is put to the vote of the House is initiated by the mover of the motion. After the motion has been moved, members speak within the ambit of the terms of the motion and, later, unless the mover withdraws it, the House rejects the motion or adopts it in toto or with specific amendments, if any.

A debate on a motion involves three stages, viz. the making of a motion, the proposing of a question and the vote on the question. The mover of a motion frames it in a form in which he wishes it ultimately to be passed by the House and on which, a vote of the House can conveniently be taken. Following this reasoning, members who wish the motion be passed in a different form, must move amendments after the original motion has been proposed and such amendments must also be in the form in which the motion as amended, can be passed by the House and must, therefore, be relevant to the subject matter of the main motion.

Every matter is determined in the House, by means of a question put from the Chair, on a motion made by a member and resolved in the affirmative or negative, as the case may be. The question must repeat the terms of the motion and must be so framed as to be capable of expressing a decision of the House. The interval between the proposing and the putting of the question, which is, normally, used for discussion, gives an opportunity for further proceedings such as the moving of an amendment. An amendment may either be used to effect an alteration to the question before the House or to present to the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original question. This may give rise to a subsidiary debate, with its own question and decision, within the principal debate. At the end of the process, when the question or the main question is put to vote, the decision of the House is registered.

Any matter of importance can be the subject matter of a motion<sup>1</sup>.

For instance, the House has discussed, on motions, moved to that effect, (i) the official action of Governors of certain States—*L.S. ### Classification of Motions

Motions cover several distinct forms of proceedings in Parliament and may be classified under the following categories: substantive motions; substitute motions; and subsidiary motions.

Substantive Motions

A substantive motion is a self-contained independent proposal submitted for the approval of the House and drafted in such a manner as to be capable of expressing a decision of the House<sup>2</sup>. Motions for election of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker, Motion of Thanks on the Address by the President, Motion for Adjournment on a matter of public importance, resolutions, motions for raising discussion on a matter of general public interest, motions of confidence/no-confidence in the Council of Ministers, resolution for removal of the Speaker/Deputy Speaker, motion declaring the seat of a member vacant and where leave of absence is not agreed to by the House, are examples of the substantive motions moved in Lok Sabha<sup>3</sup>.

Motions “that the policy or situation or statement or any other matter be taken into consideration” are not, strictly speaking, substantive motions as they are not put to the vote of the House<sup>4</sup>.

The conduct of persons in high authority can only be discussed on a substantive motion drawn in proper terms<sup>5</sup>.

The Constitution lays down specific procedure for impeachment of the President, and for the presentation of an address to the President by each House of Parliament for the removal of a Judge of the Supreme Court or of a High Court, the Comptroller and Auditor-General of India or the Chief Election Commissioner<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, provision has been made in the Constitution for the removal of the Vice-President and the Deputy Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker of the Lok Sabha by means of resolutions<sup>7</sup>.

On occasions, though rare, the House may, by a substantive motion, evolve procedure to meet a situation not specifically provided for in the Rules<sup>8</sup>.

8. For instance (i) on 25 September 1951, the Lok Sabha was discussing a motion regarding the conduct of a member, when, in the midst of discussion, the member submitted his resignation from the membership of the Lok Sabha. The House, however, decided to continue the discussion

During the Ninth Lok Sabha, on 28 February 1991, the Speaker received a notice of motion dated 27 February 1991, signed by Prof. Madhu Dandavate and 107 other members of the Lok Sabha for presenting an address to the President of India for removal of Justice V. Ramaswami, Judge of the Supreme Court of India. On finding the notice of motion in order, the Speaker admitted it on 12 March 1991 and pursuant to section 3(2) of the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968, constituted a Committee consisting of Justice P.B. Sawant, Judge of the Supreme Court of India as the Chairman and Justice P.D. Desai, Chief Justice of the High Court at Bombay and Justice O. Chinnappa Reddy, former Judge of the Supreme Court of India as members, for making an investigation into the grounds on which the removal of Justice V. Ramaswami was prayed for. While announcing the appointment of the Committee, the Speaker observed that the motion would remain pending till the receipt of the Report of the Inquiry Committee. Before the Committee could submit its report, the Ninth Lok Sabha was dissolved by the President i.e. on 13 March 1991. The question whether the motion lapsed or remained alive on the dissolution of the Lok Sabha was raised in a petition filed before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held:

It is true that Purushothaman Nambudiri case (AIR 1962 SC 694) dealt with a legislative measure and not a pending business in the nature of a motion. But, we are persuaded to the view that neither the doctrine that dissolution of a House passes a sponge over parliamentary slate nor the specific provisions contained in any rule or rules framed under Article 118 of the Constitution determine the effect of dissolution on the motion for removal of a Judge under Article 124. The reason is that Article 124(5) and the law made thereunder exclude the operation of Article 118 in this area<sup>9</sup>.

Accordingly, the notice of motion remained alive.

The Tenth Lok Sabha was constituted on 20 June 1991. The Justice Sawant Committee which submitted its Report to the Speaker of the Tenth Lok Sabha in July 1992, found that the Judge was guilty of misbehaviour. The Report was laid on and passed a motion that the conduct of the member was such that he deserved expulsion from the House; (ii) On 15 July 1957, the House adopted a motion authorising the Speaker to send a person, who had impersonated a member, to a Medical Board for examination of his mental state and to take such further action as the Speaker may think fit on receipt of the report of the Board; (iii) On 6 August 1987, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee of the Houses to enquire into the Bofors Contract; and (iv) On 6 August 1992, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee of the Houses to enquire into irregularities in Securities and Banking transactions; (v) On 26 April 2001, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee of the Houses on the Stock Market Scam and matters relating thereto; (vi) on 22 August 2003, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee on Pesticide Residues in and Safety Standards for Soft Drinks, Fruit Juice and Other Beverages; (vii) On 17 August 2006, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee to examine the Constitutional and Legal Position Relating to Office of Profit; (viii) On 24 February 2011, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Joint Committee to examine prescriptions and irregularities in the allocation and pricing of Telecom Licenses and Spectrum; and (ix) On 21 December 2011, the House adopted a motion to appoint a Committee of both the Houses to be called the Committee for Welfare of Other Backward Classes (OBCs).

After the Report was laid on the Table of the House, notices were received from several members for consideration of the motion for presentation of an Address to the President under article 124(4) and the Report of the Committee. As this was the first case of its kind, the following procedure was evolved by the Speaker in consultation with the leaders of Parties and Groups in the House:

- (i) Notices of only those members would be taken into account who were signatory to the notice of motion which was given during the Ninth Lok Sabha; and
- (ii) The provisions governing discussion on motions under Rule 184 of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business be broadly followed, as far as possible.

The following two motions were included in the names of five members in order of priority in the List of Business for 10 May 1993:

- (i) Motion for presenting an address to the President of India under clause (4) of article 124 of the Constitution; and
- (ii) Motion for considering the Report of the Inquiry Committee constituted to investigate into the grounds on which the removal of Justice V. Ramaswami, Judge of the Supreme Court of India, was prayed for.

Before the motions were taken up for consideration, the Speaker made the following announcement in the House:

The matter may be dealt with in a very careful and sound manner to be very precise, correct and just and not to repeat the points, not to bring in extraneous points and not to complicate the issue to arrive at correct conclusions very neatly. Only a few members may speak. The Report given by the Judges Committee and the defence of the Judge have been made available to the members well in time. The debate on the motion may be concluded today itself; if need be, it may continue even beyond 6 p.m. About this, I leave it to the judgement of the House. The mover of this Motion may move the motion and then speak. The Judge or the lawyer of the Judge may be allowed to make submission to the House in this matter and then withdraw. The mover of the motion may reply to the debate; then the motion and Address to be presented to the President of India may be put to vote. The motion and the Address to be passed need the support of majority of the total membership of the House and also the majority of not less than two-thirds members of the House present and voting<sup>10</sup>.

Somnath Chatterjee (as member), who was first in priority, moved both the motions, which were discussed together. He also spoke on the motions. Thereafter, Kapil Sibal, the Counsel for Justice V. Ramaswami, made submissions from the Bar of the House on behalf of Justice V. Ramaswami. After making his submissions the Counsel withdrew. Other members were also allowed to speak. The discussion on the motions continued on 11 May 1993. After the members had spoken, the mover of the motions replied to the debate. The motion and the address were then put to the vote of the House. As a result of the division (Ayes: 196 and Noes: Nil), the motion and the Address were declared as not carried by the requisite majority in accordance with clause (4) of article 124 of the Constitution<sup>11</sup>.

Likewise, on 20 February 2009, 57 members of Rajya Sabha gave notice of a motion for removal of Justice Soumitra Sen, Judge, Calcutta High Court under article 217(1)(c) read with article 124(4) of the Constitution on the grounds of misappropriation of large sums of money in his capacity as receiver appointed by the Calcutta High Court and misrepresentation of facts with regard to misappropriation of money before that Court. The Chairman, Rajya Sabha, admitted the motion and constituted an Inquiry Committee under the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968 for the purpose of making an investigation into the grounds on which the removal of Justice Sen was prayed for.

In pursuance of section 4 of the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968, read with rules 9 and 10 of the Judges (Inquiry) Rules, 1969, the Report of the Inquiry Committee was simultaneously laid on the Table of Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha on 10 November 2010.

The Inquiry Committee opined that Justice Soumitra Sen was guilty of misbehaviour under article 124(4) read with proviso (b) to article 217(1) of the Constitution.

The Motion for Impeachment of Justice Sen was taken up by the Rajya Sabha on 17 August 2011. After the mover of the motion had concluded his speech, Justice Sen addressed the Rajya Sabha. The discussion on Motion continued thereafter. On 18 August 2011, the Rajya Sabha passed an Address for presentation to the President praying for removal from Office of Justice Soumitra Sen of Calcutta High Court. A message in this regard was transmitted to the Lok Sabha Secretariat on the same day. On 19 August 2011, the message was reported in the Lok Sabha. The Address passed by the Rajya Sabha for presenting to the President was also laid on the Table of Lok Sabha.

After reporting of the message, the Speaker on 19 August 2011 decided to call a meeting of the Business Advisory Committee on 23 August 2011 to fix a day for consideration of the Address, in pursuance of rule 16(7) of the Judges (Inquiry) Rules.

In the meantime, Subhash Bhattacharyya, Advocate, Calcutta High Court and Counsel to Justice Soumitra Sen, vide fax letter dated 19 August 2011, addressed to Secretary-General, made, inter alia, the following requests:—

- (a) Date of hearing be fixed on 5 September 2011 subject to the permission of the Speaker;

- (b) Justice Sen is also given a chance to reply at the end to the points/allegations to be made by the members of the Parliament.

As the provisions of the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968 and rules made thereunder contained ambiguities in regard to the procedure to be followed by the other House in case the Motion for presenting an Address to the President for removal of a Judge is adopted by one House and transmitted to the other, a brief discussing article 124(4) of the Constitution and relevant provisions of the Judges (Inquiry) Act and rules made thereunder and the procedure proposed to be followed by the Lok Sabha was sent to the Attorney General of India seeking his opinion on the issue. The Attorney General opined, inter-alia,—

- (i) if the Address passed by the Rajya Sabha is supported by the Lok Sabha then an Address shall be prepared by the Lok Sabha Secretariat.
- (ii) the form of Address must be suitably changed to reflect the fact that the Address adopted by the Rajya Sabha is supported by the Lok Sabha.
- (iii) the passing, by Lok Sabha, of the Address supported by Rajya Sabha may be duly intimated to the Rajya Sabha also.

These points along with the request made by Subhas Bhattacharyya were placed for consideration of the Business Advisory Committee.

The BAC made the following decisions:—

- (i) the House will take up, on 5 September 2011, at 2 P.M. – (a) the Address supported by the Rajya Sabha, and (b) the Address to be presented to the President, and conclude the process of removal on 6 September 2011;
- (ii) the Speaker shall propose both the Addresses;
- (iii) after the Speaker has proposed to the House the Address supported by the Rajya Sabha, the Judge shall be given the opportunity of being heard for two hours, which shall not be extended; and
- (iv) the Speaker may consider from legal point of view the request of Justice Sen, of giving him a chance to reply at the end to the points/allegations to be made by the members of Parliament.

Fixation of date for taking up impeachment motion was published in Bulletin-Part II dated 25 August 2011.

On the question, whether Justice Sen may also be given a chance to reply at the end to the points/allegations to be made by the members, it was decided that the opinion of Attorney General may be obtained on this point also.

The Attorney General opined that Justice Sen has no such right and the Lok Sabha should not accede to his request.

The following procedure was approved to be adopted in the Lok Sabha—

- (i) Speaker may propose to the House that the House do consider the Motion and the Address supported by the Rajya Sabha and that the House Supports the Motion and the Address supported by the Rajya Sabha;

- (ii) If the Motion and the Address at (i) are adopted, Speaker may then propose the Address (supported by Rajya Sabha and suitably changed) to the vote of the House;
- (iii) The Address mentioned at (ii) shall be presented to the President and the Motion referred to in (i) shall be annexed with the Address.

Entries for the List of Business were approved accordingly.

On 2 September 2011, there were reports that Justice Sen had submitted his resignation to the President. In view of the reports, the opinion of the Attorney General was sought as to whether the Lok Sabha should proceed with the Motion for removal of Justice Sen in case the resignation tendered by him is accepted by the President. The Attorney General opined that “notwithstanding the resignation, the Lok Sabha should proceed with the motion for removal of Justice Sen”. In view of the opinion, (i) Motion to consider and support the Motion and the Address supported by the Rajya Sabha; and (ii) an Address by Lok Sabha for presentation to the President praying for removal from Office of Justice Soumitra Sen of Calcutta High Court, were included in the List of Business for 5 September 2011 for being taken up at 14.00 hours. Justice Sen and Secretary to the President were also informed about inclusion of the Motions in the List of Business of the House.

When House met at 14.00 hours, Minister of Law informed the House about the resignation of Soumitra Sen. Thereupon, the Speaker, after taking sense of the House, decided not to proceed with items regarding removal of Justice Soumitra Sen.

A message was sent to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat informing them accordingly.

There have also been instances when motions were brought before the House to give effect to the recommendations of Inquiry Committees constituted by the Speaker. In one such instance, after disclosure by a TV channel of improper conduct on the part of ten members of Lok Sabha, the Speaker<sup>12</sup> requested the concerned members not to attend the House until further decision and constituted a five-member Committee headed by Pawan Kumar Bansal to inquire into the allegations of improper conduct and report.

The Report of the Inquiry Committee was laid on the Table of the House on 22 December 2005. On 23 December 2005, the Leader of the House, Pranab Mukherjee, moved the following motion under Rule 184, which was adopted by the House:

“That this House having taken note of the Report of the Committee to inquire into the allegations of improper conduct on the part of some members, constituted on 12 December 2005, accepts the findings of the Committee that the conduct of the ten members of Lok Sabha, namely, Shri Narendra Kumar Kushwaha, Shri Annasaheb M.K. Patil, Shri Manoj Kumar, Shri Y.G. Mahajan, Shri Pradeep Gandhi, Shri Suresh Chandel, Shri Ramsevak Singh, Shri Lal Chandra Kol, Shri Rajaram Pal and Shri Chandra Pratap Singh was unethical and unbecoming of members of Parliament and their continuance as members of Lok Sabha is untenable and resolves that they may be expelled from the membership of Lok Sabha.”

12. L.S. Deb., 12-12-2005, cc. 655-56.

The amendment, for referring the matter to the Committee of Privileges, moved by Prof. Vijay Kumar Malhotra, was negatived.

As the above motion did not concern any Ministry of the Government of India, the usual practice of forwarding the motion to the concerned Ministry was not adhered to.

In another instance, after a TV News Channel on 19 December 2005, showed some members of Lok Sabha allegedly indulging in improper conduct in the matter of implementation of Members of Parliament Local Area Development Scheme, the Speaker<sup>13</sup>, requested the concerned members not to attend the House until the matter was looked into and a decision taken thereon. He constituted a seven-member Committee headed by Pawan Kumar Bansal to inquire into the alleged improper conduct. The Report of the Committee was laid on the Table of the House on 14 March 2006<sup>14</sup>.

On 18 March 2006, the Leader of the House, Pranab Mukherjee, tabled notice of the following Motion under Rule 184, which was admitted by the Speaker:

“That this House having taken note of the Report of the Committee to inquire into allegations of improper conduct on the part of some members in the matter of implementation of MPLAD Scheme, laid on the Table of the House on 14 March 2006, reprimands Sarvashri Alemao Churchill, Paras Nath Yadav, Faggan Singh Kulaste and Ram Swaroop Koli, MPs and resolves that:

- (a) the period of absence from the sittings of the House and the Committees of the said four members on a request made by Speaker, Lok Sabha on 20 December 2005, may be deemed to be their suspension from the membership of the House till date; and
- (b) the suspension of the said four members from the membership of the House may continue till 22 March 2006.”

The motion was moved by Pranab Mukherjee and adopted by the House on 20 March 2006<sup>15</sup>. As the above motion also did not concern any Ministry of the Government of India, the usual practice of forwarding the motion to the concerned Ministry was not adhered to in this case also.

In the wake of arrest of a member, Babubhai K. Katara, for trying to illegally take two persons (one woman and a boy) abroad on the passport of his wife and his son, the Speaker, Lok Sabha, on 16 May 2007, constituted a Committee to Inquire into Misconduct of Members of Lok Sabha. The Committee had a broad remit to look into all aspects of the misconduct of the members.

On 20 May 2007, Speaker referred the matter to the Committee. The Committee laid their Third Report on the Table of the House on 20 October 2008. On the same day, the Leader of the House, Pranab Mukherjee, tabled a notice of the following motion under Rule 184, which was admitted by the Speaker:

“That this House having taken note of the Third Report of the Committee to Inquire into Misconduct of Members of Lok Sabha accepts the findings of the Committee that Shri Babubhai K. Katara has committed an act of grave misconduct which has brought disrepute to and maligned the image of entire fraternity of legislators and resolves that he may be expelled from the membership of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha.”

The Motion was moved and adopted on 21 October 2008.

In the meantime, a case relating to allegations against a member (Rajesh Kumar Manjhi) for having misused official Air Journeys, was referred by the Speaker to the Inquiry Committee. The Committee, in their First Report, which was laid on the Table of the House on 23 August 2007, recommended that the member be suspended for 30 sittings of the House for misuse by him of his official Air Journeys and wilfully suppressing truth from the Committee and giving false evidence before the Committee.

On 29 August 2007, the Leader of the House, Pranab Mukherjee, tabled notice of the following motion under Rule 184, which was admitted by the Speaker:

“That this House while agreeing with the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Committee to Inquire into Misconduct of Members of Lok Sabha, in their First Report, laid on the Table of the House on 23 August 2007, reprimands Shri Rajesh Kumar Manjhi for his misconduct and for having committed contempt of the Committee as well as the House, resolves that:

- (i) Shri Rajesh Kumar Manjhi may be suspended from the membership of the House for thirty sittings of the House; and
- (ii) He may be restrained from taking his spouse or companion on official tours till the conclusion of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha.”

The motion was moved and adopted on 30 August 2007<sup>16</sup>.

A motion may also be moved to give effect to the recommendations of the Committee of Privileges. On 4 August 2005, Dr. Subhash C. Kashyap, former Secretary-General, Lok Sabha, during an interview on a TV Channel made certain comments on the decision of the Speaker disallowing the notice of adjournment tabled by a member, Kumari Mamta Banerjee.

Hannan Mollah, a member tabled a notice of question of privilege against Dr. Kashyap on 8 August 2005, which was referred by the Speaker to the Committee of Privileges. The Committee of Privileges tabled its Report on 19 May 2006. Based on the recommendations of the Committee, the Leader of the House, Pranab Mukherjee, moved the following motion for admonishing Dr. Kashyap, which was adopted on 23 May 2006<sup>17</sup> :

16. L.S. Deb., 30-8-2007, cc. 310-11. Also see, Chapter XII-Conduct of Members.

“That this House having taken note of the Third Report of the Committee of Privileges, laid on the Table of the House on 19 May 2006, agrees with the findings and conclusions of the Committee and resolves that Dr. Subhash C. Kashyap, former Secretary-General, Lok Sabha has committed a gross breach of privilege and contempt of the House by imputing motives to the Speaker, Lok Sabha in discharge of his duties and casting reflections on his impartiality and admonishes him for his grave misconduct.”

In order to avoid repetition of debate, a motion can be discussed together with motion for modification of Statutory Rules if the subject matter to be discussed is same<sup>18</sup>.

A substantive motion requires notice and can be moved only by the member who has given the notice. Where, however, a motion stands in the name of a Minister it may be moved by another Minister<sup>19</sup>, but the mover has to mention that he is moving it on behalf of the Minister in whose name the motion stands<sup>20</sup>. The moving of a motion in a form different from the terms of the notice is out of order, if the effect of such alteration in any way goes beyond the scope of the notice.

Except for the motion for election of the Speaker or the Deputy Speaker and the Motion of Thanks on the Address by the President, no substantive motion requires to be seconded.

The mover of a motion has the right of reply<sup>21</sup>.

When leave to the moving of a motion of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers has been granted, no substantive motion on policy matters is to be brought by the Government till the disposal of the motion of no-confidence<sup>22</sup>.

Substitute Motions

Motions moved in substitution of a motion for taking into consideration a matter or policy or a situation or a statement or any other matter are called substitute motions. Such motions, though drafted in such a way as to be capable of expressing an opinion by themselves, are not strictly speaking, substantive motions inasmuch as they depend upon the original motions<sup>23</sup>. Amendments to substitute motions are not permissible.

After the original motion that the policy or situation, etc. be taken into consideration has been placed before the House and the mover of the motion has concluded his speech, the House proceeds to discuss the matter. No further question is put thereon on conclusion of the debate. However, before the discussion commences, a member can move a substitute motion which, while conforming to the subject matter of the original motion, is so drawn up as to express an opinion of the House. The substitute motion, being in the nature of an amendment to the original motion, is also placed before the House and is discussed along with the original motion. At the end of the debate, the substitute motion only is put to the vote of the House<sup>24</sup>.

Prior to 1954, the practice was to allow amendments which sought to add words at the end of the original motion. On conclusion of the debate, both the original motion and the amendments were put to vote of the House. This practice was changed in January 1954, on the consideration that a motion in the form of a situation, or a statement, or any matter be taken into consideration was only a device to discuss a subject without asking the House to record its decision and so it was not necessary to put it to vote on conclusion of the debate; that only alternative or substitute motions precisely inviting a decision of the House might be put to vote of the House on conclusion of the discussion<sup>25</sup>.

Members who are absent at the time of moving of substitute motions may not be permitted to move their motions later in the day.

However, on 8 August 1966, when the adjourned debate on the Government motion re. economic situation was resumed, a member was permitted to move his substitute motion on submission made by him that he could not move his motion earlier on 26 July 1966, because of his suspension from the service of the House<sup>26</sup>.

Substitute motions are put to the vote of the House in the following order:—

- ❑ motions expressing disapproval of the policy or action of Government referred to in the original motion;
- motions making suggestions; and
- motions expressing approval of the policy or action of Government referred to in the original motion<sup>27</sup>.

However, the Speaker may, in his discretion, give priority to a motion expressing approval of Government's policy or action in the light of consensus in the House<sup>28</sup>.

Where any of the substantive motions moved in substitution of a motion for taking into consideration a matter or policy or a situation or a statement or any other matter is not put to the vote of the House by the Speaker, and any such other substantive motion in substitution of the original motion is passed by the House, the one not put to the House is deemed to have been negatived by the House or barred, as the case may be<sup>29</sup>.

Subsidiary Motions

Subsidiary motions depend upon or relate to other motions or emerge from some proceedings in the House. By themselves they have no meaning and are not capable of stating the decision of the House without reference to the original motion or proceedings of the House<sup>30</sup>.

Subsidiary motions are further divided into three categories: ancillary motions; superseding motions; and amendments.

Ancillary Motions : Ancillary motions are motions which are recognised by the practice of the House as the regular way of proceeding with various kinds of business, e.g. motions made in connection with various stages of a Bill, such as, that the Bill “be taken into consideration” or that the Bill “be referred to a Select or Joint Committee”, or that the Bill “be passed”<sup>31</sup>.

Superseding Motions : Superseding motions are motions which, though independent in form, are moved in the course of the debate on another question and seek to supersede that question. Such motions can be moved by any member who rises to speak on the question before the House.

Thus, in relation to the motion for taking into consideration a Bill, a superseding motion may ask for recommitment of the Bill to the Select or Joint Committee or its recirculation to elicit further opinion thereon, or for adjournment of the debate on the Bill<sup>32</sup>. Where the Speaker is of the opinion that the superseding motion is of a dilatory character inasmuch as no unforeseen or new circumstance has arisen to warrant recirculation or recommitment of the Bill, he is empowered to put the question upon it forthwith or even decline to propose the question<sup>33</sup>. However, when a superseding motion is moved and the Speaker does not hold it to be dilatory, the motion is proposed by him as a new question superseding the original question and has to be disposed of before the debate upon the original question can be resumed. But the debate upon such a motion must be strictly relevant to the reasons in support of the motion.

Amendments

An amendment is a subsidiary motion moved in the course of the debate upon another motion which interposes a new cycle of debate and decision between the proposal and decision on the main motion and question<sup>34</sup>. An amendment may relate to a clause of a Bill, resolution or motion or to an amendment to a clause of a Bill,

30. Dir. 41(2) (iii).

31. The motions are intimately connected with the procedure for Bills and as such are described in detail in Chapter XXII—‘Legislation’.

32. The motion for adjournment of the debate should be on substantive grounds and not merely to enable another item of business to come forward.—L.A. Deb., 20-3-1924, p. 2041. Thin attendance in the House is not sufficient ground for the Speaker to accept the motion for adjournment of the debate—L.A. Deb., 1-4-1937, p. 2515.

33. Rule 341; L.A. Deb., 10-3-1924, p. 1377; L.S. Deb., 11-4-1955, cc. 4846-47; 25-7-1955, c. 8407; 10-8-1955, cc. 9824-26; 18-2-1956, cc. 282-84; 20-2-1956, cc. 402-17.

34. May, P. 397.

resolution or motion.

The object of an amendment is either to modify a question before the House with a view to increasing its acceptability or to present to the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original question<sup>35</sup>.

A substitute motion also aims at bringing before the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original question, but is distinct from an amendment inasmuch as it replaces the entire motion. Unlike a substitute motion, an amendment modifies or substitutes only a part of the original motion and does not change all the words of the question before the House though it may bring a different proposition before the House. A substitute motion, if adopted, supersedes the original question which is then not put to the vote of the House but if an amendment is adopted, the original question is put, as amended.

Substitute motions to a substantive motion are not admissible; only amendments can be moved. Amendments to substitute motions are not permissible.

However, when a substantive motion regarding appointment of a Joint Committee to enquire into issues arising from the Report of the Swedish National Audit Bureau on Bofors Contract was admitted and discussed on 29 and 30 July and 3, 4 and 6 August 1987, substitute motions to the substantive motion were admitted and circulated to members as amendments.

When an amendment is moved but not put to the vote of the House by the Speaker and the original motion is passed by the House, the amendment is deemed to have been negatived by the House<sup>36</sup>.

Form of Amendment

Amendments may be divided into three classes: amendments for omission of certain words, figures or marks; amendments for substitution of certain words, figures or marks; and amendments for addition or insertion of certain words, figures or marks.

When the proposed amendment is to omit certain words, figures or marks, the Speaker puts the question, "That in the original motion, the words, figures or marks (here the words, figures or marks proposed to be omitted) be omitted". When the proposed amendment is for substitution, the Speaker says: "That in the original motion for (here the words, figures or marks proposed to be dropped,) substitute (here the words, figures or marks sought to be substituted)". When the amendment proposes to insert or add certain words, figures or marks, the Speaker says: "That in the original motion, after (here the word or words or figures or marks after which the proposed word or words or figures or marks are sought to be inserted) insert," or "That in the original motion, add at the end...," as the case may be. If any of the amendments is adopted, the question is put as amended; otherwise the question is put as originally given.

Notice of Amendment

Notice of an amendment to a motion, like any other notice, has to be given in writing addressed to the Secretary-General, signed by the member giving notice and handed in at the Parliamentary Notice Office within the notified hours.

Notices are required to be given on the standard printed forms. The practice of giving notices on scraps of paper or written in pencil has been deprecated by the Speaker<sup>37</sup>.

Notice of an amendment to a motion is to be given one day before the day on which the motion is to be considered, unless the Speaker allows the amendment to be moved without such notice<sup>38</sup>. An amendment of which adequate notice has not been given may be allowed to be moved when adequate notice of an identical motion has been given by another member and that member declines to move his amendment<sup>39</sup>.

The Speaker may also waive the condition of notice of amendments with the concurrence of the House<sup>40</sup>. Amendments tabled by Ministers may, with the Speaker's permission, be moved even without notice but if public interest is in any way affected, consideration may be postponed to the following day with a view to enabling members to consider the implication of the amendments<sup>41</sup>. The Speaker may also waive the requirement of notice if the amendment is acceptable both to the mover and the Government<sup>42</sup>. Last minute amendments may also be admitted, if agreed to and accepted by the mover of the motion<sup>43</sup>.

Mode of Moving Amendments

Amendments are moved in the interval between the proposing and the putting of the question before the House, that is, during the time which is normally used for discussion. An amendment may be moved after the question has been proposed by the Speaker, and it can be moved only by the member in whose name it stands on the list of amendments<sup>44</sup>. Where an amendment stands jointly in the names of more than one member and has been moved by one of them, the others cannot move it again but may be permitted to speak in support of it<sup>45</sup>. A member who has given notice of an amendment is not entitled, on that account, to precedence over a member who rises to speak on the question<sup>46</sup>.

Admissibility of Amendments

In order that an amendment to a motion may be admissible, it must satisfy the following conditions:

An amendment should be relevant to, and within the scope of the motion to which it is proposed. It should not introduce new or foreign matter or widen the scope of the motion<sup>47</sup>.

An amendment which has merely the effect of a negative vote is not admissible<sup>48</sup>. On the same principle, amendments purporting to omit a clause of a Bill are out of order and are not circulated<sup>49</sup>. An amendment which in effect would constitute a direct negation of the original motion has been held to be out of order<sup>50</sup>, as also one which is contradictory to the text of the motion<sup>51</sup>. Likewise, an amendment which is substantially the same as the original motion is also out of order<sup>52</sup>.

An amendment on a question should not be inconsistent with a previous decision on the same question<sup>53</sup>. Hence, an amendment is out of order if it is inconsistent with the words in the motion which have been already agreed upon, or with an amendment already agreed to, or if it is substantially the same as another already negated.

In addition to these conditions, the general conditions of admissibility of amendments as in the case of Bills, namely, that an amendment should not be unintelligible, vague and indefinite<sup>54</sup>, meaningless or frivolous, and that it should be in the form in which it can be put to vote of the House by the Speaker, apply mutatis mutandis in the case of amendments to motions also.

Amendments to Proposed Amendments

An amendment to an amendment is also admissible. In such cases, the question by the Speaker deals with the first amendment as if it were a distinct question, and with the second as if it were an ordinary amendment. The original question is, for a time, laid aside, and the amendment becomes, as it were, a substantive question itself. An amendment to a proposed amendment, however, cannot be moved if it intends to leave out all the words of such proposed amendment. In such a case, the amendment to a proposed amendment can be admitted only as an independent amendment to the original question and can be moved only after the first amendment has been negatived or withdrawn.

Selection of Amendments

The Speaker has the power to select the amendments to be proposed in respect of any motion and may, if he thinks fit, call upon any member who has given notice of an amendment to give such explanation of the object of the amendment as may enable him to form a judgment upon it<sup>55</sup>.

Where a particular amendment is selected by the Speaker, the decision has to be accepted by the House<sup>56</sup>, unless there is unanimity in the House relating to any other amendment<sup>57</sup>.

Scope of Debate on an Amendment

The debate on an amendment which presents to the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original motion is not restricted to the amendment but includes the purpose both of the amendment and of the motion, because both matters are under the consideration of the House and it may accept either of the two propositions. If the amendment is intended only to modify the question by leaving out or adding words, the debate is restricted to the desirability of the omission or addition of those words. Similarly, if it be intended to leave out certain words only and substitute other words, then both the original and the proposed words are equally under consideration.

Repetition and Withdrawal of Motions

The general rule regarding motions is that a motion must not raise a question substantially identical with one on which the House has already given a decision in the same session<sup>58</sup>. However, if the House wants to revise its decision taken earlier in the same session, this rule has to be suspended<sup>59</sup>.

A member who has made a motion can withdraw it only by leave of the House<sup>60</sup>. The leave is signified not upon question but by the Speaker taking the pleasure of the House. If any dissentient voice is heard or a member rises to continue the debate, the Speaker forthwith puts the original motion<sup>61</sup>. A motion which is not pressed for a division by the mover is deemed to have been withdrawn by leave of the House and it is not necessary in that case to take the pleasure of the House<sup>62</sup>.

Only the mover of the motion can ask for withdrawal of his motion. A motion may be withdrawn after it has been put to the House and a division has been called, but the mover must ask for its withdrawal before the actual division takes place<sup>63</sup>. In asking for leave to withdraw his motion, the member is not entitled to make a speech<sup>64</sup>.

The right of a member to withdraw a motion is not absolute and unrestricted. Thus, a clause of a Bill cannot be withdrawn; the Bill is introduced as a whole and a member cannot withdraw a clause after having placed the whole Bill before the House. If a clause is to be omitted from a Bill, it has to be put to vote of the House and negatived<sup>65</sup>. Further, if an amendment has been proposed to a motion, the original motion cannot be withdrawn until the amendment has been disposed of<sup>66</sup>.

If it is found in the course of the discussion that an amendment which has been allowed to be moved is out of order, the Speaker has the right to withdraw the amendment from further consideration of the House<sup>67</sup>.

Motion for Discussion on a Matter of General Public Interest

Save insofar as is otherwise provided in the Constitution or in the Rules, no discussion on a matter of general public interest can take place in the House except on a motion made with the consent of the Speaker<sup>68</sup>. Even after admitting the motion, the Speaker can disallow a part of it if it comes to his notice that that point violates any of the conditions of admissibility<sup>69</sup>.

Notice of such a motion, like any other notice, is given in writing addressed to the Secretary-General<sup>70</sup>. No period for notice of such motions has been prescribed. Notices can be tabled from the date following the date of issue of summons for a session. Notices of motions regarding statements to be made in the House by Ministers or statements, reports and papers to be laid on the Table are entertained from 10.00 hours on the day the List of Business wherein the item has been included is circulated to members. In case that day happens to be Saturday, Sunday or a public holiday, the notices are entertained from 10.00 hours on the next working day<sup>71</sup>. In case a Supplementary List of Business is circulated in the House in regard to a statement, the notices in respect of that statement, received within 15 minutes of circulation of the List of Business, are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority determined by ballot. In case an announcement is made by the Chair about a statement to be made by a Minister in the House, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the announcement is made by the Chair and the notices received within 15 minutes of announcement by the Chair are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and that their inter se priority determined by ballot. In case a statement is made without being listed in the List of Business or Supplementary List of Business, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the statement is actually made in the House and the notices received within 15 minutes of the completion of the statement by the Minister are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority determined by ballot. All notices are to be delivered in the Parliamentary Notice Office and not handed over at the Table of the House and only the time of the receipt of the notice in the Parliamentary Notice Office is taken into account.

place and date; address of the member giving notice; member's signature and division number; and text of the motion in precise language.

Further, a notice of motion by a private member is required to be accompanied by a list of points for discussion on the proposed motion and a brief explanatory memorandum so as to enable the Speaker to decide the admissibility of the motion.

A notice signed by more than one member is deemed to have been tabled by the first signatory only.

Forms of Motion

No particular form has been prescribed for motion for raising discussion on a matter of general public interest. It may be in the form of a declaration of opinion or a recommendation; or it may be in a form so as to record approval or disapproval by the House of an act or policy of Government or express concern or commend, urge or request an action or take note of a document or to consider a policy, statement or situation. Usually, the notices are tabled in two forms: under the first form the House takes note of a document laid on the Table while under the second the House considers a policy or situation or statement or any other matter.

The first form of motion is generally used in respect of a motion which seeks to discuss a report, a statement, etc. laid on the Table. It has now become an established practice that no discussion on a report can take place unless it has been laid on the Table<sup>72</sup>. The motion in this form is a non-committal substantive motion, and is submitted to the vote of the House at the end of discussion<sup>73</sup>, and amendments can be moved thereto, approving or disapproving the report, etc.<sup>74</sup>.

72. Reports of the Estimates Committee and the Committee on Public Undertakings are not discussed in the House. A motion with reference to any specific recommendation contained in any of the Reports may, however, be considered. A Report of the Public Accounts Committee was discussed on 22 August 1966, as it pertained to a specific issue. The scope of debate was limited only to observations of the Committee on that issue. No new accusations, fresh blame or other issues were raised during the debate—L.S. Deb., 22-8-1966, cc. 6076-77.

However, if this form of motion is used by a private member in order to ‘take note’ of a policy of the Government with special reference to one particular aspect of that policy, an amendment by another member seeking approval of the policy in general is inadmissible<sup>75</sup>.

The second form of motion is generally used when a policy or situation or statement or any other matter is to be taken into consideration. The motion in this form is not submitted to the vote of the House and at the close of the debate no further question is put. However, if a member has moved a substantive motion in substitution of the original motion duly approved by the Speaker, the vote of the House thereon is taken<sup>76</sup>.

A substitute motion cannot be moved after the discussion on the original motion has commenced<sup>77</sup>. It has been held that the mover of a motion for taking into consideration a policy or situation or statement, etc., can himself move a substitute motion without withdrawing the original motion<sup>78</sup>.

Censure Motion

In view of the constitutional provisions regarding the collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers to the Lok Sabha [article 75(3)], a motion of no-confidence can be moved only against the Council of Ministers as a whole and not against any individual Minister. However, there is nothing in the Rules either for or against a censure motion being moved against a single Minister under Rules relating to motions in general.

On 4 August 1977, when a censure motion moved by a member against a single Minister seeking to record the House’s “indignation against and disapproval of the conduct” of the Minister for his “acts of commission and omission” came up before the House, several members questioned, on points of order, the admissibility of the motion inasmuch as: (i) there was no provision in the Rules for censure motion against an individual Minister; (ii) there was a separate procedure for a motion of no-confidence; (iii) the censure motion was inadmissible even under Rule 184 as it raised three different matters, sought to revive discussion on a matter already discussed and one of the matters raised was also subject of an inquiry. The Speaker ruled that he did not find any Rule either for or against such a motion being admitted and, therefore, going by precedent, he had admitted it. As for the motion mentioning three issues, the Speaker held that they were actually three illustrations relating to the same issue. The portion relating to an incident which was subject of inquiry in a criminal case, was, however, ruled out by the Speaker<sup>79</sup>.

Motions regarding areas of divergence between the Public Accounts Committee and the Government have been moved and discussed in the House—L.S. Deb., 28-11-1967, cc. 3318-68.

Motions regarding working or annual reports of Public Undertakings, which are under examination by the Committee on Public Undertakings, are not admitted as the discussion in the House might prejudice examination of the Undertaking by the Committee.

Censure motion can thus be moved against the Council of Ministers or an individual Minister or a group of Ministers for their failure to act or not to act or for their policy, and may express regret, indignation or surprise of the House at the failure of the Minister or Ministers. The motion should however be specific and self-explanatory so as to record the reasons for the censure, precisely and briefly<sup>80</sup>. The Speaker's decision whether the motion is in order or not for any reason is final<sup>81</sup>.

No leave of the House is required to move a censure motion. It is in the discretion of the Government to find time and to fix a date for its discussion. Such a motion is governed by the rules applicable to motions in general and it is admitted as a No-Day-Yet-Named Motion and published in the Bulletin<sup>82</sup>.

80. Some of the forms of the censure motions discussed in the Lok Sabha are as under:—

- (i) That this House resolves that Lalit Narain Mishra, a member of this House and a member of Cabinet, be removed from the membership of this House for committing serious improprieties and malpractices as could be seen from the Report of the Commission of Enquiry into the Affairs of Bharat Sevak Samaj and in particular, as reported in the said Commission Reports in Volume 11 page 97, paragraphs 29.94, 29.95, 29.96; page 98 paragraph 29.100; page 103 paragraphs 29.128, 29.129; page 110 paragraphs 29.146, 29.147; page 126 paragraph (xxi) and page 127 paragraph 29.194.—L.S. Deb., 18-12-1974, cc. 257-408.
- (ii) That having considered the acts of commission and omission on the part of the Home Minister with respect to the following matters, namely:
  - (a) that he has been misusing the floor of the House to make baseless and irresponsible statements as instanced, among others, by his allegation on 13 July 1977 replying to the debate on Demands for Grants for the Home Ministry that there was a preparation and thinking (Vichar) on the part of the previous Government to shoot the political leaders in detention, and
  - (b) that he, misusing his official position, meddled with the affairs of independent constitutional bodies as evidenced, among others, by his conduct in withdrawing from the files of the Election Commission a letter dated 5 May 1977, he had written in his capacity as the leader of the B.L.D.,

this House hereby records its indignation against and disapproval of the conduct of the Home Minister.—L.S. Deb., 4-8-1977, cc. 295-391; 5-8-1977, cc. 260-83.

81. L.S. Deb., 19-8-1968, cc. 2714-2840; 4-8-1977, cc. 295-391; 5-8-1977, cc. 260-83.

82. Rule 189. See, for instance, Bn. (II), 29-7-1977, para 249.

The following procedure was followed when notices of censure motions were received against an individual Minister:

A censure motion seeking to drop a Minister from the Council of Ministers is inadmissible as the Council of Ministers is collectively responsible to the Lok Sabha.

During the Third Session (7LS), Jyotirmoy Bosu tabled notice of following censure motion:

“The House note with deep agony the statement made by Law Minister today (28.7.1980) in reply to Calling Attention on Justice Srivastava and recommend, since he has violated Article 121 of the Constitution, which he is oath bound to abide by, he should be dropped from the Council of Ministers and be censured as a M.P.”

As the provisions of article 121 of Constitution were not attracted and as Council of Ministers is collectively responsible to the Lok Sabha [article 75(3)], the notice was disallowed.

During the Fifth Session (13 LS), several members tabled notices of motion under rule 184 seeking removal of three Ministers from the Council of Ministers on the ground that charges had been framed against them by a trial Court in a criminal case. On 11 December 2000, the Speaker disallowed the notices on the ground that the matter was sub judice and was not of a recent occurrence and also against the principle of collective responsibility.

On the same day, 45 other members tabled identical notices of motion under rule 184 seeking resignation of the concerned Ministers on the ground of propriety as the Ministers had been charge-sheeted by a Court in a criminal case. All the notices were disallowed by the Speaker as issue of propriety was not governed under any rule of the Rules of Procedure and therefore, it could not be discussed on the floor of the House.

As members insisted on having a discussion under rule 184, it was decided at a meeting of Leaders of Parties to discuss the matter under rule 184 on a mutually agreed upon text. Accordingly, the following motion was discussed on 13 and 14 December 2000 and negatived:

“That this House calls upon the Prime Minister to drop three Ministers from his Government, namely, Shri Lal Krishna Advani, Dr. Murali Manohar Joshi and Kumari Uma Bharti against whom prima facie charges have been found to exist for their involvement in the demolition of the Babri Masjid on 6th December 1992 and disapproves the stand of the Prime Minister seeking to exonerate the concerned Ministers.”

A censure motion relating to matters under examination by a Financial Committee is not admitted and the member advised to furnish the pertinent information to the Committee<sup>83</sup>.

The member concerned was requested to make the notice specific, if it was not so. The notices were sent to the concerned Minister and the Prime Minister for their comments. The admissibility of the notices was decided in the light of comments received. The motion, as admitted, was published in Bulletin-Part (II) as No-Day-Yet-Named Motion and placed before the BAC for selection and allotment of time therefor.

83. L.S. Deb., 15-7-1982, cc. 241-44.

Censure motions relating to statements of Ministers in the nature of political comments/criticism made outside the House have been held to be inadmissible<sup>84</sup>.

Conditions of Admissibility

In order that a motion for discussion of a matter of general public interest may be admissible, it should raise substantially one definite issue; contain no arguments, inferences, ironical expressions, imputations or defamatory statements; avoid reference to the conduct or character of persons except in their public capacity<sup>85</sup>; be restricted to a matter of recent occurrence; raise no question of privilege<sup>86</sup>; revive no discussion of a matter which has been discussed in the same session; anticipate no discussion of a matter which is likely to be discussed in the same session; and not relate to any matter which is under adjudication by court of law having jurisdiction in any part of India<sup>87</sup>.

Likewise, no motion which seeks to raise discussion on a matter pending before a statutory tribunal or statutory authority performing judicial or quasi-judicial functions or a commission or court of inquiry is ordinarily permitted to be moved although the Speaker may, in his discretion, allow such matter being raised as it concerned with the procedure or subject or stage of enquiry, if he is satisfied that it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of such matter by the judicial authority concerned<sup>88</sup>. If a motion on such a matter is admitted for discussion, the Speaker at the commencement

84. During the 6th Session (8LS), C. Madhav Reddy tabled a notice of censure motion against the Minister of State for Public Enterprises (K.K. Tewari) re. statements made by him during his official tour to Andhra Pradesh against the State Government. The notice was disallowed as it was based on statements made by the Minister outside the House at party meetings and seemed to be in the nature of political comments/criticism.

During the 9th Session (8LS), C. Madhav Reddy tabled a notice of censure motion against the Minister of Home Affairs (Sardar Buta Singh) alleging that the Minister, during election campaign in Andhra Pradesh, made objectionable remarks against the State Government. The notice was sent to the Minister for his comments. The Minister denied the Press remarks attributed to him. The notice was not admitted on grounds that the notice: (i) lacked factual basis; and (ii) related to statements which were not made on the floor of the House but during election campaign in Andhra Pradesh which was normal political activity.

85. Conduct of Governor of a State can be discussed in the House on a motion only to the extent whether the Governor has acted in his discretion or on the advice of the Union.
86. On 15 December 1987, (9th Session - 8LS), a member gave a notice of a question of privilege against another member for making allegation on the floor of the House against the Minister of State in the Ministry of Commerce by making an untrue statement deliberately to mislead the House regarding 'cornering of licences by Bachchan Brothers in Kandla Free Trade Zone' during the discussion on "No-confidence Motion" on 10 December 1987. On 1 March 1988 (10th Session), the Speaker gave his ruling that no prima facie case of breach of privilege was involved in the matter and withheld his consent to the raising of the matter in the House as a question of privilege. Later on, another member tabled a notice under rule 184 regarding reference of the matter for investigation to the Committee of Privileges. The motion was admitted, discussed and adopted by the House on 5 May 1988. The matter was referred to the Committee of Privileges.
87. Rule 186.
For practice re. discussion on matters which are sub judice, see Chapter XLIII—Parliament and Judiciary, under the appropriate heading.
88. Rule 188.

of the discussion observes that members should not cast reflection on the conduct of the Judge holding the enquiry and that discussion should take place on limited aspects only<sup>89</sup>.

Apart from the conditions mentioned above, a motion is inadmissible if it—lacks factual basis or is based on unconfirmed Press reports; relates to an individual officer, and does not involve public interest or the responsibility of the Government, requiring their explanation; seeks to discuss the annual administrative report on the working of a Ministry, which has already been adequately discussed in the House; seeks to discuss a matter for the discussion of which there is a specific provision under the Constitution or in the rules; seeks to discuss a report, which has not been laid on the Table<sup>90</sup>; seeks to discuss the report of a Committee appointed by a State Government; and seeks to discuss a paper or document laid on the Table by a private member.

Likewise, motions seeking disapproval of Proclamations under article 356 or recommending to the President revocation of Proclamation<sup>91</sup> or regarding conduct of the Speaker or members of a State Legislature or happenings therein, or regarding conduct of a Chief Minister of a State or regarding leakage of Budget proposals without a prima facie case, or seeking reference of a matter to Supreme Court under article 143 of the Constitution or seeking to impose a ban on R.S.S. and its activities, or seeking discussion on a matter which may raise issues of classified nature impacting on national security<sup>92</sup>, or requires ratification of any treaty or agreement entered into with a foreign country by the Government unless the treaty itself contains such a provision<sup>93</sup> have been held to be inadmissible. Motion regarding conduct of a Governor of a State can be discussed<sup>94</sup>.

A motion or a part thereof may be disallowed by the Speaker if in his opinion it is an abuse of the right of moving a motion or is calculated to obstruct or prejudicially affect the procedure of the House or is in contravention of the Rules<sup>95</sup>. The Speaker has the inherent power to rule out a motion at any time before it is voted upon on the ground that it involves an abuse of the forms and procedure of the House<sup>96</sup>.

89. See for instance, L.S. Deb., 7-4-1966, c. 10030.

90. A motion regarding the Report of the Sarkaria Commission on Centre-State Relations, which was not laid on the Table of the House and placed in Parliament Library only, was admitted as the Report had become public document—Bn. (II), 1-3-1988, para 2134.

A part-discussed adjournment motion was converted into a motion under Rule 184 with the consent of the mover and the House<sup>97</sup>.

Admission of Notice and Allotment of Time

The notice of a motion for discussing a report which has been laid on the Table in pursuance of provision in a Statute is normally admitted by the Speaker. If Government is not willing to move a motion for consideration of a report on which it has taken certain decisions, any member may give notice to move a motion to that effect<sup>98</sup>. The admissibility of other notices is decided by the Speaker on the merits of each case and, in appropriate cases, after taking into consideration the facts and comments, if any, received from the Minister concerned; a motion once admitted by the Speaker and included in the List of Business is not changed<sup>99</sup>.

If several members table notices of similar motion and any one of the notices is admitted, the names of the other members giving notice of similar motion are bracketed on the admitted notice, the names of members inter se being arranged in the order in which the notices are received in point of time. The names of members from whom notices of similar motion may be received after a motion has been admitted and published in the Bulletin, are not bracketed on the admitted notice<sup>100</sup>.

No-Day-Yet-Named Motions

If the Speaker admits notice of a motion and no date is fixed for its discussion, it is called a 'No-Day-Yet-Named Motion', and a copy of the admitted motion is forwarded to the Minister concerned with the subject-matter of the motion. Where notices of a Government motion and a private member's motion are received on the same subject, Government motion is admitted and private member's motion is disallowed. If a private member's motion is admitted and thereafter notice of a Government motion on the same subject is received, Government motion is also

On 24 July 1997, during the Fifth Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, the Leader of the Opposition (Atal Bihari Vajpayee) moved an Adjournment Motion regarding the serious situation arising out of passive attitude of Central Government over developments in Bihar. After some discussion, the Adjournment Motion was converted into a motion under Rule 184 with the consent of the mover and the House. Vajpayee tabled the notice of an amendment to bring the motion in conformity with the form prescribed for motions under Rule 184. The amendment was moved on 28 July and was adopted on 29 July 1997. The motion was negatived.—L.S. Deb., 24-7-1997, cc. 419-62; 28-7-1997, cc. 252-84; 29-7-1997, c. 466.

100. During the Third Session of the Thirteenth Lok Sabha, a member Bir Singh Mahato tabled notices under Rule 184 on following subjects:—

- (i) Rising illiteracy in the country;
- (ii) Continuous brain drain in various fields;
- (iii) Loss of lives, crops and property due to floods; and
- (iv) Incidents of atrocities on women.

The above notices were disallowed as notices on similar subjects had already been admitted and published vide Bn. (II), 17-2-2000 (Motion Nos. 46, 52, 59 & 61 respectively).

admitted. If it is decided to have a discussion on that subject by way of a motion, the Government motion gets precedence over private member's motion, as 'No-Day-Yet-Named Motions' are discussed in Government time.

Admitted notices of such motions may be placed before the Business Advisory Committee for selecting the motions for discussion in the House according to the urgency and importance of the subject-matter thereof and allotting time for the same. In a number of cases, the Business Advisory Committee also fixes date and time for discussion of motion<sup>101</sup>.

Unless the Speaker otherwise directs, No-Day-Yet-Named Motions and Short Duration Discussions<sup>102</sup> are arranged in such a way that no member moves or raises more than two of these during a session<sup>103</sup>.

Discussion on the Motion

On being called by the Speaker, the member in whose name the motion stands in the List of Business formally moves the motion and makes his speech. Thereafter, the Speaker places the motion before the House. Amendments or substitute motions, if any, are then moved by members and discussion follows. After the members and the Minister concerned have participated in the debate, the mover of the motion may speak again by way of reply. The amendments and substitute motions, if any, are put to the vote of the House and disposed of, after which the main motion may be put to vote.

101. Prior to 1960, the question as to which of the admitted motions should be brought before the House for discussion was left to the Government. Members were not satisfied with such a procedure and the matter was raised in the Business Advisory Committee at its sitting held on 14 November 1960, which then appointed a sub-Committee to select such motions. Min. (BAC-2LS) 14-12-1960; Min. (SC of BAC), 22-11-1960, 29-11-1960, 6-12-1960 and 13-12-1960.

Since 1971, the Business Advisory Committee itself has been selecting such motions for discussion in the House.

The BAC at its sitting held on 16 March 1988, selected a motion re. reference of an allegation made by a member against the Minister of State in the Ministry of Commerce for having made an untrue statement on the floor of the House regarding 'cornering of licenses by Bachchan Brothers in Kandla Free Trade Zone,' to the Committee of Privileges for investigation and report, for discussion on 24 March 1988. The motion was not included in the List of Business as the member was not well. The Committee, at its sitting held on 30 March 1988, decided to postpone the discussion on the motion until he recovered from illness and was able to participate in the discussion. The Committee, at its sitting held on 21 April 1988, fixed the motion for discussion on 2 May after the passing of Finance Bill, 1988. On 2 May 1988, at its sitting, the Committee, on the request of several members, fixed the discussion on the motion for 5 May 1988. The motion was discussed on 5 May 1988 and adopted.

Min. (BAC-8LS) 16-3-1988, 30-3-1988, 21-4-1988 and 2-5-1988; L.S. Deb., 5-5-1988, cc. 421-58.

102. Rule 193.

103. Dir. 113C.

However, the member in whose name the motion has been listed may decline to move the same<sup>104</sup>.

If the motion is adopted by the House, it is transmitted to the Minister concerned. Generally, motions in the form of 'take note' are adopted by the House. There have, however, been instances when such motions were negatived by the House<sup>105</sup>.

There may be combined discussion on a motion and a statutory resolution approving the Proclamation under article 356 issued by the President in relation to a State<sup>106</sup>, or a motion and a statutory resolution seeking disapproval of an Ordinance<sup>107</sup>.

Motions of Confidence

Though there is no specific rule in the Rules of Procedure relating to Motions of Confidence in the Council of Ministers, over the years, this new procedure has evolved as a result of the changing political composition of the Parliament. This practice has been followed in recent times whenever no single political party is in a position to command the majority of the House. In these cases, the procedure followed is that a one-line (notice of a) motion under Rule 184 "that this House expresses its Confidence in the Council of Ministers" is moved by the Prime Minister on the direction of the President<sup>108</sup>.

104. The following motion was included in the List of Business for 20 March 1997 in the name of Jaswant Singh:

"That taking serious note of the constitutional crisis in the State of Uttar Pradesh evidenced amongst others by widespread lawlessness described by the Union Home Minister as bordering on 'chaos, anarchy and destruction,' the rejection of this assessment of the Central Government by the Governor and his clarification that 'he had spoken to the Prime Minister,' therefore, this House do now resolve that the Governor of Uttar Pradesh be recalled forthwith."

When Jaswant Singh was called by the Chair to move the motion, he stated that the objective political situation was different from that obtaining at the time he had given notice of the motion and as he did not wish to cause any further contention between high functionaries of the Republic, he was not moving the motion.

106. Combined discussions were held on the motion regarding non-rejection of the reports of the Governors of Haryana and Uttar Pradesh recommending issue of Proclamations under article 356 of the Constitution and the statutory resolutions approving the Proclamations issued by the President in relation to the respective States. L.S. Deb., 21-11-1967, cc. 1727, 1738; 18-4-1968, cc. 1448, 1568.
- Combined discussion was held on motion regarding 'deteriorating law and order situation in the State of Bihar under President's rule and also on the situation arising out of the Chief Secretary of the State proceeding on long leave' and the statutory resolution approving the Proclamation issued by the President in relation to the State of Bihar. *L.S. ## CHAPTER XXVII

Discussion on Matters of Urgent Public Importance for Short Duration

Before 1953, there was no provision in the Rules for raising a discussion in the House on a matter of urgent public importance except by way of a resolution or a motion. Where members wanted to draw the attention of the Government to a matter of public importance, they resorted to a motion for adjournment<sup>1</sup>. As an adjournment motion is in the nature of a censure motion, recourse to such a procedure for raising discussion in the House on matters of any consequence was not considered proper in the nascent democratic republican set-up where the Government had become answerable to Parliament.

In order to provide opportunities to members to discuss matters of importance, a convention was, therefore, established in the Lok Sabha in March 1953 whereby members could raise discussion for short duration without a formal motion or vote thereon. Notice for raising such a discussion was to be given to the Speaker who would allot time therefor in consultation with the Government<sup>2</sup>.

This procedure, which started as a convention, later formed part of the Rules<sup>3</sup>.

Notice for Raising Discussion

A member desirous of raising discussion on a matter of urgent public importance for short duration has to give notice in writing to the Secretary-General, specifying clearly and precisely the matter proposed to be raised. The notice is required to be accompanied by an explanatory note stating reasons for raising discussion on the matter in question, and has to be supported by the signatures of at least two other members<sup>4</sup>. It has been ruled that only one matter can be raised for discussion in a notice<sup>5</sup>.

Notices for raising short duration discussions received between the dates of prorogation and issue of summons for the next session are not treated as valid and

The first such discussion under the convention took place on 25 March 1953—H.P. Deb. (II), 25-3-1953, cc. 2684-2906.

3. Rules 193-96.

4. Rule 193. For instance, during the Fourth Session of the Tenth Lok Sabha, several members tabled notices under Rule 193 re. scam involving operations in Government securities running into thousands of crores of rupees. Notices which were not accompanied by an explanatory note stating reasons for raising discussion on the matter in question and not supported by the signatures of at least two other members as required under the Rule were disallowed and only the notices fulfilling the above conditions were taken into consideration.

5. L.S. Deb., 20-3-1956, c. 7882.

no action is taken thereon. Notices are accepted from the day following the day on which the summons for the next session are issued to members.

With a view to giving fair chance to all members to give notices for raising these discussions, some set principles have been laid down for receipt and treatment of notices.

Notices for short duration discussions under rule 193 or under rule 184 or statements to be made in the House by Ministers, reports and papers to be laid on the Table are entertained from 10.00 hours on the day. The List of Business, wherein the item has been included, is circulated to members. In case that day happens to be a Saturday, Sunday or a public holiday, the notices are entertained from 10.00 hours on the next working day<sup>6</sup>.

Where a Supplementary List of Business is circulated in the House in regard to a statement, the notices in respect of that statement, received within 15 minutes of completion of circulation of the List of Business, are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot<sup>7</sup>.

In case an announcement is made by the Chair about a statement to be made by a Minister in the House, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the announcement is made by the Chair and the notices received within 15 minutes of the announcement by the Chair are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot<sup>8</sup>.

In a case where a statement is made without being listed in the List of Business or Supplementary List of Business, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the statement is actually made in the House<sup>9</sup> and the notices received within 15 minutes of the conclusion of the statement are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot<sup>10</sup>.

All notices are required to be delivered in the Parliamentary Notice Office and not handed over at the Table of the House and only the time of the receipt of the notice in the Parliamentary Notice Office is taken into account.

Conditions of Admissibility

When deciding admissibility of a notice for such discussions, the Speaker may call for any further information from the member who has given the notice and also from the Minister concerned, as he may consider necessary. If the Speaker is satisfied that the matter sought to be raised is urgent and is of sufficient importance to be raised in the House at an early date, he admits the notice. In case an early opportunity is otherwise available for discussion of the matter in question, the Speaker may disallow the notice<sup>11</sup>.

Notices to raise discussion on certain matters are inadmissible, which are:

- Not primarily the concern of the Government of India

However, discussion on the law and order situation in a State may be allowed if national security is involved and the Union Government's responsibility in some form is brought in<sup>12</sup> or where the Union Government has been consulted by the State Government<sup>13</sup>.

Notices for raising discussion regarding the conduct of Chief Minister of a State are inadmissible<sup>14</sup>.

Likewise, notice regarding report of a committee appointed by a State Government is also inadmissible.

- Based on vague and unsubstantiated allegations

Notice given by a member on 18 July 1959, for raising a discussion on alleged administrative inefficiency, financial confusion and irregularities in the admission of students to a University was disallowed as he did not furnish specific cases within his personal knowledge or any evidence in his possession to substantiate the allegations.

- Hypothetical in nature

Notice given on 11 August 1959, for raising a discussion on the constitutional position of the members of Lok Sabha from a State after the President had issued a Proclamation consequent upon the failure of constitutional machinery in that State

11. Rule 194. In exceptional cases, where the matter is important, the Speaker may, in his discretion, convert a half-an-hour discussion into a short duration discussion—see L.S. Deb., 5-8-1960, c. 1257.

(ii) During the Ninth Session of Thirteenth Lok Sabha, a short duration discussion on 'Godhra killings and subsequent violence in Gujarat' was held on 11 March 2002.

(iii) During the Twelfth Session of Fourteenth Lok Sabha, members of Opposition parties insisted on a discussion on violence in Nandigram, West Bengal in opposition to setting up of Special Economic Zone in Nandigram. As the issue related to law and order problem, a matter under the jurisdiction of State Government, the Speaker requested leaders of various political parties to come forward with a mutually agreed text on which discussion can be held in the House. Subsequently, discussion on the following text which was mutually agreed upon, was held on 21 November 2007:

"The proposal to set up Special Economic Zone in Nandigram, West Bengal and consequent large scale violence."

13. For instance, notice re. non-implementation of the recommendations of the Gajendragadkar Commission was admitted as the Commission was appointed by the Jammu and Kashmir Government in consultation with the Union Government—Bn. (II), 30-3-1970, para 1615.

14. During the Ninth Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, notices were received for short duration discussion regarding admission of two writ petitions by the Andhra Pradesh High Court against the Chief Minister of the State. Notices were disallowed on the grounds that matter raised was not within the jurisdiction of the Union and might cause unnecessary strain between the Union and the concerned State Governments.

and the resultant imposition of the President's rule there, was disallowed as it sought to raise a hypothetical constitutional question by way of a discussion.

- Premature

On 12 September 1958, four members gave notices seeking to raise a discussion on the proposed border adjustments between India and Pakistan. As the matter sought to be raised was a subject of further negotiations between the two countries, it was thought premature to have a discussion on the subject. Similarly, the notice to raise discussion on the report of the Central Pay Commission, given on 24 November 1959, was disallowed as being premature because the Report under reference had not been laid on the Table by then.

- Sub judice

However, having regard to the public importance of the issue and in view of consistent demands by members of various political parties/groups, the Speaker may permit a discussion on a sub judice matter. Where a discussion on a sub judice matter is permitted, the Speaker always cautions the members not to say anything which may prejudice the course of legal action or the matter pending in Court in any manner<sup>15</sup>.

- Which lack the element of urgency

On 1 February 1960, a member gave notice to raise a discussion on the necessity and advisability of a standing inquiry committee to inquire into important cases of corruption. As the element of urgency which is required for such a discussion was missing, the notice was disallowed. In exceptional cases, the Speaker may allow discussion under Rule 193 on certain paragraphs of C&AG's Report<sup>16</sup>.

A notice, which seeks to disclose correspondence between Ministers or refers to the conduct or character of persons except in their public capacity, is inadmissible.

Notice for raising discussion on personal explanation made by a member in the House under Rule 357 is inadmissible<sup>17</sup>.

During the Budget Session, notices for such discussion on various matters of public importance are not generally admitted as the members can raise discussion on

15. Discussion on following sub judice matters have been held:

- (i) Statement made by the Minister of Home Affairs re. tragic death of 45 persons and injuries to several others at Qutab Minar, Delhi on the day of the incident, i.e. 4 December 1981 and discussion on 7 December 1981.
- (ii) Ayodhya issue on 3 December 2001; and
- (iii) Situation arising out of the ongoing sealing drive in Delhi on 27 November 2006.

17. For instance, during the Sixth Session of the Ninth Lok Sabha, on 2 January 1991, a member tabled a notice under rule 193 seeking discussion, on a personal explanation made by Prof. Madhu Dandavate, M.P., in the House on 2 January 1991 under Rule 357 re. certain remarks made by Yashwant Sinha, Minister of Finance about him in the House on 28 December 1990 while replying to a supplementary to the Starred Question No. 24 re. refund of excise duty to manufacturers. The notice was disallowed as Rule 357 did not permit debate on personal explanations made by members in the House under this Rule.

those matters by availing themselves of other opportunities provided by the debates on President's Address, Railway Budget, General Budget, Demands for Grants and Finance Bill.

Again, in exceptional cases, on a demand being made in the House or on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee, calling attention notices may be converted into short duration discussion<sup>18</sup>.

A short duration discussion may be held without any notice being formally tabled and admitted<sup>19</sup>.

The Speaker may allow a short duration discussion on a subject on the basis of notices of adjournment motion, the consent for moving of which has been withheld by him<sup>20</sup>.

Notices for discussion on matters of urgent public importance for short duration, after admission, are notified in the Bulletin and copies thereof are forwarded to the Minister concerned.

Fixation of Date for Discussion and Allotment of Time

The Speaker may allot two sittings in a week during which such matters may be taken up for discussion and allow such time for discussion not exceeding two hours at or before the end of the sitting, as he may consider appropriate in the circumstances<sup>21</sup>.

Prior to June 1967, after a notice had been admitted, the Speaker, in consultation with the Leader of the House, fixed the date on which the matter might be taken up for discussion and allowed such time for discussion not exceeding two and a half hours, as he considered appropriate in the circumstances. Later, allocation of time was made by the House on the

19. On 16 April 1979, the Speaker withheld his consent to adjournment motions re. riots and massive killings, specially of minorities, in Jamshedpur, observing that he proposed to allow a full discussion, preferably a two-hour discussion on 18 April 1979. The Minister of Home Affairs was requested on 16 April 1979 to make a statement on the subject on 18 April 1979. An entry re. statement was made in the List of Business for 18 April with a footnote that the statement would be followed by a discussion. Accordingly, after the Minister's statement, the discussion was held without any notice being tabled or admitted.

20. On 23 March 1993, several members tabled notices of adjournment motions separately re.
(i) ban imposed by Government of India on political rallies at Boat Club, New Delhi; and
(ii) rise in administered prices of coal, steel, etc.

The Speaker withheld his consent to the moving of the adjournment motions. Keeping in view the importance of the subjects, the Speaker allowed discussions under Rule 193 on these subjects on the basis of the notices of adjournment motions. The names of members who had tabled the notices of adjournment motions were balloted and members securing priority were allowed to raise discussions on the same day. Notices under Rule 193 re. ban imposed on political rallies were, however, not received whereas notices received under Rule 193 re. coal and steel prices were not taken into account.

21. Rule 194(2). This rule was amended in June 1967 and a time limit of one hour was provided. This was further amended in April 1987 to increase the time limit to two hours.

recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee. All the admitted notices were placed before a sub-Committee of the Business Advisory Committee who selected notices for discussion in the House according to the urgency and importance of the subject matter thereof.

In actual practice, when a notice was admitted and the Speaker considered it important enough to be discussed in the House, the Minister concerned was asked to fix a date for its discussion in consultation with the Leader of the House. The date so fixed was announced in the House by the latter in the weekly statement regarding business of the House. In a very urgent case in which interest was shown from all sides of the House, the Speaker himself announced the date and time when the discussion was to be held. Two hours were deemed to have been allotted for every discussion with discretion to the Chair to extend the time by half an hour in appropriate cases.

The time could even be extended beyond the maximum limit of two and a half hours by a normal motion made in the House for suspension of the provision re. time-limit.

However, when on a demand from the House the Government was willing to allot time for discussion beyond the prescribed maximum limit of two and a half hours, such allocation was allowed without a formal motion for suspension of the relevant provision.

According to the present practice, all the admissible notices for raising short duration discussions are placed before the Business Advisory Committee. The Committee selects notices for discussion in the House according to the urgency and importance of the subject matter thereof. The Committee also fixes the date and recommends allotment of time for the discussion.

Normally, discussion on matters of urgent public importance for short duration is taken up during two sittings in a week.

On an occasion, with the unanimous consent of the House, private members' business set down for a day was dispensed with to provide time for such discussion<sup>22</sup>.

Two short duration discussions may sometimes be taken up together<sup>23</sup>.

Procedure for Raising Discussion

After a notice is admitted and a date fixed for discussion, the item is included in the List of Business for that date, in the names of the first two members only.

22. L.S. Deb., 23-9-1965, cc. 7186-88; 24-9-1965, cc. 7425-26. It was also decided by the House to discuss simultaneously a matter of urgent public importance for short duration (U.N. Security Council Resolution calling for ceasefire between India and Pakistan) and a private member's resolution (India should quit the Commonwealth).

23. During Sixth Session of Fifth Lok Sabha, two short duration discussions regarding (i) student unrest, and (ii) statement made by the Minister of State for Home Affairs, on incidents in Delhi University on 6 December 1972 were taken up together on 14 December 1972. Further discussion was held on 15 December 1972. [L.S. Deb., 14-12-1972, cc. 210-72; 15-12-1972, cc. 338-86.]

Previously, the names of all the members giving notice and also those supporting the notice were added.

Substantially identical notices received after a notice has been admitted and notified in the Bulletin are disallowed.

Discussion is raised by the member whose name appears first against the item in the List of Business. If that member is absent, the discussion is raised by the second member if he is present. If both the members are absent, the next member whose notice on the subject is admissible may be allowed to raise the discussion<sup>24</sup>.

After a discussion is raised, the other member whose name appears against the item in the List of Business is not entitled to speak as second speaker only because his name appears in the List of Business. The member gets a chance to speak only when the turn of his party comes.

Previously, discussions were so arranged that no member raised more than one discussion during a session. Where time was fixed for the second discussion in the name of a member who had already raised one discussion, the name of the member next in order was indicated at the first place in the List of Business so that the discussion could be raised by him. This system of restricting one discussion for a member during a session was given effect to in the Third Session of the Third Lok Sabha on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee in their Eighth Report. This restriction has since been removed.

Now the practice is that unless the Speaker otherwise directs, No-Day-Yet-Named Motions and short duration discussions are arranged in such a way that no member can move or raise more than two of these during a session<sup>25</sup>.

There is no formal motion before the House nor is there any voting. The purpose of the discussion is that members who are in possession of some knowledge about the matter should apprise the House of it. The member who has given the notice makes a short statement. In special circumstances, the Speaker may permit a member in whose name the item stands in the List of Business, to give his chance of making a speech to another member<sup>26</sup>. Such of the members as have previously intimated their intention to the Speaker, may be permitted to take part in the discussion. Thereafter the Minister concerned gives a brief reply<sup>27</sup>. When a Discussion is held on a Statement made by the Prime Minister, the Minister primarily concerned with the subject matter of the Statement may reply<sup>28</sup>. The member who has raised the discussion has no right

When the Speaker called the Minister of Home Affairs to reply, a point of order was raised that since the Statement was made by the Prime Minister, he should reply to the discussion. Thereupon, the Speaker observed, "I agree that by convention the

The Statement was made by the Prime Minister on demand from the principal Opposition Party as well as from some other parties. ## CHAPTER XXVIII

Motions of Confidence and No-Confidence in the Council of Ministers

One of the fundamental postulates of parliamentary democracy is the principle of collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers or the Cabinet to the popularly elected House.<sup>2</sup> The Government must always enjoy majority support in the popular House to remain in power. If need be, it has to demonstrate its strength on the floor of the House either by moving a Motion of Confidence and winning the confidence of the House or by defeating a No-confidence Motion brought against it by the parties in Opposition.<sup>3</sup>

The Council of Ministers is collectively responsible to the Lok Sabha<sup>4</sup>: the responsibility is joint and indivisible. There is no specific provision in the Constitution laying down the individual responsibility of a Minister and his accountability to the Parliament for all the acts of omission and commission in his departmental charge. However, in keeping with the high parliamentary traditions, individual Ministers have of their own accord accepted responsibility for, and resigned on account of, the criticisms or short-comings of the Departments under them<sup>5</sup>.

  4. Art. 75(3). Interpreting art. 75(3), the Supreme Court in U.N.R. Rao v. Smt. Indira Gandhi (A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1002), observed:

Article 75(3) brings into existence what is usually called “Responsible Government”. In other words the Council of Ministers must enjoy the confidence of the House of the People. While the House of the People is not dissolved under art. 85(2)(b), art. 75(3) has full operation. But when it is dissolved, the Council of Ministers cannot naturally enjoy the confidence of the House of the People... Art. 75(3) only applies when the House of the People does not stand dissolved.

5. For example, R.K. Shanmukham Chetty resigned because he, through an error of judgment, “gave instructions to withdraw certain groups of cases” which had been referred to the income-tax Investigation Commission—C.A. (Leg.) Deb., 17-8-1948, pp. 357-59; Lal Bahadur Shastri resigned because of a serious railway accident.—L.S. Deb., 26-11-1956, cc. 993-97; following an inquiry into the ‘Mundhra deal’ transacted by the Life Insurance Corporation, T.T. Krishnamachari resigned—L.S. Deb., 18-2-1958, c. 1282; A.P. Jain resigned because of strong criticism of the food situation in the country—L.S. Deb., 14-8-1959, cc. 2496-584; 21-8-1959, cc. 3566-629, and 22-8-1959, cc. 3847-930; Krishna Menon resigned soon after the Chinese invasion—L.S. Deb., 9-11-1962, cc. 357-59; K.D. Malaviya resigned following an inquiry about some entries in the papers of a firm purporting to relate to him—L. S. Deb., 17-8-1963, cc. 954-57; Gulzari Lal Nanda resigned following violent demonstration near the Parliament House—L.S. Deb., 10-11-1966, cc. 2493-522; Dr. Karan Singh (Minister of Tourism and Civil Aviation) tendered resignation because of the crash of an HS-748 aircraft near Secunderabad on 15 March 1973.

Collective responsibility<sup>6</sup> is assured by the enforcement of two principles: first, no person is nominated to the Council except on the advice of the Prime Minister, and secondly, no person is retained as a member of the Council if the Prime Minister demands his dismissal<sup>7</sup>. The essence of collective responsibility is that a Minister is free to express his dissent when a policy is in the stage of discussion, but after a decision is taken, every Minister is expected to stand by it without any reservation. The only alternative, therefore, for a Minister who does not see eye-to-eye with the Prime Minister in matters of policy or is not prepared to defend a Cabinet decision is to resign<sup>8</sup>. Likewise, if the Prime Minister finds that a colleague's views or actions are causing him embarrassment, he can appropriately ask for his resignation<sup>9</sup>.

Cabinet responsibility to the Lok Sabha implies that not only the Prime Minister but also a substantial majority of the members of the Council should be chosen from amongst the members of the Lok Sabha<sup>10</sup> but it is not unconstitutional if the Prime Minister or a number of Ministers are members of the Rajya Sabha. There is also no provision in the Constitution that a Minister holding any particular portfolio

However, his resignation was not accepted by the Prime Minister—L.S. Deb., 16-3-1973, cc. 218-19; 20-3-1973, cc. 198-200; K.P. Singh Deo and Chandu Lal Chandrakar tendered their resignations as their names figured in the chargesheet filed by the Government against a person in an espionage case—L.S. Deb., 5-3-1986, cc. 201, 205 and 11-3-1986, cc. 257-58.

7. Dr. B.R. Ambedkar's speech in the Constituent Assembly—C.A. Deb., 30-12-1948, pp. 1159-60.
8. For example, Dr. S.P. Mookerjee, Union Minister of Industry and Supply, resigned on account of the "weak, halting and inconsistent" attitude taken by Government in the face of "brutalities" to which, he alleged, Hindu minorities in Pakistan were subjected—P. Deb., 19-4-1950, pp. 3017-22; Dr. John Matthai, the Union Minister of Finance, resigned on account of differences with the Prime Minister on "fundamental principles of policy", especially over the formation of Planning Commission which the Finance Minister regarded as "ill-timed and ill-conceived"—Hindu, 1-6-1950 and 3-6-1950; Mahavir Tyagi, Minister of Rehabilitation, resigned on 15 January 1966 on account of his differences over the signing of the Tashkent Agreement; M.C. Chagla, Minister of External Affairs resigned on 5 September 1967, on account of his disagreement with the Government's Education Policy; Asoka Mehta, Minister of Petroleum and Chemicals, resigned on 22 August 1968 because of his differences with the Government policy on the Czechoslovakian issue—L.S. Deb., 26-8-1968, cc. 1649-51; Morarji Desai, Deputy Prime Minister resigned on 16 July 1969, as a protest against his being "summarily relieved" of the Finance portfolio—L.S. Deb., 21-7-1969, cc. 280-84; Mohan Dharia, Minister of State for Works and Housing, resigned on 2 March, 1975, on account of his differences with the Prime Minister in the matter of having a national dialogue and consensus on burning problems—L.S. Deb., 5-3-1975, cc. 241-54.
9. For instance, on 15 October 1969, the Prime Minister asked for the resignation of four Ministers, which were tendered.
10. These principles have been borne in mind ever since 1952 when, under the Constitution, two Houses—the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha—were constituted. However, in 1966, the Council of Ministers was headed by Indira Gandhi who was not a member of the Lok Sabha. In the Budget Session, a private member's Bill which sought to amend the Constitution so as to provide that "the Prime Minister shall be member of the House of the People (Lok Sabha)", was considered in the House. In reply, the Government stated that the present Prime Minister would herself have been willing to contest the election to the Lok Sabha but for the reason that by-elections were not being held because of emergency. While accepting the spirit behind the Bill, the Minister added that "it would not be proper to have such a provision in the Constitution. There may be occasions— that too for a limited period—when a Prime Minister has to be from the other House"—L.S. Deb., 15-4-1966 and 13-5-1966.

should be drawn from a particular House<sup>11</sup>. Responsibility, however, does not mean that every Government act has to be reported to and approved by the Lok Sabha. The Government needs express parliamentary approval for its legislative and fiscal proposals as well as expenditure, and is, on occasions, called upon to explain and justify its policy. If the House clearly shows that it does not propose to support the Government—that is, if the Government has lost the confidence of the House—it must resign or have the House dissolved<sup>12</sup>. However, resignation or dissolution would follow only where the defeat implies loss of confidence. What the Government will treat as a matter of substantial importance on which to resign or to dissolve the House is, primarily, a question for the Government to decide. The Opposition can test the opinion of the House by demanding a vote on the motion of no-confidence<sup>13</sup>.

Motion of No-Confidence

In view of the express constitutional provision regarding collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers to the Lok Sabha, a motion expressing want of confidence in an individual Minister is out of order; under the Rules, only a motion expressing want of confidence in the Council of Ministers as a body is admissible<sup>14</sup>.

A no-confidence motion in the Council of Ministers is distinct from a censure motion. Whereas a censure motion must set out the grounds or charge on which it is based and is moved for the specific purpose of censuring the Government for certain policies and actions, a motion of no-confidence need not set out any grounds on which it is based. The giving of reasons is not a condition precedent to the admission of a motion of no-confidence<sup>15</sup>. Even when grounds are mentioned in the notice and

11. Observations made by Speaker in regard to the appointment of Pranab Kumar Mukherjee, member of the Rajya Sabha as the Union Minister of Finance—L.S. Deb., 19-2-1982, cc. 9-27.

12. Dissolution can take place only after the President is satisfied that it is not possible to form an alternative government following the defeat and resignation of the Council of Ministers. It is a moot point whether the President should accept automatically the advice of a defeated Government to dissolve the House without his exploring the possibility of an alternative government which enjoys the confidence of the House. In case the President dissolves that House, the defeated Government continues in office as caretaker government until the general elections, following the dissolution of the Lok Sabha, are over.

In the States, however, the position is different. On the defeat and resignation of the existing Government, the Governor of a State has to ascertain whether an alternative government can be formed, and if he is unable to do so, he has to report to the President under art. 356 of the Constitution that the constitutional machinery of the State has broken down.

13. Constitutional Precedents, op. cit., pp. 1-3.

Before independence, the Executive was not responsible to the Central Legislature. Consequently, there was no provision in the Rules or Standing Orders of the Central Legislative Assembly for moving of a motion of no-confidence.

On the enactment of the Indian Independence Act, 1947, the Cabinet became responsible to the Constituent Assembly of India which was then also exercising the powers of the Legislature of the Dominion of India, and a provision was made for the first time in the Rules for the moving of a motion of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers—see Rule 24B of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules, 1947.

15. L.S. Deb., 31-8-1961, c. 6174.

read out in the House, they do not form part of the no-confidence motion<sup>16</sup>.

There has been a case where the Speaker refused to read out himself or allow the member who had given notice of a no-confidence motion, to read out the grounds set out in the notice before leave of the House to the moving of the motion was granted<sup>17</sup>.

The Speaker may, in his discretion, mention the grounds to the House<sup>18</sup>.

Censure Motion

No leave of the House is required to move a censure motion<sup>19</sup>. It is in the discretion of the Government to find time and to fix a date for its discussion. There is no specific provision in the Rules for the moving of censure motion—such a motion is governed by the Rules applicable to motions in general<sup>20</sup> and can be admitted as a No-Day-Yet-Named Motion<sup>21</sup>.

Censure motion can be moved against the Council of Ministers or an individual Minister or a group of Ministers for their failure to act or not to act or for their policy and may express regret, indignation or surprise of the House at the failure of the Minister or Ministers. The Motion should be specific and self-explanatory so as to record the reasons for the censure, precisely and briefly. The Speaker's decision whether the motion is in order or not for any reason is final<sup>22</sup>.

Restrictions on moving the Motion of No-Confidence

A motion expressing want of confidence in the Council of Ministers may be made subject to the following restrictions:

leave of the House to move the motion has to be asked for by the member when called by the Speaker; and the member asking for leave has, before the commencement of the sitting for that day, to give to the

16. The Speaker after reading out the text of the motion of no-confidence mentioned also in brief the grounds given in the notice, but he made it clear that the grounds did not form part of the motion. The member when asking for leave of the House to the moving of the motion, read out only the text of the motion and not the grounds—L.S. Deb., 9-11-1962, cc. 359-60; 20-2-1963, cc. 2165-67; 13-8-1963, c. 169; 16-8-1965, cc. 135-38; 25-7-1966, cc. 192-216; 1-11-1966, c. 165; 18-3-1967, c. 109; 22-11-1967, c. 1992; 9-3-1968, cc. 3211-12; 11-11-1968, c. 202; 18-2-1969, cc. 212-13; 28-8-1969, c. 232; 28-7-1970, cc. 509-11; 21-11-1973, cc. 227-30.

17. The Speaker has held the view that it is not necessary to read out the grounds at that stage as it would be unfair to the Government if they were not allowed an opportunity to explain their position, if opportunity were given to the Government, it would lead to a debate on the notice itself and it might so happen that ultimately there might not be the required number of members to support the notice—L.S. Deb., 31-8-1961, c. 6174.

18. L.S. Deb., 9-11-1962, cc. 359-60; 13-8-1963, c. 169; 21-11-1963, cc. 227-30. 28-8-1969, cc. 231-32; 28-7-1970, cc. 509-11.

19. See Chapter XXVI regarding 'Motions'.

21. L.S. Deb., 18-12-1964, cc. 5694-702; 21-12-1964, c. 5924.

22. Ibid., 19-8-1968, cc. 2714-840; 4-8-1977, cc. 314-15; 7-8-1980, cc. 296-382.

Secretary-General a written notice of the motion which he proposes to move<sup>23</sup>.

The expression 'before the commencement of the sitting' means a reasonable time before the commencement of the sitting. A notice of no-confidence motion which is required to be given before the commencement of the sitting on the day on which the matter is proposed to be raised in the House has to be given by 10.00 hours on that day, i.e. an hour before the commencement of the sitting. Such notice, if received after 10.00 hours, is valid only for the next sitting<sup>24</sup>.

Before the commencement of a session, a notice can at the earliest be given after a date and time fixed in advance by the Speaker and notified in the Bulletin. Notice can also be given for a future date<sup>25</sup>.

No conditions of admissibility of a motion of no-confidence are laid down in the Rules. However, there is no bar to the admission of a motion, even though members might have already got opportunity earlier in the session to criticise the Government at the time of discussion on the President's Address, Budget or Demands for Grants, etc. in the same Session<sup>26</sup>. The Speaker is vested with the power of deciding whether a motion is in order or not. He may not bring a notice before the House if it is not properly worded or on any other ground considered sufficient by him, or he may bring it before the House after objectionable matter, if any, has been deleted there-from or the notice has been suitably edited.

Leave of the House

Notices of no-confidence motions are taken up at the prescribed stage after the Question Hour before the House embarks upon the main business for the day entered in the List of Business<sup>27</sup>.

If the Speaker holds a no-confidence motion to be in order, the member who has tabled the notice asks for leave of the House to move the motion<sup>28</sup>.

23. Rule 198(1).

24. Dir. 113B.

25. On 18 August 1984, a member tabled a notice of motion of no-confidence to be moved by him on 22 August 1984. The member, however, withdrew his notice on 21 August 1984.

26. L.S. Deb., 7-5-1981, cc. 304-26.

In order to move a motion of no-confidence for the second time in the same session, a member may table a motion for suspension of Rule 338 in its application to his motion of no-confidence. However, two conditions have to be fulfilled—the Speaker has to give his consent and the motion has to be adopted by the House. No rules or principles are laid down for the consent of the Speaker. He decides each issue on merits and gives or withholds his consent. The second imperative that the House has to adopt such a motion leaves the burden on the ruling party. The party has to decide whether the no-confidence motion should be allowed against the Council of Ministers. They decide whether there is merit in discussing such a motion a second time.

27. Dir. 2 and L.S. Deb., 7-9-1964, cc. 138-39.

28. No speech is permitted unless leave has been granted by the House to move the motion—L.S. Deb., 9-11-1962, cc. 361-62, 18.8.2003, cc. 327-28; 19.8.2003, cc. 287-576.

The Fifteenth Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha (Part - I and II) saw tabling of many notices of No-Confidence in the Council of Ministers<sup>29</sup> from members belonging to Indian National Congress, Telugu Desam Party and YSR Congress, on almost all the days of the sittings. This is the first instance when a member belonging to ruling party tabled notice of No-Confidence Motion against the Government.

But due to continuous interruptions in the House on all days, the Speaker, after making observation<sup>30</sup> regarding receipt of notices of No-Confidence could not bring any of the notices before the House. All the notices, valid for that day, lapsed<sup>31</sup> on adjournment of the House for that day.

The Speaker calls upon members in favour of leave being granted to rise in their seats. Leave is deemed to be granted by the House if not less than fifty members rise. A physical count is taken to determine that the requisite number of members have stood in support of the motion. There have been instances when leave was not granted by the House as less than fifty members stood in favour of the motion.<sup>32</sup>

29. The following members tabled notices of Motion of No-Confidence on the dates mentioned against each :

1. Rayapati Sambasiva Rao, Konakalla Narayana Rao and Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy and signed by other members on 9-12-2013.
2. Modugula Venugopala Reddy, Rayapati Sambasiva Rao and M. Rajamohan Reddy and signed by other members on 11-12-2013.
3. Rayapati Sambasiva Rao, Konakalla Narayana Rao and Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy and signed by other members on 12-12-2013.
4. Konakalla Narayana Rao, Rayapati Sambasiva Rao and Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy and signed by other members on 13-12-2013.
5. Konakalla Narayana Rao and signed by other members on 16-12-2013.
6. Modugula Venugopala Reddy on 17-12-2013.
7. Sabham Hari, Konakalla Narayana Rao and Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy and signed by other members on 18-12-2013.
8. V. Aruna Kumar, Modugula Venugopala Reddy and Konakalla Narayana Rao and signed by other members on 5-2-2014.
9. Sabham Hari, Modugula Venugopala Reddy and M. Rajamohan Reddy on 6-2-2014.
10. Modugula Venugopala Reddy, G.V. Harsha Kumar and M. Rajamohan Reddy on 7-2-2014.
11. V. Aruna Kumar, Modugula Venugopala Reddy, Konakalla Narayana Rao and M. Rajamohan Reddy on 10-2-2014.
12. Sabham Hari, Konakalla Narayana Rao, M. Rajamohan Reddy and L. Rajagopal on 11-2-2014.
13. Rayapati Sambasiva Rao, Modugula Venugopala Reddy and M. Rajamohan Reddy on 12-2-2014.
14. A. Sai Prathap, Modugula Venugopala Reddy and M. Rajamohan Reddy on 13-2-2014.
15. G.V. Harsha Kumar on 18-2-2014.

30. The Speaker made the following announcement:—

“Hon’ble Members ..... I have received notices of No-Confidence Motion. Unless the House is in order, I will not be in a position to bring the notices of No-Confidence Motion before the House..... If the House is not in order, I will not be able to take up the notice of No-Confidence.”

The notices could not be brought before the House as it was not in order.

31. Rule 198(1)(b) and Direction 113B.

32. L.S. Deb., 22-11-2012.

When called upon by the Speaker to ask for leave of the House, the member can at that stage withdraw the notice by making a request to that effect<sup>33</sup>. In case, however, the member wants to withdraw his motion after the leave of the House has been granted, he may do so only with the permission of the House<sup>34</sup>. Notice of no-confidence motion can also be withdrawn by the members concerned by sending letters of withdrawal signed by all the signatories to the notice before the item is taken up in the House<sup>35</sup>. In that case the item is not mentioned in, or brought before the House.

When a number of notices of no-confidence motion are received for the same sitting, the notices are balloted to determine their inter se priority. Notices which are held to be in order are taken up one by one in the order of their priority. In case leave of the House for the moving of the first motion is not granted, the second motion is taken up. As soon as leave of the House to the moving of any motion is granted, the remaining motions, if any, are kept pending till the one to the moving of which leave of the House has been granted is disposed of<sup>36</sup>. However, when notices of several no-confidence motions are received and it is agreed by consent of all members tabling those motions that only a particular notice might be taken up, other notices are not brought before the House. The first signatory of the agreed motion is permitted to ask for leave of the House to move his motion<sup>37</sup>.

Where a notice is signed by more than one member, it is deemed to have been given by all the signatories. In such cases the names of the other members are indicated immediately after the first signatory and it is left to them to decide as to who would ask for the leave of the House.

When leave of the House to the moving of a motion has been granted, no substantive motion on policy matters is to be brought before the House by the Government till the motion of no-confidence has been disposed of<sup>38</sup>.

Discussion on the Motion and its Scope

Ordinarily, the member who has been granted leave of the House moves the motion of no-confidence and initiates the discussion. However, the Chair may permit such member merely to move the motion without making a speech and allow another member of his party to open the debate<sup>39</sup>.

35. On 8 March 1965, four notices of no-confidence motions were received but they were withdrawn by sending letters of withdrawal signed by all signatories before the item was taken up in the House.

36. In case where notices of two or more no-confidence motions have been received and leave of the House to the moving of one motion therefrom has been granted, the names of members who tabled the other notices are not mentioned in the House—L.S. Deb., 9-3-1965, c. 3213.

37. L.S. Deb., 7-9-1964, cc. 132-34; 22-7-1974, cc. 277-78; 7-5-1981, cc. 304-27.

38. Ibid., 25-7-1966, c. 230; 26-7-1966, c. 457; 27-7-1966. c. 777; 24-7-1974, c. 221.

39. Ibid., 9-5-1974, cc. 282, 538-44.

Discussion on a motion of no-confidence, leave to the moving of which has been granted by the House, is not merely confined to the grounds mentioned in the notice of that motion. Normally, the matters referred to by the mover of the motion are discussed but it is open to any member to raise any other matter he likes during the course of the discussion on the motion<sup>40</sup>; even matters on which separate discussion has taken place in the same session can be brought up if it is shown that there has been a failure on the part of the Government after the last discussion took place<sup>41</sup>.

Since the grounds on which a motion of no-confidence is based are not set out in it, the motion that is before the House is 'that this House expresses its want of confidence in the Council of Ministers'. Moving of substantially identical motion in the same session being impermissible under the rules,<sup>42</sup> it may not ordinarily be possible<sup>43</sup> to move another no-confidence motion in the same session after one such motion has been discussed and disposed of in the House because its text will have to be identical to the earlier motion.

There is, however, no restriction on moving of more than one no-confidence motion in a session, although this has not been done so far, which may be necessitated on account of some new developments that might have taken place since the discussion on the first motion. The second motion would, therefore, be admissible only if it is based on new matters not covered by the discussion on the previous motion.

Normally, the Opposition act with responsibility and do not bring forward such a motion for the second time in the same session. But if something serious has happened since the first motion was debated and the Government is subjected to criticism in the public and in the House which has tended to undermine the credibility of the Council of Ministers, the Opposition may give notice of another no-confidence motion. The Speaker, on receipt of such a motion, may bring it before the House and rule it out of order if, in his opinion, it is an abuse of procedures and calculated to obstruct the business of the House on a frivolous or an ordinary matter for which other procedures are available<sup>44</sup>.

41. For example, discussion regarding 'Food Situation' was held in the Lok Sabha on 7-10 September 1964. Failure on the part of the Government to solve the food problem was referred to in the discussion on the no-confidence motion which took place in the House on 11 and 14-18 September, 1964.

44. On 4 September 1974, in regard to a notice of motion of no-confidence tabled by a member for the second time in the same session, the Speaker observed that the motion could not be taken up because one motion for want of confidence in the Council of Ministers had already been discussed and negated earlier during the session and Rule 338 prohibited such repeat motion in the same session. The member wanted to move the aforesaid motion on the failure of the Government to provide time for the discussion of a No-Day-Yet-Named Motion relating to the setting up of a parliamentary committee to probe into the alleged forgery of signatures of twenty members of the Lok Sabha on a petition for the grant of licence to certain business concerns. Certain members contended that Rule 338 prohibited the raising of a question "substantially identical" with the one on which the House had given a decision in the same session and therefore, the motion of no-confidence raising new matter could be taken up. The Speaker, thereupon, observed that in a

A motion of no-confidence is required to be taken up within ten days from the date on which the leave to move is granted by the House. In fixing the date for the discussion of such a motion, the Speaker may ask the Leader of the House to suggest to him the date or dates in consultation with the leaders of various Opposition Parties or Groups<sup>45</sup>. Time for discussion of the motion may be allotted by the House on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee<sup>46</sup> or the Speaker may, after considering the state of business in the House, himself allot a day or days for this purpose<sup>47</sup>. With the consensus of the House, discussion may be taken up on the day on which House grants leave<sup>48</sup>. The time so allotted can, however, be extended with the consent of the House<sup>49</sup>.

Since no grounds are mentioned in a no-confidence motion, an amendment to the motion is out of order if it seeks to insert grounds or to single out particular Minister or Ministers.

With a view to seeing that discussion on the motion concludes within the time allotted and all Groups in the House have their due share in the discussion, the Speaker may prescribe a time-limit on speeches and indicate the ratio in which time would be distributed among various Groups. Out of the total time allotted for discussion, the Speaker may, in his discretion, earmark some time for discussing a specific matter<sup>50</sup>.

motion of no-confidence, no reasons were given and even if some reasons were given they were not part of the motion. Therefore, there could not be any repeat motion of no-confidence in the same session. Thereafter, the member concerned moved a motion for suspension of Rule 338 which was negatived—*L.S. On the next day, the Speaker withheld his consent to the moving of an adjournment motion on a matter of public importance on the ground that this matter could be discussed during debate on the no-confidence motion. Out of 20 hours allotted for discussion of the motion of no-confidence, two and a half hours were earmarked for discussion of the subject-matter of the adjournment motion—*L.S. When the debate on the motion is concluded, the Speaker forthwith puts the question necessary to determine the decision of the House on the motion<sup>53</sup>.

Statement by a Minister who has Resigned

A member who has resigned the office of Minister may, with the consent of the Speaker, make a personal statement in explanation of his resignation<sup>54</sup>. However, no such statement can be made in the House by a Minister who is not a member of the Lok Sabha because as soon as his resignation is accepted, he ceases to be Minister and cannot exercise the right of taking part in the proceedings of the House of which he is not a member.

Though it is customary for a Minister who has resigned from his office to make a statement in the House explaining the reason for his resignation, he is not bound to make such a statement. Moreover, where the grounds which led to the resignation are well known, such a statement may not be necessary<sup>55</sup>.

The Speaker cannot compel a member who has resigned from the office of Minister to make a statement in the House<sup>56</sup>. However, members may be permitted to make a query under Rule 199 with a view to demanding a statement from the member who has resigned from the office of Minister. If the member who has resigned from the office of Minister has the privilege under this Rule to make a statement in the House, by implication, it is open to other members to request him to exercise that privilege. It is ultimately for the member who has resigned as a Minister to make or not to make such a statement.

On 17 July 1978, when the Speaker called the Leader of the Opposition to make a query about the Ministers who had recently resigned from the Council of Ministers but had not made any statement in the House with regard to their resignations, several members raised points of order that it was the discretion of the members who had resigned from the office of Minister to make statements with regard to their resignations, and other members had no locus standi under Rule 199 to demand a statement from the former Ministers. The Speaker inter alia observed that on three occasions in the past, the then Speaker had permitted members to make a query under this Rule to request former Ministers to make statements in the House<sup>57</sup>.

There is no precedent in the Lok Sabha for a statement being made either by the Prime Minister who resigns or by his successor informing the House of the reasons for the change in the Ministry.

57. Ibid., 17-7-1978, cc. 315-59.

On 17 August 1978, the Speaker conveyed to the House the information given to him by one of the former Ministers to the effect that he would not be making his statement in explanation of his resignation from the office of Minister which had been listed in the List of Business for the day. When a number of members raised points of order, the Speaker observed that under the Rules, he had no power to compel a member to make a statement. The Speaker further held that the statement sent by the member to the Speaker had not become the property of the House. Subsequently, during the same session, the same former Minister wrote to the Speaker that he would make his statement under Rule 199 on 24 August 1978, and sent therewith a copy of the statement which he had since revised. The item was included in the Revised List of Business for that day. When the item was reached, several members raised objections to allowing the former Minister to make the statement so late and after having declined to avail of the opportunity given to him earlier. The Speaker thereupon observed that whenever a Minister resigned either voluntarily or at the request of the Prime Minister, he was entitled to make a statement in the House and no limitation whatsoever had been prescribed in this Rule with regard to the time for making the statement. The Speaker further observed that if the statement had been unduly delayed, he might not have given permission, but as it was being made during the session itself, he would not be justified in declining his permission to the member to make the statement. Thereafter, the former Minister made the statement in explanation of his resignation. This was followed by a statement by the Prime Minister<sup>58</sup>.

Similarly the other former Minister who had resigned in June 1978 finally made a statement in the Lok Sabha under Rule 199 only on 22 December 1978. Although he had earlier expressed a wish to make such a statement, it kept on being postponed for one reason or the other. The former Minister's statement was followed by a statement by the Prime Minister<sup>59</sup>.

Rule 199 has since been amended and now the Minister who resigns may, with the consent of the Speaker, make the statement on any day during the session in which the resignation has been accepted by the President.

The Rule provides that a member may make such a statement at the earliest opportunity on a day not being more than seven days from the date of commencement of the session if the resignation was accepted by the President when the House was not in session.

When a Minister resigns on account of differences of opinion with his colleagues and chooses to make a statement in the House, references to his difference likely to involve disclosure of Cabinet secrets or of such information which might be prejudicial to the security of the country, cannot be made by him. However, if he feels that it is necessary for him to make incidental references to such matters, he has to obtain the permission of the Prime Minister and inform the Speaker in advance of such permission having been obtained by him. To avoid disclosure or the making of statements offensive to constitutional proprieties, it is obligatory on the resigning Minister to supply a copy of the statement proposed to be made by him, or a gist thereof, to the Speaker and the Prime Minister, one day in advance of the day on which the statement is to be made<sup>60</sup>.

The advance copy of the statement or gist thereof received by the Speaker is treated as confidential till the statement is actually made in the House.

Where the Speaker gives his consent to the statement being made in the House, the item is included in the List of Business and such a statement is normally made after the questions and before the main business of the day is taken up<sup>61</sup>. But in an exceptional case where, before making the statement, the resigning Minister is inter-ested in getting through an item of business standing in his name, he may make the statement at such time as may be fixed by the Speaker.

No Discussion on the Statement

No debate is permitted on a statement made by a member who has resigned the office of Minister in explanation of his resignation<sup>62</sup>, but after it has been made, a Minister may make a statement pertinent thereto<sup>63</sup>. Such a statement is normally made by the Prime Minister<sup>64</sup>. Thereafter, no other Minister can make a statement on matters raised by the resigning Minister in his speech.

Ministers and Parliament

No-Confidence in the Government: Recent developments in the parliamentary system have clearly established that every defeat of the Government in the House does not amount to expression of lack of confidence. Unless a crucial policy issue is involved, the mere fact of a Government sponsored measure not being passed by the House is not regarded as a vote of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers and there is no obligation on the Government to resign. Government can be dismissed only by passing a direct vote of no-confidence and not otherwise.

In view of the constitutional provision regarding the collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers to the Lok Sabha [article 75(3)], a motion of no-confidence can be moved only against the Council of Ministers as a whole and not against any individual Minister. However, there is nothing in the Rule either for or against a

62. L.S. Deb., 17-8-1963, cc. 959-61.

63. Rule 199(3). The original rule framed in 1947 provided that a Minister could make a statement 'in reply'. In 1950, while adapting the C.A. (Legs.) Rules for the Provisional Parliament, for the words 'in reply' the words 'pertinent thereto' were substituted—Parl. Sectt. Notfn. No. 30/1/50 A, 26-1-1950, Gaz. Ex., 14-2-1950.

64. For example, on 21 July 1969, Morarji Desai made a statement on his resignation from the Office of Deputy Prime Minister. He also laid on the Table his correspondence with the then Prime Minister in this regard. The then Prime Minister (Indira Gandhi) also made a statement thereafter—L.S. Deb., 21-7-1969, cc. 280-87. For further instances see L.S. Deb., 24-8-1978, cc. 304-49; 22-12-1978, cc. 265-314.

censure motion being moved against a single Minister under Rule 184 relating to motions in general<sup>65</sup>.

Minister's oath of office and secrecy and disclosure of Information: Article 75(4) of the Constitution of India provides that before a Minister enters upon his office, the President shall administer to him the oath of office and of secrecy. The oath of secrecy forbids a Minister from disclosing information made available to him or became known to him except as may be required for the due discharge of his duties as such Minister. The secrecy imposed is not a blanket one. It is subject to an important qualification, viz. that he can disclose the information gathered by him as Minister if it becomes necessary for him for the due discharge of his duties as such Minister. What may be required to be kept secret at one stage may be required to be brought to knowledge of the public at a later stage. One Minister may consider that a particular information should be kept confidential whereas the successor may think that it would be in public interest to let the public know about it. The question whether a particular disclosure made by a Minister was required for the discharge of his duties as such Minister is very difficult to decide and so long as the Speaker is not able to say that the disclosure made was not required for the due discharge of duties of the Minister concerned, it is not possible to hold that there was breach of any constitutional provision<sup>66</sup>.

Motion of Confidence

In addition to the well-established procedural device of motion of no-confidence under Rule 198(1), the motion of confidence is also used to test the majority of the Government of the day. There is no specific rule in the Rules of Procedure relating to the motions of confidence in the Council of Ministers. The necessity of the device of the confidence motion has, however, been felt in recent times with the advent of the era of minority governments caused by split in the mainline political parties, and the formation of coalition governments as a result of hung Parliaments.

In the absence of any specific rule, the motions of confidence have been admitted under the category of motions stipulated under Rule 184 which are meant for raising discussions on matters of public interest. Decisions on such motions are taken under Rule 191 by putting before the House all the necessary questions. In the case of a confidence motion, there is no requirement for seeking the leave of the House as in the case of a no-confidence motion. The one line notice of a motion under Rule 184 reads that "this House expresses its confidence in the Council of Ministers".

The confidence motion is worded in a language which is directly opposite to the wording of a no-confidence motion. The purpose and object of both the No-confidence and Confidence Motions are the same. The confidence motion gets priority over the no-confidence motion even if the notices are received for both motions basically because under Rule 25, Government business has precedence over other business on days allotted for the transaction of Government business.

Since the need for this motion is felt when the legitimacy of the Government is in question, it is appropriate that a positive vote of confidence is sought for.

In order to admit a no-confidence motion, it must satisfy conditions laid down in Rule 198 which inter alia provides: (a) if not less than 50 members rise, the Speaker shall declare that the leave is granted; and (b) that the motion will be taken up on such day as he may appoint, not being more than 10 days from the date on which the leave is asked for. In the case of the confidence motion, what is relevant is Rule 190 which deals with motions in general and which reads: "The Speaker may, after considering the state of business in the House and in consultation with the Leader of the House or on the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee, allot a day or days or part of a day for the discussion on such motion".

During the last fifty-seven years since the time of the First Lok Sabha in 1952, twenty-six Motions of No-Confidence (NCMs) and twelve Motions of Confidence (CMs) in different Councils of Ministers during the First to Fifteenth (1952-2012) as shown in the Table<sup>67</sup>, below were admitted :

Eleventh Lok Sabha. The House discussed the twenty-six motions of no-confidence and eleven of the twelve confidence motions<sup>68</sup>. The leave to move the no-confidence motion in the Fifteenth Lok Sabha on 22 November 2012 was not granted as the requisite number of members did not rise in support of the motion.

CHAPTER XXIX

Procedure in Financial Matters

Presentation of Budget

In respect of every financial year, the President causes to be laid before both the Houses of Parliament an “annual financial statement” or the estimated receipts and expenditure of the Government of India<sup>1</sup>. The annual financial statement, otherwise known as the ‘Budget’, is presented in two parts, viz. the Railway Budget pertaining to Railway Finance, and the General Budget which gives an overall picture of the financial position of the Government of India, excluding the Railways.

The separation of the Railway Finance from the General Finance was first recommended in 1920-21<sup>2</sup>, and the ‘Separation Convention’ was adopted through a resolution by the Central Legislative Assembly on 20 September 1924<sup>3</sup>. The primary idea behind this separation was to secure stability for civil estimates by providing for an assured contribution from Railway Revenues and also to introduce flexibility in the administration of Railway Finance.

The Railway Convention Committee, consisting of members of both the Houses of Parliament, constituted from time to time, recommends the rate of dividend payable by Railways to General Revenues. The Recommendations of the Committee are adopted through resolutions passed by the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha.

The Railway Convention Committee of 1949 discarded the 1924 formula whereunder the General Revenues received a definite annual contribution from Railways, and decided that “a fixed dividend (4 per cent) would assure to General Revenues, over the term agreed on, a dependable return on the capital at charge”<sup>4</sup>. This recommendation of the Committee was adopted by the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative) on 21 December 1949<sup>5</sup>.

The 1960 Convention raised the rate of dividend to 4.25 per cent for the period 1961-66. However, in the changed circumstances following the Chinese aggression and the rising cost of Government borrowing, the rate

A ten-member committee of experts in matters related to Railways, Finance and Administration headed by Sir William Acworth supported the case for State management of Indian Railways in their Report published in 1921. The landmark decision about separation of Railway Finances from General Finances was also the outcome of this report.

was further raised to 4.5 per cent from 1 April 1963. Under the 1965 Convention, the increased rate of 4.5 per cent was retained for a further five-year period<sup>6</sup>.

The Railway Convention Committee of 1971, in their interim report, recommended that the existing rate of dividend at 4.5 per cent of the capital invested in the Railways upto 1963-64 with an addition of one per cent in lieu of passenger fare tax and at 6 per cent of the capital invested after 31 March 1964, should continue to be paid by the Railways to the General Revenues during the period 1971-72 and 1972-73, subject to certain concessions and exemptions recommended by the Committee<sup>7</sup>. The rate of dividend was increased to 6.5 per cent as recommended by the Railway Convention Committee (1980) in their Seventh Report. This rate was retained, till the year 1992-93, by successive Committees in their reports.

In the Fifth Report, the Railway Convention Committee (1991) recommended a dividend of 7 per cent for the year 1994-95 irrespective of the year of investment. In the Ninth Report, the Committee (1991) retained the same dividend rate of 7 per cent and declared the investment made prior to 1952 as dividend free.

However, the Railway Convention Committee (1996), in their Third Report, reverted back to the earlier position and recommended a dividend of 7 per cent for the year 1996-97, irrespective of the year of investment. The Railway Convention Committee (1998) retained the same dividend. The Railway Convention Committee (1999) in their very First Report increased the rate of dividend to 7.5 per cent. In the Second Report, however, the rate of dividend was decreased to 7 per cent and the same rate was retained till the year 2003-04. The Railway Convention Committee (2004), in its First Report, further reduced the rate of dividend to 6.5 per cent. The same rate was retained till 2006-07. The Fifth Report of the Railway Convention Committee (2004) recommended a dividend of 7 per cent for the year 2007-08. The same rate was retained in the year 2008-09. The first report of the RCC (2009) recommended a dividend of 6% for the years 2009-10 and 2010-11. In the second report, the rate of dividend was decreased to 5% and in the Third report it was further reduced to 4%. The RCC (2009) in their Sixth report further increased the rate of dividend to 5% for the year 2013-14.

Preparation and presentation of Budget for the approval of the Legislature is a constitutional obligation on the part of the Government both at the Centre and in the States. It is not improper even for a Caretaker Government to pilot financial business in the Parliament as the Council of Ministers headed by the Prime Minister continues to function without causing any vacuum<sup>8</sup>. There is also an instance when the Railway Budget and the Demands for Grants (Railways) and the General Budget and the Demands for Grants (General) presented by one Government were taken up by the subsequent Government<sup>9</sup> and passed by the House.

The Budget<sup>10</sup> is presented to the Lok Sabha on such day as the President directs<sup>11</sup>. By convention, the General Budget is presented on the last working day of February<sup>12</sup> each year. Earlier, till the year 1998, the Budget used to be presented at 8. During the Seventh Session of the Ninth Lok Sabha, there was a Caretaker Government headed by Chandra Shekhar at the Centre. (Bn. (1), 6-3-1991) On 11 March 1991, the House was to take up essential financial business, viz. Interim Railway Budget for 1991-92, Interim General Budget for 1991-92 and Budgets for 1991-92 in respect of the States of Punjab, Assam, Tamil Nadu, Jammu and Kashmir and the Union territory of Pondicherry. Several members raised a point of order as to whether a Caretaker Government was competent to pilot financial business in the Lok Sabha. The Speaker ruled that the Council of Ministers headed by the Prime Minister continues to function. There is no vacuum. The Government is fully competent to pilot the financial business. The above Budgets were passed without discussion.

  9. During the Fourth Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, Railway Budget/Demands for Grants (Railways) and General Budget/Demands for Grants (General) were presented by Railway Minister (Ram Vilas Paswan and Finance Minister P. Chidambaram) on 26 and 28 February 1997, respectively, under the Government headed by the Prime Minister, H.D. Deve Gowda. The Government headed by Deve Gowda was voted out of office on 11 April 1997. Thereafter, the new Government headed by I.K. Gujral assumed office and Ram Vilas Paswan and P. Chidambaram retained their portfolios. Demands for Grants (Railways) and Demands for Grants (General) presented by the previous Government were taken up under the subsequent Government and passed by the House on 2 and 6 May 1997, respectively.
  10. Rule 213. The Government can come before the House with more than one annual financial statement and it is not a violation of article 112 of the Constitution—L.S. Deb., 7-9-1974, cc. 183-5.
  11. Rule 204.
  12. If on the last working day of February, the House was not scheduled to meet, the House was summoned to meet specifically at 1700 hours on that day for presentation of the General Budget. If the day so fixed for presentation of the Budget was subsequently declared a public holiday, no change in the date of presentation was made—L.S. Deb., 25-2-1969, c. 230. According to the provisional calendar of sittings for the Eighth Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, no sitting of the House was fixed for Saturday, 28 February 1987, a closed holiday. However, on the request of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, a sitting was specifically fixed at 17.00 hours on that day for presentation of the General Budget for 1987-88. Accordingly, the General Budget was presented at 17.00 hours on 28 February 1987—L.S. Deb., 28-2-1987, c. 4; Bn. (II) 10-2-1987, para 1485. In 1972, the General Budget was presented on 16 March as the Session of the House commenced in March. In 1976, the General Budget was presented on 15 March. In 1977, the Interim Budget was presented on 28 March at 12.55 hours and the final Budget on 17 June 1977. In 1998, the General Budget was presented on 1 June as the session of the House commenced in May 1998. In 1999, the General Budget was presented on 27 February i.e. on a Saturday at 11.00 hours, deviating from the well-established practice of presenting it at 17.00 hours. Being a closed holiday, the sitting of the House was fixed that day exclusively for presentation of the General Budget on the request of the Government. It was also included in provisional calendar of sittings.

17.00 hours. However, in the year 1999, the Budget was presented on 27 February Saturday at 11.00 hrs. In the year 2000, the Budget was presented on 29 February at 14.00 hours. The practice now being followed since 2001 is to present the General Budget at 11.00 hours instead of 17.00 hrs. The presentation of the General Budget is immediately followed by introduction of the Finance Bill. Thereafter, the Lok Sabha adjourns for the day. There is no Question Hour on the day of presentation of the General Budget<sup>13</sup>. The Railway Budget is presented sometime in the third week of February. However, the House is not adjourned for the day after presentation of the Railway Budget. A copy each of the General Budget and the Railway Budget is laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha on the day of their presentation in the Lok Sabha<sup>14</sup>. When a session commences later, say in March, the Railway and the General Budgets may be presented on any day which may be convenient to the Government. In an election year, Budgets may be presented twice—first to secure a Vote on Account for a few months and later in full<sup>15</sup>. The second, i.e. the full-fledged Budget, may be presented on any day as may be convenient to the Government formed after the election.

13. On the day on which the General Budget was presented, the Lok Sabha used to be adjourned for half-an-hour or so before the presentation of the Budget.

No other business can be taken up at the time fixed for presentation of the Budget—L.S. Deb., 29-2-1968, c. 827.

14. In 1957, 1962 and 1967, the Railway and General Budgets were presented twice. In 1971, the Railway and General Budgets were presented once in the First Session of the Fifth Lok Sabha, on 23 and 24 March 1971, respectively, and again in the Second Session of the Fifth Lok Sabha, on 24 and 28 May 1971, respectively. In 1977, the Budgets were presented once in the First Session on 28 March 1977, and again in the Second Session of the Sixth Lok Sabha on 11 and 17 June 1977, respectively.

In 1980 also, the Budgets were presented twice, once in the Second Session of the Seventh Lok Sabha on 11 March 1980 and again in the Third Session on 16 and 18 June 1980, respectively. In 1985, the two Budgets were presented on 14 and 16 March 1985, respectively. In 1991, the Budgets were presented twice, once in the Seventh Session of the Ninth Lok Sabha on 25 February and 4 March 1991 and again in the First Session of the Tenth Lok Sabha on 16 and 24 July 1991, respectively.

In 1996 also, the Railway and General Budgets were presented twice, once in the Sixteenth Session of the Tenth Lok Sabha on 27 and 28 February 1996, respectively, and again in the Second Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha on 16 and 22 July 1996, respectively. In 1998 also, the Railway and General Budgets were presented twice, once in the First Session of Twelfth Lok Sabha on 25 March 1998 (These were financial statements for whole year but sought vote on account for first four months) and again in the Second Session of Twelfth Lok Sabha on 29 May and 1 June 1998 respectively.

Again in 2004, the Railway and General Budgets were presented twice, once in the Fourteenth Session of Thirteenth Lok Sabha on 30 January and 3 February 2004 and again in the Second Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha on 6 and 8 July 2004 respectively.

In 2009 as well, the Railway and General Budgets were presented twice. Once in the Fifteenth Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha on 13 and 16 February 2009, respectively, and again in the Second Session of the Fifteenth Lok Sabha on 3 and 6 July, 2009, respectively.

15. On 5 March 1975, the Minister of State for Finance apologised to the Lok Sabha on account of presentation of the Gujarat Budget for 1975-76 in the Rajya Sabha before its presentation to the Lok Sabha and explained the circumstances under which it was done.—L.S. Deb., 5-3-1975, cc. 258-62.

About a fortnight before the commencement of the Budget Session, the Government forwards to the Secretariat a provisional programme of dates for the financial business during the Budget Session, including the dates of presentation of the Railway and the General Budgets. After the Speaker has approved the dates of presentation of the Budgets, the approval of the President is sought by the Secretary-General. After the President has approved these dates, a paragraph to this effect is published in the Bulletin Part II for information of the members.

The Railway Budget is presented to the Lok Sabha by the Minister of Railways. While presenting the Budget, he delivers his speech and thereafter lays on the Table the annual financial statement pertaining to the Railways, duly authenticated by him<sup>16</sup>.

The General Budget is presented to the Lok Sabha by the Minister of Finance. The Budget speech of the Minister consists of two parts: Part A dealing with the general economic survey of the country and Part B containing the taxation proposals for the ensuing financial year<sup>17</sup>. After he has delivered the speech, he lays on the Table the annual financial statement relating to the Government of India, duly authenticated by him.

The Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management Act, 2003 and the Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management Rules, 2004 provide for laying before both Houses of Parliament the following Statements along with the annual financial statement and Demands for Grants, — (i) The Medium Term Fiscal Policy Statement; (ii) the Fiscal Policy Strategy Statement; and (iii) The Macro Economic Framework Statement. Accordingly, the above-mentioned statements are laid annually since 2004.

The General Budget is prepared by major heads of account, prescribed in consultation with the Comptroller and Auditor-General. These heads fall either under the Consolidated Fund of India or in the Public Account of the Government of India.

All revenues received by the Government of India, all loans raised by the Government by the issue of treasury bills, loans or ways and means advances and all monies received by the Government of India in repayment of loans are credited to the Consolidated Fund. All other public monies received by or on behalf of the Government of India are credited to the Public Account.

The Government expenditure, including expenditure on loans and advances by the Government, the repayment of loans, treasury bills and ways and means advances, is met out of the Consolidated Fund. The estimates of expenditure show separately

16. While presenting the Railway Budget 1973-74, the Railway Minister (L.N. Mishra) expressly conveyed that in order to save the time of the House, he skipped over some paragraphs from his speech which he was reading. The speech was, however, laid on the Table and formed part of the proceedings of the House—L.S. Deb., 20-2-1973, c. 277; On another occasion, the Railway Minister (L.N. Mishra) had skipped over some portions of his printed Budget Speech. However, the Speaker observed that they had been taken as read — L.S. Deb. 27-2-1974, c. 211. The Budget speeches for the Railway Budget for 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1988-89, contained two parts. Part I dealt with the operating performance of the Railways and Part II dealt with proposals for raising additional resources. However, during 1987-88, the speech was in one part only.

17. The Economic Survey, which is an indicator of the health of national economy, is laid on the Table one day in advance. This, being an important document is widely circulated. Statement on new taxation proposals can be made by the Minister at any time.—L.S. Deb., 31-7-1974, cc. 3-9.

the sums required to meet expenditure which the Constitution has “charged” upon the Consolidated Fund and the sums required to meet other expenditure<sup>18</sup>. The Budget also distinguishes expenditure on revenue account from other expenditure. The latter covers expenditure on capital outlay, loans given by the Government and expenditure on the repayment of loans, treasury bills and ways and means advances. The debt position of the Government of India is thus reflected in the Budget.

The Budget of the Government of India sets forth the receipts and expenditure of the Government for three consecutive years. It gives the actuals for the preceding Years, the revised estimates for the current year and the budget estimates for the ensuing year.

Immediately after presentation of the General Budget, the Minister of Finance introduces in the Lok Sabha the Finance Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Government for the following financial year<sup>19</sup>, and thereafter the House rises for the day.

The Finance Bill usually contains a declaration to the effect that it is expedient in the public interest that the provisions of the Bill relating to imposition or increase in duties of customs or excise shall have immediate effect under the Provisional Collection of Taxes Act, 1931<sup>20</sup>. The declared provision has the force of law immediately on the expiry of the day on which the Bill is introduced<sup>21</sup>.

The financial business culminating in the passing of the Appropriation and the Finance Bills has to be completed in time lest the governmental machinery should come to a standstill. The procedure in relation to financial matters is regulated by a set of Rules framed by the House<sup>22</sup>, and thereunder the Speaker has been empowered to ensure the timely disposal of all financial business<sup>23</sup>. In case the Rules made by the House appear to be inadequate, Parliament may, for the purpose of timely completion of financial business, regulate by law the procedure of, and the conduct of business in, each House of Parliament in relation to financial business, and, if and so far as any provision of any law so made is inconsistent with any rule made by a House of Parliament, then such provision shall prevail<sup>24</sup>.

18. Art. 112(2).

19. Rule 219.

20. The Finance Bill, 1952, the Finance Bill, 1962 and the Finance Bill, 1977 did not contain such declaration as no fresh duties were being levied through these Bills.

21. Provisional Collection of Taxes Act, 1931, s. 4; see also this Chapter, under ‘Finance Bill’, infra.

22. Rules 204-221.

23. Rule 221.

24. Art. 119. No such legislation has so far been contemplated.

On 27 April 1987, a member suggested that necessary law may be enacted under article 119 of the Constitution to regulate the procedure in financial matters in Parliament and necessary rules be framed thereunder to enable a thorough discussion of all Demands for Grants. The suggestion was considered by the Rules Committee of the Eighth Lok Sabha. The Committee felt that there was undoubtedly need for greater scrutiny of Demands for Grants but mere enactment of a law would not serve the purpose. The real question was of constraint of time and not that of absence of a law to regulate the procedure for disposal of financial business. The only viable solution was that the Demands for Grants should automatically stand referred to Committees of the House for detailed scrutiny. During the Sixth Session of the Tenth Lok Sabha, seventeen Departmentally Related Standing Committees of the Houses were set up to consider inter alia the Demands for

Distribution of Budget Papers

Sets of the Budget Papers<sup>25</sup> for circulation to members are supplied to the Secretariats of both the Houses of Parliament by the Ministry concerned. In the case of the Railway Budget, the sets of the Budget papers are entrusted to the Secretariat by the Railway Ministry as soon as the Railway Minister starts his Budget speech, and the sets are distributed to members from the Publications Counter after the Minister has concluded his speech.

The General Budget is kept a carefully guarded secret because Part B of the Finance Minister's speech contains taxation proposals and the Ministry of Finance entrusts the sets to the Secretariat only when the Finance Minister starts Part B of his speech. The sets are distributed to members from the Inner and Outer Lobbies of the Chamber after the Minister's speech is over, the Finance Bill is introduced and the House is adjourned for the day<sup>26</sup>.

Leakage of Budget: Question of Privilege

Leakage of Budget proposals before they are presented to the Lok Sabha does not constitute a breach of privilege of the House. The Speaker has ruled:

The prevailing view is that until the financial proposals are placed before the House, they are an official secret... . Though the leakage of the budget proposals may not constitute a breach of privilege of the House, Parliament has ample power to inquire into the conduct of a Minister in suitable proceedings in relation to the leakage and the circumstances in which the leakage occurred<sup>27</sup>.

Grants of the concerned Ministries/Departments before the Demands were voted by the House. In the year 2004, the number of Standing Committees was raised from seventeen to twenty-four—See Bn. (II), 20-7-2004, para 253. Also see Chapter XXX, Parliamentary Committees.

Under article 209, the financial procedure was regulated by law under the Punjab Legislature (Regulation of Procedure in Relation of Financial Business) Ordinance, 1968, promulgated by the Punjab Governor on 13 March 1968.

25. The Railway Budget Papers usually consist of:

Speech of Minister for Railways introducing the Railway Budget; Budget of the Railway Revenue and Expenditure; Explanatory Memorandum on the Railway Budget; Demands for Grants; Works, Machinery and Rolling Stock Programme – Part I – Summary and Part II – Detailed Programme of Railways; Indian Railways Report and Accounts.

The General Budget Papers usually comprise:

Speech of Finance Minister; key features of Budget; Annual Financial Statement; Demands for Grants; key to Budget Documents; Budget at a Glance; Finance Bill; Memorandum explaining the provisions in the Finance Bill; Fiscal Responsibilities and Budget Management Statements and Implementation of Budget.

However, on the recommendations of the Estimates Committee, made in their Thirty-seventh Report presented to the Lok Sabha on 4 December 1986, the following papers were made available in the Budget Documents for the year 1987-88 in place of the Book of Demands for Grants:—

- (1) Demands for Grants of Union Government (Excluding Railways) 1987-88.
  - (2) Expenditure Budget, 1987-88, Volume I (Incorporating Explanatory Memorandum and Plan Budget).
  - (3) Expenditure Budget, 1987-88, Volume II (Incorporating Notes on Demands for Grants).
  - (4) Receipts Budget, 1987-88, (Incorporating Receipts, Recoveries of Loans, Other Capital Receipts and Debt position of Union Government).
26. The sets of both the Railway and General Budgets are also simultaneously distributed to the Media and are made available on sale as soon as the concerned Ministers start their Budget Speeches.

Discussion on the Budget

Allotment of Time for Discussion

No discussion of the Budget takes place on the day it is presented to the House<sup>28</sup>. According to the practice obtaining in the Lok Sabha, the General Budget is ordinarily discussed after about a week or ten days of its presentation to the House, while the Railway Budget is taken up for discussion after about a week of its presentation.

After the Budget has been presented, the Speaker may appoint a day for the commencement of its discussion which continues for such time as the Speaker may allot<sup>29</sup>. Similarly, the Speaker, in consultation with the Leader of the House, may allot so many days as may be compatible with the public interest for the discussion and voting of Demands for Grants<sup>30</sup>.

In actual practice, after the Railways and the General Budgets have been presented to Lok Sabha, the Leader of the House, through Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, forwards to the Secretariat proposals regarding time to be allotted for the general discussion and for the discussion and voting of Demands for Grants. These proposals are placed before the Business Advisory Committee which makes a report to the House. After the House has adopted the report, the allocation of time is published in the Bulletin Part II. In the light of the allocation of time, a time-table showing the dates on which demands relating to various Ministries are to be discussed and voted, is drawn up by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs. After the Speaker has given his approval, the time-table is published in the Bulletin. In case of any change in the programme approved by the House, the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs makes a statement in the House and thereafter the revised programme is published in the Bulletin<sup>31</sup>.

In case more time than what is allotted to groups of Demands for Grants is taken and the time-table already published in respect of the remaining groups of demands becomes obsolete, the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs is asked to send a revised time-table in respect of the remaining Demands for Grants, and after the Speaker's approval, the revised time-table is published in the Bulletin. In such cases, the day on which the last group of Demands for Grants is to be disposed of, according to the original or revised time-table (as the case may be) as published in the Bulletin, is regarded as the last day of the allotted days. It is also specified in the Bulletin.

31. During the Seventh Session of the Fifth Lok Sabha, Ministries/Departments whose Demands were to be guillotined without any discussion were not included in the time-table for discussion and voting of Demands for Grants—See Bn. (II), 23-3-1973, para 1092. But the Ministries/Departments whose Demands for Grants are to be guillotined are being included in the time-table since the Thirteenth Session of the Fifth Lok Sabha, resuming the earlier practice.

From the presentation of the Budget to the passing of the Appropriation and Finance Bills giving effect to Government's expenditure and taxation proposals contained in the Budget, members get opportunity to discuss the financial policies pursued by the Government in the course of general discussion on the Budget, discussion and voting of Demands for Grants, and consideration and passing of the Appropriation Bill and the Finance Bill.

General Discussion on the Budget

On a day appointed by the Speaker subsequent to the day on which the Budget is presented and for such time as the Speaker may allot for this purpose, the House is at liberty to discuss the Budget as a whole or any question of principle involved therein, but no motion can be moved nor is the Budget submitted to the vote of the House at this stage. The Finance Minister has the general right of reply at the end of the discussion.

A general survey of administration is in order at the general discussion stage. The scope of discussion at this stage is confined to an examination of the general scheme and the structure of the Budget. It has been held that the scheme of the Budget would include consideration of the revenue and expenditure account and the overall surplus or deficit, and in considering the revenue account, members might take into account the method of estimation. The discussion has to be limited to the point whether the items of expenditure ought to be increased or decreased having regard to the importance of a particular item and also to the manner in which the Budget is framed. The policy of taxation as it is expressed in the Budget and in the speech of the Finance Minister is within the purview of the general discussion. Grievances, which have no relation to the points raised in the Finance Minister's speech or do not directly arise out of the proposed expenditure, are not in order at this stage. Specific points or grievances and details of taxation and expenditure can be gone into when the Demands for Grants and the Finance Bill are before the House<sup>32</sup>.

During the general discussion, the Speaker normally prescribes time-limit for speeches. The time-limit is usually fifteen minutes for each member, excepting the leaders of Parties and the Finance Minister. The former can have thirty minutes within the overall time-limit available to their Parties while the Finance Minister is allowed as much time as he likes for his reply to the debate. If the Minister so desires, he can initiate discussion on the Budget<sup>33</sup>.

The general discussion on the Budget is usually initiated first in the Lok Sabha<sup>34</sup> and then in the Rajya Sabha. However, on occasions, though rare, discussion in the Rajya Sabha was started before it commenced in the Lok Sabha<sup>35</sup>.

Consideration of Demands for Grants by Departmentally Related Standing Committees

The year 1993 ushered in a new era in the history of Indian Parliament when seventeen Departmentally Related Standing Committees were constituted. The number of Standing Committees was raised to twenty-four in 2004<sup>36</sup>. Each Standing Committee consists of not more than 31 members—21 members to be nominated by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Lok Sabha and 10 members to be nominated by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, from amongst the members of the Rajya Sabha<sup>37</sup>. All the Ministries/Departments of the Government of India have been covered under the jurisdiction of the Standing Committees<sup>38</sup>.

The Budget related functions<sup>39</sup> of each of the Standing Committees inter alia are (i) to consider the Demands for Grants of the concerned Ministries/Departments and make a report on the same to the Houses. The report shall not suggest anything of the nature of cut motions; and

(ii) to consider annual reports of Ministries/Departments and make reports thereon.

32. See H.P. Deb., (II), 26-5-1952, c. 539; 4-3-1953, cc. 1379-80; L.S. Deb., 13-3-1956, cc. 2386-87.

33. L.S. Deb., 4-3-1970, cc. 289-93.

34. The Government has to see that the discussion on Budget takes place in Lok Sabha first and then in the other House because it is the prerogative of the Lok Sabha to discuss it and make modifications.—L.S. Deb., 2-3-1963, cc. 1740-41.

35. In 1955, the general discussion on the Budget (General) commenced in the Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha, respectively, on 3 and 16 March 1955; in 1959, on 3 and 9 March 1959, respectively; in 1963, on 4 and 12 March 1963, respectively; in 1965, on 10 and 22 March 1965, respectively; and in 2002, on 18 and 19 March 2002 respectively.

36. Rule 331 C. 1R, RC (14LS), 8-8-2004; Also see Bn. (II), 20-7-2004, para 253.

38. Rule 331 C (2).

39. Rule 331 E. For details, see Chapter XXX on Parliamentary Committees.

The following procedure is followed by each of the Standing Committees in the consideration of the Demands for Grants and making a report thereon to the Houses<sup>40</sup>:

- (a) after the general discussion on the Budget in the Houses is over, the Houses shall be adjourned for a fixed period i.e. normally four weeks;
- (b) the Committees shall consider the Demands for Grants of the concerned Ministries during the aforesaid period;
- (c) the Committees shall make their report within the period and shall not ask for more time;
- (d) the Demands for Grants shall be considered by the House in the light of the reports of the Committees; and
- (e) there shall be a separate report on the Demands for Grants of each Ministry.

Thus, Parliament is able to exercise more effective control over the expenditure of the Executive as the Demands for Grants of all the Ministries/Departments of Government of India are scrutinised by Standing Committees<sup>41</sup> before these are finally voted by the House.

However, instances<sup>42</sup> are there when the House adjourned for recess before conclusion of the general discussion on the General Budget. In such a case, Rule 331 G(a) of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha was suspended by the House. There has also been an instance when the Demands for Grants (Railways as well as General) were passed before the House adjourned for recess without the same being considered by respective Departmentally Related Standing Committees<sup>43</sup>.

Discussion on Demands for Grants

The Demands for Grants are presented to the Lok Sabha along with the Budget Statement. Each demand first gives the totals of 'voted' and 'charged' expenditure as also the 'revenue' and 'capital' expenditure included in the demands separately and also the grand total of the amount of expenditure for which demand is presented. This

40. Rule 331 G.

41. For example, during the Budgets for 1993-94, 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98, 1998-99 and 1999-2000 the Departmentally Related Standing Committees considered the Demands for Grants of various Ministries/Departments of Government of India and presented 19, 35, 44, 72, 29, 67 and 50 reports thereon, respectively.

42. L.S. Deb., 21-4-1993, cc. 461-65; 19-3-1994, c. 46; 27-3-1995, c. 274.

43. In the Seventh Session of Fourteenth Lok Sabha (2006), the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs (P.R. Dasmunsi) moved a motion for suspension of Rule 331 G in its application to the discussion and voting on Demands for Grants (Railways) for 2006-07 and Demands for Grants of Central Government (excluding Railways) for 2006-07 without Demands being considered by respective Departmentally Related Standing Committees. The motion was adopted.

Accordingly, Demands for Grants (Railways) and (General) for 2006-07 were passed before the House adjourned for recess without being considered by respective Departmentally Related Standing Committees. The Committees, however, examined the Demands for Grants during the recess period and made reports thereon.

is followed by the estimates of expenditure under different heads. The Demands for Grants are followed by the detailed Demands for Grants laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha some time after the presentation of the Budget, but before the discussion on Demands for Grants commences. These detailed Demands for Grants show further details of the provisions included in the Demands for Grants.

Prior to the General Budget for 1987-88, the Demands for Grants (Parts I and II) were made available to members on the day of presentation of the Budget and Part III, i.e. detailed Demands for Grants were laid on the Table of the House a week or two before they were taken up for discussion in the House. Part I showed the service for which appropriation was intended and also the totals of voted and charged expenditure included in the Demands. Part II showed distribution of total provision by Major and Minor Heads of Accounts, and also contained information which were repeated in detailed Demands for Grants. In order to reduce the volume of printing at the Budget presentation stage and also to make available to Parliament the detailed Demands for Grants earlier than a week or two, the Ministry of Finance approached the Estimates Committee (Eighth Lok Sabha) for revision of the form and contents of the Demands for Grants. The Estimates Committee, after going into the matter, in their Thirty-seventh Report, presented to the House on 4 December 1986, recommended that:

- (i) Part II of the Demands be presented by Major Heads only by deleting information which is repeated in Part III, i.e. Detailed Demands;
- (ii) Part II of the Demands may be brought out in a single volume;
- (iii) The detailed Notes on Demands for Grants may be detached from Part II of the Demands and supplied as a separate volume along with the Budget papers;
- (iv) The detailed Demands for Grants, i.e. Part III in respect of a Ministry should be laid on the Table of the House at least fifteen days before the date on which the relevant Demands are taken up for discussion;
- (v) In the Annual Financial Statement, the total receipts and expenditure of Union territories without Legislature be shown separately, Union territory-wise.

Accordingly, during 1987-88, the Demands for Grants were presented in the revised format<sup>44</sup>.

After presentation of the General or the Railway Budget, the Minister concerned gives notice of his intention to move the Demands for Grants in the House.

The estimates relating to expenditure not charged on the Consolidated Fund of India are, therefore submitted in the form of Demands for Grants to the Lok Sabha which has the power to assent, or to refuse to assent, to any demand, or to assent to any demands subject to a reduction of the amount specified therein<sup>45</sup>. But no Demand for Grant can be made except on the recommendation of the President<sup>46</sup>, and the recommendation so obtained has to be communicated to the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha, by the Minister concerned in a set format<sup>47</sup>.

A separate demand is ordinarily made in respect of the grant proposed for each Ministry, but the Finance Minister may include in one demand grants proposed for two or more Ministries or Departments or make a conjoined demand in respect of expenditure which cannot be readily classified under particular Ministries. Each demand contains first a statement of the total grant proposed and then a statement of the detailed estimate under each grant divided into items<sup>48</sup>.

Thus, the estimates as relate to expenditure 'charged' upon the Consolidated Fund of India are not submitted to the vote of the Lok Sabha, but Parliament can discuss such estimates<sup>49</sup>. These estimates are not termed as Demands for Grants and the recommendation of the President is not necessary for their being placed before Parliament<sup>50</sup>.

Subsequent to the presentation of the Demands for Grants to the Lok Sabha, alterations have been made in the composition of the demands without affecting the total, with the permission of the Speaker and the necessary recommendation of the President<sup>51</sup>. Permission has also been granted to the moving of a particular demand for a reduced amount<sup>52</sup>.

Procedure for moving of Demands for Grants

Demands for Grants are not generally moved in the House by the Minister concerned<sup>53</sup>. The demands are assumed to have been moved and are proposed from the Chair to save time of the House<sup>54</sup>. But if the Minister concerned so desires, he can initiate discussion on the Demands for Grants relating to his Ministry<sup>55</sup>. Demands for Grants of two different Ministries under the charge of the same Minister are discussed separately<sup>56</sup>.

Normally, the motions in respect of the Demands for Grants relating to the General Budget are moved for sums excluding the sums already voted on account by the House in respect of those demands<sup>57</sup>. However, in the case of any reorganization of Ministries, after the general elections, the Demands for Grants in respect of the Ministries affected by the reorganization are, with the permission of the Speaker, moved and subsequently voted for sums, including the sums already voted on account<sup>58</sup>.

Scope of Discussion on Demands for Grants

Whereas during the general discussion on the Budget, the House is at liberty to discuss the Budget as a whole or any question of principle involved therein<sup>59</sup>, at the stage of discussion on the Demands for Grants in respect of a Ministry the debate is essentially confined to a matter which is under the administrative control of that Ministry and to each head of the demand as is put to the vote of the House. During the discussion on the Demands for Grants, it is open to members to disapprove a policy pursued by a particular Ministry or to suggest measures of economy in the administration of that Ministry or to focus attention of the Ministry to specific local grievances.

During the general discussion on the Budget, no motion is moved nor is the Budget submitted to the vote of the House, but while discussing the Demands for Grants motions can be moved to reduce any Demand for Grant<sup>60</sup>, but no amendment to a motion seeking to reduce any demand is permissible<sup>61</sup>. When several motions for reduction relating to the same Demand for Grant are offered, they are discussed in the order in which the heads to which they relate appear in the Budget<sup>62</sup>. After all the motions for reduction relating to a Demand for Grant are disposed of, the demand is put to the vote of the House.

For the sake of convenience, all the Demands for Grants in respect of a Ministry/ Department are discussed together, along with the motions for reduction moved to these demands. After the discussion, first the motions for reduction are disposed of and thereafter the Demands for Grants are put to the vote of the House.

Guillotine

The Speaker, in consultation with the Leader of the House, allots days for the discussion and voting of Demands for Grants<sup>63</sup>. On the last day of the allotted days, 63. Sub-rule (2) of Rule 208 was amended and notified vide L.S. Bn. (II), 30-11-1965 and the words “or at such other hour as the Speaker may fix in advance” were inserted after the words, “17.00 hours”. Prior to this amendment, whenever outstanding demands were to be guillotined at an hour later than 17.00 hours on allotted day or on a day subsequent to last day of allotted days, sub-rule (2) had to be suspended.

Now, on the last of the allotted days, the time at which outstanding demands are to be guillotined is fixed by the Speaker and is notified in Bn. (II) in advance.

The following statement indicates the names of Ministries/Departments discussed during the last sixteen years:

Year	Ministry/Department whose Demands for Grants were discussed and voted
1998-99	Agriculture
1999-2000	Voted without discussion
2000-01	(1) Communications (2) Home Affairs (3) Human Resource Development
2001-02	(1) Rural Development (2) Disinvestment
2002-03	Agriculture
2003-04	(1) Labour (2) External Affairs
2004-2005	Voted without discussion
2005-2006	(1) Agriculture (2) Rural Development (3) Home Affairs (4) Science and Technology
2006-2007	(1) Home Affairs (2) Rural Development (3) Agriculture
2007-2008	(1) Labour and Employment (2) Science and Technology (3) Home Affairs
2008-2009	(1) Home Affairs (2) Defence (3) Rural Development (4) Information and Broadcasting
2009-10	(1) Human Resource Development (2) (i) Agriculture (ii) Consumer Affairs, Food and Public Distributions (3) Power (4) Home (5) Women and Child Development at 17.00 hours or at such other hour as the Speaker may fix in advance, he forthwith puts every question necessary to dispose of all the outstanding matters in connection with the Demands for Grants<sup>64</sup>.
2010-2011	(1) External Affairs (2) Rural Development (3) Tribal Affairs

However, the time and date of disposal of outstanding Demands for Grants already notified in the Bulletin can be altered or extended by the House to enable the House to discuss the Demands for Grants of more Ministries/Departments<sup>65</sup>.

If more time than what was allotted to some groups of demands is taken and consequently the time-table already published in respect of the remaining groups of demands is revised, the day on which the last group of Demands for Grants is to be disposed of according to the revised time-table, is regarded as the last day of the allotted days<sup>66</sup>. If, on the last day, the last group of demands for which time has been allotted is disposed of earlier than the fixed hour, the outstanding demands are guillotined only at the scheduled hour. The intervening period is devoted to some other items included in the List of Business for that day<sup>67</sup>.

Cut Motions

During the discussion on the Demands for Grants, motions can be moved to reduce the amount of a demand. Such a motion is called a 'cut motion'<sup>68</sup>. It is only a form of initiating discussion on the demand, so that the attention of the House is drawn to the matter specified in such a motion. It is not obligatory that discussion should start only on a cut motion; nor does it bestow a right on a member to insist on moving his cut motion. Cut motions are given by members of the Opposition only and the members of the Government party do not generally give such notices as it will amount to a vote of censure or indirectly 'no-confidence' in the Council of Ministers<sup>69</sup>.

2012-13	(1) Health and Family Welfare (2) Urban Development (3) Home Affairs (4) Commerce and Industry
2013-14	Voted without discussion

64. Rule 208(2). Outstanding matters were disposed of at 18.30 hours on 21 March 1950; at 15.30 hours on 12 May 1972; at 18.00 hours on 11 May 1976. For the form of the motion at the time of guillotine, see L.S. Deb., 11-5-1976, cc. 226-67.

65. On 22 April 1987, the House decided that in partial modification of its earlier decision dated 12 March 1987, all outstanding Demands for Grants in respect of the Budget (General) for 1987-88 might be disposed of and put to the vote of the House at 18.00 hours on 28 April 1987 instead of at 15.30 hours on 24 April 1987 and the Finance Bill, 1987 be taken up for consideration and passing on 29 and 30 April and 4 May 1987 instead of 27 and 28 April 1987. Accordingly, the outstanding Demands were put to the Vote of the House and passed at 18.00 hours on 28 April 1987.

68. Rule 209.

69. L.S. Deb., 20-8-1957, cc. 8988-89.

Cut motions can be classified into three categories: Disapproval of Policy Cut; Economy Cut; and Token Cut.

Disapproval of Policy Cut

Where the object of a motion is to disapprove of the policy underlying a demand, its form is “that the amount of the demand be reduced to Re. 1”. The member giving notice of such a cut motion has to indicate in precise terms the particulars of the policy which he proposes to discuss. Discussion is confined to the specific point or points mentioned in the notice and it is open to the member to advocate an alternative policy.

Economy Cut

If it is contended that an economy in the expenditure can be effected, the form of the motion is “that the amount of the demand be reduced by a specified amount”. The amount suggested for reduction is either a lump sum reduction in the demand or omission or reduction of an item in the demand. Approximate amount to be economized must be given in motions for ‘Economy Cut’<sup>70</sup>. The notice has to indicate briefly and precisely the particular matter on which discussion is sought to be raised and speeches are confined to the points as to how the economy can be effected.

Token Cut

Where a motion “that the amount of the demand be reduced by Rs. 100” is moved, it is in order to ventilate a specific grievance within the sphere of the responsibility of the Government of India. Discussion on such a cut motion is confined to the particular grievance specified in the motion.

The practice of indicating briefly and precisely the particulars of the policy, the specific matter or grievance, as the case may be, that the member wants to discuss on his cut motion—whether disapproval of policy cut or economy cut or token cut—was started in 1925 during the Budget Session<sup>71</sup>.

The period of notice of a cut motion is one day<sup>72</sup> previous to the day on which the demand to which it relates is under consideration, but the Speaker is empowered to waive an objection on the score of insufficient notice<sup>73</sup>.

71. L.A. Deb., 16-2-1925, pp. 1091-93.

72. As cut motions and amendments are circulated to members both in English and Hindi simultaneously, the Rules Committee (Fourth Lok Sabha) considered the question of inadequacy of the period of notice for tabling of (i) amendments to Bills, Resolutions and Motions; and (ii) Cut Motions. The Committee decided that members might be requested to table such notices at least two days before the day they are to be taken up in the House. Before the commencement of Session, members are requested through Bulletin to table the notice of amendments to Bills, Motions and Resolutions and Cut Motions at least two days before the day the relevant item to which they relate is to be taken up in the House, but in any case not later than 15.15 hrs. on the previous day. Bn. (II), 18-2-1988, para 2103.

73. Rule 212. For further details, see Chapter XXXII—General Rules of Procedure, under ‘Notices’.

Admissibility of Cut Motions

In order that a notice of motion for reduction of the amount of demand may be admissible, it must satisfy the following conditions<sup>74</sup>, namely:

it should relate to one demand only;

A general motion touching several Demands for Grants cannot be given under an individual Demand for Grant. An omnibus cut motion for a general reduction of several demands by a specific percentage or amount is, therefore, not in order. A member wishing to cut down any particular item has to table a motion in respect of that item only under the appropriate demand<sup>75</sup>.

it should be clearly expressed and not contain arguments, inferences, ironical expressions, imputations, epithets or defamatory statements.

it should be confined to one specific matter and the matter itself has to be stated in precise terms<sup>76</sup>.

The question to be raised on a cut motion should be definite. The motion should raise one particular question: it should not be a roving motion, such as to discuss “the grievances of the employees of Indian Railways”. Subjects not mentioned in a cut motion cannot be discussed under that cut motion<sup>77</sup>; it is permissible to discuss only one subject under one cut motion<sup>78</sup>. Speech on a cut motion must relate to the specific matter referred to in the cut motion and no general discussion is permissible<sup>79</sup>.

it should not reflect on the character or conduct of any person whose conduct can only be challenged on a substantive motion; it should not make suggestions for the amendment or repeal of existing laws;

it should not refer to a matter which is not primarily the concern of the Government of India;

it should not relate to any expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund of India;

it should not relate to a matter which is under adjudication by a court of law having jurisdiction in any part of India;

it should not raise a question of privilege;

it should not revive discussion on a matter which has been discussed in the same session and on which a decision has already been taken;

it should not anticipate a matter which has been previously appointed for consideration in the same session<sup>80</sup>;

it should not ordinarily seek to raise a discussion on a matter pending before any statutory tribunal or statutory authority performing any judicial or quasijudicial functions or any commission or court of inquiry appointed to inquire into, or investigate, any matter;

the Speaker may, in his discretion, allow such matter being raised in the House as is concerned with the procedure or stage of inquiry, if he is satisfied that it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of such matter by the statutory tribunal, statutory authority, commission, or court of inquiry; and it should not relate to a trivial matter.

The Speaker decides whether a cut motion is or is not admissible under the Rules and can disallow any cut motion when, in his opinion, it is abuse of the right of moving cut motions or is calculated to obstruct or prejudicially affect the procedure of the House or is in contravention of the Rules<sup>81</sup>.

A cut motion seeking to censure the Government for not taking action on an issue, which, if taken, would amount to overriding a law passed by Parliament, is not in order<sup>82</sup>.

It is a well-established practice that cut motions cannot be moved to discuss the action of the Speaker in any matter<sup>83</sup>. Cut motions are out of order if they relate to the Department or matters which are entirely under the control of the Speaker<sup>84</sup>. Likewise, cut motions relating to the office of the Vice-President (who is also ex-officio Chairman of the Rajya Sabha) are not admissible. Cut motions are not admissible if they ventilate personal grievances or if they cast aspersions on individual Government officials. Cut motions seeking to discuss a matter affecting relations with a friendly foreign country or details of internal administration of an autonomous body<sup>85</sup> are out of order as also those which seek omission of a whole grant<sup>86</sup>.

Token cuts seeking to discuss inadequacy of provision in respect of a particular demand are, however, in order.

Circulation of List of Cut Motions

Notices of cut motions to the various Demands for Grants are numbered and consolidated Ministry-wise. The consolidated lists are printed and circulated to all members and the Minister concerned, generally two days in advance of the date on which the Demands for Grants in respect of his Ministry are to be taken up in the House for discussion. If, after the issue of such a consolidated list, further notices of cut motions to those demands are received, they are circulated through subsequent list or lists, bearing consecutive numbers, in respect of that Ministry.

In a list, cut motions are grouped demand-wise<sup>87</sup>. As regards the inter se arrangement of cut motions under a particular demand, the disapproval of policy cuts are placed first in the list, followed by economy cuts and token cuts, in that order.

Procedure regarding moving of Cut Motions

At the commencement of the discussion on the Demands for Grants in respect of a particular Ministry, an announcement is made by the Speaker to the effect that the members whose cut motions to the Demand(s) have been circulated, may, if they desire to move their cut motions, send slips at the Table within 15 minutes indicating the serial numbers of the cut motions they would like to move. Only those cut motions, slips in respect of which are received at the Table within the stipulated time, are treated as moved.

A list showing the serial numbers of the cut motions indicated by the members is put on the Notice Board shortly thereafter to facilitate the members to bring to the notice of the officers at the Table immediately for discrepancy if any. Even at this state, the Speaker has the discretion to rule any cut motion out of order even though it had been circulated to the members. Cut motions can not be moved at a later stage, but members can mention them in the course of their speeches<sup>88</sup>.

Where a cut motion, printed in the list of cut motions, in the names of several members is treated as moved on an indication being given by such members in writing, it is deemed to have been moved by the member whose name appears first in the list, and if he is not present in the House or has not indicated his intention to move, then by the second or the third member, etc. who may be present. In the proceedings the name of only such member is shown as the mover of that cut motion. Moving of identical cut motions is not in order<sup>89</sup>.

Till the year 2009, cut motions were not permitted to be moved to outstanding demands or if there was no time for proper discussion and voting<sup>90</sup>. However, from the year 2010, cut motions to the outstanding demands have been allowed to be moved<sup>91</sup>.

90. L.A. Deb., 25-2-1942, pp. 512-15.

The Cut Motions in respect of the Demands for Grants which are to be guillotined are not circulated to members. However, an advance copy of such cut motions is sent to the concerned Ministry/Department. During the Seventh and Tenth Session of Fourteenth Lok Sabha it was decided that Demands for Grants (Railways) for 2006-07 and 2007-08, respectively might be considered and voted by the House without discussion. When the item was to be taken up, the Chair observed that all the cut motions for which notices had been given and which had been circulated, may be treated as moved. Accordingly, all the cut motions were treated as moved and were put to vote and negated by the House.

91. During the Budget Session 2010-2011, Gurudas Dasgupta vide letter addressed to the Speaker stated that article 113 of the Constitution of India empowers a member to assent or to refuse to assent any expenditure submitted in the form of Demands for Grants. But the Grants passed through guillotine do not give this right to the member. He had, therefore, requested the Speaker to consider this anomaly. The request of the member was examined in the light of relevant provisions of the Constitution and the Rules of the House. The Speaker on 27 April 2010, while permitting cut motions to the demands which were to be guillotined, ruled:

“Shri Gurudas Dasgupta, Hon’ble Member, in a letter addressed to me raised an important point relating to the right of the members of the House in moving cut motion on the demands for grants which are guillotined. He quoted article 113 of the Constitution and stated that since the Constitution vests in the House of the people the power to assent to a demand subject to reduction of the amount specified that demand, the members have the right to move cut motions on any demand submitted to the House for its approval.

This point was also raised in the Business Advisory Committee Meeting held on 15th April 2010, by Smt. Sushma Swaraj, the Leader of Opposition, and other Hon’ble members. I had promised to examine this issue in terms of the Constitutional provisions and Rules and Practices followed in the House.

The practice following so far in the House has been that the cut motions in respect of Demands for Grants which are to be guillotined are not circulated and thus not allowed to be moved. But, I did not find any rule which bars the moving of cut motions on demands which are not discussed in the House.

The right to move a cut motion flows from the power vested in the House under article 113 of the Constitution to assent to any demand subject to a reduction of the amount specified in that demand. This article or any of the Rules does not make any distinction between the demands which are discussed in the House and those which are guillotined. Article 113 uses the words ‘Any Demand’. It is thus clear that cut motions can be moved on all demands submitted to the House under article 113(2).

I have given careful consideration to this rules as well as the practice that has been followed all these years in respect of cut motions. I have also examined the constitutional provision which vests the power in the House of the People to reduce any demand submitted to the House. Constitutional right of the members of the House provided in the Constitution which cannot be curtailed. I am, therefore, allowing the cut motions to be moved on demands which are to be guillotined.

Lists of Cut Motions to the Outstanding Demands of various Ministries/Departments have already been circulated. In the normal course, members are given 15 minutes’ time to send slips at the Table indicating the serial number of the Cut Motions which they intend to move. However, in the present case, since it is not possible to give time to the members to send slips at the Table indicating the serial number of the Cut Motions they would like to move, all the Cut Motions to the Outstanding Demands for various Ministries/Departments, for which notices have been given and which have been circulated, will be treated as moved. And, these cut motions will be disposed of before the Outstanding Demands are put to the vote of the Houses.”

Cut Motions cannot be moved by Proxy<sup>92</sup>.

Intimation from a member that he would move cut motions to Demands for Grants regarding a particular Ministry is not enough for treating them as moved; the member should be present in the House when the demands of that Ministry are taken up. Moreover, as in the case of amendments, the mover of a cut motion has no inherent right to be called to speak on that cut motion<sup>93</sup>, nor has he the right of reply to the debate on his cut motion<sup>94</sup>.

As already stated, members of the ruling party do not by convention give notice of, or move<sup>95</sup> cut motions to the Demands for Grants but they take part in the discussion and may in their speeches criticise or question the policy of the Government or the wisdom of any expenditure or financial prospect<sup>96</sup>. However, there have been occasions when ruling party members tabled notices of cut motions but did not move them.

Circulation of Annual Reports/Performance/ Outcome Budgets of Ministries

In connection with the discussion on the Budget, copies of annual reports of Ministries are made available to members. These reports give the necessary information as to the performance of the Ministry during the current year and background of its working as also the programme for the next financial year. These reports are very informative and useful and are in fact, supplementary for the speech which each particular Minister would have been required to make while moving his demand by way of justifying it.

The annual reports are usually made available to members after the presentation of the Budget, but before the demands relating to a particular Ministry are discussed in the House. With the introduction of the Departmentally Related Standing Committees, the copies of annual reports and Performance/Outcome Budgets are also made available to these Committees in connection with the consideration of Demands for Grants<sup>97</sup>.

On a complaint made in the House that the annual report of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, the Demands for Grants for which were being discussed, had not been circulated to members but only the summary of activities was made available to them, the Speaker observed:

95. During the Fifth Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, a member from the ruling party tabled a cut motion to Demands for Grants (Commerce) which was circulated but the member did not move his cut motion when the Chair made the announcement to that effect. During the second Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, a member belonging to a party supporting the Government from outside tabled notices of cut motions on 30-8-1996 to the Demands for Grants relating to Ministry of Rural Areas and Employment. His cut motions were circulated. On 9 September 1996, the member moved his cut motions but withdrew the same by leave of the House, before the Demands of the Ministry were put to vote.

Ministers may ensure that by the time the general discussion takes place, all the reports are in the hands of members because the general discussion will not be useful unless the various reports are available to members. All the members may not be interested in every subject, but general discussion is intended to cover all the subjects<sup>98</sup>.

During the Seventh Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha, Demands for Grants and Outcome Budget of the Ministry of Rural Development were included in the List of Business for discussion and laying, respectively, on 14 March 2011. Copies of Annual Report (English version only) were provided by the Ministry on the same day and were given to members through the Publications Counter. The position was brought to the notice of the Speaker, who before Demands for Grants of the Ministry were taken up for discussion, observed that in future Government should ensure that the annual reports, outcome budgets and the detailed Demands for Grants of the Ministries, which were to be discussed, be made available to the members sufficiently in advance so that they get enough time to study them<sup>99</sup>.

In the year 1969, on the basis of the recommendations of the Administrative Reforms Commission, a system of performance budgeting by Ministries handling development programmes was introduced. Performance Budget of a Ministry/Department presented the Budget position in terms of functions, programmes and activities. Copies of the Performance Budgets received from the respective Ministries/Departments were made available to members in connection with discussion on the Demands for Grants.

As certain weaknesses had crept in the performance budget documents, the Ministry of Finance in the year 2006 introduced the concept of Outcome Budget which broadly indicated the physical dimension of the financial budgets in terms of actual physical performance of the previous year, performance of the first nine months of the current year and targeted performance for the ensuing year. Accordingly, on 25 August 2005, the Minister of Finance laid before the House for the first time Outcome Budget 2005-06 in respect of the various Ministries and Departments. In March 2006 both the Outcome Budget 2006-07 and Performance Budget 2005-06 of the various Ministries/Departments were laid before the House separately by the Ministers concerned. The Ministry of Finance, in December 2006, merged the Performance Budget with the Outcome Budget. Accordingly, beginning with the Budget, 2007-08, a single document titled Outcome Budget of the various Ministries and Departments is being made available to members in connection with the discussion on the Demands for Grants. Before the commencement of the Budget Session, all Ministries/Departments of Government are requested to ensure that copies of the Annual Reports and Performance/Outcome Budgets of Ministries are made available to the Lok Sabha Secretariat sufficiently in advance so that these may be circulated to members a week before the Demands for Grants of concerned Ministries are taken up for discussion.

Vote on Account

The Constitution provides for vote on account, i.e. for grants in advance to be made by the Parliament to enable the Government to carry on until the voting of the Demands for Grants and the passing of the general Appropriation Bill<sup>100</sup>.

The procedure of vote on account was for the first time provided for in the Constitution. In its absence, the result was that after the presentation of the Budget and the introduction of the Finance Bill on the last day of February, both had perforce to be passed by the House before the end of the financial year, i.e. 31 March, so as to provide the Government with the funds necessary for the following year and to authorise the Government to implement the taxation measures therefor. This system limited the time available to the House for a proper and satisfactory consideration of the Budget. Moreover, the system was inelastic and left very little time for adjusting the programme. Considerable difficulty was experienced if any urgent legislative measure had to be taken up when the Budget discussions were in progress. With the introduction of the vote on account not only the programme has become elastic but members also get sufficient time to study, scrutinize and discuss in detail over an adequate period of time the annual financial proposals.

Normally the vote on account is taken for two months only. But during an election year or when it is anticipated that the main demands and the Appropriation Bill will take longer than two months to be passed by the House, the vote on account may be for a period exceeding two months and may extend to three or four months.

In March, the Lok Sabha is asked to vote provisionally about one-sixth, or other suitable proportion as the case may be, of the estimated expenditure under various grants. For this, and for a similar amount in respect of charged expenditure, the necessary Appropriation Bill is passed. The detailed discussion on the demands is then taken up conveniently and voting of the demands together with the passing of the general Appropriation Bill is completed before the session concludes<sup>101</sup>.

Vote on account is formal business and as such there is normally no discussion in the House thereon, the idea being simply that Government functions should not come to a standstill because of the absence of the vote of the House authorising the expenditure<sup>102</sup>. On the day on which the vote on account is taken up in the House, other legislative business may also be put down on the agenda.

As a convention, vote on account is normally passed without discussion. The Speaker may, however, allow some questions to be asked and answers given so as to explain to the House what exactly the members are called upon to vote<sup>103</sup>.

The Speaker has observed that a vote on account was only for an interim period and that members would have an opportunity for discussing the demands later. If necessary, members might be allowed to ask questions eliciting explanation at the time the motion for vote on account was made<sup>104</sup>.

The convention that there will be no discussion on vote on account is not in contravention of the Constitution.

Where the vote on account is taken for more than two months, and there is a time gap between the vote on account and the discussion on the main demands, a discussion of the policy relating to the Demands for Grants on account is permitted and cut motions are allowed to be moved to these demands<sup>105</sup>.

As the purpose of a vote on account is to keep the Government functioning, pending the voting of the final Demands, it cannot normally be used as a means to obtain Parliament's approval for "new services". An assurance to the effect that the provision obtained by vote on account will not be used for expenditure on "new services" is, therefore, usually included by the Government in the prefatory note to the relevant Book of Demands relating to the Vote on Account.

Normally, no amount should be drawn from the Contingency Fund to meet the expenditure on a "New Service" while the Lok Sabha is in session and every attempt should be made to get the prior approval of the Lok Sabha by including the amount in the annual financial statement or the Supplementary Demands for Grants pertaining to that year. However, in exceptional cases, when withdrawal of advance from the Contingency Fund becomes inevitable owing to some procedural difficulties like the one that money drawn on 'Vote on Account' cannot be used for expenditure on a 'New Service', Government should first circulate to members a statement giving details of the scheme for which money is needed and the circumstances under which approval of Parliament cannot be obtained in the normal course. Thereafter, a resolution should be brought before the House by the Minister concerned authorising the Government to withdraw a specified amount from the Contingency Fund of India pending voting on Demands for Grants and enactment of the Appropriation Bill<sup>106</sup>.

This procedure has, however, undergone change with the decision that it may not be necessary for the Government to bring a resolution before the Lok Sabha authorising them to withdraw a specified amount from the Contingency Fund of India for expenditure on a 'New Service' even at a time when the Lok Sabha is in session. It is for the Government to decide in what cases it would be necessary to withdraw advance from the Contingency Fund for expenditure on a 'New Service' when the Lok Sabha is in session. As far as possible, before such withdrawal is made, the concerned Minister may make a statement on the floor of the House giving details of the amount and the scheme for which money is needed. In emergent cases, however, where it is not possible to inform the members in advance, the withdrawal may be made from the Contingency Fund and soon thereafter a statement may be laid on the Table of the House for the information of the members<sup>107</sup>.

The recommendation of the President is not required for moving the motions regarding the Demands for Grants on account, as these demands form part of the main demands in respect of which his recommendation has already been obtained.

Supplementary, Additional or Excess Grants

If the amount authorised to be expended for a particular service for the current financial year is found to be insufficient for the purposes of that year or when a need has arisen during the current financial year for supplementary or additional expenditure upon some new service not contemplated in the Budget for that year, or if any money has been spent on any service during a financial year in excess of the amount granted for that service and for that year, the President causes to be laid before both the Houses of Parliament another statement showing the estimated amount of that expenditure or causes to be presented to the Lok Sabha a demand for such excess, as the case may be<sup>108</sup>:

Demands for money already spent in excess of the voted grant are not, therefore, made by way of a supplementary grant but in the form of an excess grant<sup>109</sup>, and demands for excess grants have to be presented to the House in the session in which the Public Accounts Committee presents its report thereon or in the following session<sup>110</sup>. Expenditure incurred during the previous financial year cannot be regularised by Parliament by supplementary Demands for Grants for the current year<sup>111</sup>.

Supplementary, additional, excess or exceptional grants and votes of credit<sup>112</sup> are regulated by the same procedure as is applicable in the case of Demands for Grants (main Budget) subject to such adaptations, whether by way of modification, addition or omission, as the Speaker deems necessary or expedient<sup>113</sup>.

Books of Demands for Grants

After the presentation of the supplementary or excess Demands for Grants, as the case may be, copies of the Books of Demands of Supplementary or Excess Grants, supplied by the Ministry concerned, are circulated to members. These Books give the details of the expenditure, the overall cost of a project for which money is being asked for, and its break-up in broad details for the information of Parliament, even though Parliament's approval is sought only for a portion of the expenditure to be incurred either on the project or a phase of it<sup>114</sup>.

114. Where necessary, the Minister concerned may, with the permission of the Speaker, make a statement on the floor of the House correcting an error in the footnotes in the Book of Demands for Grants.

Discussion on Supplementary or Excess Demands

When the supplementary or excess demands<sup>115</sup> are taken up in the House for discussion, the Minister concerned does not formally move any motion regarding these demands; the demands are deemed to have been moved and are placed before the House by the Speaker. Sometimes, the Minister makes a few observations to indicate to the House as to what the overall excess or supplementary demand is and what are the major heads under which he wants those demands and the reasons in support of those demands<sup>116</sup>. In the case of a supplementary demand for grant, the Minister concerned is required to give general information to the House as to the necessity for the demand<sup>117</sup>.

There have been instances where, subsequent to the presentation of the supplementary Demands for Grants to the House, a demand was either not moved or alterations were made in the demand with the permission of the Speaker, and where required, with the necessary recommendation of the President<sup>118</sup>. In these cases, the Minister concerned had made explanatory statements on the floor of the House when the demands were taken up for discussion.

Supplementary Demands for Grants presented on different dates during two sessions of the House have been taken up for discussion and voting together, and the amounts voted incorporated in one Appropriation Bill.

The debate on the Supplementary Demands for Grants is confined to the items constituting the same and no discussion can be raised on the original grants nor on the policy underlying them save in so far as it is necessary to explain or illustrate the particular items under discussion<sup>119</sup>. In respect of schemes which have already been sanctioned in the main Budget, no discussion on any question of principle or policy is allowed. As regards demands for which no sanction has been obtained, the question of policy has to be confined to the items on which the vote of the House is sought<sup>120</sup>. General grievances cannot be ventilated on a supplementary grant. A member can only say whether the supplementary demand is necessary or not<sup>121</sup>.

During discussion on excess Demands for Grants, it is open to members to say that money has been spent unnecessarily or that it ought not have been spent; beyond that there is no scope for a general discussion<sup>122</sup>.

Notices of motions received in a session in respect of supplementary Demands for Grants or excess Demands for Grants which have been presented but not moved in that session lapse on the prorogation of the House and fresh notice is required for the next session.

Cut motions to supplementary or excess Demands

The procedure regarding the notice, admissibility and circulation of cut motions to supplementary or excess Demands for Grants is the same as in the case of cut motions to the main Demands for Grants, except that—cut motions which are extraneous to the subject matter of the supplementary or excess demand are out of order<sup>123</sup>, and cut motions to supplementary or excess Demands for Grants going into matters of policy underlying a demand are out of order<sup>124</sup>, unless the demand relates to a “new service”, i.e. a service which was not contemplated at the time of the Budget<sup>125</sup>.

However, in view of the emergency, certain cut motions relating to “disapproval of policy” in respect of supplementary Demands for Grants (General) 1962-63, were admitted and circulated during the Third Session of the Third Lok Sabha, though the demands to which those cut motions related did not contemplate expenditure on ‘new service’. It was considered that the supplementary demands were of extraordinary nature as the emergency owing to which the extra money was asked for was not present when the main demands for 1962-63 had been discussed and voted.

Token Grants

When funds to meet proposed expenditure on a “new service” can be made available by reappropriation, a demand for the grant of a token sum is submitted to the vote of the House and, if the House assents to the demand, funds are so made available<sup>126</sup>.

Appropriation Bills

No money can be withdrawn from the Consolidated Fund of India except under appropriation made by law<sup>127</sup>. Consequently, as soon as the grants have been made by the House, a Bill is introduced to provide for the appropriation out of the Consolidated Fund of India of all moneys required to meet the grants made by the House and the expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund of India, but not exceeding in any case the amount shown in the Statement previously laid before Parliament<sup>128</sup>.

Pursuant to the observation of the Chair ruling out inclusion of expenditure incurred in the previous year for regularisation through Supplementary Demands for Grants in the following year, a fresh Appropriation Bill in substitution of an earlier Bill was brought forward by the Government<sup>129</sup>.

Ordinarily, no Bill is included for introduction in the List of Business until copies thereof have been made available to members at least two days before the day on which the Bill is proposed to be introduced. An exception is, however, made in the case of Appropriation Bills which may be introduced without prior circulation of copies to members<sup>130</sup>.

The motion for leave to introduce an Appropriation Bill cannot be opposed, as the Bill is introduced only after the relevant demands have been voted by the House<sup>131</sup>. Such a motion is forthwith put to the vote of the House<sup>132</sup>. An amendment to an Appropriation Bill for omission of a certain demand is out of order on the ground that the demand has already been voted by the House<sup>133</sup>.

By convention, Bills are not put down for consideration and passing on the same day on which they are introduced in the House. However, the Speaker normally allows the Appropriation Bills to be introduced, considered and passed on the same day on specific request made by the Minister<sup>134</sup>.

When notice for introduction of an Appropriation Bill has been received from a Minister and a new Council of Ministers takes over before the Bill is actually introduced and the same Minister retains his old portfolio, fresh notice for introduction, consideration and passing of the Bill is obtained from the Minister<sup>135</sup>.

Deb.*, 12-3-1980, 17-3-1980, 15-3-1980, 17-3-1980, 18-3-1980, 29-7-1985 & 7-8-1985, the Appropriation (Vote on Account) Bill, 2013 and the Appropriation (Railways) Vote on Account Bill, 2013.

135. During the Fourth Session of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, Ram Vilas Paswan, Minister of Railways and P. Chidambaram, Minister of Finance in H.D. Deve Gowda's Government gave notices for introduction, consideration and passing of the Appropriation (Railways) No. 3 Bill, 1997 and the Appropriation (No. 3) Bill, 1997, respectively. Both the Bills were printed and circulated to members. Before the Bills were introduced, a new Government under I.K. Gujral was formed. Though both Ministers retained their old portfolios, fresh notices for introduction, consideration and passing were obtained from these Ministers in respect of the said Bills which were subsequently passed.

Scope of Discussion

The debate on an Appropriation Bill is restricted to matters of public importance or administrative policy implied in the grants covered by the Bill and which have not already been raised while the relevant Demands for Grants were under discussion<sup>136</sup>.

The various points that have been discussed at length during the course of the debates relating to the various Demands for Grants cannot be the subject matter of discussion on Appropriation Bill<sup>137</sup>.

Subjects on which cut motions were moved and negatived during the discussion on Demands for Grants are not permitted to be discussed again during the discussion on Appropriation Bills<sup>138</sup>.

Whatever is not relevant to the discussion on Demands for Grants is also not relevant to the debate on the Appropriation Bills<sup>139</sup>.

Matters of detail are not gone into during the discussion on an Appropriation Bill<sup>140</sup>.

The Speaker may, in order to avoid repetition of debate, require members desiring to take part in discussion on an Appropriation Bill to give advance intimation of the specific points they intend to raise, and he may withhold permission for raising such of the points as in his opinion appear to be repetitions of the matters discussed on a Demand for Grant or as may not be of sufficient public importance<sup>141</sup>. When a member raises certain points with the permission of the Speaker on the motion for consideration of an Appropriation Bill, the Minister concerned must be present in the House to answer those points<sup>142</sup>. The Speaker has observed: "I think in future, we should have a separate notice for each Ministry. If they are directed to separate Ministries, there should be separate notices. These notices which come before 10 o'clock will be sent to the Ministers concerned and those Ministers will then be required to be present"<sup>143</sup>.

If an Appropriation Bill is in pursuance of a supplementary grant in respect of an existing service, the discussion has to be confined to the items constituting the same, and no discussion can be raised on the original grant nor the policy underlying it save in so far as it is necessary to explain or illustrate a particular item under discussion<sup>144</sup>.

Amendments

No amendment can be proposed to an Appropriation Bill, which will have the effect of varying the amount or altering the destination of any grant so made or of varying the amount of any expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund of India, and the decision of the Speaker as to whether such an amendment is inadmissible is final<sup>145</sup>.

The rest of the procedure in regard to Appropriation Bills is the same as for Bills with such modifications as the Speaker may consider necessary<sup>146</sup>.

An amendment to an Appropriation Bill for omission of a demand already voted by the House is out of order. However, an amendment to an Appropriation Bill which does not vary the amount or alter the destination of any grant or vary the amount of any expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund but is only of a clarificatory nature is in order<sup>147</sup>.

Finance Bill

‘Finance Bill’ means the Bill ordinarily introduced in each year to give effect to the financial proposals of the Government of India for the next following financial year and includes a Bill to give effect to supplementary financial proposals for any period<sup>148</sup>. However, it does not contain provisions intended to make permanent changes in the existing laws unless they are consequential upon or incidental to the taxation proposals<sup>149</sup>.

The provisions of the Finance Bill relating to imposition or increase in duties of customs or excise come into force immediately on the expiry of the day on which

During Tenth Session of Fifteenth Lok Sabha, Finance Bill, 2012 was introduced on 16 March 2012. Clauses 146-150 contained in Chapter VI of the Bill sought to amend the Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management Act, 2003 (FRBM Act). Opinion of Ministry of Finance was sought inter alia on whether it was constitutionally or legally necessary to introduce these amendments as part of the Finance Bill or amendments could be brought in a separate Bill. In its reply, the Ministry merely cited Finance (No. 2) Bill, 2004 as precedent whereby amendments to FRBM Act were made.

During discussion on the motion for consideration of the Bill, on a point of order raised by a member, the Chair ruled:

“The point raised by the Hon’ble member is already in the notice of the Hon’ble Speaker. She had directed that the Ministries should, as far as possible, avoid drafting of Bills of hybrid nature by separating taxation measures including levy of less from other matters unless it becomes impossible on constitutional or legal grounds to do so. The point of order is accordingly disposed of.”

Ministry of Finance was asked to ensure that directions of Speaker regarding separation of taxation measures from other measures while drafting Bills are complied with—L.S. Deb., 8.5.2012, cc. 891-92 the Bill is introduced by virtue of a declaration to this effect which is usually contained in the Finance Bill.

The Finance Bill is introduced immediately after the presentation of the Budget by the Minister of Finance in the last week of February every year<sup>150</sup>. The motion for leave to introduce a Finance Bill cannot be opposed; it is forthwith put to vote<sup>151</sup>. Usually, one Finance Bill is introduced in a financial year. But in the election years, as the Budget is presented twice, two Finance Bills are introduced—one in the outgoing Lok Sabha and another in the new Lok Sabha, or once in the First Session of the<sup>152</sup> new Lok Sabha and another in its Second Session.

Even otherwise, more than one Finance Bill may be introduced, considered and passed during a financial year. A Finance Bill should,<sup>153</sup> however, be preceded by the Demands for Grants and the connected Appropriation Bill and the sequence in regard to Budget, as provided in articles 112 to 115 of the Constitution, should be followed<sup>154</sup>.

A Finance Bill containing taxation proposals for the next financial year has been passed in the previous calendar year<sup>155</sup>.

At any time after the introduction in the House of a Finance Bill, the Speaker may allot a day or days, jointly or severally, for the completion of all or any of the stages involved in the passage of the Bill by the House<sup>156</sup>, but as per actual practice, the allocation of time is recommended by the Business Advisory Committee and is subsequently approved by the House. When such allotment of time has been made<sup>157</sup>, the Speaker, at the specified hour on the allotted day or the last of the allotted days, as the case may be, forthwith puts every question necessary to dispose of all the outstanding matters in connection with the stage or stages for which the day or days have been allotted<sup>158</sup>.

150. On 28 February 1970, after the motion for leave to introduce the Finance Bill, 1970, was adopted, the Speaker, amidst interruptions, adjourned the House till 2 March 1970, before the Prime Minister could introduce the Bill. In view of the special circumstances and the fact that unless the Finance Bill was introduced, taxes which were to be collected from that midnight under Provisional Collection of Taxes Act, 1931, could not be collected, although they had been made public, the Speaker, exercising powers under Proviso to Rule 15, directed that the Lok Sabha would meet at 22.00 hours that day. The House accordingly met at 22.00 hrs. and the Prime Minister who was then also holding the portfolio of Finance introduced the Finance Bill at 22.55 hrs. that day. L.S. Deb., 28-2-1970, cc. 1-22.

151. Rule 72, second proviso; L.S. Deb., 28-2-1974. cc. 311-13.

The sequence laid down in the Constitution in respect of articles 112, 113, 114 and 115 should be maintained in this regard,—L.S. Deb., 12-8-1974, cc. 238-41. L.S. Deb., 7-12-1956, cc. 2079-2105; 7-8-1974, cc. 287-93; 8-8-1974, cc. 177-201.

155. L.S. Deb., 7-12-1956, cc. 2079-2132; 6-5-1969, c. 372.

157. Rule 219, as modified vide L.S. Bn. (II), 9-5-1989, para 2930; Normally, not more than 15 hours are allotted.

158. L.S. Deb., 21-4-1964, c. 12212.

In case a Minister has to reply to the debate on a motion, which is under discussion, an hour before the specified hour on that day, and has not commenced his reply at that hour, the Speaker, after enquiring from the Minister as to how much time, in any case not exceeding one hour, he would require for his reply, calls upon the member, for the time being, addressing the House, to resume his seat at such time as will leave available before the specified hour the amount of time, which the Minister has stated that he would require for his reply.

Where the question or one of the questions required to be put at specified hour on the allotted day or the last of the allotted days is that the Bill be passed, it is put notwithstanding that amendments to the Bill have been made<sup>159</sup>.

The Speaker normally prescribes a time-limit for speeches at all or any of the stages of Finance Bill<sup>160</sup>.

Scope of Discussion

On a motion that the Finance Bill be taken into consideration, a member can discuss matters relating to general administration, local grievances within the sphere of the responsibility of the Government of India or monetary or financial policy of the Government<sup>161</sup>. A member can discuss any action of the Government of India<sup>162</sup>, but actions of a State Government cannot be criticised in the discussion on the Finance Bill<sup>163</sup>. While general criticism of the policy of the Government is permissible<sup>164</sup>, discussion in detail of particular estimates is not in order. A member can, however, discuss matters of public policy that contributed to a deficit<sup>165</sup>. General principles underlying the Budget can be discussed but not the details of those principles<sup>166</sup>. In short, the whole administration comes under review but questions which have already been discussed in a previous debate cannot be reopened<sup>167</sup>.

The Finance Bill submits to the jurisdiction of the House all the Acts which it deals with and the House can amend all or any of such Acts to the extent they are dealt with in the Finance Bill<sup>168</sup>.

Discussion on a clause of the Finance Bill and on amendments thereto, has to be confined to the taxation proposed and to possible alternatives<sup>169</sup>.

The Finance Bill containing the annual taxation proposals is considered and passed by the Lok Sabha only after the Demands for Grants have been voted and the total expenditure is known<sup>170</sup>. There is, however, no statutory bar to considering a Bill containing permanent taxation measures before the Demands for Grants have been voted<sup>171</sup>.

In view of the declaration under the Provisional Collection of Taxes Act, 1931, the Finance Bill has to be passed by Parliament and assented to by the President before the expiry of the seventy-fifth day<sup>172</sup> after the day on which it was introduced.

170. On 4 May 1987, a member suggested amendment to sub-rule (2) of Rule 219 of Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha with a view to providing that the Finance Bill should be considered and passed before the Appropriation Bill is passed, as he felt that the restriction of putting of all questions relating to Finance Bill at the specified hour on the allotted day or the last day or the allotted days be removed. The Rules Committee (8LS) considered the suggestion and obtained the opinion of the Ministry of Finance in the matter. The Committee agreed with the opinion of the Ministry of Finance and held that the existing sequence of consideration and passing of the Appropriation Bill and Finance Bill had been found to be practically convenient and there was no compelling reason to reverse the sequence. Further, as the Bill sometimes contained wide-ranging changes in tax laws and rates, the interval presently available between the introduction and consideration by Parliament allowed time for discussion among members of the public, industry, trade, etc. and this had been found to be useful.

171. The Wealth Tax Bill, 1957 and the Expenditure Tax Bill, 1957 were introduced in the House along with the Finance Bill, 1957, immediately after the Finance Minister's Budget speech on 15 May 1957. The former two Bills were discussed and referred to the Select Committee on 16 and 17 July 1957, respectively, before the Demands for Grants for the Budget (General), 1957-58 were voted, as these two Bills contained permanent measures.

172. The period was extended from 60 to 75 days in 1964, vide the Provisional Collection of Taxes (Amendment) Act, 1964.

The assent of the President to the Finance Bill is obtained by the Secretariat. See Chapter XXII—'Legislation'.

CHAPTER XXX

Parliamentary Committees

A. COMMITTEES IN GENERAL

Parliament transacts a great deal of its business through Committees. These Committees are appointed to deal with specific items of business requiring expert or detailed consideration. The system of Parliamentary Committees is particularly useful in dealing with matters which, on account of their special or technical nature, are better considered in detail by a small number of members rather than by the House itself. Moreover, the system saves the time of the House for the discussion of important matters and prevents Parliament from getting lost in details and thereby losing hold on matters of policy and broad principles.

The Committee system in India can be traced back to the advent of the Montague-Chelmsford Reforms, but the Committees of those days, like the Central Legislative Assembly itself, were not free from governmental control and interference. They had no powers and privileges; they were not the masters of their own procedure; and they could not even frame rules for their internal working.

Standing Orders of the Central Legislative Assembly provided for three Committees, namely, Committee on Petitions relating to Bills<sup>1</sup>, Select Committee on Amendments of Standing Orders<sup>2</sup> and Select Committee on Bills<sup>3</sup>. Of these, the Committee on Petitions relating to Bills could be called a Standing Committee of the Assembly. The Indian Legislative Rules, in addition, provided for the constitution of two Committees, viz., a Joint Committee on a Bill<sup>4</sup> and the Committee on Public Accounts<sup>5</sup>.

In fact, the Committee on Public Accounts of the Central Legislative Assembly could hardly be termed as a Parliamentary Committee as it did not function under the control of the House or the Speaker. The Committee was presided over by the Finance Member and its secretarial functions were discharged by the Department of Finance<sup>6</sup>.

1. Legislative Assembly Standing Orders, S.O. 80.

2. Ibid., S.O. 56.

3. Ibid., S.O. 40.

4. After a resolution was passed by one House to commit a Bill to a Joint Committee of both the Houses and on the other House having concurred in, each House appointed an equal number of members from amongst its members to serve on the Joint Committee.

5. Indian Legislative Rules, rules 42 and 51.

6. For detailed information regarding its emergence as a Parliamentary Committee, see this Chapter, under the heading "Public Accounts Committee".

Apart from Committees of the Legislative Assembly, members of both Houses of the Central Legislature also served on the Standing Advisory Committees attached to various Departments of the Government of India. All these Committees were purely advisory in character and functioned under the control of the Government, and the Minister in-charge of the concerned Department acted as the Chairman of the Committee.

After the Constitution came into force, the position of the Central Legislature changed altogether and the Committee system too underwent transformation. Not only did the number of Committees increase but their functions and powers were also enlarged.

A Parliamentary Committee is appointed or elected by the House or nominated by the Speaker<sup>7</sup>; it works under the direction of the Speaker and presents its report to the House or to the Speaker, and the secretarial work for it is done by the Secretariat<sup>8</sup>. The question whether a Committee which does not satisfy all these conditions is a Parliamentary Committee or not is referred to the Speaker whose decision is final<sup>9</sup>.

7. Thus, a Parliamentary Committee may be constituted either under the provisions of the Rules or in pursuance of an Act of Parliament [e.g. the Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament, Joint Committee on Judges (Inquiry) Rules], or a motion or resolution adopted by the House [e.g. the Committee on Bretton Woods Conference, 1946; the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951); the Committee on the Conduct of certain members during President's Address (1963); Joint Committee on Salary, Allowances and Other Amenities to Members of Parliament (1968); the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (1968); the Committee on the Conduct of a Member during President's Address (1971); Joint Committee on Amendments to Election Law (1971); Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the question of the working of Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (1980); Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract (1987); Select Committee on the Constitution (Seventy-first Amendment) Bill, 1990; Joint Committee on Pre-Natal Diagnostic Technique (Regulation and Prevention of Misuse) Bill, 1991; Joint Committee on the Constitution (Seventy-second Amendment) Bill, 1991; Joint Committee on the Constitution (Seventy-third Amendment) Bill, 1991; Joint Committee on Copyright (Second Amendment) Bill, 1992; Joint Committee to Enquire into Irregularities in Securities and Banking Transactions (1992); Joint Committee on the Constitution (Eightieth Amendment) Bill, 1993; the Representation of People (Amendment) Bill, 1993; Select Committee on the Transplantation of Human Organs Bill, 1993; Select Committee on the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 1996; and Joint Committee on the Constitution (Eighty-first Amendment) Bill, 1996]; or under the inherent powers of the Speaker. Examples of the last category are: General Purposes Committee; House Committee; Inscriptions Committee; Committee to Fix Hindi Equivalents; Committee to examine the Working of Catering Establishments in Parliament House (1973); Study Committee on Sports (1976); Committee on the Use of Language (1978); and Committee of Members of Parliament to bring about reconciliation between Nirankaris and Akalis (1983), which worked under the directions of the Chairman, Rajya Sabha.

8. Rule 2(1).

9. On a request made by the Home Minister, an ad hoc Committee of the two Houses was constituted with the Speaker as its Chairman to examine the demand for Punjabi Suba to assist a Cabinet Committee in arriving at a satisfactory settlement of the question. When a question was raised in the House whether report of the ad hoc Committee would be submitted to the Government or to the House, the Speaker observed:

The report of a Committee of members of Parliament of which the Speaker is the Chairman is presented to Parliament and not to the Government—L.S. Deb., 1-3-1986, c. 3072.

Committees of the Lok Sabha

The Lok Sabha possesses an organised system of Committees<sup>10</sup>. Appointment, term of office, functions and main lines of procedure for conducting business of the Committees are regulated under the provisions of the Rules and the Directions by the Speaker<sup>11</sup> issued under those Rules. There are three sets of rules relating to Parliamentary Committees: 'General Rules'<sup>12</sup>, which are applicable to all the Committees; 'Specific Rules'<sup>13</sup>, which make special provisions for particular Committees; and 'Internal Rules'<sup>14</sup>, which regulate the internal procedure of each Parliamentary Committee. 'Internal Rules' are made by the Committees themselves with the approval of the Speaker and are in the nature of detailed working procedure and are framed in conformity with the provisions of the "Rules" and "Directions".

Broad Classification: Committees of the Lok Sabha may be broadly classified into:

Standing Committees and ad hoc Committees.

The Standing Committees in terms of their functions can further be divided under five broad headings<sup>15</sup>:

Committees to inquire (e.g. Committee on Petitions and Committee on Privileges);

Committees to scrutinize (e.g. Committee on Government Assurances and Committee on Subordinate Legislation);

Committees relating to the day-to-day business of the House (e.g. Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House, Business Advisory Committee, Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions, Rules Committee and Committee on Papers Laid on the Table);

Committees concerned with provision of facilities to members (e.g. General Purposes Committee, House Committee and Library Committee); and Committees to control financial and administrative powers of the Government (e.g. Committee on Estimates, Committee on Public Accounts and Committee on Public Undertakings).

These Committees have been constituted in terms of the Rules, and are reconstituted annually or at other interval, as the case may be, depending upon the tenure of the individual Committees.

In addition to these, there are other Standing Committees, viz. the Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament which has been constituted under the Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament Act, 1954<sup>16</sup> the Joint Committee on Offices of Profit, which is constituted on a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha and concurred in by the Rajya Sabha at the beginning of each Lok Sabha<sup>17</sup> the Committee on the Welfare of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes<sup>18</sup> twenty-four Departmentally Related Standing Committees<sup>19</sup> and Committee on Empowerment of Women, to which members of both Houses are elected/nominated. On these Committees, members of both Houses serve jointly.

The ad hoc Committees may be broadly classified under two headings. First there are the ad hoc Committees which are constituted, from time to time, either by the Lok Sabha on a motion adopted in that behalf, or by the Speaker, to inquire into and report on specific subjects, e.g. the Committee on the conduct of a member (Mudgal Case, 1951)<sup>20</sup> the Committee on the conduct of certain members during the President's Address (1963)<sup>21</sup> Railway Convention Committees; Joint Committee on Salary, Allowances and other Amenities to Members of Parliament (1968)<sup>22</sup> Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (1968)<sup>23</sup> Committee on the conduct of a member during President's Address (1971)<sup>24</sup> Joint Committee on Amendments to Election Law (1971)<sup>25</sup> Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the question of the working of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (1980)<sup>26</sup> Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract (1987)<sup>27</sup> Committee on Inscriptions in

The second category of ad hoc Committees comprises of those which are set up to advise the House. Under this category fall the Select or Joint Committees on Bills which are appointed on a motion made in the House to consider and report on a specific Bill. These Committees are distinguishable from the other ad hoc Committees inasmuch as they are concerned with Bills and the procedure to be followed by them is laid down in the Rules and Directions by the Speaker.

However, the normal procedure of appointing a Joint Committee on a Bill on the basis of separate motion moved and adopted in the House was not followed in the case of the Joint Committee on Constitution (Eighty-first) Amendment Bill, 1996<sup>43</sup>. During the discussion stage itself on the motion for consideration on 13 September, 1996 of the said Bill, it was decided by the House to refer the Bill to a Joint Committee by authorising the Speaker to constitute the Joint Committee in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha. As required under the Rules, no separate motion for reference of the Bill to a Joint Committee was moved in the House.

Constitution of a Joint Committee

A Joint Committee, composed of members of both the Houses, is constituted either on a motion adopted by one House and concurred in by the other, or by communication between the Presiding Officers of the two Houses<sup>44</sup>, or under the Rules<sup>45</sup>. Such a Committee can be constituted only when there is an agreement between the two Houses. In case there is no such agreement, a Joint Committee cannot be constituted.

The Committees of Public Accounts and Public Undertakings are not Joint Committees. They are primarily Committees of the Lok Sabha. The Committees are formed on a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha and members of the Rajya Sabha are nominated to these Committees in response to an independent motion requesting for the association of the members of the Rajya Sabha with the Committees, adopted by the Lok Sabha and concurred in by the Rajya Sabha. Even if the Rajya Sabha does not concur in the motion or the members of the Rajya Sabha do not associate with 43. Constituted by the Speaker, Lok Sabha on 7 October 1996 in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha.

44. For example, the Speaker, in 1954, appointed a Committee on Offices of Profit in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, to consider matters connected with the disqualification of members under art. 102(1)(a). Similarly, the Speaker constituted, in 1956, Committees on Inscriptions in Parliament House and to Fix Hindi Equivalents for Parliamentary, Legal and Administrative Terms; in 1964, Committees on Construction of Additional Parliamentary Building and Portraits and Statues in Parliament House in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha.

Committees, the Committees continue to function. In case the members of the Rajya Sabha associate with the Committees, they have equal right with the members of the Lok Sabha to vote and take part in the proceedings of the Committees<sup>46</sup>.

Appointment of Members to Committees

Members are appointed or elected to a Parliamentary Committee by the House on a motion made and adopted, or nominated by the Speaker<sup>47</sup>.

Committees Appointed on a Motion Adopted by the House

Select or Joint Committees on Bills are the Committees which are appointed on motions adopted by the House. The motion for reference of a Bill to a Select Committee sets forth the names of members proposed to be appointed to the Committee. Only members of the Lok Sabha are proposed for appointment to the Committee. However, Ministers who are members of the Rajya Sabha may also be appointed as members of a Select Committee of the House but they are not entitled to vote in the Committee. In the case of a Government Bill referred to a Select Committee, the Minister in charge of the Bill is appointed a member of the Committee while in the case of a Private Member Bill, the member in-charge of the Bill and the Minister to whose Ministry the subject matter of the Bill pertains, are appointed members of the Select Committee.

Similarly, members to a Joint Committee on a Bill are appointed on a motion adopted by the House and concurred in by the other House.

Apart from the Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, members may also be appointed to an ad hoc Committee on a motion adopted in that behalf. Such a motion sets forth the names of members proposed to be appointed to the Committee, the quorum necessary to constitute its sittings, and other instructions to the Committee<sup>48</sup>.

Committees Elected by the House

Members of the Committees on Public Accounts, Estimates, Public Undertakings and Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes are elected every year by the members of the Lok Sabha. For this purpose, motions must be moved in and adopted by the House. The motions indicate the manner of elections, that is according to the principle of proportional representation by means of single transferable vote<sup>49</sup>, exercised by members of the House present and voting. No postal ballot is permissible for election to the Committees.

All reports of the Public Accounts Committee, including those in excess grants or charged appropriations, are approved by the entire Committee. So far, no voting has taken place at any sitting of the Committee when the excess grants or charged appropriations were considered. However, should a question of voting on excess grants arise, the members of the Rajya Sabha will not participate in such voting.

The motion for election to any of these Committees also specifies the number of members proposed to be elected, and is moved before the expiry of the term of the outgoing Committee by its Chairman. However, at the commencement of a new Lok Sabha after the general elections, such motions are moved by the Leader of the House/Minister of Parliamentary Affairs<sup>50</sup>.

At the commencement of a new Lok Sabha after general elections, members of the Lok Sabha are also required to be elected to the Joint Committee on Offices of Profit.<sup>51</sup> Necessary motion in this regard is moved by the Minister of Law and Justice.

Members may also be elected to an ad hoc Committee set up in pursuance of motion adopted by the House on that behalf<sup>52</sup>.

After a motion for election of members to the Committee on Estimates, Committee on Public Accounts, Committee on Public Undertakings, Committee on the Welfare of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, and Joint Committee on Offices of Profit or any ad hoc Committee is adopted, a detailed programme of dates for nomination, withdrawal of candidature and for holding elections is notified in the Bulletin. At the expiry of the time fixed for receipt of nominations, a list of candidates standing for election is prepared and copies thereof are displayed on the Notice Boards for the information of members. In case the number of valid nominations after withdrawal is equal to the number of vacancies, all the candidates are declared elected and their names are published in the Bulletin. If the number of valid nominations is less than the number of vacancies, all the candidates are declared duly elected and the time fixed for nomination is extended for the remaining vacancies to be filled. This process is repeated as long as the number of candidates is less than the number of vacancies to be filled. If the number of members validly nominated, after withdrawals, if any, exceeds the number of vacancies, an election is held in accordance with the regulations framed by the Speaker for holding of such elections<sup>53</sup>.

49. Rules 309(1) and 311(1), 312B(1), 331B(1). The object of holding elections according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote is that every Party or Group may, as far as possible, get representation in the Committee in proportion to their numerical strength in the House.

The Joint Committee on Offices of Profit was not constituted during the Sixth Lok Sabha.

53. These regulations are 'Regulations for Holding of Elections to Committees by Means of Single Transferable Vote'—For text, see Appendix VII of the First Edition.

On a motion moved by the Minister concerned, members of Parliament are elected by either House to serve on Committees or bodies other than Parliamentary Committees which are set up in pursuance of the provisions of the Constitution, or under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, or in accordance with the provisions of any resolution of the Government constituting such a Committee or body—Elections to such Committees or bodies are held in the same manner as in the case of other Parliamentary Committees<sup>54</sup>.

Committees Nominated by the Speaker

Members to specified Parliamentary Committees may be nominated by the Speaker after consultation with the Leader of the House and the Leaders of the Opposition Parties and Groups in the House.

At the commencement of a new Lok Sabha, the Leader of the House is asked by the Secretariat to suggest, in order of priority, a panel of names of members of the Government party to be placed before the Speaker for nomination to the Committees. Similarly, the leaders of the Opposition Parties or Groups in the House are addressed to suggest, in order of priority, a panel of two or three names from amongst the members of their Groups or Parties<sup>55</sup>. The Speaker, in his discretion, selects the members out of those panels for nomination to the Committees. However, the practice of calling for a panel of names for nomination of members of the ruling party or other Parties/Groups has been discontinued long back. The present practice is to make a proportionate allocation of the seats available on the two Groups of Committees, namely, 24 DRSCs and other Standing Committees separately to various parties and groups according to their respective strength in the House. As per allocation of seats approved by the Speaker, the Leaders of Parties are requested in writing to suggest only a name each of their members for each seat allocated to a party on a Committee for consideration and nomination by the Speaker. As far as possible, the different parties and groups are represented on a Committee in proportion to their respective strength in the House. The members selected for nomination to a Committee are asked to furnish their written consent to serve on the Committee, if nominated.

Reconstitution of Committees nominated by the Speaker: The question of reconstitution of Parliamentary Committees nominated by the Speaker is considered every year. It is up to the Speaker to reconstitute a Committee or not. However, as per a convention developed since 1959, all Standing Parliamentary Committees are reconstituted<sup>56</sup> every year. With a view to ensuring representation of every party/group on Parliamentary Committees, seats on Committees are rotated every year amongst various parties/groups in proportion to their respective strength in the House.

54. Dir. 108(A).

55. “While requesting the Parties and Groups to suggest the names of members for nomination by the Speaker to Committees, the practice is to write that ‘in case of Committee on Subordinate Legislation, name of a lawyer-member may be suggested, as far as possible’, the reason being that the Committee on Subordinate Legislation is required to scrutinise rules and regulations framed under the provisions of various Acts”.

56. In Sixth Lok Sabha, the Committee of Privileges which was constituted on 1 July 1977, was not reconstituted in 1978 and the same Committee continued in office till 31 May 1979.

Filling of Casual Vacancies in Committees

Casual vacancies in a Parliamentary Committee are filled by appointment or election by the House on a motion made, or made by nomination by the Speaker, as the case may be. Any member appointed, elected or nominated to fill a casual vacancy holds office for the unexpired portion of the term for which the member in whose place he is appointed, elected or nominated would have normally held office<sup>57</sup>. In the case of the Joint Committee on Salary and Allowances of Members of Parliament, a member of the Joint Committee holds office as such member for one year from the date of his nomination<sup>58</sup>. The procedure followed in filling a casual vacancy is generally the same as for original appointment thereto.

Term of Office

Committees Nominated by the Speaker

A Parliamentary Committee nominated by the Speaker holds office for a period 'not exceeding one year' or for a period specified by the Speaker or until a new Committee is nominated by him<sup>59</sup>.

The term of office of the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions, Committee on Papers Laid on the Table, Committee on Subordinate Legislation, Committee on Government Assurances, Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House, Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, Committee on Empowerment of Women, House Committee and Library Committee is for a period 'not exceeding one year'<sup>60</sup>. The Business Advisory Committee, Committee on Petitions, Committee of Privileges and the Rules Committee continue in office till reconstituted by the Speaker<sup>61</sup>.

If no term of office has been specified by the Speaker in regard to an ad hoc Committee appointed by him, the Committee continues in office till the completion of its work and presentation of its report, if any.

Committees Elected by the House

Members of the Committee on Public Accounts, Committee on Estimates, Committee on Public Undertakings and Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes are elected by the House for a term 'not exceeding one year'<sup>62</sup>. These Committees are normally elected in the month of April each year for the term beginning on 1 May and ending on 30 April of the following year. In the case of a new House, they are elected as soon as may be after the new House meets and hold office for the period specified in the motion (usually ending on 30 April of the following year).

The members of the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes constituted in pursuance of the motion adopted by the Lok Sabha on 13-8-1973 were to hold office for a period of two years from the date of the first meeting of that Committee. However, their terms of office were subsequently extended upto 31-3-1976 by two motions adopted by the House—L.S. Deb., 28-7-1975 and 5-2-1976.

Where it is found necessary to extend the term, a motion is moved in and adopted by the House to that effect after a motion to suspend the relevant rule in its application to the motion for extension of the term of office has been adopted<sup>63</sup>.

There is no fixed term of office for Select or Joint Committees on Bills. The motion which is moved in the House for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee generally specifies the date by which, or the period within which, the Committee might present its report. In case the House has not fixed any time for the presentation of the report, the Committee is required to present its report before the expiry of three months from the date on which the House adopted the motion for reference of the Bill to the Select Committee<sup>64</sup>.

Committees Appointed/Elected on a Motion or Resolution

The motion for the appointment or election of a Committee by the House may either specify its terms of office<sup>65</sup> or may indicate the date<sup>66</sup> by which or the period<sup>67</sup> within which the Committee might present its report.

Where the House has not fixed any time for the presentation of a report by a Committee, the Committee is required to present its report within one month of the date on which reference to the Committee was made. However, the time for the presentation of the report by the Committee may be extended by the House on a Motion moved in that behalf<sup>68</sup>.

Committees Appointed under a Statute

In the case of a Committee constituted under an Act of Parliament, the term of office of the Committee is generally laid down in the relevant statute.

63. During the Fourth Session of the Fourth Lok Sabha, it was considered necessary to extend the terms of the three financial Committees. The relevant motions in respect of each Committee were adopted on 20 March 1968. In the case of the Committee on Public Accounts and the Committee on Public Undertakings, another motion was moved and adopted, intimating to Rajya Sabha that the term of office of the present members of these Committees had been extended upto 30 April 1968 and recommending to that House "that they too take such action as they deem fit in regard to the association of members of Rajya Sabha with the said Committees".

In July 1975 and February 1976, the terms of office of the members of the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes were extended—L.S. Deb., 28-7-1975 and 5-2-1976.

Other Committees

Apart from the above Committees, a Committee may also be appointed by the Speaker to aid and advise him in the discharge of his functions or to report on some matter pertaining to the House or its members. Such a Committee holds office for a term specified by the Speaker or till such time as a new Committee is appointed by him. Where no term is specified by the Speaker, the Committee continues in office till the completion of its work and presentation of its report, if any.

Objection to Membership

The appointment of a member to a Parliamentary Committee may be objected to on the ground that he has a personal, pecuniary or direct interest of such an intimate character that it may prejudicially affect the consideration of any matter by the Committee<sup>69</sup>. Such an interest should separately belong to the person whose inclusion in the Committee is objected to, that is, it should not be in common with the public in general or with any class or section thereof or on a matter of State policy. The member who has taken objection is required to state precisely the ground of his objection and the nature of the alleged interest, whether personal, pecuniary or direct, of the member whose inclusion is objected to in the matters coming up before the Committee. The member, whose membership has been objected to, may also be asked by the Speaker to state his position. Where there is dispute on facts, the Speaker may call for documentary or other evidence from both the members. The decision given by the Speaker is treated as final<sup>70</sup>.

When the matter is referred to the Speaker and until the Speaker's decision is known, the member whose membership is objected to continues to be a member of the Committee; he can take part in its discussions but is not, however, entitled to vote<sup>71</sup>. If the Speaker holds that the member has a personal, pecuniary or direct interest in the matter before the Committee, his membership ceases forthwith, but the proceedings of the sittings of the Committee at which that member might have been present are not affected by the decision of the Speaker<sup>72</sup>. It is also incumbent on the member having a personal, pecuniary, or direct interest in any matter to be considered by the Committee to state his interest therein to the Speaker through the Chairman of the Committee<sup>73</sup>.

69. Rule 255. In the First Lok Sabha, the Committee on Estimates appointed a Sub-Committee to inquire into the working of the Hindustan Shipyard Ltd. One of the members of the Sub-Committee was also the President of the Hindustan Shipyard Labour Union. An objection was raised to his inclusion in the Sub-Committee in view of the direct interest that he had as the President of the Labour Union. The Speaker, thereupon, ruled that he would have the visit of the Sub-Committee postponed and in the meanwhile would reconsider the question of personnel and the terms of reference of the Sub-Committee. However, before this could be done, the term of office of the Committee expired and consequently the Sub-Committee ceased to function.

Membership of Committee on Estimates or Public Accounts or Public Undertakings and of Government Committees

Wherever the Chairman or a member of the Committee on Estimates, Public Undertakings or Public Accounts is invited to accept membership of any Committee constituted by Government, the matter is submitted to the Speaker before the appointment is accepted<sup>74</sup>. If the Speaker considers it not appropriate that the Chairman or the member concerned should serve on the Government Committee so long as he remains a member of the Parliamentary Committee, he does not permit the Chairman or the member to accept the appointment on the Government Committee. Where, in the interest of parliamentary work, he permits them to do so, he directs that the report of the Government Committee be placed before the Parliamentary Committee concerned for such comments as the latter might deem fit to make before it is presented to the Government<sup>75</sup>.

Whenever a member who is serving on a Committee constituted by Government is elected to any of these Committees, the matter is required to be placed before the

On 5 May 1959, a member of the Joint Committee on the Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, wrote to the Speaker that he was acting as legal advisor to certain Banks and enquired whether he could continue to be the member of the Committee. The Speaker directed that the letter might be sent to the Chairman of the Committee to be read out to the Committee and if no objection was taken by any member he might continue as a member, but if objection was taken, the Speaker would decide the matter in the light of the facts then disclosed. The same member was subsequently appointed as Chairman and he read out the letter to the Committee at its first sitting. As no objection was raised by any member, the matter was not pursued further—Min. [J.C. on Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959] 9-5-1959.

Certain petitions relating to the Prohibition of Manufacture and Import of Hydrogenated Vegetable Oil Bill were received by the Committee on Petitions. As the Chairman of the Committee had sponsored the Bill, the Speaker appointed another member to act as the Chairman for the sitting of the Committee on 17 December 1950 when those petitions were to be considered.

74. Dir. 97.

75. In one case, while according permission to the appointment of a member of Committee on Estimates on the Enquiry Committee set up by the President in 1957 to look into the Affairs of the Banaras Hindu University, the Speaker directed that the report of the Enquiry Committee should not be published before consulting the Committee on Estimates which was then engaged in the examination of the estimates of the Ministry of Education. This was accordingly done.

The Speaker granted permission to the Chairman, Estimates Committee, to accept the membership of the Purchase Advisory Council in 1957, with the directions that the Chairman should resign that membership when he felt that there was a likelihood of conflict of duties.

On 28 January 1958, while according permission to the appointment of a member of the Estimates Committee on the Salt Enquiry Committee, the Speaker directed that the member should be careful in seeing that there was serious conflict of views in the recommendations of the Salt Enquiry Committee and those expressed previously by the Committee on Estimates in its Fifteenth Report (First Lok Sabha) specially with regard to 'the abolition of the Salt Organisation and Company Form of Management'.

In 1958, the Speaker, while according permission to the appointment of a member of the Estimates Committee on the Executive Council of the Visva Bharati University, directed that his appointment might come into effect from a date subsequent to 30 April 1958 when the Committee on Estimates was likely to finalise its report on the same subject. The member was accordingly appointed to the Executive Council of the Visva Bharati University with effect from 1 May 1958.

Speaker to decide whether the member might be permitted to continue his membership of the Government Committee<sup>76</sup>. The Speaker may or may not permit a member to continue on the Parliamentary Committee<sup>77</sup>. If the Speaker permits a member to continue membership of a Government Committee, he may require that the report of the Government Committee be placed before the Parliamentary Committee concerned for such comments as the latter may deem fit to make before it is presented to the Government<sup>78</sup>. Where the subject of inquiry of a Committee set up by Government and the matter to be examined by any of the Parliamentary Committees is the same, the Speaker may, while granting permission to a member to serve on both the Committees, direct that the member concerned should not participate in the proceedings of the Parliamentary Committee concerned when the specific subject comes up for consideration<sup>79</sup>.

Resignation from and Vacation of Seats in a Committee

A member may resign his seat from a Committee by writing under his hand addressed to the Speaker<sup>80</sup>. The letter of resignation, which should be in clear and unambiguous terms, becomes effective only after it is received in the Secretariat and takes effect from the date of resignation specified in the letter of resignation<sup>81</sup>. If no date is specified in the letter, the resignation takes effect from the date of the letter<sup>82</sup> and where the letter does not bear any date, then from the date of its receipt in the Secretariat<sup>83</sup>. The resignation is automatic and is not subject to acceptance by the Speaker. It can become ineffective only if any defect is found in it<sup>84</sup>. In the case of

77. On election to the Estimates Committee (1958-59), a member who was leader of a Study Team on Social Welfare of the Committee on Plan Projects, resigned from the Estimates Committee lest there might arise some difficulty in continuing both as a leader of the Team and a member of the Committee.

78. An Enquiry Committee was set up on 18 April 1957, by the Delhi Administration to review the conditions of non-Government aided schools. The Chairman of that Committee was subsequently elected to the Estimates Committee (1957-58). On a question being raised whether the enquiry conducted would impinge on the work of Estimates Committee in regard to the examination of estimates of the Ministry of Education, the Speaker directed that the report of the Enquiry Committee be submitted to the Chairman, Estimates Committee. However, no conflict in the recommendations of the two Committees, in regard to Elementary Education, was found.

79. On election to the Estimates Committee, a member who was also a member of the Study Team on Social Welfare of the Committee on Plan Projects sought permission of the Speaker to serve on both the Committees. As a particular matter was being examined both by the Study Team and the Estimates Committee, the Speaker, while acceding to the request of the member, directed that he should not take part in the proceedings of the Estimates Committee in regard to that matter. Accordingly, the member did not attend the sitting of the Committee when that matter was considered and the draft report thereon adopted.

84. For example, the letter of resignation would become ineffective if it is not addressed to the Speaker, or is not signed by the member concerned, or is conditional, etc.

Joint Committees, a member may resign by addressing the resignation letter to the Presiding Officer of the House to which he belongs. In such case, efforts are made to notify the resignation of a member from the membership of the Joint Committee in the Bulletins of both the Houses simultaneously.

A vacancy may also be caused when a member of the Committee dies or resigns his seat in the House or otherwise ceases<sup>85</sup> to be a member of the House.

If a member of the Committee on Petitions or Public Accounts or Estimates or Public Undertakings or Subordinate Legislation or Government Assurances or Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes or Empowerment of Women or Departmentally Related Standing Committee (DRSC) is appointed as a Minister, he ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment<sup>86</sup>. In such case, no formal letter of resignation is required nor cessation of membership is notified in the Bulletin. If a member of a Committee is absent from two or more consecutive sittings of the Committee without permission of the Chairperson of the Committee, a motion may be moved in the House for the discharge of such member from the Committee<sup>87</sup>. In the case of Committees on which members are nominated by the Speaker, such a member may, however, be discharged by the Speaker<sup>88</sup>. On adoption of such a motion by the House, or an order being passed by the Speaker, as the case may be, the member concerned ceases to be a member of that Committee. Where a member is a member of a Committee by virtue of the office he holds, he ceases to be a member of the Committee when he vacates that office<sup>89</sup>. The member cannot, however, resign from the membership of that Committee till he holds that office<sup>90</sup>.

Resignations from the Membership of Other Bodies

This is applicable to the Speaker in the case of the Business Advisory Committee, Rules Committee and General Purposes Committee and to the Deputy Speaker, Members of the Panel of Chairpersons of Standing Parliamentary Committees of the Lok Sabha and Leaders of recognised Parties and Groups in the House in the case of the General Purposes Committee.

90. In April 1983, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, who was member of GPC by virtue of his being Leader of BJP, sought to resign from the membership of GPC. He was informed that the membership of GPC being ex-officio, he will continue to be a member of the GPC till he holds the office of the Leader of BJP Group in the Lok Sabha. In 1988, C. Madhav Reddy, Leader of Telugu Desam Group in the Lok Sabha, sought to resign from the membership of GPC (1987-88). He was informed that as long as he continued to be a leader of Telugu Desam Group in the Lok Sabha, it would not be possible to nominate any other member from his Group to the General Purposes Committee.

Chairperson/Prescribed Authority of that Committee, Board, Body, etc. where he is a member by virtue of the office he holds. He ceases to be a member of the Committee when he vacates that office<sup>91</sup>.

Powers of Committees

Powers of the Committees of the Lok Sabha<sup>92</sup> are as laid down in the Constitution<sup>93</sup>, the Rules<sup>94</sup> and the Directions issued thereunder by the Speaker<sup>95</sup> from time to time. Rules relating to certain Committees, instead of conferring specific powers on them, provide that the general rules applicable to Parliamentary Committees shall apply to them with such adaptations, whether by way of modification, addition or omission, as the Speaker may consider necessary or convenient<sup>96</sup>.

Under the provisions of the Salary, Allowances and Pension of Members of Parliament Act, 1954, the Joint Committee on the Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament has the power<sup>97</sup> to regulate its procedure. Besides the Act, the rules framed under the said Act empower<sup>98</sup> the Joint Committee to appoint one or more Sub-Committees. In the case of a Joint Committee on a Bill, the motion moved in the House for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee does not specifically confer any power on the Joint Committee but provides that the general Provisions of the Rules of Procedure of the Lok Sabha relating to Parliamentary Committees will apply with such variations and modifications as the Speaker may make<sup>99</sup>. Sometimes, in the case of ad hoc Committees appointed by the House on a motion adopted in that behalf, the motion for appointment of such a Committee may specifically confer on the Committees some of the powers which are commonly possessed by other Committees of the Lok Sabha<sup>100</sup>.

91. This is applicable to the Speaker in the case of the Business Advisory Committee, Rules Committee and General Purposes Committee, and to the Deputy Speaker, members of the Panel of Chairpersons of Standing Parliamentary Committees of the Lok Sabha and Leaders of recognised Parties and Groups in the House in the case of the General Purposes Committee and members elected/nominated to serve on various Govt. Bodies.

99. For an example of the motion, see L.S. Deb., 19-9-1963, cc. 7136-37.

If a motion to constitute a Joint Committee is initiated by the Rajya Sabha, the motion makes a provision that the rules relating to Parliamentary Committees of that House will apply to such Committee.

100. For example, see the motion for the appointment of the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951)—P. Deb. (II), 8-6-1951, cc. 10457-65, Also motion for the appointment of the Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract—L.S. Deb., 6-8-1987, cc. 561-62.

The powers which are generally possessed in common by all Committees of the Lok Sabha are briefly described in the following paragraphs.

Power to appoint Sub-Committees

A Committee may appoint one or more Sub-Committees, each having the powers of the whole Committee, to examine matters which may require detailed study or investigation. In pursuance of this power, a number of Standing Committees as also Select or Joint Committees on Bills have appointed sub-Committees from time to time for detailed study of specific matters to assist them in the redrafting of particular clauses of a Bill<sup>101</sup>. In certain Committees, there are Standing Sub-Committees, namely,

(i) Sub-Committee of the Business Advisory Committee for selection of admitted notices of 'No-Day-Yet-Named Motions' for discussion in the House<sup>102</sup>, and (ii) accommodation Sub-Committee of the House Committee<sup>103</sup>. Similarly, prior to the constitution of the Committee on Public Undertakings, the Committee on Estimates used to appoint a Standing Sub-Committee on Public Undertakings<sup>104</sup>, every year, immediately after its own constitution. The Committee on Estimates, whenever it decides to examine the estimates of the Ministry of Defence, appoints a Sub-Committee for examining the estimates of that Ministry<sup>105</sup> and the Chairman of the Committee himself is the Chairman of the Sub-Committee.

If the Deputy Speaker is a member of a Sub-Committee, he is ex-officio appointed Chairman of the Sub-Committee.

Power to take Evidence or Call for Documents

A Committee may take oral and/or written evidence or call for documents in connection with a matter under its consideration, examination or investigation<sup>106</sup>.

Power to Send for Persons, Papers and Records<sup>107</sup>

101. For example, Sub-Committees were appointed by the Joint Committee on the Companies Bill, 1953; Select Committee on the Women's and Children's Institutions Licensing Bill, 1953; Select Committee on the Representation of the People (Second Amendment) Bill, 1955; Joint Committee on Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1974; Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the question of the working of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961; and Joint Committee on the Railways Bill, 1986.
  102. The practice of appointment of a Sub-Committee of BAC to examine 'No-Day-Yet-Named Motions' has been discontinued since 1971. See p. 777, infra.
  103. Rule 4(1) of the H.C. Rules.
  104. After the constitution of a separate Committee on Public Undertakings, the Estimates Committee (1964-65) appointed a Sub-Committee to examine the working of the statutory and other Government bodies not falling within the purview of the Committee on Public Undertakings.
  105. Dir. 101(i). Sub-Committees on Defence were appointed by the Estimates Committee during 1956-57 and 1957-58. For detailed working of the Sub-Committee, see this Chapter, under "Committee on Estimates".
  106. Rule 269.—For details, see this Chapter, under the heading 'Evidence', infra.
  107. Rule 270 and Dirs. 99(2) and 101A(iii).

Power to make Special Reports

A Committee has the power to make a special report on any matter that arises or comes to light in the course of its work which it may consider necessary to bring to the notice of the Speaker or the House, as the case may be, notwithstanding that such matter is not directly connected with, or does not fall within, or is not incidental to, its terms of reference<sup>108</sup>.

Power to pass Resolutions on Matters of Procedure

Where a case warrants a special procedure for conducting the business of a Committee, that Committee may pass resolutions on matters of procedure relating to it for the consideration of the Speaker who may make such variations in procedure as he may consider necessary<sup>109</sup>.

Power to make Detailed Rules

To supplement the provisions contained in the Rules and the Directions issued by the Speaker, a Committee may, with the approval of the Speaker, make detailed rules of procedure for its internal working<sup>110</sup>.

Sittings of Committees

Committees generally hold their sittings during sessions of the Lok Sabha, but are otherwise empowered to sit during the intersession period. By reason of the prorogation of the House, any business before a Committee does not lapse and the Committee continues to function notwithstanding such prorogation<sup>111</sup>. When the House is in session, the Committees normally do not meet after the sitting of the House has commenced and before 15.00 hours<sup>112</sup>. If a Committee is meeting whilst the House

Two special reports on the working of the various Cess Funds were presented to the House by the Committee on Public Accounts—19R and 20R (PAC-2LS).

109. Rule 281.

The Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951) decided upon the procedure to be followed at its subsequent sittings. The Speaker approved the procedure and also issued further directives to the Committee.

110. Rule 282.

In pursuance of this power, most of the Standing Committees of the Lok Sabha have framed 'Internal Rules' for regulating their internal procedure.

is sitting, the Chairman of the Committee is required, on a division being called in the House, to suspend proceedings of the Committee for such time as will, in his opinion, enable the members to vote in a division<sup>113</sup>.

The date and time of sitting of a Committee are fixed by the Chairman of the Committee<sup>114</sup>. Where the Chairman is not readily available, the Secretary-General may fix the date and time of sitting; but in the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, he does so in consultation with the Minister in-charge of the Bill<sup>115</sup>.

Cancellation of Sitzings of Committees

No sitting of a Committee shall be cancelled or preponed or postponed by the Chairperson of a Committee by reason only of his absence from the sitting already fixed or his immediate non-availability for the sittings.<sup>116</sup>

Venue of Sitzings

A sitting of a Parliamentary Committee or a Sub-Committee, whether formal or informal, is invariably held within the precincts of the Parliament House<sup>117</sup>. If for any reason, it becomes necessary to hold a sitting of a Committee or a Sub-Committee outside the Parliament House, the matter is referred to the Speaker whose decision is final<sup>118</sup>.

117. Rule 267 and Dir. 50(1).

For instance, the following Committees have held sittings outside the Parliament House with the approval of the Speaker.

The Committee on Estimates held sittings at Nainital during June 1955.

The Joint Committee on the University Grants Commission Bill held sittings in the Bombay Legislative Building at Poona in July 1955.

The Public Accounts Committee met at Simla in June 1956 and again in June 1958. The Committee met at Trivandrum from 27 October 1965, to 1 November 1965, and again in September 1966. The Committee on Public Undertakings met at Trivandrum in February, 1966.

The Joint Committee on the Constitution (Amendment) Bill 1967 by a private member, Nath Pai held some sittings in the Conference Hall of the Mysore Vidhan Sabha, Bangalore, July 1968. The Select Committee on Taxation Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1969, held sittings in the Council Chamber, Calcutta from 8 to 10 January 1970; in the Council Hall, Bombay, from 15 to 17 January 1970; in the Central Hall, Legislators Hostel, Madras, on 5 and 6 February 1970; in the Conference Hall, Vidhana Soudha, Bangalore, on 7 February 1970; in the Legislative Assembly Building, Srinagar on 19 and 21 June; at the Pahalgam Club, Pahalgam, on 20 June; and at the Gulmarg Club, Gulmarg, on 22 June 1970.

The Select Committee on the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 1967 held sittings in the Council Hall, Bombay from 16 to 18 September, 1968; Joint Committee on Commissions of Inquiry (Amendment) Bill, 1969 held sittings in Assembly Building, Srinagar, from 21 to 23 October 1970; Sub-Committees of Joint Committee on Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1974 held sittings at Madras-Bangalore from 16 to 21 September 1974; Ahmedabad-Bombay

The present practice is that sitting of Parliamentary Committees outside the Parliament House are not allowed<sup>119</sup>.

The Parliamentary Committees, while on study tour, may hold informal sittings at the place of their visit, but at such sittings no decisions are taken nor is any evidence recorded<sup>120</sup>. Normally no study tours are undertaken by the Committees when the House is in session.

Sometimes, the terms of reference of a Committee may specifically mention about the venue of sittings of the Committee<sup>121</sup>.

Quorum

The quorum to constitute a sitting of a Committee is, as near as may be, one-third of the total number of members of the Committee<sup>122</sup>. While calculating one-third of the members of Committee, it should be with reference to the total number of members of a Committee irrespective of vacancies in the Committee and the fraction if any should be ignored<sup>123</sup>. Thus, for instance in a DRSC having a strength of 31 members, the quorum to constitute a sitting of the Committee shall be ten members.<sup>124</sup>

121. The terms of reference of the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951) stated that the Committee had the power to hear and/or to receive evidence, oral or documentary, in Bombay and/or any other place in India as the Speaker might decide—P. Deb. (II), 8-6-1951, cc. 10464-65. The terms of reference of the Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract (1987) provided inter alia that “If that Committee wish to nominate a Sub-Committee to visit a foreign country for specified purposes connected with the enquiry, the matter shall be referred to the Speaker, who may take such decisions and give such directions as he thinks fit, provided that such Sub-Committee shall not hold sittings, record evidence or take decisions in a foreign country.” However, no such Sub-Committee was nominated by the Committee—L.S. Deb., 6-8-1987, cc. 561-62.

123. On a question raised by the Committee on Information Technology, it was decided vide SG’s order dated 12 April 2005 that while calculating quorum under rule 259, the fractions, if any, should be ignored.

124. A convention was developed by EC in November 1957 whereby the Committee did not insist on quorum at its sittings where official witnesses were examined on the ground that no decisions were taken at such sittings. Over the years, the convention had also been adopted and followed by most of the Committees including DRSCs. However, it was felt subsequently that the convention was contrary to the provisions of rule 259 as the rule does not allow a Committee or its Chairman to relax the requirement of quorum at any sitting on any ground. It was, therefore, decided vide SG’s orders dated 9 April 2008 that the provisions of rule 259 regarding quorum at sittings of Parliamentary Committees should be enforced strictly regardless of the nature of business to be transacted.

Where a Committee is appointed or elected on a motion or a resolution adopted by the House, the quorum to constitute a sitting of the Committee is generally specified in the motion or resolution moved in the House<sup>125</sup>; otherwise the general rule relating to quorum, i.e. one-third of the total number of members of the Committee applies<sup>126</sup>. The quorum of the Committee is invariably specified in the motion moved in the House for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee and it is usually fixed as one-third of the total number of members of the Committee<sup>127</sup>. Where a Parliamentary Committee is constituted under an Act of Parliament, the quorum of the Committee may be laid down in the Act or the rules framed in pursuance of the provisions of the Act<sup>128</sup>.

In special circumstances, the quorum to constitute a sitting of a Committee may, under orders of the House or the Speaker, be reduced to less than one-third of the total number of members of the Committee<sup>129</sup>.

The usual practice is for the Chairman of a Committee to satisfy himself that there is a quorum at the commencement of a sitting or at the time when votes are taken. At any other time any member of the Committee present at the sitting can draw the attention of the Chairman to the lack of quorum. If at any time during any such sitting, there is no quorum, the Chairman of the Committee is required to suspend the sitting until there is a quorum or adjourn the sitting to some future date<sup>130</sup>. When a Committee has been adjourned for lack of quorum on two successive dates fixed for the sitting of the Committee, the Chairman of the Committee is required to report the fact to the House<sup>131</sup> or the Speaker, whosoever has appointed the Committee<sup>132</sup>. The House or the Speaker, as the case may be, may then decide the course of action to be taken in the matter depending on the merits of each case<sup>133</sup>.

The House granted extension of time for presentation of report of the Committee—P. Deb. (II), 28-9-1951, c. 3617; and 1-10-1951, cc. 3914-15.

The sittings of the Committee on Petitions to consider a petition on the Finance Bill, 1955, could not be held on 15 and 16 April 1955 for want of quorum. When the fact was reported to the Speaker, he ordered that the petition might be circulated to all members in extenso as the Bill was then pending before the House.

Admission of Strangers

The sittings of Parliamentary Committees are held in private and are not open to public<sup>134</sup>. No outsider or representative of the press is admitted to the sittings. The Committees do not associate any person or body from outside, formally or informally, with their deliberations and as such all persons other than the members of a Committee and officers of the Secretariat are required to withdraw when the Committee is deliberating<sup>135</sup>. Certain persons may, however, with the prior permission of the Committee or its Chairman, be present at a sitting of the Committee when the Committee is taking evidence, but they are not allowed to take part in any manner in the proceedings nor can they sit in the body of the Committee<sup>136</sup>.

Admission of Members who are not Members of Committee

The practice regarding admission to the sittings or association with the proceedings of a Parliamentary Committee of members who are not members of that Committee differs from Committee to Committee. In certain Committees<sup>137</sup> such a member may, under orders of the Chairman of the Committee, be invited to attend its sittings as a special invitee, but he is not entitled to vote. In the Committee of Privileges no member other than the members of the Committee can be associated with the deliberations of the Committee when a specific question of a breach of privilege or contempt of the House is to be considered<sup>138</sup>. In the case of the Committee on Estimates, a member who is not a member of the Committee may, with the

135. Rule 268. In the case of a Select or a Joint Committee on a Bill, the official Draftsman concerned with the Bill is invariably allowed to be present at the sittings of the Committee.

136. A member of the Rajya Sabha or a State Legislature or an Officer of a State Legislature may, with the permission of the Chairman, attend the sittings of the Committee on Estimates only when evidence is being taken, but cannot take part in any manner in the proceedings of the Committee nor can he sit in the body of the Committee.

On 4 December 1956, when an official of the Department of Parliamentary Affairs came to attend the sitting of the Business Advisory Committee in the absence of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, the Chairman of the Committee objected to his presence at the sitting and the official was not allowed to attend the sitting.

137. These Committees are:

Business Advisory Committee, Committee on Government Assurances, Committee on Petitions, Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions, Committee on Subordinate Legislation, General Purposes Committee, House Committee and the Rules Committee—see Internal Rules of BAC, CGA, CP, CPB, CSL, GPC, HC and RC; Min. (RC), 29-4-1958.

On a written request made by a member of the Business Advisory Committee belonging to the Opposition Group, the Speaker has occasionally permitted another member of that Group to attend the sittings of the Committee-Min. (BAC), 23-5-1957, 15-7-1957, 11-11-1957, 15-11-1957, 10-2-1958, 14-4-1958, 22-4-1960.

138. On 18 February 1959, when the Committee of Privileges (2LS) was examining a question of breach of privilege (Mathai Case, 1959), a member of the Committee suggested that the member or Chairman of the Committee of Privileges of the Rajya Sabha, who were also then examining the same question, might be associated with the Committee's deliberation. The Chairman of the Committee ruled that in view of Rules 266 and 268, no outside person or body could be associated formally or informally with the deliberations of the Committee.

permission of the Chairman, attend the sittings of the Committee when evidence is being taken but not when the Committee is deliberating. Such a member cannot take part in any manner in the proceedings of the Committee nor can he sit in the body of the Committee<sup>139</sup>. In the case of a Select Committee on a Bill, a member who is not a member of the Committee may be present during the deliberations of the Committee, but he cannot address the Committee nor can he sit in the body of the Committee<sup>140</sup>. In the case of Joint Committee on a Bill if it is later felt that the association of some particular member would help the Committee in its deliberations, that member can be invited as an expert witness but he cannot otherwise be associated with the deliberations of the Committee<sup>141</sup>. A Minister who is not a member of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill may, with the permission of the Chairperson of the Committee, address the Committee<sup>142</sup> but he is not entitled to vote.

Proceedings in Committees

Proceedings in Committees are largely conducted in the same manner as in the House but in a more intimate and informal atmosphere. When a Committee is deliberating, a member can speak more than once on a question under consideration. After the Chairman is satisfied that sufficient discussion has taken place, he puts the question to the Committee and ascertains its decision. All questions at a sitting of a Committee are decided by a majority of votes of the members present and voting<sup>143</sup>. Except in the case of Select or Joint Committees on Bills, questions are not formally put to the vote of the Committee and as far as possible, unanimous decisions are taken. In rare cases when there is a difference of opinion in a Committee, either both opinions are included in the report of the Committee or a reference to the difference of opinion is recorded in the minutes of the Committee. A question on which a

In the Joint Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill, 1958, when the Minister of Transport and Communications suggested that a member of the Rajya Sabha, whose name had been omitted from being included in the Committee, might be invited to attend the sittings of the Committee so that his expert knowledge of Indian shipping could be available to them, the Speaker ruled that the Committee could call him as an expert witness but could not otherwise associate him in their deliberations.

A verbatim record of the proceedings is kept when a witness is examined by the Committee<sup>145</sup> or if it is otherwise considered necessary, depending upon the nature and importance of the matter discussed by the Committee<sup>146</sup>. The verbatim proceedings are for the use of the Committee only and no part thereof can be communicated, shown for reference or divulged to anyone who is not a member of the Committee without the permission of the Speaker unless and until the proceedings have been laid on the Table<sup>147</sup>.

The proceedings of a Committee are treated as confidential and it is not permissible for a member of the Committee or anyone who has access to those proceedings to communicate, directly or indirectly, to the press or any other person any information regarding the proceedings, including the report or any conclusions arrived at finally or tentatively, before the report is presented to the House<sup>148</sup>.

However, in the case of Joint Committee to enquire into irregularities in securities and banking transactions, the Committee decided that in view of the widespread public interest, the Chairman should brief the press about the deliberations of the Committee, as the motion adopted by the House provided that the Committee might, if need arises, in certain matters, adopt a different procedure with the concurrence of the Speaker, the Speaker accorded the necessary approval and the Chairperson briefed the press at the end of each meeting of the Committee.

Evidence

A Committee may take oral and/or written evidence in connection with a matter under its consideration, examination or investigation, and every Committee has the power to send for persons, papers and records<sup>149</sup>.

The Ministers are generally not called before the Committees to give evidence. The Joint Committee to enquire into irregularities in securities and banking transactions, however, decided to call for written information on certain points from Ministers/ex-Ministers and to call them for evidence before the Joint Committee, if considered necessary on account of the wide ramifications of the subject under examination. The Speaker, while according the necessary approval, stated that this was being done in view of the uncommon nature of the case and the views expressed by the Leaders of all Parties at the time of constituting the Committee and also subsequent to that. The Committee called certain information in writing and also took evidence of the Ministers of Finance and Health & Family Welfare.

Where the disclosure of a document is, however, likely to be prejudicial to the safety or interest of the State, the Government may decline to produce it before a Committee<sup>150</sup>.

150. Ibid., Second Proviso.

In accordance with an established convention, secret documents required by a Parliamentary Committee are confidentially made available by the Ministry or Department or Undertaking to the Chairman in the first instance, unless it is certified by the Minister concerned that such document could not be made available on the ground that its disclosure would be prejudicial to the safety or interest of the State. The Chairman gives due consideration to the wishes of the Ministry or Department or Undertaking before making any such document available to the members of the Committee. Any difference of opinion between the Ministry, etc. and the Chairman is settled by discussion, and in the last resort by reference to the Speaker. The plea on non-disclosure of a document on grounds of safety or interest of the State has to be taken by the Minister himself. It would not be adequate or proper for any civil servant to advance this plea before the Speaker or the Chairman of a Parliamentary Committee.

- (i) On 13 July 1956, the Minister of Defence handed over a few reports to the Chairman, Estimates Committee, for use in connection with the examination of the estimates of the Ministry of Defence with a request to treat them as secret documents. Those reports were not circulated to the members of the Sub-Committee (Defence) of the Estimates Committee. The information contained in them was, however, utilized in determining the methodology of inquiry.
- (ii) During their examination of audit para 16 of the Report of the Comptroller & Auditor General of India for 1971-72 on Revenue Receipts (Vol. 1) relating to import of serviceable woollen garments as rags, the PAC (1973-74) desired to be furnished with full facts relating to inter-ministerial meetings held in this regard and the PM's approval in the matter. The Cabinet Secretariat declined to furnish the requisite files invoking the second Proviso to Rule 270. Later the Minister of Works, Housing and Parliamentary Affairs also addressed a D.O. to the Speaker, Lok Sabha stating that the papers of the Cabinet Secretariat which the Chairman of PAC wishes to see were not relevant for the purpose of the Committee's inquiry. He also requested the Speaker to call for the relevant papers and to give a ruling in the matter.

The Speaker ruled inter alia as follows:

“....the details of the discussion held between the Ministers and the approval given by the Prime Minister to the recommendations of the Ministers are no longer relevant within the meaning of Rule 270 of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha”.

- (iii) While examining para 27 of the Report of the Comptroller & Auditor General of India for the year 1972-73, relating to purchase of Milo from abroad, the PAC (1974-75) called for certain information from the Department of Food. The Minister of State for Agriculture and Irrigation certified that the production of the documents in question would be prejudicial to the safety and interest of the State. The Government also invoked the second Proviso to Rule 270. The Minister's request was acceded to by the Speaker.

If at any time any question arises whether the evidence of a person or the production of a document is relevant for the purpose of the Committee, the question is referred to the Speaker whose decision is final<sup>151</sup>. Similarly, if an officer of a State Government is required to be examined by a Committee or if a paper, document or record of a State Government is required to be produced before a Committee, the orders of the Speaker are required to be obtained in each case before the officer or the State Government concerned is asked to comply with the request<sup>152</sup>.

Where the Speaker decides that it is not necessary to summon a particular State officer as a witness or that the State Government need not be asked to produce a

- (iv) The PAC while examining audit para 27 of the report of Comptroller & Auditor General of India for the year 1974-75 asked for certain documents from the Ministry of Food. The Ministry of Food invoked the second Proviso to Rule 270. On the attention of the Ministry being drawn to the well established convention of making secret documents available to the Chairman of the Committee, the Minister of State for Agriculture and Irrigation discussed the matter with the Speaker, Lok Sabha. While acceding to the request of the Minister, he directed that the papers might be shown to the Chairman only. Accordingly, the papers were made available to the Chairman, PAC.
  - (v) During the course of their examination of audit para 35 of the Report of the Comptroller & Auditor General of India for 1985-86, Union Government (Defence), the PAC (1987-88) asked the Ministry of Defence to furnish certain documents. The same were made available to the Chairman. However, he directed that as the documents were very voluminous, the same should be made available to the Director of Audit (Comptroller & Auditor General of India) for comprehensive examination. As the documents were not made available to the Audit, the matter was again taken up with the Secretary/Ministry of Defence. The Minister of Defence informed the Chairman that all the documents except one had been made available to the Audit. He also reiterated that the document in question could be shown to the Chairman, PAC which was accepted by the Chairman.
  - (vi) The Committee of Privileges during the course of examination of a question of privilege against the Editors of Indian Express, Financial Express and Jansatta for allegedly casting reflections on a member of Parliament, in an article captioned "An MP and two Accounts" published in their issues dated 14 March 1988, called for from the Ministry of Finance certain documents relevant to the matter pending consideration before the Committee. The Ministry of Finance, while sending the requisite documents, stated that since the said documents had been classified as 'secret', the same might be put up to the Chairman, Committee of Privileges for his perusal only.

The Committee directed that the Minister of Finance might be asked to state if he would have any objection to the Chairman showing the said documents or he would like to certify that the documents could not be made available to members of the Committee on the ground that their disclosure would be prejudicial to the safety or interest of the State. On the Ministry of Finance intimating, with the approval of the Minister of State for Finance, that the disclosure of the documents was not considered to be prejudicial to the safety or interest of the State, the Chairman made the said documents available to the members for perusal during the course of the sitting of the Committee on 14 July 1988.

paper, document or record, his decision is conveyed to the Committee through its Chairman<sup>153</sup>.

A Committee can take evidence of experts, public bodies, associations, individuals or interested parties suo motu or on requests made by the persons or bodies interested in or affected by the subject matter under consideration or examination of the Committee<sup>154</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, if the Committee decides to hear evidence, it issues generally a press communique<sup>155</sup> inviting interested parties to send written memoranda containing their views on the Bill. After considering the written memoranda received from the persons or organisations, the Committee or the Chairman, when so authorised, selects the parties who may be called to give evidence before the Committee. It is also within the discretion of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill to invite written opinions on a Bill from experts or individuals or organisations instead of hearing them<sup>156</sup>. Where a Ministry, Department or an Undertaking is required to give evidence before a Committee on any matter, it is represented by the Secretary or the head of the Department or the Undertaking, as the case may be<sup>157</sup>. If for any reason such an officer cannot attend a Committee on any particular occasion, the Chairman of the Committee, may, on a request being made to him, permit any other senior officer to represent the Ministry, Department or Undertaking before the Committee on that occasion<sup>158</sup>. If required by a Committee, the Ministry, Department or Undertaking concerned has to furnish for circulation to the members of the Committee sufficient number of copies of any memorandum containing its views on the matter under consideration well in advance of the date on which its representatives have to give evidence before the Committee.<sup>159</sup> by issue of a formal summons to give evidence before a Committee and/or to produce before it any document required by the Committee<sup>160</sup>. Generally, a letter is addressed and formal summons are issued to a witness only when a Committee is conducting an investigation of a judicial character.

If a witness fails to appear before a Committee when summoned or called by a letter or a person refuses to produce any document when so required by a Committee, his conduct constitutes contempt of the House and may be reported to the House by the Committee.

If a witness to be examined by a Committee is in jail, his attendance before the Committee, if considered necessary, is secured through the Home Ministry and the State Government concerned.

When the Parliamentary Committee on the Demand for Punjabi Suba, on requests made to them, decided on 1 February 1966, to hear a detenu detained under orders of the Punjab Government, the Home Ministry and the Punjab Government were asked in writing and telegraphically, respectively, to ensure the detenu's appearance before the Committee on February 4 at 15.00 hours. The detenu who was then in the Central Jail, Delhi, was brought to Parliament House on the appointed date and time under police escort and was received at the main gate by the Watch and Ward Officer,<sup>161</sup> Lok Sabha. The police escort waited at the Outer Reception Office and the Watch and Ward Officer conducted the detenu to the waiting room for witness. From there, the staff attending the Committee took the detenu to the Committee Room. After his evidence before the Committee, he was conducted to the main gate by the Watch and Ward Officer and handed over to the waiting police escort for being taken back to jail.

Counsel for a witness: Generally, a witness is heard in person by a Committee. In special circumstances, however, especially in inquiries or investigations of a judicial character, a witness may be permitted to be represented or accompanied by a counsel<sup>162</sup>.

Evidence on oath: Ordinarily, oath or affirmation is not administered to witnesses appearing before the Committees. An oath or affirmation is administered to a witness only where the investigation is of a judicial or quasijudicial nature and the truth of the facts has to be ascertained<sup>163</sup>.

Deb.* (II), 8-6-1951, cc. 10464-65.

163. Rule 272(1). In the Mudgal Case, and the Deshpande Case, the Committees examined witness on oath—see Report of Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case), 1951, and Report of the Committee of Privileges (Deshpande Case), 1952, respectively. Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract decided to take evidence on oath. Accordingly, all the witnesses (including official witnesses) were administered oath by the Chairman—see Report of the Joint Committee.

Procedure for Examining Witnesses

Before a witness is called for examination, the Chairman and members of the Committee briefly confer and decide upon the lines to be followed in the examination of the witness and the questions to be asked of him<sup>164</sup>. The Chairman first asks the witness such questions as he may consider necessary with reference to the subject matter under consideration or any subject connected therewith<sup>165</sup>. Thereafter, other members of the Committee may, one by one, ask the witness any other question<sup>166</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, where a witness is called to give evidence after considering a written memorandum submitted by him, examination of the witness is confined mainly to matters not clarified in his memorandum and to such other matters as may arise therefrom. The questions asked are confined to matters that affect the interest represented by the witness or upon which he is competent to express an opinion. After all the members of the Committee have finished with their questions, the Chairman may ask the witness to place before the Committee any other relevant points which may not have been covered and which the witness thinks are essential to be placed before the Committee<sup>167</sup>. A witness may also, with the permission of the Chairman, place before the Committee any other relevant information which may not have been already placed before the Committee<sup>168</sup>.

Decorum and etiquette to be observed by witnesses: All witnesses, when appearing before a Committee or a Sub-Committee thereof, have to observe a proper decorum and etiquette consistent with the courtesy and respect due to a Committee of Parliament. Points of conduct and etiquette to be observed by the witnesses have been drawn up for their guidance<sup>169</sup>. A copy of these points, where considered necessary, is either sent to the witness when he is called to appear before a Committee or shown to him when he personally comes for evidence.

Verbatim Record of Evidence

A verbatim record of the proceedings of a Committee is kept when a witness is called to give evidence before the Committee<sup>170</sup>. Relevant portions of the verbatim proceedings of the sitting, at which evidence has been taken, are forwarded by the Secretariat to the witness and the members concerned for confirmation and return by a specified date<sup>171</sup>. If corrected copies of the proceedings are not received back by the specified date, the reporter's copy is treated as authentic<sup>172</sup>. In exceptional cases, reasonable cause being shown, corrections received after the specified date may be admitted.

164. Rule 273(i) In the case of the Estimates Committee, the Public Accounts Committee, and the Committee on Public Undertakings, a list of points and/or questions for oral examination of witnesses, incorporating therein any suggestions received from members of the Committee, is prepared and circulated to the members of the Committee before the oral examination of witnesses actually takes place. Besides financial Committees, this practice is in vogue in several other Parliamentary Committees such as Committee on Subordinate Legislation, Committee on Petitions, Committee on Papers Laid on the Table and Committee on Government Assurances, etc.

Corrections, if any, must be made neatly and legibly by the witness or the member in ink in his own handwriting.

A witness or a member cannot make corrections for the purpose of improving the literary form or altering the substance of the proceedings by additions or deletions. The corrections, if any, are to be confined to correction of inaccuracies which may have occurred in the process of reporting<sup>173</sup>.

Secret or Confidential Documents Submitted to a Committee not to be Quoted

Whenever a secret or confidential paper or document is circulated to the members of a Committee, the contents of such paper or document must not be divulged by any member of the Committee either in a minute of dissent or in his speech on the floor of the House or otherwise, without the prior permission of the Speaker<sup>174</sup>. Where such permission has been obtained, any restriction imposed by the Speaker in regard to the manner in which, or the extent to which, the information contained in the document may be divulged, has to be strictly observed by the member concerned<sup>175</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, although secret or confidential documents circulated to members of the Committee cannot be referred to in minutes of dissent or speeches in the House, arguments contained in such documents may be advanced without quoting the source or the authority<sup>176</sup>.

Prohibition on Publication of Evidence before it is Reported to the House

Evidence given before, or a document submitted to a Committee, is always treated as confidential and no part thereof can be divulged or shown for reference to anyone who is not a member of the Committee unless and until the same has been laid on the Table<sup>177</sup>. All documents, representations or memoranda addressed to a Committee and received in the Secretariat form part of the records of the Committee and can neither be withdrawn nor altered without the knowledge and approval of the Committee<sup>178</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, while acknowledging receipt of a representation or memorandum addressed to the Committee, the sender is informed that as his representation or memorandum has gone into the records of the Committee, the same should be treated as strictly confidential and not circulated to anyone else. No person can, without the permission of the Speaker, quote from or, send to anyone else, copies of any document submitted to a Committee unless and until the same has been presented to the House either along with the report of the Committee or separately<sup>179</sup>. If any person seeks permission to make use of the representation or memorandum submitted by him to a Committee, he is, when so permitted, required to make use of only the arguments or points contained in his representation or memorandum without alluding to the fact that such considerations have also been urged by him in the representation, etc. submitted to the Committee<sup>180</sup>. When copies of the relevant portions of the verbatim proceedings of the sitting of a Committee at which evidence has been given are forwarded to a witness or a member for correction and return, he is informed that it is neither permissible to take out copies of those proceedings nor can the proceedings be quoted anywhere or made use of in any manner without the permission of the Committee.

It is a breach of privilege for any person to publish any part of the evidence given before, or any document submitted to, a Committee before such evidence or document has been reported to the House.

It is at the discretion of the Committee to treat as secret or confidential any evidence, oral or written, given before it<sup>181</sup>. Even where a witness expressly desires his evidence to be treated as confidential, the Committee may decide otherwise and make it available to the members of the House<sup>182</sup>; where the Committee decides to treat the evidence as confidential, it is not printed along with other evidence nor presented to the House but the Committee may decide to place a few copies thereof in the Library for reference by members only<sup>183</sup>. However, all evidence given before

Permission to make use of arguments or points contained in their representations or memoranda submitted to the following Committees was granted to certain persons and associations:

Joint Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill, 1953; Select Committee on the Wealth Tax Bill, 1957; and Select Committee on the Expenditure Tax Bill, 1957.

and documents submitted to a Committee are available to all members of the Committee<sup>184</sup>. Generally, the verbatim record of evidence given before a Committee is kept with the Secretariat for reference by members of the Committee, but on occasions such record of evidence or a summary thereof has been circulated to members of the Committee<sup>185</sup>.

Laying of Evidence on the Table

It is for the Committee to decide if the whole or part of the evidence given before them or a summary thereof should be laid on the Table<sup>186</sup>. The general practice in this regard varies from Committee to Committee. The Committee on Estimates has decided that the evidence it takes need not normally be published with its reports<sup>187</sup>. A resume of the evidence is invariably embodied on the minutes of the sittings of the Committee which are laid on the Table as soon as possible after the presentation of the report to which they relate.

Where evidence was taken by the erstwhile Sub-Committee on Public Undertakings of the Committee on Estimates, the minutes of the sittings at which evidence was taken were laid on the Table together with the minutes of the sitting of the whole Committee at which the report of the Sub-Committee was adopted by the whole Committee<sup>188</sup>.

The evidence given before the Committee on Public Accounts is also not normally laid on the Table. Where, however, the Committee on Public Accounts decides to lay the evidence on the Table, it is printed in the form of a separate volume which is deemed to form part of the report of the Committee dealing with the relevant accounts and audit report thereon. Evidence given before a Sub-Committee of the Committee

184. Rule 273(vi).

185. Verbatim record of evidence given before the following Select/Joint Committee was circulated to members of the Committee:

(i) Select Committee on the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1956; (ii) Joint Committee on the Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill, 1980; (iii) Joint Committee on the Lokpal Bill, 1985; and (iv) Joint Committee on the Railways Bill, 1986.

A summary evidence given before the Joint Committee on the Companies Bill, 1953, was circulated to members of the Committee.

In the case of the Estimates Committee and Public Accounts Committee, only the minutes containing a resume of evidence given before these Committees are circulated to members of the Committee.

187. Min. (EC), 7-2-1953.

The reason for not publishing the evidence given before the Estimates Committee is that if the witnesses appearing before the Committee know that their evidence would be printed and published, they may be on guard and the Committee may, to that extent, be deprived of the benefit of free and frank expression of views by witnesses. Especially in the case of non-official witnesses, who speak in confidence, their evidence has been found to be of great value by the Committee in arriving at proper conclusions. If the evidence of the non-official witnesses is to be published, they may be hesitant to speak out so frankly and, in some cases, they may even be reluctant to give evidence before the Committee.

188. Min. (EC), 11-4-1960.

on Public Accounts is not printed verbatim; only the minutes of the Sub-Committee are appended to its report which, on approval by the Committee, are included in the report of the whole Committee<sup>189</sup>. The evidence given before the Committee of Privileges, unless decided otherwise by the Committee<sup>190</sup>, forms part of, and is appended to, the report of the Committee which is laid on the Table<sup>191</sup>. If a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill decides that the evidence given before it need not be laid on the Table, it does not form part of the report of the Committee<sup>192</sup>. Where it is decided that only a summary of the evidence may be laid on the Table, the evidence is printed in summary form as part of the report presented to the House<sup>193</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, laying of evidence on the Table in extenso is more common and where the Committee so decides, the evidence is printed in a separate volume<sup>194</sup>. Similarly, memoranda, etc. submitted by organisations, associations or individuals who give evidence before a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill may, if the Committee so decides, be laid on the Table as an Appendix to the evidence<sup>195</sup>. The Committee may also decide that such memoranda, etc. need not be laid on the Table along with other evidence but a few copies thereof may be placed in the Library for reference by members<sup>196</sup>.

Circulation of Evidence to Members of the House

Copies of the evidence given before a Committee are made available to members of the House only after the evidence has been laid on the Table. In an urgent case, however, particularly when the House is not in session, the Speaker may, in his discretion, direct that such evidence be confidentially made available to members before it is formally laid on the Table<sup>197</sup>.

189. In the case of its Sub-Committee on the Delhi Transport Authority (Bus Section) 1950-51 to 1953-54, the Public Accounts Committee adopted the report of the Sub-Committee as its report and the evidence given before the Sub-Committee was also printed along with the report.

193. See Reports of the JCs on the Displaced Persons Compensation and Rehabilitation Bill, 1954; the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1954; and the Lokpal and Lokayukta Bill, 1968.

194. In the case of Select Committees on the Electricity (Supply) Amendment Bill, 1954, and the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1956 and Joint Committees on the Companies Bill, 1953, the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1955 and Joint Committee on the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1983, the evidence given before the Committees was laid on the Table in extenso in a separate volume.

195. See Evidence volumes of the Joint Committees on the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1955, and the Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959.

196. Memoranda, etc. submitted by individuals or associations to Select Committee on the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1956, the Joint Committee on the Arms Bill, 1958, Joint Committee on the Mental Health Bill, 1978 and the Joint Committee on the Life Insurance Corporation Bill, 1983, were not appended to the Evidence laid on the Table, but a few copies were placed in the Library for reference by members.

197. Rule 275(3), Proviso.

Sub-Committees

A Sub-Committee, having the powers of the whole Committee, may be appointed by a Parliamentary Committee to examine any matter that may be referred to it which requires detailed study or investigation<sup>198</sup>. The order of reference to a Sub-Committee clearly states the point or points for investigation<sup>199</sup>. The members of a Sub-Committee are appointed from amongst the members of the whole Committee. If the Chairman of a Committee is a member of a Sub-Committee thereof, he automatically becomes the Chairman of the Sub-Committee. Otherwise, the Chairman or the convener of a Sub-Committee is appointed by the Chairman of the whole Committee<sup>200</sup>. The Chairman of the Committee on Estimates is usually the Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Defence and in the case of the Accommodation, Sub-Committee of the House Committee, the Chairman, House Committee, is the ex officio Chairman of the Sub-Committee<sup>201</sup>.

The procedure followed in the Sub-Committee is, as far as practicable, the same as in the whole Committee<sup>202</sup>. The Chairman of the whole Committee may, subject to any general or special directions issued by the Speaker, give such directions on matters of procedure to the Chairman or convener of a Sub-Committee as may be necessary for the regulation and organization of work of the Sub-Committee<sup>203</sup>.

The report of a Sub-Committee, signed by the Chairman of the Sub-Committee, is submitted to, and considered by, the whole Committee; if the report of the Sub-Committee is approved at the sitting of the whole Committee, it is deemed to be the report of the whole Committee<sup>204</sup>. The report of a Sub-Committee may also be appended to the report of the whole Committee when the latter is presented to the House or the Speaker<sup>205</sup>.

Record of Decisions of a Committee

Minutes of Sitzings

Soon after each sitting of a Committee, minutes of the proceedings of the sitting, giving names of the members and officers present, the duration of the sitting and the decisions arrived at are prepared and, after approval by the Chairman or the member who presided at the sitting, circulated to the members of the Committee<sup>206</sup>.

206. Rule 274 and Dir. 66.

However, in the case of the Committee on Public Accounts, only consolidated minutes of the sittings of the Committee relating to the examination of particular accounts are circulated to members of the Committee. Minutes of the sittings of a Sub-Committee are generally circulated only to members of the Sub-Committee, but in the case of a Sub-Committee of the Committee on Public Accounts, minutes of the sittings at which evidence is given are circulated to members of the whole Committee.

Where considered necessary, a copy of the minutes of a sitting of a Committee or Sub-Committee or relevant extracts therefrom may also be sent to the Ministry or other authority concerned<sup>207</sup>. If any member desires to make any alteration in the minutes on the ground that they are not in conformity with the decision arrived at, the matter is considered by the Committee or Sub-Committee at its next sitting and the decision taken thereon is incorporated in the minutes of the sitting<sup>208</sup>. The minutes are treated as confidential until presented to the House<sup>209</sup>.

Laying of minutes on the Table: The practice regarding laying of the minutes of the sittings on the Table varies according to the nature of work of the Committee. Minutes of the sittings of the Business Advisory Committee, General Purposes Committee and the Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament are not laid on the Table. In the case of the Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House, Government Assurances, Petitions, and Private Members' Bills and Resolutions, the minutes of the sittings held during a session are laid on the Table by the Chairman or, in his absence, by any other member of the Committee, before the termination of the session<sup>210</sup>. If any of these Committees holds its sittings when the Lok Sabha is not in session, the minutes of those sittings are laid on the Table during the next Session at the first convenient opportunity<sup>211</sup>. In the case of the Committee of Privileges, Committee on Public Accounts, Committee on Subordinate Legislation, Joint Committee on Offices of Profit, and Select or Joint Committees on Bills, minutes of the sittings of the Committee form part of, and are appended to, the relevant report of the Committee which is presented to, or laid on the Table of the House<sup>212</sup>. Minutes of the sittings of the Committee on Estimates are laid on the Table as soon as possible after the presentation of the report to which they

In the Public Accounts Committee, extracts of the minutes are not circulated to any Ministry but the minutes are sent to the Comptroller and Auditor General for information.

In the Business Advisory Committee, a copy of the minutes of each sitting is also sent to the Department of Parliamentary Affairs.

In the General Purposes Committee and the House Committee, when so decided, relevant extracts from the minutes are forwarded to the Ministries/Departments concerned for necessary action.

relate<sup>213</sup>. Minutes of the sittings of the Rules Committee either separately are laid on the Table by the Deputy Speaker if he is a member of the Committee or, in his absence, by any other member of the Committee soon after the relevant report has been so laid<sup>214</sup> or the Minutes are appended to the relevant report when it is laid on the Table. Usually an entry is made in the List of Business for the day on which the minutes of sittings of a Committee are to be laid on the Table<sup>215</sup>.

Reports of Committees

The Report of a Committee may be either preliminary or final<sup>216</sup>. A Committee may, if it thinks fit, make a special report on any matter that arises or comes to light in the course of its work, and which it may consider necessary to bring to the notice of the Speaker or the House, notwithstanding that such matter is not directly connected with, or does not fall within, or is not incidental to, its terms of reference<sup>217</sup>.

Time Limit for Presentation of Report

Standing Parliamentary Committees generally present their reports to the House or to the Speaker, as the case may be, from time to time<sup>218</sup>.

Where a matter is referred to a Committee by the House and the House has not fixed any time for presentation of report by the Committee, the report is required to be presented to the House within one month of the date on which the reference was made to the Committee<sup>219</sup>.

213. Rule 17 of IR (EC).

Since 1958-59, minutes of the sittings of the Committee on Estimates are compiled separately for each report or group of reports or Ministry-wise as may be convenient and are laid on the Table as a separate document as soon as possible after the relevant report or reports are presented to the House. Prior to 1958-59, the practice was to compile the entire minutes relating to the sittings of the Committee held during a year in convenient volumes and to present them to the House after the presentation of all the relevant reports of the Committee.

214. Rule 7 of IR (RC).

215. Dir. 67(2).

216. Rule 277(2).

In the Blitz Case, 1961, the Committee of Privileges presented a preliminary report to the House before its final report—12R and 13R(CPR-2LS).

217. Rule 276.

Two special reports were presented to the Speaker by the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951).

Two special reports on the working of the various Cess Funds were presented to the House by the Public Accounts Committee—19R and 20R (PAC-2LS).

218. Dir. 68(1).

On account of the nature of their work, the General Purposes Committee, the House Committee and the Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members do not make any formal reports either to the House or to the Speaker. Other Standing Parliamentary Committees present their reports generally to the House. In the case of the Committee of Privileges where a question of privilege has been referred to the Committee by the Speaker under Rule 227, the report is presented to the Speaker who may pass final orders thereon or direct that it be laid on the Table—See 1R-7R and 10R (CPR-2LS).

Extension of time for Presentation of Report

If a Committee anticipates that it will not be possible for it to present its report to the House by the stipulated date, the Committee authorises the Chairperson or, in his absence, any other member of the Committee, to move a motion in the House for extension of time for the presentation of the report<sup>220</sup>. The motion is then moved in the House by the person so authorised and the date up to which extension of time is sought is specified in the motion on a reasonable presumption that the House would be in session on that date. If the House is not in session or is not likely to re-assemble till after the expiry of the date fixed for the presentation of the report, the Chairperson of the Committee, on being so authorised by the Committee, moves the Speaker to grant the required extension of time on behalf of the House<sup>221</sup>. Where the Speaker grants an extension of time on behalf of the House, he informs the House of it as soon as it re-assembles<sup>222</sup>. In the case of a Joint Committee of the Houses, if the Speaker grants an extension of time on behalf of the House, a message is sent to the Rajya Sabha informing that House about the extension granted by the Speaker<sup>223</sup>.

Preparation and Circulation of Draft Report

The draft report is prepared by the Secretariat on the basis of the minutes of the sittings of the Committee<sup>224</sup>, and consists of the substance of the deliberations of the Committee together with their recommendations. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, the draft report is prepared on the pattern laid down in a direction issued by the Speaker on the subject<sup>225</sup>. Where a Committee has taken evidence, the fact is specifically mentioned in the report of the Committee<sup>226</sup>. In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, when any petitions, representations or memoranda on the Bill are received by the Committee, the report states the number of such documents, their particulars and the action taken by the Committee thereon<sup>227</sup>.

220. Rule 277(1). Proviso.

221. For instance, extension of time was granted by the Speaker on behalf of the House in the case of Joint Committee on the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1955, and Joint Committee on the Citizenship Bill, 1955.

222. See for example, L.S. Deb., 21-11-1955, c. 5.

223. See for example, L.S. Deb., 22-11-1955, cc. 181-82.

224. Dir. 68(2).

225. Dir. 84.

In the case of the Committee on Estimates and the Public Accounts Committee, the names of the witnesses who give evidence before the Committee appear in the minutes of the sittings of the Committee below the names of the members of the Committee.

In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, whenever evidence of associations, public bodies, individuals, etc., is taken by the Committee, the fact is mentioned in the report, and an appendix attached thereto gives the names of the associations, etc. and the dates on which they gave evidence before the Committee.

227. Dir. 83.

See, for example, reports of Joint Committees on the Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1955, the Indian Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1958, and the Arms Bill, 1958.

The draft report as prepared by the Secretariat is placed before the Chairperson of the Committee for approval<sup>228</sup>.

After the draft report has been approved by the Chairperson cyclostyled or proof copies thereof, together with any other documents connected therewith are, under the directions of the Chairperson, circulated to members of the Committee well in advance of the date fixed for the consideration of the draft report by the Committee<sup>229</sup>.

Consideration and Adoption of Draft Report by Committee

On the date fixed for the consideration<sup>230</sup> of the draft report by the Committee, the Chairman reads out the draft report paragraph by paragraph, putting the question to the Committee at the end of each paragraph, "That the paragraph do stand part of the report"<sup>231</sup>. A member objecting to any part of the report as not being in conformity with the decisions arrived at by the Committee may propose an amendment. The amendment, if accepted by the Committee, is incorporated in the report<sup>232</sup>.

After the report is adopted by the Committee, it is signed by the Chairperson on behalf of the Committee. If the Chairperson is absent or is not readily available, the Committee may choose another member of the Committee to sign the report on their behalf<sup>233</sup>. The Committee also fixes a date for the presentation of the report to the House by the Chairperson and, in his absence, by another member of the Committee.

228. Dir. 68(2). In the case of the Select or Joint Committees on Bills, draft report is first sent to the Draftsman and representatives of the Ministry attending the sittings of the Committee for factual verification and return—see this Chapter, under 'Select and Joint Committees on Bills'.

229. Dir. 69(1). For procedure in regard to circulation of draft report on a Bill examined by a Committee, see under 'Select or Joint Committees on Bills'. The Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract, at their sitting held on 15 April 1988, decided that in view of the sensitive nature of the subject under examination, the copies of the draft report need not be circulated to the members in advance. Instead, the report might be studied by the members in the Committee Room itself and one sitting of the Committee might be devoted for the purpose. Accordingly, copies of draft report were circulated to the members in the Committee Room at the sitting of the Committee held on 21 April 1988—Min. (JC on Bofors Contract), 15-4-1988 and 21-4-1988.

230. In the case of the Business Advisory Committee or the Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House, the reports of the Committee, after they are approved by the, Chairperson are presented to the House direct without being placed before the Committee.

Likewise, in the case of the Rules Committee, the reports of the Committee are, after approval by the Speaker, who is the ex-officio Chairperson of the Committee, laid on the Table in terms of Rule 331.

233. Rule 277(3) and Dir. 71.

The reasons for this provision are that on occasions it may not be possible for all the members of the Committee to be available to sign the report when it is finalised. Besides, issues in a Committee are decided by a majority of votes of members present and voting and, as such, the Chairperson is the most appropriate person to authenticate the decisions arrived at by the Committee and to report on their behalf.

Minutes/Notes of Dissent

Reports of Parliamentary Committees are based on decisions arrived at by a majority of members of the Committee present and voting<sup>234</sup>. Except in the case of Select or Joint Committees on Bills<sup>235</sup>, and Departmentally related Standing Committees minutes/notes of dissent are not appended to the reports of the Committees<sup>236</sup>, the reason being that the Committees, working as they do on behalf of the House, function as one entity and their decisions are as far as possible unanimous, irrespective of party affiliation of the members of the Committee. Where it is not possible to reach unanimity in a Committee, the majority decision prevails. If a minute of dissent is allowed, issues in a Committee are likely to be judged and decided upon on party lines<sup>237</sup>. Further, this may harden the attitude of individual members and there may be little incentive to compromise. The inclusion of majority and minority views in a report of the Committee would not only detract from the value of their recommendations but it would also weaken the impact of those recommendations on the executive which is charged with their implementation. On the other hand, in the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, the Bill referred to the Committee is again considered by the House along with the report of the Committee. The House considers all the views contained in the report and yet it is at liberty to arrive at its conclusions independently of the recommendations of the Committee.

234. Rule 261.

235. For details, regarding appending of the minutes of dissent to the report in the case of Select or Joint Committees on Bills, see this Chapter, under 'Select or Joint Committees on Bills'.

236. Dir. 68(3).

In the case of the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951), some members of the Committee, who were otherwise in agreement with the report of the Committee, were permitted by the Committee to append to the report 'notes' as distinguished from the minutes of dissent, dealing with the general question of standard of conduct of a member of Parliament—Report of the Committee on the Conduct of a Member (Mudgal Case, 1951).

Similarly, the Committee of Privileges, in the Deshpande Case, 1952, permitted some of its members to append to the report a note urging freedom from arrest of members under the Preventive Detention Act during sessions of the House and also declaring the District Magistrate, Delhi, to be guilty of sending misleading information to the Speaker—Report of the Committee of Privileges on the Deshpande Case, 1952.

In the case of the Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract, when the Committee were considering their draft report, a member desired to know whether he could append a note/minute of dissent to the report. The Chairperson observed that in view of the provisions of Dir. 68, no note or minute of dissent could be appended to the report. The member then addressed a letter to the Speaker, requesting that he might give direction to the Chairperson to 'record and include the note of dissent' by him or by any other members, if any. The Speaker, thereupon, directed that the note by the member might be appended to the report. The member was asked to give his note by 13.00 hours on 25 April 1988. The note in question was received in the Speaker's office at 10.55 hours on 25 April 1988. The Committee considered the said note at their sitting held on the same day and as per direction of the Speaker, decided to append the note received from the member after adoption of the report of the Committee as 'Post Script'. See Report of the Joint Committee to enquire into Bofors Contract.

237. Contrary views of members in the case of Financial Committees are recorded in the minutes of the Committees. See, for instance 86R (EC-2LS) on State Trading Corporation and 89R (EC-2LS) on the Ministry of Rehabilitation.

Making the Report Available to Government before Presentation to the House

Normally, no part of the report of a Committee can be divulged or shown to anyone who is not a member of the Committee until the report has been presented to the House or laid on the Table<sup>238</sup>. The Committee may, however, if it thinks fit, make available to the Government for factual verification any completed part of their report before presentation to the House<sup>239</sup>. While forwarding such reports to a Ministry/Department, it is enjoined on them to treat the contents of the reports as 'confidential'/'secret' until they are finalised and presented to the House<sup>240</sup>.

Presentation of Report to the House or the Speaker

When the report of a Committee is to be presented to the House, an entry is usually made in the List of Business for the relevant day. The report is presented to the House by the Chairperson of the Committee or, in his absence, by any other member of the Committee who is so authorised by the Committee and while presenting the report the member confines oneself to a brief statement of fact. There is no debate on the statement or the report at this stage<sup>241</sup>. In the case of Joint Committees, a copy of the report is also simultaneously laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha by a member of the Rajya Sabha on the Committee, so authorised by the Committee for the purpose.

If a Committee completes its report when the House is not in Session, it may authorise its Chairperson to present the report to the Speaker<sup>242</sup>. The Committee may, in appropriate cases, make a specific request to the Speaker that he/she may direct that matters of factual nature or patent errors be corrected in the report before it is printed, published or circulated and later presented to the House<sup>243</sup>. A report of the Committee which has been presented to the Speaker when the House is not in session is presented to the House during the next session at the first convenient opportunity

238. Rule 275 and Dir. 55.

239. Rule 278.

Advance copies of the reports of the Public Accounts Committee are not usually forwarded to Government. There have been two exceptions when advance copies of 6R and 8R (PAC-ILS) were forwarded to the Ministries concerned a day before their actual presentation to the House.

In the Committee on Estimates, advance copies of the draft report marked 'secret' are sent to the concerned Ministry or Department or Undertaking and also to the accredited Division of the Ministry of Finance for verification of factual details.

Draft reports of the Committee on Estimates which concern more than one Ministry are usually sent to the Ministry of Finance (Deptt. of Expenditure) which acts as a co-ordinating agency.

240. Rule 278.

242. Dir. 71A(1).

45R(EC-ILS) was adopted by the Estimates Committee on 22 December 1956. As the House was not in session then and it was not likely to assemble again till March 1957, the report was presented by the Chairperson to the Speaker who ordered its publication and circulation to members—Bn. (II). 5-2-1957, para 567.

243. Dir. 71A(4).

by the Chairperson or, in his absence, by another member of the Committee<sup>244</sup> who, while presenting the report, confines oneself to a brief statement to the effect that the report was presented to the Speaker when the House was not in session, and where the Speaker had given order for its printing, publication and circulation, that fact is also reported to the House<sup>245</sup>.

If, after presentation of the report to the Speaker, the Lok Sabha is dissolved before the report could be presented to the House, a copy of the report is laid on the Table of the new House by the Secretary-General. While laying the report on the Table, the Secretary-General makes a statement to the effect that the report of the Committee was presented to the Speaker of the preceding Lok Sabha before its dissolution. Where the Speaker had ordered that the report be printed, published and circulated, that fact is also reported to the House by the Secretary-General<sup>246</sup>. In the case of the Public Accounts and Public Undertakings Committees or a Joint Committee, a copy of the report is also simultaneously laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha.

Reports of Committees and the House

It is open to the House to discuss any of the reports presented to it but in practice it is guided by conventions in regard to the reports of some Committees, and by the Rules in respect of the other Committees. In relation to the action taken or not taken by the House on them, the reports of Parliamentary Committees may be divided into four broad categories:

- reports which are not discussed;
- reports which are always discussed;
- reports which are discussed and adopted; and
- reports which may or may not be discussed.

All these categories of reports are dealt below seriatim.

Reports which are not discussed by the House

By convention, the reports of the following Committees are not discussed:

Public Accounts Committee; Estimates Committee; Committee on Public Undertakings; Committee on Subordinate Legislation; Committee on Government Assurances; Committee on Petitions; Committee on Papers Laid on the Table; Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes; Committee on Empowerment of Women and Departmentally Related Standing Committees.

A discussion may be allowed to be raised in the House in respect of a report of these Committees only if there is a serious disagreement between a Committee and the Government on a specific issue. Such a situation has arisen only once since 1947<sup>247</sup>.

Reports which are Discussed by the House

The reports of Select or Joint Committees on Bills are not formally adopted but they are always discussed when the Bills as reported by them are considered.

After the presentation of the final report of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, the member in-charge moves that the Bill as reported by the Committee be taken into consideration<sup>248</sup>. The debate on such a motion is confined to a consideration of the report of the Committee and the matters referred to in that report or of any alternative suggestions consistent with the principle of the Bill<sup>249</sup>.

Reports which are Discussed and Adopted by the House

Reports of the Business Advisory Committee and the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions fall under this category. In the case of these reports<sup>250</sup>, motions are moved that the House agrees, or agrees with amendments, or disagrees with them and the recommendations contained in them can be implemented only after the reports are adopted by the House. Amendments may be moved to such a motion that the reports may be referred back to the Committee without limitation or with reference to any particular matter. The time allotted for discussion on such motions is not more than half an hour.

Reports which may or may not be Discussed by the House

Under this category fall the reports of the Committee of Privileges, Rules Committee and the Committee on Absence of Members. Motions for consideration of these reports are moved only in certain cases<sup>251</sup>. As regards the ad hoc Committees which present their reports to the Speaker or the House, it is open to the House to discuss them or not<sup>252</sup>. The reports of Committees which are presented to the Speaker can be discussed only if the Speaker has caused such reports to be laid on the Table.

Disagreement between a Committee and the Government

The recommendations of a Parliamentary Committee are normally accepted and implemented by the Government. If in regard to any recommendation the Government hold a view different from that of the Committee, the Government have to apprise the Committee of the reasons that might have weighed with them in not accepting or implementing the recommendation. The matter is considered by the Committee and a further report, if deemed necessary, may be presented to the House.

In the case of the Fourth Report of the Public Accounts Committee, 1952-53, the Government deviated from this procedure and laid a statement on the Table on 11 August 1953, without placing the views before the Committee in the first instance. The Committee sought the Speaker's guidance in the matter, who directed that a circular should be sent to all the Ministries laying down that in those cases where Government were not in a position to implement a recommendation made by a Committee and the Government had reasons to disagree with the recommendation of the Committee, the Ministry concerned should, in consonance with the well-established procedure, place its views before the Committee who may, if it thinks fit, present a further report to the House after considering the views of the Government in the matter.

Where a difference of opinion between the Committee and the Government remains unresolved, the case is referred to the Speaker for guidance.

Printing and Publication of Reports

The report of a Committee, together with the connected documents, if any, is printed either before or after its presentation to the House or the Speaker as may be convenient<sup>253</sup>. Normally, the report of a Committee is printed before it is presented to the House. Where, however, time is too short to get a report printed, the report may be presented to the House in cyclostyled or typed form<sup>254</sup>. The report is printed as soon as possible thereafter. Until a report is presented to the House, it is treated as confidential<sup>255</sup>. It becomes a public document only after its presentation to the House<sup>256</sup>.

The report of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, including notes or minutes of dissent, if any, and the Bill as reported by the Committee, are also published in the Gazette after presentation to the House for information of the public<sup>257</sup>. Where the report of a Committee has been presented to the Speaker when the House is not in session, the Speaker may, when so requested, order the printing, publication or circulation of the report<sup>258</sup>. Where a report is so published or circulated under orders of the Speaker, that fact is notified in the Bulletin for information of members<sup>259</sup>.

254. In the case of Select or Joint Committees on Bills, the general practice is to present the report of the Committee to the House in cyclostyled or typed form together with the Bill as reported by the Committee and to print the report as soon as possible after its presentation to the House.

Circulation of Reports

As soon as possible after the presentation of the report to the House, copies thereof are circulated to members of the Lok Sabha, Ministries/Departments of the Government of India and such other persons or authorities as may be determined from time to time<sup>260</sup>. Copies of the report are also supplied to press correspondents immediately after the presentation of the report to the House and made available to the public at the Sales Counter of the Secretariat and through other authorised selling agencies all over the country.

In the case of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, copies of the report along with the printed copies of the Bill as reported by the Committee and copies of reports of other Joint Committees are also sent to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat for circulation to members of the Rajya Sabha.

If the report of a Committee has been presented to the House in cyclostyled or typed form, a few copies of the report are placed in the Library immediately after the presentation of the report to the House for reference by members. Printed copies of such a report are circulated to members and others concerned as and when they are available. In the case of a report which is presented to the Speaker when the House is not in session and which has been printed and circulated under orders of the Speaker prior to its presentation to the House, the report is released to the press only after a week from the date of despatch of copies to members<sup>261</sup>.

Effect of Prorogation on Business Pending before Committees

Any business pending before a Committee does not lapse by reason only of the prorogation of the House and the Committee continues to function notwithstanding such prorogation<sup>262</sup>. Even in the old Central Legislature, although there was no specific provision to that effect in the Standing Orders, in actual practice every pending business before the Committees survived prorogation of the Assembly. Bills pending in Parliament do not lapse consequent on prorogation of the Houses<sup>263</sup>. On a point raised in the House, it was held by the Speaker that Bills pending in Parliament, including those in the Committee stage, could be examined, considered and reported upon by the Committee even when the House itself was not sitting or when it had been prorogued<sup>264</sup>.

260. Rule 305 and Dir. 72(3).

261. Dir. 73.

67R and 68R (EC-ILS) were presented to the Speaker on 29 March 1957, by which time the Lok Sabha had adjourned sine die. These reports were printed and circulated to members of the Lok Sabha with the approval of the Speaker under Rule 280. The reports were released to the press one week after their circulation to members.

The intention behind the practice is that a report should be made available to others only after the members have received their copies.

262. Rule 284.

264. L.S. Deb., 26-7-1956, cc. 978-86.

In 1956, a question arose whether a Parliamentary Committee, not connected with the consideration of a Bill, could function during the inter-session period, notwithstanding the fact that the parent body, viz, the Lok Sabha itself had been prorogued. The Attorney-General, to whom the matter was referred for opinion, expressed the following view:

Committees not connected with Bills can function during the inter-session period if the Rules of Procedure so provide. There would seem to be nothing incongruous in the Committees functioning when, the parent body is unable to function. The parent body would by its procedural rules authorise the Committees to function so that the power and the authority of the Committees to function will be derived from the parent body.<sup>265</sup>

The Rules Committee (First Lok Sabha) concurred with the above opinion and with a view to putting the matter beyond any doubt and also confirming the established practice—which had been in existence since the inception of the old Central Legislative Assembly—recommended<sup>266</sup> a new rule which specifically provided that any business pending before a Committee did not lapse by reason only of the prorogation of the House and that the Committee continued to function despite such prorogation<sup>267</sup>.

The drastic consequences commonly associated with the prorogation in the United Kingdom have attended in India not on prorogation but only upon dissolution of the Lok Sabha. In the United Kingdom, the effect of prorogation and dissolution of Parliament on pending business is practically the same. In India, right from the beginning of the old Central Legislature, a distinction has been made between prorogation and dissolution in so far as their effect upon pending business is concerned. Prorogation has always been understood as not constituting an interruption in continuity of the life of the House and its Committees whereas dissolution has been taken as marking the end of the House and the Committees thereof.

Unfinished Work of Committees

When a Committee is unable to complete its work before the expiration of its term or before the dissolution of the Lok Sabha, it reports that fact to the House<sup>268</sup>. In such cases, any preliminary report, memorandum or note that may have been prepared by the Committee or any evidence that may have been taken by it is made available to the succeeding Committee<sup>269</sup>. The work of the Committee on Estimates, being of a continuous nature, the general practice has been that the work left unfinished at the end of the term of a Committee is taken up for examination by the succeeding Committee from the stage where it was left<sup>270</sup>. Likewise, scrutiny of replies or statements of action taken by the Ministries or Departments of the Government of India on the reports of the Committees is also of a continuous nature. Any unfinished part of such scrutiny consequent on the expiry of the term of a Committee or on the dissolution of the Lok Sabha is taken up by the succeeding Committee from the stage where it was left by the previous Committee<sup>271</sup>. Similarly, all assurances, promises, undertakings which remain unimplemented at the expiry of the term of the Committee on Government Assurances are pursued by the succeeding Committee which report upon their implementation to the House. In respect of the assurances, promises or undertakings which remain unimplemented at the time of the dissolution of the Lok Sabha, the general practice followed by the Committee on Government Assurances is to select such of the assurances, etc. as are of a substantial character and of considerable public importance and to incorporate them in their report to the House with a specific recommendation to the effect that those assurances, promises and undertakings might be implemented by the Government<sup>272</sup>. The implementation of such assurances, etc. is then watched by the succeeding Committee of the new House.

Having described broadly the salient features of Parliamentary Committees in general, the rest of this chapter briefly deals with the composition, functions and working of each Committee of the Lok Sabha and of the twenty-four Departmentally Related Standing Committees.

B. INDIVIDUAL COMMITTEES

Business Advisory Committee

The Business Advisory Committee consists of the Speaker and not more than fourteen other members nominated by him<sup>273</sup>. The Speaker is the ex-officio Chairperson of the Committee.

The Committee is nominated at the commencement of a new House after a General Election and thereafter, from time to time. No specific term of its office is laid down in the Rules but like all other Parliamentary Committees, it holds office until a new Committee is nominated<sup>274</sup>. Casual vacancies are filled by nomination of new members for the unexpired term of the Committee.

The need to have a Committee of the House entrusted with the task of allocating time to various Government legislative and other business was greatly felt by Speaker Mavalankar. In his letter of 28 March 1951 to the Leader of the House, he observed that in the absence of any procedure regarding allocation of time in respect of various items of business, excepting financial matters, the Speaker was always placed in a delicate position in regard to curtailment of debate and, in particular, in accepting a closure motion, if moved. He did not approve of the British procedure<sup>275</sup> of an 272. See, for example, 4R (CGA-1LS) and 2R (CGA-2LS).

273. Rule 287.

274. Rule 256.

275. When parliamentary time is not sufficient to get through legislation, the procedure in England is that an 'allocation of time' motion in regard to a number of Bills specified in the motion is placed before the House for discussion and after it has been adopted by the House, the Speaker is empowered to put the necessary questions to dispose of each Bill within the allotted time.

‘allocation of time’ motion as it might prove to be cumbrous and much time might be spent over the motion itself. The Speaker said that he would prefer to entrust the duties connected with ‘allocation of time’ to a steering Committee of the House. The Leader of the House agreed to the suggestion, and rules were accordingly framed to set up the Committee<sup>276</sup>.

In view of the limited membership of the Committee and a large number of Opposition Groups in the House, it is not possible for the Speaker to nominate members from each and every Group. In order to make Business Advisory Committee as broad based as possible so that its recommendations could be acceptable to all sections of the House, it has been the practice to invite, as special invitees to its sittings, leaders/representatives of parties having strength of five members and above which are not represented on the Committee. The Deputy Speaker, if not nominated on the Committee, may be invited to attend its sittings as a special invitee under specific orders of the Speaker. The members so invited take part in the deliberations of the Committee without the right to vote, and they are also not counted for the purpose of quorum. A member of the Committee, on appointment as Minister, normally resigns from the Committee although there is no bar to his continuance as member of the Committee. The Minister of Parliamentary Affairs is always nominated to the Committee as it is only through him that the views of the Leader of the House on a particular subject are known to the Committee.

Functions

The function of the Committee is to recommend time for the discussion of various stages of Government Bills and other business<sup>277</sup> which the Speaker, in consultation with the Leader of the House, may direct to be referred to the Committee<sup>278</sup>. However, in practice, the Committee also recommends allocation of time for discussion of financial business namely, general discussion on the Budget, Demands for Grants in respect of various Ministries, Finance Bill and discussion on the Motion of Thanks on the Address by the President, though the power to allot time to such items is vested in the Speaker in consultation with the Leader of the House. In appropriate cases, the Committee may recommend that a Bill should be referred to a Select or Joint Committee instead of being taken up into consideration and passed straightaway<sup>279</sup>.

All proposals for late sittings of the House, dispensing with the question hour or lunch hour, extension of sittings of the House beyond normal hours of adjournment and fixing of additional sittings/cancellation of sittings are also generally placed before the Committee for its recommendation. Besides, meetings of the Committee are also utilized by members to suggest to the Speaker to allot time for discussion on a 'No-Day-Yet-Named-Motion' or to admit a 'Short Duration Discussion' given notice by them or by other members of their party. The decision on all such suggestions is, however, within the exclusive domain of the Speaker.

The priority in respect of Government business is determined by the Government<sup>280</sup>. In certain cases, the Committee has, however, recommended priority to individual items of business<sup>281</sup> or suggested the hour and date on which an item of business be taken up<sup>282</sup> or recommended postponement of certain items of business if sufficient time was not available during the session for disposal of business placed before the Committee for allocation of time.

The Committee has at times suo motu recommended to the Government to bring forward a particular subject for discussion in the House and also recommended allocation of time for such discussion<sup>283</sup>.

At times, the Committee may even recommend that any item of business may be disposed of by the House without discussion<sup>284</sup>. The Committee may also re-examine the allocation of time already approved by the House in respect of a Bill in the light of subsequent developments and recommend that the time be increased<sup>285</sup> or reduced<sup>286</sup>.

The Committee may also reconsider<sup>287</sup> the time allotted for discussion and voting on Demands for Grants (General) to various Ministries and Departments to accommodate the views expressed by members on the floor of the House.

Where the subject matter of two or more items of business so warrants, the Committee recommends combined discussion of those items in the House<sup>288</sup>.

On occasions, the Committee has considered certain procedural matters<sup>289</sup> or certain special matters which do not lie within the scope of its normal duties<sup>290</sup>.

Method of Working

A few days before the commencement of each session, the Leader of the House furnishes through the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs a programme of Government legislative and other business. On receipt of a request from the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs, the Speaker fixes the date and time for sitting of the Committee and a notice of the sitting is accordingly issued to all members and special invitees. The Committee allocates time to such government Bills, financial business or other items of Government Business as might be suggested by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs for their particular sitting's agenda.

Where in respect of an item of business the presence of the Minister concerned is felt necessary, he is also invited to attend the sitting<sup>291</sup>.

If at any sitting the requisite quorum is not made, the Speaker may informally take the opinion of the members present as to the allocation of time to the various items of business listed in the notice, and in such a case the Committee does not present any report to the House but the Speaker informs the House of the consensus of the members present at that sitting and allots time to various items after taking the sense of the House<sup>292</sup>.

Formally the Committee does not recommend allocation of time to Bills, copies of which have not been circulated to members. In certain cases, copies of a Bill may be made available to members of the Committee but they are required to keep its contents confidential till its introduction<sup>293</sup>.

Like other Parliamentary Committees, the Committee may work through its Sub-Committees when a matter is required to be considered in detail.

289. For instance, the Committee has recommended procedure for—

Regulating discussion in the House on Cut Motions, publication of Minutes of Dissent to the Reports of the Select Committees, disposal of amendments to the Estate Duty Bill—Bn. (II), 17-4-1953, p. 603.

290. On 3 September 1965, in view of Pakistan's aggression, the Committee suggested that the Ministry of Defence should make available to members every day a news bulletin giving latest position other than what appeared in the newspapers of the day on the situation in Jammu and Kashmir. This was done by the Ministry and copies of these bulletins were kept in the Parliamentary Notice Office for information of members.

291. For instance, on 6 August 1962, the Minister and Deputy Minister of Railways also attended the sitting of the Committee when the question of providing a discussion on the railway accidents was considered by it.

292. L.S. Deb., 4-3-1961, cc. 2936-37.

293. However, in an exceptional case, allocation of time may be recommended before copies of the Bill are circulated. For instance, on 19 November 1962, the Committee recommended allocation of time to the Delhi Motor Vehicles Taxation Bill and the Manipur Sales of Motor Spirits and Lubricants Taxation Bill, copies of which had not been circulated to members. Time is also allotted to a Bill, which is under consideration of the other House (Rajya Sabha) and is likely to be taken up in Lok Sabha, 43R(BAC-14LS), 44R(BAC-14LS), 49R(BAC-14LS).

From 1962 till the end of the Fourth Lok Sabha, the Speaker used to appoint a Sub-Committee of the Business Advisory Committee to examine the No-Day-Yet-Named Motions. The function of the Sub-Committee was to select and recommend to the Government as to which of the admitted motions tabled by the private members might be put down for discussion in the House. Since 1971, however, the practice has been discontinued.

On certain occasions, ad hoc Sub-Committees have also been appointed—for example, to prepare a detailed time-table for consideration of clauses of a Bill, to suggest allocation of time to various Bills and other business to be taken up during the session after coming to a decision as regards the importance, etc. of various Bills, to suggest allocation of time to supplementary or excess Demands for Grants, to suggest allocation of time for discussion of Five Year Plan, and to formulate points on which debate should take place in respect of a subject put down for discussion (such as ‘Economic Policy of Government’).

The report of a Sub-Committee is normally considered by the whole Committee or as an alternative it is circulated to members of the whole Committee and their views are invited by a specified hour and date. If no comments are received within that time, the report is taken as approved by the whole Committee. After approval of the Speaker, either the report is presented to the House<sup>294</sup> or the recommendations of the Committee are published in the Bulletin<sup>295</sup>. In some cases, the report of the Sub-Committee has been submitted direct to the Speaker and, on approval by him, published in the Bulletin<sup>296</sup>. Where considered appropriate, the Speaker may make an announcement in the House on the recommendations of the Sub-Committee<sup>297</sup> or direct that the recommendations be forwarded to the concerned Minister for necessary action<sup>298</sup>.

Report and Minutes

The report of the Committee, after it is approved by the Speaker or the member who presided at the sitting of the Committee, is presented to the House without being placed before the Committee.

When the Speaker presides over a sitting, the report is signed by him<sup>299</sup> but is presented to the House normally by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs if he is a

In the absence of the Speaker from a particular sitting, the Deputy Speaker presides over the sitting and the report is signed by him 'for Chairperson' if he is a member of the Committee. In case the Deputy Speaker is not a member of the Committee, he may preside over the sitting but the report is signed<sup>301</sup> 'for Chairperson'. by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs or some other member of the Committee who attended the sitting<sup>302</sup>.

When the office of the Speaker falls vacant due to resignation, death or otherwise, the duties of the office of the Speaker are performed by the Deputy Speaker under article 95(1) of the Constitution till the election of the new Speaker. In such an event, the Deputy Speaker, if not a member of the Business Advisory Committee, may preside over the sitting of the Committee and sign<sup>303</sup> the report as "Chairperson (Ex-Officio)".

The report is usually presented on the same day on which the sitting of the Committee is held. An entry regarding presentation of the report is made in the List of Business only when the report is to be presented on the following day.

After a report of the Committee has been presented to the House, a motion that the House do agree with the report of the Committee is entered<sup>304</sup> in the List of Business on the following day in the names of two members of the Committee<sup>305</sup>. If the report deals with the matters other than the allocation of time to Government Business, the motion for adoption of the report may be included in the List of Business in the name of the Deputy Speaker, if he/she is a member of the Committee<sup>306</sup>.

Where it is not found possible to present a report on the same day on which the Committee held its sitting but its adoption is considered necessary by the House before the business in respect of which allocation of time recommended in the report is taken up, copies of the report are circulated to members in advance of its presentation to the House and the report is presented to the House on the following day and immediately thereafter the motion for adoption of the report is moved<sup>307</sup>. Where the circumstances so warrant, the report of the Committee may be presented and adopted on the same day on which a sitting of the Committee is held. In such a case the member, while presenting the report, reads out the text to the House and copies of the report are circulated to members after its adoption<sup>308</sup>.

Where there is no time to convene a sitting of the Committee to consider allocation of time to Government business, the Speaker may take the sense of the House and allot time when the item listed in the agenda is reached<sup>309</sup>.

In an urgent case, the recommendations of the Committee may be announced in the House by the Speaker and the sense of the House taken in regard thereto<sup>310</sup>. The motion that the House do agree with the report of the Committee is normally adopted by the House unanimously. It is, however, open to members to suggest variation in the time recommended in respect of the various items of business or to suggest modifications to any other recommendation of the Committee by tabling suitable amendments<sup>311</sup> to the motion. An amendment can also be moved that the report be referred back to the Committee either without limitation or with reference to a particular matter<sup>312</sup>, or the House may otherwise agree to refer it back<sup>313</sup>.

In accordance with an established convention, amendments are generally not moved to the motion although in rare cases amendments thereto have been moved and pressed to the vote of the House<sup>314</sup>.

Not more than half an hour is allotted for the discussion on the motion and no member can speak for more than five minutes on such a motion<sup>315</sup>.

307. The Third Report (BAC-2LS) was circulated to members on 15 July 1957, the day on which the sitting of the Committee was held. The report was presented to and adopted by the House on 16 July 1957—L.S. Deb., 16-7-1957, cc. 3662-63.

310. Ibid., 26-3-1957. Thereafter, the allocation of time order was published in the Bn. (II), 26-3-1957, para 4111.

311. On 4 May 1973 when a member gave notice of a substitute motion to the motion regarding adoption of 29 Report (BAC-5LS) seeking to include three Short Duration Discussions in the Report for being taken up during the next week, the notice was disallowed by the Speaker and the member informed. When the member sought to raise the matter in the House, the Speaker ruled that amendment could be moved to change allocation of time recommended by Committee but new items of business could not be added by amendments, and that suggestions for adding new items could be made when the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs made statement regarding business for the following week—see also L.S. Deb., 17-12-1981, cc. 319-23.

On 25 April 2013, a member gave notice under Rule 290 to include two more items for discussion when the 46 R(BAC=15 LS) was listed for representation to the House on 25 April 2013. The notice was disallowed by the Speaker and the member was informed since the Manual on Rule 290 allows amendment to be moved only for change in allocation of items and not for addition of new items of business, that too only on the motion for adoption of the Report.

After the report is agreed to by the House, the allocation of time in respect of Bills and other business as approved by the House takes effect as if it were an order of the House and is notified in the Bulletin<sup>316</sup>. Allocation of time is, however, not published in the Bulletin regarding those items of business which have already been disposed of by the House<sup>317</sup>. If a member, after the allocation of time has been published in the Bulletin, makes the representation for increasing the time allotted to a particular item of the business or tables a motion to that effect before that item is taken up in the House, the matter may be placed before the Committee for reconsideration.

At the appointed hour, in accordance with the allocation of time order for completion of a particular stage of a Bill or other business, the Speaker has the power to put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of all the outstanding matters in connection with that stage of the Bill or other business<sup>318</sup>. This power is, however, sparingly exercised by the Speaker.

No variation in the allocation of time order is made except on a motion made with the consent of the Speaker and accepted by the House<sup>319</sup>. Where the House, while adopting the report, keeps open the question of allotment of time in respect of a particular Bill, the time in respect of that Bill is varied as the House may decide.

The Speaker is, however, authorised, after taking the sense of the House, to increase the time, not exceeding one hour, without any motion being moved<sup>320</sup>. The time may also be extended by the Speaker by more than one hour without any motion being moved if Government have no objection to the extension of time<sup>321</sup> or the House agrees to sit late beyond its normal hours of sitting<sup>322</sup>.

The minutes of the Committee are treated as confidential and are neither laid on the Table nor circulated to members of the Committee unlike the practice followed

Copy of the minutes is also sent to the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs.

Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions

In order to examine Bills seeking to amend the Constitution of India before their introduction in the House, to categorise all Bills introduced by private members and to recommend time for discussion of such Bills or resolutions tabled by private members, there is a Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions. For the purpose of determining the urgency and importance of these Bills and before reporting their findings to the House, the members in-charge of the Bills are asked in writing to send their views, if any, regarding classification of their Bills for the consideration of the Committee, and where considered necessary, the representatives of the Ministries concerned are invited to the sittings of the Committee to present their views on the provisions of the Bill in question. The Committee is thus in a better position to assess the relative importance of various Bills and recommend the time that should be allotted for them.

The Committee consists of not more than fifteen members nominated by the Speaker<sup>325</sup>. In view of the importance of the Committee, the Deputy Speaker is invariably included as a member thereof and as far as possible every section of opinion in the House is represented therein.

On 13 March 1953, a suggestion was made in the Lok Sabha that a Standing Committee on Private Members' Bills might be constituted to examine all Bills tabled by private members and to categorise them according to their relative importance<sup>326</sup>. In pursuance of the recommendations of the Rules Committee as adopted by the House, the Committee on Private Members' Bills was constituted for the first time on 1 December 1953, with an initial membership of 10. On 13 May 1954, the membership was increased from 10 to 15 and the functions were enlarged so as to cover private members' resolutions also within its ambit<sup>327</sup>. The Committee was accordingly designated as the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions<sup>328</sup>.

The term of the Committee is one year, usually beginning on 1 June of every year and ending on 31 May of the following year.

Functions

The functions of the Committee are: to examine and classify all private members' Bills according to their nature, urgency and importance after they have been introduced and before they are taken up for consideration in the House; to recommend allotment of time to private members' Bills and resolutions; to examine private members' Bills seeking to amend the Constitution before their introduction in the House; to examine a private member's Bill which is opposed in the House on the ground that the Bill initiates legislation outside the legislative competence of the House; and to perform such other functions in respect of private members' Bills and Resolutions as may be assigned to it by the Speaker from time to time<sup>329</sup>. A brief description of some of the major functions of the Committee is given in the following paragraphs.

Categorisation of Bills

Prior to December 1953, i.e., before the appointment of the Committee, private members' Bills after introduction were put down for consideration and passing strictly in accordance with the order of priority gained by them at the ballot held for the purpose. In this process, a comparatively less important Bill which gained priority at the ballot sometimes occupied all the private members' time blocking the more important Bills. In order to prevent such contingencies, it was considered necessary that one of the functions of the Committee should be to examine all Bills at the initial stage and to categorise them on certain principles.

The Bills are classified according to their nature, urgency and importance into two categories, namely, Category 'A' and Category 'B'<sup>330</sup>.

At their sitting held on 6 March 1954, the Committee laid down the following principles which are taken into consideration while classifying private members' Bills<sup>331</sup>:

that in the light of public opinion there is a general necessity and demand for the measure proposed; that the Bill seeks to provide for a lacuna or to remedy a defect in an existing legislation; that it is not opposed to the Directive Principles of State Policy as defined in the Constitution or to the secular nature of the State, or to public policy and opinion; that there is already a Bill in the legislative programme due for consideration by the House; that there is a possibility of a comprehensive measure being introduced by Government at a later date; and that the Bill proposed is of such importance and urgency that irrespective of a more comprehensive Bill being introduced later, its consideration earlier will at least bring about a statement of Government policy or help in settling an important issue.

330. Rule 294(1)(b).

The general principles followed in categorising a Bill under category 'A' are its public importance and urgency. Those categorised as 'B' contain a lesser element of urgency or importance.

A Bill placed in category 'B' may be re-categorised in any subsequent session if the Committee, on an application made by the member incharge of the Bill, is satisfied that its upgrading has now become necessary<sup>332</sup>.

The question of re-categorisation of a Bill may be referred back to the Committee for reconsideration by moving an amendment to the motion for adoption of the relevant Report of the Committee<sup>333</sup>. Once the Committee has considered and rejected the request for re-categorisation and the relevant report is adopted by the House, subsequent request from the member during the session for re-categorisation of the Bill is not entertained by the Committee<sup>334</sup>.

Examination of Bills Seeking to Amend the Constitution

A private member is free to introduce any Bill excepting one to amend the Constitution. Every Bill seeking to amend the Constitution, notice of which has been given by a private member, is examined by the Committee and only when the Committee recommends introduction thereof that a motion for leave to introduce the Bill is included in the List of Business<sup>335</sup>.

In the case of Bills seeking to amend the Constitution, the following principles were recommended by the Committee and approved by the House on 26 February 1954<sup>336</sup>:

332. 40R (CPB-1LS); L.S. Deb., 2-12-1965, c. 1092.

Instances of Bills which on reconsideration were reclassified from category 'B' to category 'A':

- (i) The Fixation and Regulation of Wages of Hard Coke Oven and Ceramic Industries Employees Bill, 1985 [11R(CPB-8LS)].
- (ii) The Public and Private Schools (Abolition) Bill, 1985 [40R(CPB-SLS)].
- (iii) The Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1986 (Amendment of section 2, etc.) [26R(CPB-8LS)].
- (iv) The Constitution (Amendment) Bill, 1991 (Amendment of article 58, etc.) by (Pandit) Vishwanathi Sharma [11R(CPB-10LS)].
- (v) The High Court at Bombay (Establishment of a Permanent Bench at Colliapur) Bill, 1993 by Udaysingrao Gaikwad [26R(CPB-10LS)].
- (vi) The Lotteries (Prohibition) Bill, 1996 by Vijay Goel [6R(CPB-11LS)].
- (vii) The High Court at Allahabad (Establishment of a Permanent Bench at Meerut) Bill, 1996 by Amar Pal Singh [11R(CPB-11LS)].

333. See 65R, 67R and 68R (CPB-4LS) re. the Categorisation of Bihar Legislative Council (Abolition) Bill.

334. J.B. Kripalani's the Conferment of Decoration (Abolition) Bill, 49R and 59R (CPB-4LS).

335. Rule 294.

336. IR (CPB-1LS).

Such Bills should be brought forward only when it is found that the interpretation of the various articles has not been in accordance with the intention behind these articles or when certain glaring inconsistencies have come to light. Amendments of this nature should normally be brought forward by the Government.

Some time should elapse before any such amendment is brought forward so that a proper assessment of the working of the Constitution can be made.

Notices of Bills from private members should be examined in the background of the proposals which the Government may be considering at the time so that consolidated proposals are brought forward.

A private member's Bill raising an issue of far-reaching importance and public interest should be allowed to be introduced. In determining the importance of the matter raised in the Bill, it should be seen if there are parallel provisions in the Constitution to satisfy the current ideas and public demand at the time.

Allocation of Time to Bills and Resolutions

One of the important functions of the Committee is to recommend the allocation of time to all private members' Bills and Resolutions; in the case of Bills, this is done after their introduction in the House and in the case of resolutions after notices tabled by members gaining priority in the ballot have been admitted. The Committee usually recommends two hours time for consideration and subsequent stages of a Bill as also for discussion of a resolution.

After the adoption of the report of the Committee by the House, the allocation of time in respect of Bills and resolutions takes effect as if it were an order of the House<sup>337</sup>. The time allotted for the discussion of a Bill or a resolution can thereafter be extended<sup>338</sup> or reduced<sup>339</sup>, on a motion moved by a member and adopted by the House. However, as per present practice, the time is extended just by taking the sense of the House and without formal motion being moved in the House for that purpose<sup>340</sup>.

When a point of order relating to a particular business before the House is raised, the time taken in the disposal of that point of order is also counted towards the total time allotted for that business<sup>341</sup>.

Procedure for Convening Sitzings

Three weeks before the commencement of each session, a tentative programme of the sittings of the Committee is prepared in such a way that—there is at least one day in between the date of the sitting of the Committee and the date on which the report of the Committee is to be presented to the House; and there is at least one day in between the date of presentation of the report and the date on which the motion for adoption of the report by the House is to be moved.

The motion for adoption of the report is invariably put down as the first item in the agenda on the first available day allotted to private members' business.

The tentative programme of the sittings of the Committee is approved by the Chairperson.

Members concerned with a Bill may be invited to attend the sittings of the Committee to present their views in regard to allocation of time to Bills as also the categorisation of Bills<sup>342</sup>. Where so desired by the Chairman or the Committee, representatives of the Ministries concerned may also be invited to attend a sitting to present their views<sup>343</sup>.

However, the practice in vogue since February 1979 is that members sponsoring the Bills are individually addressed and requested to send their views in writing about classification of their Bills for consideration of the Committee. Where considered necessary, the Committee invites the members-in-charge to appear before them to present their views in regard to their Bills. Where so desired by the Chairperson or the Committee, the opinion of the Ministry of Law and Justice is obtained on a Bill for consideration of the Committee.

As regards resolutions, the members whose resolutions are being included in the List of Business are not invited to attend the sitting of the Committee to present their views regarding allocation of time to their resolutions unless a specific request is made in this regard by the member and agreed to by the Committee or where the Committee itself consider it necessary or desirable to call him.

Copies of the agenda are made available to members sufficiently in advance of the date of sitting<sup>344</sup>.

Verbatim record of proceedings is not kept except when an important issue is before the Committee. The recommendations of the Committee are contained in their reports which are presented to the House by the Chairperson or in absence of Chairperson by any member of the Committee<sup>345</sup>.

343. The practice in the past (up to the Seventh Session of the Second Lok Sabha) was to invite representatives of the Ministries concerned, as a rule, to attend the sittings of the Committee.

Minutes

The decisions of the Committee are recorded in the minutes which are prepared by the Secretariat and approved by the Chairperson or the member who presided at the sitting of the Committee<sup>346</sup>.

An authenticated copy of the minutes of the sittings held during a session is laid on the Table during the last week of the session. An entry regarding this is included in the List of Business for the day on which the minutes are to be laid on the Table<sup>347</sup>. In case the members in whose names the entry has been included in the list are not present, the minutes are laid by any other member of the Committee present in the House.

Report

The report of the Committee is approved by the Chairperson and an entry in respect of the motion for presentation of the report is included in the List of Business. Usually the report is presented to the House a day after the sitting of the Committee but in special circumstances it may be presented on the same day when the sitting is held<sup>348</sup>.

The report is circulated to all the members on the day on which the report is presented. The report is adopted in the House on the day allotted for private members' business on a motion moved by the Chairperson or any other member so authorised by the Chairperson that the House do agree with the report. However, in certain exigencies, the report may be presented and adopted on the same day<sup>349</sup>. The motion for adoption is taken up as the first item before the commencement of private members' business at that sitting. On adoption of the motion, the classification of Bills and allocation of time to Bills and Resolutions become an order of the House.

346. Dirs. 66(1), 66(2) and 67. The past practice of circulating the minutes of each sitting to members of the Committee has now been discontinued.

347. Dir. 67.

348. During the Ninth Session of the Second Lok Sabha, a sitting of the Committee scheduled to be held on 17 November 1959, could not be held on that day for want of quorum. Consequently, the next day, i.e. 18 November 1959, was fixed in lieu thereof. But on account of the death of a sitting member of the House on that day, the sitting was cancelled and was held instead on 19 November 1959, and the report of the Committee was presented to the House on the same day—[51R (CPB-2LS)].

349. A Sitting of the Committee was held on 2 January 1991. Eleventh Report (9LS) relating to that sitting was to be presented to House on 3 January 1991. Due to several members trying to raise matter regarding alleged threat of arrest to Speaker by a Union Minister, House was adjourned and report could not be presented on that day. Report was, therefore, presented to House on 4 January, 1991 after Question Hour and adopted just before private Members' business was taken up on that day. Copies of report were distributed to members through Publications Counter after its presentation on 4 January 1991 and also circulated on same night alongwith other parliamentary papers through Distribution Branch. [L.S. Deb. 4-1-1991]

The discussion on the motion for adoption of the report is not to exceed half an hour and no member can speak for more than five minutes on such a motion<sup>350</sup>.

Amendments may also be moved that the report be referred back to the Committee either without limitation or with reference to any particular matter<sup>351</sup>. If the allocation of time recommended in respect of a Bill or a resolution is desired to be varied, it is open to a member to move an amendment to the relevant report of the Committee containing the recommendations regarding allocation of time when the motion for its adoption is taken up in the House.

Select or Joint Committees on Bills

On a motion moved in and adopted by the House, Bills are from time to time referred to Select Committees composed of members specifically named in the motion. Bills may likewise be referred to Joint Committees, with the concurrence of the Rajya Sabha, composed of members of both the Houses. Such Select or Joint Committees are ad hoc Committees which are appointed for consideration of particular Bills referred to them.

Select or Joint Committees on Bills are appointed at the first stage of the second reading of a Bill in the House. At this stage, the member in-charge of the Bill may himself move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee of the House or to a Joint Committee of the Houses with the concurrence of the Rajya Sabha. If the motion moved by the member in-charge is that the Bill be taken into consideration, any other member may move an amendment for the reference of the Bill to a Select or Joint Committee<sup>352</sup>. When the motion or amendment, as the case may be, is adopted, the Bill stands referred to a Select Committee, and in case the Bill is to be referred to a Joint Committee, the motion or amendment, as adopted, is transmitted to the Rajya Sabha for their concurrence and appointment of members of that House on the Committee.

However, in the case of constituting the Joint Committee on the Constitution (Eighty-first Amendment) Bill, 1996 (Insertion of new articles 330A and 332A), the House, at its sitting held on 13 September 1996, during the discussion on the motion for consideration of the Constitution (Eighty-first Amendment) Bill, 1996 (Insertion of Articles 330A and 332A), authorised the Speaker to refer the Bill to the Joint Committee of the two Houses in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha<sup>353</sup>.

Membership of Select Committee

The names of members proposed to be appointed on a Select Committee are set out, as already stated, in the motion of reference itself. The membership of Select Committees is not fixed. It may vary from Committee to Committee, but the normal membership is between 30 and 35<sup>354</sup>.

Membership of Joint Committee

The motion for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee gives the number and names of the members of the Lok Sabha to be appointed to the Committee and also the number of members from the Rajya Sabha to be appointed by that House. The proportion of members of a Joint Committee from the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha is 2:1. The actual membership of a Joint Committee is not fixed. It varies from Committee to Committee, the most usual number being<sup>355</sup>.

There are no rules about the procedure to be followed by a Joint Committee. A self-contained motion is, therefore, moved in the House for the purpose and the

354. Financial Bills, which are not normally referred to Joint Committee under the Rules are generally referred to Select Committees consisting of larger number of members. For instance, the Gift-Tax Bill, 1958, and the Estate Duty (Amendment) Bill, 1958, were referred to Select Committees consisting of 43 members each. There are also instances when Select Committees were constituted with less number of members. For instance, the Indian Railways (Amendment) Bill, 1961 was referred to Select Committee consisting of 21 members. Similarly, the Select Committees on the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1961 consisted of 15 members; the Major Port Trusts Bill, 1962 consisted of 21 members; the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1963 consisted of 18 members; the Delhi High Court Bill, 1965 consisted of 23 members; the Essential Commodities (Second Amendment) Bill, 1967 consisted of 21 members; the Banking Laws (Amendment) Bill, 1967 consisted of 22 members; the Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 1967 consisted of 12 members; the Enlargement of the Appellate (Criminal) Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court Bill, 1967 consisted of 22 members; the Advocates (Second Amendment) Bill, 1968 consisted of 24 members; the Central Excise Bill, 1969 consisted of 24 members; the Select Committee Diplomatic Relations (Vienna Convention) Bill, 1971 consisted of 19 members; the Payment of Gratuity Bill, 1971 consisted of 20 members; the Chit Funds Bill, 1980 consisted of 21 members; the Select Committee on the Constitution (Seventy-first Amendment) Bill, 1990 consisted of 20 members; the Transplantation of Human Organs Bill, 1993 consisted of 21 members; and the Select Committee on the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 1996 consisted of 15 members.

355. In the Joint Committee on the States Reorganisation Bill, 1956 (constituted on 2 May 1956), there were 51 members; the Constitution (Thirty-second Amendment) Bill, 1973 consisted of 60 members; the Public Financial Institutions Laws (Amendments) Bill, 1973 consisted of 60 members while in the Joint Committee on the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Bill, 1957 (constituted on 21 December 1957) there were only 30 members; the Tripura Land Revenue and Land Reforms Bill, 1959 consisted of 30 members; the Manipur Land Revenue and Land Reforms Bill, 1959 consisted of 30 members; the Delhi Land Holdings (Ceiling) Bill, 1959 consisted of 30 members; the Extradition Bill, 1961 consisted of 21 members; the Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the question of the working of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 consisted of 21 members; the Slum Areas (Improvement and Clearance) Amendment Bill, 1963 consisted of 24 members; the Prevention of Food Adulteration (Amendment) Bill, 1963 consisted of 33 members; the Judges (Enquiry) Bill, 1964 consisted of 30 members; the Delhi Administration Bill, 1965 consisted of 33 members; the Patent Bill, 1965 consisted of 48 members; the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1966 consisted of 36 members; the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes Order (Amendment) Bill, 1967 consisted of 33 members; the Patents Bill, 1967 consisted of 33 members; the Union Territory (Separation of Judicial and Executive Functions) Bill, 1968 consisted of 33 members; the Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 1968 consisted of 33 members; the Criminal and concurrence of the other House in the motion carries with it their agreement to the prescribed procedure. The motion lays down the quorum for a sitting of the Joint Committee, the rules of procedure which would apply to the Committee, the time by which the Committee is to present the report and finally a request to the other House to agree to join the Committee and to communicate the names of their members who have been appointed to the Committee. Usually the rules relating to the Committees of the House in which the motion originates apply to the Joint Committee.

The motion, on adoption, is transmitted to the other House for their concurrence. The other House, on receipt of the motion, is at liberty to discuss the principles of the Bill and to suggest any directions that may be given to the Joint Committee (to which the originating House must agree before they become binding) and to nominate their members to serve on the Committee. Concurrence in the motion for reference of a Bill to a Joint Committee by the other House does not commit that House to the principles underlying the Bill<sup>356</sup>.

The House which initiates a motion for appointment of a Joint Committee is in charge of the Committee and the Chairperson of the Committee functions under the directions of the Presiding Officer of that House<sup>357</sup>. The extension of time for presentation of the report of the Committee, if required, has to be asked for from that House. If such extension is granted to the Joint Committee, the other House is informed by means of a formal message.

Members of Select or Joint Committees

Only names of such members are proposed to a Select or Joint Committee as are willing to serve on it<sup>358</sup>. The mover obtains their consent before proposing their names in the House<sup>359</sup>.

The Minister in-charge of the Bill or dealing with the subject-matter of the Bill is normally included as a member of the Committee as his presence is necessary for explaining the Government's point of view in the Committee. The mover of the motion (or amendment) for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee is normally appointed a member of the Committee although the mover's exclusion from the Committee does not render the motion invalid<sup>360</sup>.

The composition of a Select or a Joint Committee reflects the strength of the various Parties and Groups in the House(s) and in this sense the Committee is a microcosm of the House or the Houses<sup>361</sup>.

Members who are entirely opposed to the principle of the Bill should keep out of it<sup>362</sup> as also those who have a personal, pecuniary or direct interest of an intimate character in the subject-matter of that Bill.

Only one Bill is referred to one Committee: As a general rule, only one Bill is referred to a Select or a Joint Committee, but in case there are two Bills dealing with a similar subject matter, they may be referred to the same Select or Joint Committee by means of a single or separate motion<sup>363</sup>.

Adding of Members on Select or Joint Committee

When a Bill is already under reference to a Select Committee, more members can be added to the Committee by moving a motion in that regard in the House<sup>364</sup>. Such a motion is moved by the member in-charge of the Bill or the Chairperson of the Committee.

In the case of a Joint Committee, the motion for addition of members is moved in and adopted by the House in which the Bill originated and is concurred in by the other House. The motion gives the number and names of members from the originating House and the number of members from the other House proposed to be added to the Committee. The motion also contains a request to the other House to agree to the addition of members and to communicate the names of members desired to be added by that House to the Committee.

Filling of Casual Vacancies in Select or Joint Committee

When a casual vacancy occurs in a Select Committee, the fact is intimated to the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs with a request to state whether the Government proposes to fill the vacancy and, if so, to intimate the name of the member proposed for the vacancy.

On receipt of the name of the member from the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs, a motion is moved in the Lok Sabha by the Chairperson or any other member so authorised by the Committee.

Normally, no need is felt for filling a casual vacancy in a Select Committee because by the time the vacancy can be filled the work of the Committee is generally over.

The procedure for filling a casual vacancy in a Joint Committee is the same as that in respect of a Select Committee except for the following:

In case of a Joint Committee initiated by the Lok Sabha—

if the vacancy is in the membership from the Lok Sabha, a motion setting forth the name of the member proposed to fill the vacancy is moved by the Chairperson or any other member so authorised by the Committee. After the motion is adopted, the Rajya Sabha Secretariat is informed of the fact by a letter; if the vacancy is in the membership from the Rajya Sabha, the vacancy is filled by that House on a recommendation made to that effect in a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha. The motion after being carried in the Lok Sabha is transmitted to the Rajya Sabha for their concurrence and nomination of a member of that House to fill the vacancy. On receipt of a message from the Rajya Sabha concurring in the motion, it is reported to the Lok Sabha.

The same procedure is followed in the reverse order in the case of a Joint Committee initiated by the Rajya Sabha.

Term of Office

As a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill is an ad hoc Committee for the consideration of a particular Bill referred to it, it becomes functus officio when it has presented its report<sup>365</sup>.

Chairperson's Duties, Powers, etc.

The Chairperson of a Select or a Joint Committee<sup>366</sup>, besides performing the duties and exercising the powers, etc., which are common to the Chairperson of all Parliamentary Committees<sup>367</sup>, discharges some additional functions: Chairperson decides the admissibility of amendments to be moved at a sitting of the Committee and Chairperson's decision is final<sup>368</sup>; Chairperson's approval has to be obtained before copies of memoranda or representations received on a Bill are made available to members; and the Chairperson orders expunctions of unparliamentary, irrelevant or otherwise inappropriate words, phrases and expressions from the minutes of dissent<sup>369</sup>.

365. L.S. Deb., 16-7-1956, cc. 8-9.

367. For powers and functions of the Chairperson of Parliamentary Committees, see Chapter VIII.

Functions of a Select or Joint Committee

The function of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill is to go through the text of the Bill, clause by clause<sup>370</sup>, in order to see that the provisions of the Bill bring out clearly the intention behind the measure, that there will be no procedural defect in its working, that the Bill does not offend provisions of the existing law, and that the object proposed to be achieved is adequately brought out.

The Committee may, before or at the time of taking a decision on any provisions of the Bill, invite written memoranda from, or take oral evidence of, experts or interested persons and organisations, or require Government officials to explain the policy behind each clause of the Bill and to give such information as the Committee may desire<sup>371</sup>. After hearing the evidence, if any, the Chairperson puts the Bill before the Committee clause by clause and invites members to offer comments, if any, and thereafter members move their amendments, if any<sup>372</sup>. The Committee then formulates its conclusion as to whether the clause as it stands is adequate and brings out the intention clearly. If in its opinion the wording of the clause is defective or the intention is not clearly brought out or the language is ambiguous, the Committee amends or revises the clause.

368. Dir. 75.

The Chairperson of the Joint Committee on Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, disallowed the moving of an amendment by the Minister of Commerce which sought to amend a section of the principal Act which was not touched by the amending Bill.

369. Dir. 91.

However, in the case of Select Committee on the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 1996, P. Kodanda Ramaiah and Dr. Jayanta Rongpi, M.Ps, in their minutes of dissent, used some inappropriate words and cast aspersions on the Chairman. Since the aspersions were cast on the Chairperson, he referred the matter for expunction to the Speaker who expunged the same reference.

370. Dir. 77.

371. For instance, the Joint Committee on the Arms Bills, 1958, the Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, and the Railways Bill, 1986, invited written memoranda from interested parties and also heard oral evidence. At their sitting held on 8 October 1957, the Joint Committee on the Navy Bill decided that the Judge, Advocate as well as some senior officers of the Navy should be present at all the sittings of the Committee to give such clarification on the provisions of the Bill as may be required by members, and that if the Committee considered it necessary, at a later stage, those officers could be formally examined.

372. Dir. 77.

At the sittings of the Committee, the Minister concerned and the officials of that Ministry as well as the official Draftsman are also present to explain any point or points on which the Committee may require information<sup>373</sup>.

Oral and Written Evidence before Select or Joint Committee

Generally, at its first sitting, the Committee decides whether it would take evidence on the Bill<sup>374</sup>. In arriving at this decision the Committee takes into consideration the nature of the Bill, the various interests that are directly affected by the measure and whether expert evidence would be desirable or helpful.

The Committee may decide to take evidence either on its own initiative or on separate request made to that effect<sup>375</sup>.

373. For instance during the course of the sittings of the Joint Committee on the Trade and Merchandise Marks Bill, 1958 when evidence of certain Associations was being taken on the Bill, an officer of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and the Additional Secretary and Chief Draftsman, Ministry of Law took part in the proceedings of the Committee several times for clarifying points with the permission of the Chairman and their speeches were recorded in the day's proceedings.
374. The Joint Committees on the Arms Bills, 1958, and the Motor Transport Workers Bill, 1960, decided at their first sitting to hear evidence on the Bills—Min. (J.C. on Arms Bill), 8-5-1959 and Min. (J.C. on Motor Transport Workers Bill) 7-9-1960. In the case of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1954, the Joint Committee decided against taking evidence on the Bill since the Government had given the Bill the widest possible publicity and had obtained opinion upon it from all sections of the people—Min. [J.C. on Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Bill 17-7-1954].
375. (i) A serving Secretary to the Government of India made a request to the Chairman that he might be permitted to appear in his personal capacity before the Joint Committee on the Constitution (Amendment) Bill by a private member. As directed by the Committee [Min. (J.C.) on the Constitution (Amendment) Bill by Nath Pai, 23-10-1967], after he had obtained the prior approval of the Government on his own, the officer appeared before the Committee on 26 October 1967.
- (ii) At the initiative of the Select Committee on the Constitution (Amendment) Bill by Tenneti Viswanatham, Justice D. Basu of Calcutta High Court appeared before the Committee on 21 and 22 July 1970, and gave his evidence on the provisions of the Bill. Justice Basu, however, clarified at the outset that the evidence he was about to give was in his 'private capacity as an academician'. Earlier, Justice Basu had desired that the request should come through the Ministry of Home Affairs. This was done.
- (iii) The Chairman, Select Committee on the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Bill 1973, desired that Justice Debiprosad Pal of Calcutta High Court might be invited to tender evidence at the sittings of the Select Committee held at Calcutta in September 1973. In reply, Justice Debiprosad Pal regretted his inability to appear before the Select Committee and said: "As a sitting Judge of the High Court, I do not think it proper to express any view on the said Bill before the Committee".
- (iv) On 26 July 1974, the Registrar, High Court of Karnataka intimated that the Chief Justice, High Court of Karnataka would like to give evidence before the Joint Committee on the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Bill, 1974, if the Committee held its meetings at Bangalore. Since a Sub-Committee of the Joint Committee was scheduled to hold its sittings at Bangalore from 19 September 1974 to 21 September 1974 to hear oral evidence, it was decided to call the Chief Justice for evidence before the Sub-Committee.

In case the Committee decides to take evidence, usually a press note is issued inviting memoranda on the Bill from interested associations or organisations<sup>376</sup>, and a date is fixed by which memoranda are to be sent to the Secretariat. Memoranda received after the specified date may be accepted with the permission of the Chairperson.

Normally, the Committee authorises the Chairperson to go through the memoranda received and to decide as to which associations and individuals should be invited to give evidence. For this purpose, only those associations or individuals who have made a specific request are invited. The Chairperson also keeps in view that the main representatives of each type of affected interests, i.e. employers, employees, industry, trade, etc. are invited to give evidence.

A memorandum addressed to the Committee forms part of the records of the Committee and is treated as confidential<sup>377</sup>. No person, without the Speaker's permission, can quote therefrom or send copies thereof to anyone else, unless it has been presented to the House either along with the report of the Committee or separately<sup>378</sup>. However, the arguments or points contained in the memorandum can be used in any other communication or used in any other manner but the person so doing cannot allude to the fact that such considerations have been urged in a memorandum submitted to the Select or Joint Committee.

In case a memorandum has been given publicity before sending it to the Committee or if it is addressed to somebody else and a copy thereof is endorsed to the Committee, it is not treated as a communication to the Committee and is either 376. For instance, the Joint Committee on the Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, at their first sitting held on 9 May 1959, decided that a press note might be issued advising associations, public bodies and individuals desirous of presenting their views before the Committee in respect of the Bill to send written memoranda thereon to the Secretariat by 10 June 1959. The Committee also authorised the Chairman to decide, after examining the memoranda, as to which associations, public bodies, etc. should be asked to send their representatives to give oral evidence before the Committee.

In the case of the Joint Committee on the Banaras Hindu University (Amendment) Bill, 1958, the Joint Committee, at their first sitting held on 18 August 1958, decided to hear evidence of a member intimately connected with the provisions of the Bill. No press note was issued.

377. As soon as a memorandum is received, the sender is informed in writing that the memorandum should be treated as confidential and not circulated to anyone and that its circulation or publicity would constitute a breach of privilege of the Select or Joint Committee which is a Parliamentary Committee.

The Employers' Federation submitted a memorandum to the Select Committee on Payment of Gratuity Bill, 1971. The Federation, on its request, was permitted to make available copies of the memorandum to its constituent members, with the stipulation that contents thereof be treated as confidential and not for publication.

Soon after the Joint Committee on the Constitution (Fourth Amendment) Bill, 1954, had ceased functioning, a representation was received. It was decided that communications addressed to Committee formed part of the records of the Committee, irrespective of the fact whether the communication was sent while the Committee was still deliberating or after it had presented its report.

returned to the sender<sup>379</sup> or treated as a representation with the approval of the Chairperson<sup>380</sup>.

A member of the Committee can also submit a memorandum containing his views on the Bill<sup>381</sup>. Copies of the memorandum or extracts therefrom are circulated to the members of the Committee, if so directed by the Chairperson<sup>382</sup>.

The number of memoranda or representation received by the Committee are mentioned in the body of the report of the Committee, while the particulars thereof and the action taken thereon are given in the Appendix to the report<sup>383</sup>.

Letters are issued by the Secretariat summoning the witnesses for evidence. Along with the letter, a note on points of conduct and etiquette to be observed by the witnesses appearing before a Parliamentary Committee is also sent for the guidance of the witnesses. In the case of associations or public bodies, the letter is addressed to them asking them to send their representatives to appear before the Committee on a specified date and time. Normally, they are asked to send two or three representatives to appear before the Committee and to communicate their names in advance to the Secretariat.

In case a Minister who is not a member of the Select Committee desires to address the Committee or to take part in the proceedings of the Committee, he/she is permitted to do so but he/she cannot participate in voting<sup>384</sup>.

A Select or Joint Committee may call any member who is not a member of the Committee to give evidence before it<sup>385</sup>.

Whenever witnesses are summoned to give evidence, verbatim record of the proceedings is kept<sup>386</sup>. Cyclostyled copies of the proceedings of the evidence are normally circulated to all the members of the Committee on the following day.

379. An individual submitted a memorandum to the Joint Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill, 1958, copies whereof had already been sent to various journals for publication. The document was not treated as a memorandum to the Committee and was accordingly returned to the sender.

380. The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta sent to the Joint Committee on the Railways Bill, 1986, a copy of their letter addressed to the Prime Minister containing comments/suggestions on the Bill. It was treated as a representation and circulated to the members of the Joint Committee, after obtaining approval of the Chairman.

381. Dir. 81(1).

382. Dir. 81(2). A memorandum submitted by a member of the Joint Committee on the Companies Bill, 1953, was circulated to the members of the Committee after obtaining orders of the Chairman.

383. Dir. 83. The practice of giving these particulars in the report commenced in November 1956, with the report of the Joint Committee on the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1956.

384. Rule 299.

385. A member of the Rajya Sabha, because of his expert knowledge regarding Indian shipping, was required to give evidence before the Joint Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill, 1958. He gave evidence before the Committee on 8 July 1958, in the capacity of a representative of the Indian National Steamship Owners' Association.

The Select Committee on the Banaras Hindu University (Amendment) Bill, 1958, decided at their sitting held on 18 August 1958, to call a member of the Lok Sabha who had intimate knowledge of the Banaras Hindu University to give evidence before them. The member gave evidence before the Committee on 19 August 1958.

386. Rule 273(v).

The Committee decides whether the record of the evidence given before it is to be laid on the Table in extenso or in part or in summary form<sup>387</sup> and whether the memoranda submitted by the associations should be printed as appendices to the evidence or laid on the Table or placed in the Library for reference by the members<sup>388</sup>.

In case the Committee decides the whole or part or summary of the evidence, as the case may be, is to be laid on the Table<sup>389</sup>, it is printed in a separate volume. A copy of such evidence authenticated by the Chairperson is laid on the Table by the Chairperson or the member so authorised by the Committee, either on the day the report of the Committee is presented or on any subsequent day. In the case of a Joint Committee, an authenticated copy of the evidence or summary thereof, as the case may be, is sent by the Secretariat for being laid on the table of the Rajya Sabha simultaneously with its presentation to the Lok Sabha. In case the Rajya Sabha is not in session that day, it is laid on the Table of that House on the day it reassembles. Copies of evidence given before Select or Joint Committees, after they have been laid on the Table, are circulated to all members of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha and are also made available to the public on sale.

Amendments

The procedure regarding moving of amendments in a Select or a Joint Committee is, as far as practicable, the same as is followed in the House during the consideration stage of a Bill, with such adaptations as the Speaker may consider necessary or convenient<sup>390</sup>.

Only members of the Committee are entitled to give notice of amendments<sup>391</sup>. Generally, the rules governing the admissibility of amendments in the House apply in

387. Rule 275.

388. In the case of the Joint Committee on the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1955, memoranda submitted by associations and public bodies who gave evidence before the Committee were printed as appendices to the evidence which was laid on the Table.

Copies of memoranda/representations received by the Joint Committees on the Constitution (Twenty- second Amendment) Bill, 1968, and the Lokpal and Lokayuktas Bill, 1968, as decided by the respective Committee, were laid on the Table of both the Houses on 5 March 1969, and 26 March 1969, respectively.

In the case of the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1959, and the Motor Transport Workers Bill, 1960, the Joint Committee decided that the memoranda submitted by the associations who tendered evidence being very voluminous, need not be printed with the evidence but a few cyclostyled copies of the same may be placed in the Library for reference by the members.

389. Rule 275.

Evidence given before a Select or Joint Committee is not presented to the House with the report but it is laid on the Table separately.

390. Rule 300(2).

391. In the case of Government amendments, the notice must be signed by the Minister who is a member of the Committee.

In the Joint Committee on the Companies Bill, 1953, notice of certain Government amendments signed by the Draftsman was received. The notice was returned for signature by the Minister on the Committee.

the Committee also<sup>392</sup>. In the Committee, however, unlike in the House, members who give notices of amendments may also give 'Reasons' for the amendments<sup>393</sup>.

Notices of amendments tabled in the House by members before reference of the Bill to the Committee also stand referred to the Committee, provided that where notice of an amendment is received from a member who is not a member of the Committee such amendment is not taken up by the Committee unless moved by a member of the Committee<sup>394</sup>.

If any question arises whether a particular amendment is within the scope of the Bill or not, the question is decided by the Chairperson of the Committee whose decision is final<sup>395</sup>.

Admissible amendments of which notices have been received are arranged in the lists of amendments in the order of the clauses of the Bill to which they relate and in the order in which notices thereof have been received, and are circulated to all the members of the Committee ordinarily on the same day on which they are received<sup>396</sup>.

Discussion on an amendment starts on the member's moving the amendment. When the Chairperson considers that an amendment has been sufficiently discussed, the Chairperson takes the consensus thereon and announces the decision. Ordinarily no vote is taken because the proceedings in a Committee are not as formal as they are in the House, but if a member insists that a particular amendment be put to vote, votes are taken by show of hands and the majority decision is recorded<sup>397</sup>. Clause already disposed of by the Committee may be reopened with the permission of the Chairperson<sup>398</sup>.

392. For conditions of admissibility of amendments in the House, see Chapter XXII—'Legislation'.

393. In the Joint Committee on the Companies Bill, 1953, it was suggested that the 'Reasons' for each of the Government amendments of which notice had been given should be stated immediately below each amendment in the list of amendments to be circulated to the members of the Committee.

The 'Reasons' for the amendments were, however, given on separate sheets attached to the list of amendments circulated to members.

394. Rule 301.

Notices of amendments falling under this Rule are circulated to all the members of the Select Committee through a separate list and necessary indication is given therein that the amendments fall under this Rule in order to distinguish them from the list of amendments of which notices have been given by the members of the Committee.

Notices of amendments given by a member of the Rajya Sabha, who is not a member of the Joint Committee to which a Bill has been referred, do not stand referred to the Joint Committee under this Rule. In such a case, the member concerned is asked to have his amendments sponsored by a member of the Committee.

395. Dir. 75(2).

396. Copies of all notices of amendments are also supplied to the Draftsman, Ministry of Law, and to the officers of the Ministry concerned who attend the sittings of the Committee. Lists of amendments to the Bills before Committees bear a distinctive heading so that they are not confused with the list of amendments to the Bills before the House.

397. Total number of votes cast in favour of and against the amendment are recorded in the 'Minutes Book'.

398. Dir. 54. The Supreme Court on Government Premises (Eviction) Amendment Bill, 1954 after concluding their deliberations on Bills met to consider the draft report but at the request of some Besides giving notices of amendments, a member of a Select or Joint Committee may, at any time before consideration of the Bill is concluded by the Committee, submit a memorandum or a note containing the member's views on the Bill for consideration of the Committee<sup>399</sup>. The Chairperson may, if thinks fit, direct that copies of the note or extracts therefrom be circulated to the members of the Committee<sup>400</sup>.

Scope of Deliberations and Inquiry

General discussion on the Bill as a whole is not permissible in a Committee, as the principle of the Bill is accepted by the House on the adoption of the motion for reference of the Bill to the Committee<sup>401</sup>. The Chairperson may, however, permit a general discussion on certain clauses or basic points contained in the Bill so that the Minister in-charge of the Bill may explain the purpose of the Bill or remove doubts, if any, and may also know the mind of the members at the outset so that amendments to the Bill may be moved at the appropriate time according to their wishes<sup>402</sup>, if necessary.

Apart from the principle of the Bill to which the House stands committed on the adoption of the motion<sup>403</sup>, the House may also give additional directions or instructions to the Committee<sup>404</sup>.

A Committee cannot amend or revise the Bill so as to render it obstructive to, or destructive of, the principle of the Bill as referred to the Committee. The principle of the Bill is to be judged from the long title, clauses of the Bill and the Schedules, if any. The whole Bill has to be taken into consideration in ascertaining the principle or scope of the Bill. All amendments or modifications must be within the scope of the Bill and relevant to the subject matter of the clauses or schedules to which they relate<sup>405</sup>. They should also be in conformity with the principle of the Bill to which the House has already agreed. It is not open to the Committee to alter the main concept of the Bill.

members postponed it to hear the Minister-in-charge of Bill who was absent on that day. The discussion on the Clauses and Bill was subsequently reopened after hearing Minister and the draft report revised.

400. Dir. 81(2).

401. Dir. 76.

402. For instance, in the case of the following Bills, general discussion was permitted:

The Joint Committee on the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, 1955, had a general discussion on the provisions of the Bill in respect of certain basic points—Min. (JC), 24-10-1956; the Joint Committee on the Arms Bill, 1958, had a general discussion on clause 4 of the Bill as to whether the Bill should be confined to fire arms only or to all arms in general. Min. (JC), 16-7-1959; The Joint Committee on the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Bill, 1957, had, as an exception, a general discussion on the provisions of the Bill—Min. (JC), 30-11-1957, 3 and 4-12-1957; The Joint Committee on the Railways Bill, 1986 also had a general discussion on the provisions of the Bill—Min. (JC), 6-1-1988, 7-1-1988, 8-1-1988 and 22-3-1988.

404. See, for instance, the case of the Representation of the People (Amendment) Bill, 1961, L.S. Deb., 14-8-1961, cc. 2218-19.

405. Rule 80(i).

However, within the limitations referred to above, the powers of a Select or a Joint Committee to make amendments to a Bill are wide and large. A Committee may amend and redraft a Bill completely<sup>406</sup>, including the long title<sup>407</sup> and the short title<sup>408</sup> without changing its principle. Likewise, a Committee may insert new provisions<sup>409</sup> in the Bill, restrict the scope of the Bill<sup>410</sup>, or even vary the incidence of taxation proposals after obtaining the prior recommendation of the President<sup>411</sup>.

While a Committee may, with the permission of the Chairperson, reopen discussion on the clauses of the Bill already disposed of<sup>412</sup>, it cannot recommend that it does not agree with the principle of the Bill committed to it<sup>413</sup>, though in appropriate cases it may recommend withdrawal of the Bill<sup>414</sup>. In regard to an amending Bill, amendments thereto are to be confined to the sections of the principal Act touched by the amending Bill except in cases where the clauses of the Bill necessarily lead to amendment or modification of any other sections which are intimately connected therewith<sup>415</sup>.

Amendments to a Bill accepted by the Committee are incorporated in the Bill by the Draftsman, Legislative Department, who attends all the sittings of the Committee. Where an amendment accepted by the Committee required scrutiny from the drafting point of view, the Draftsman gets the draft approved by the Committee at a subsequent sitting<sup>416</sup>.

406. The Muslim Wakfs Bill, 1952, and the Women's and Children's Institutions Licensing Bill, 1953, both Private Members' Bills, were completely redrafted by the Select Committee. Similarly, the Scheduled Tribes (Recognition of Farmers Rights) Bill, 2005 was completely redrafted by the Joint Committee.

407. The original long title of the Women's and Children's Institutions Licensing Bill, 1953, read as 'A Bill to regulate and license institutions caring for women and children'. The Select Committee amended it to read as 'A Bill to provide for the licensing of institutions for women and children and for matters incidental thereto'.

408. The short title of the Legal Practitioners Bill, 1959, was amended by the Joint Committee to 'Advocates Bill'.

409. The Joint Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill, 1958, inserted several new clauses providing for the constitution of a National Shipping Board and for the creation of a Shipping Development Fund; the Select Committee on the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order (Amendment) Bill, 1996, which was constituted to provide for the inclusion of the Koch-Rajbongshi community in the list of Scheduled Tribes in relation to the State of Assam, inserted other communities of Assam in the Bill.

416. For instance, clause 9 of the Navy Bill, 1957.

After the clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill is over, the Draftsman prepares a manuscript copy of the Bill as amended which is then printed and the draft report of the Committee is prepared by the Secretariat<sup>417</sup>. Copies of the draft report are sent to the Draftsman and to the representative of the Ministry who attend the sittings of the Committee for factual verification and return. Their suggestions, if any, are suitably incorporated in the draft report. The draft report, after having been factually verified, is submitted to the Chairperson for approval.

Copies of the draft report, as approved by the Chairperson, are circulated to all the members of the Committee and the Draftsman and the representative of the Ministry concerned. Together with the copies of the draft report, printed copies of the Bill as amended by the Committee are also circulated.

Nature and Contents of Report

The report is drafted according to a set pattern in accordance with the provisions of the direction issued by the Speaker on the subject<sup>418</sup>.

In the introductory paragraphs, general information about the Bill and the proceedings of the Committee are given: the date of introduction of Bill; the dates on which the motion for reference of the Bill to Committee was moved, discussed and adopted in the House or the Houses, as the case may be; particulars of sittings held by the Committee; extension of time, if any, obtained for presentation of the report, etc. If any memoranda or representations are received by the Committee or any evidence is taken by the Committee or if any study tours are undertaken by it, this fact is mentioned therein. Similarly, if the Committee appoints any Sub-Committee, mention thereof is made and the report of the Sub-Committee is annexed as one of the appendices to the report.

In the main part of the report, where observations of the Committee on the changes made by them in the Bill and their general recommendations are given, the remarks are strictly confined to the amendments actually made by the Committee to the Bill and any general recommendation which the Committee may have decided to include in their report for the attention of the House and/or of the Government. In dealing with the amendments made by the Committee, arguments or elaborate reasons are not advanced, but only indication of the direction along with an amendment has been made is given.

The report finally concludes with the usual recommendation to the House that the Bill, or the Bill as amended by the Committee, be passed, or with any other relevant recommendation<sup>419</sup>. Where the Bill has been altered, the Committee may, if it deems fit, make a recommendation to the member in-charge of the Bill that his next motion should be a motion for circulation of the Bill as amended by the Committee, or, where the Bill has been circulated, for its recirculation<sup>420</sup>.

420. Rule 303.

Consideration of Draft Report and the Bill as Amended by the Committee

The draft report and the Bill as amended are considered by the Committee at their last sitting. The Chairperson first places before the Committee the Bill as amended, and the Committee considers whether all the amendments accepted by them and embodied in the minutes have been properly incorporated in the printed copy of the Bill. The member who has an objection to any part of the Bill as amended as not being in conformity with the decisions of the Committee, when called upon by the Chairperson to speak, states briefly the grounds of objection and proposes amendments to the Bill to bring it in line with the decisions of the Committee. The amendments, if accepted, are incorporated in the Bill. No new amendments to the Bill are ordinarily accepted at this stage<sup>421</sup>. Thereafter, the Bill as amended is adopted by the Committee.

On the adoption of the Bill as amended, the draft report is placed by the Chairperson before the Committee for adoption<sup>422</sup>. After the draft report and the Bill as amended are adopted, the Committee fixes a date not beyond the one fixed by the House for the presentation of the report, and the Committee authorises the Chairperson, or in his absence any other member, to present its report to the House. In the case of a Joint Committee, a member of the Rajya Sabha or in the member's absence any other member of that House is chosen for laying a copy of the report on the Table of that House simultaneously with its presentation to the Lok Sabha.

A date is also fixed by the Committee for handing in the minutes of dissent, if any, to the Secretariat and the date so fixed is communicated by a letter to all the members of the Committee for their information. The minutes of dissent, if any, are appended to the report before its presentation to the House.

Minutes of Dissent and Notes

The report of the Committee is based on majority decisions, but any member of the Committee disagreeing with the report or a part thereof may append a minute of dissent on any matter connected with the Bill or dealt with in the report. A minute of dissent cannot be premature or conditional in any respect and can be given by a member only after the report has been considered and adopted by the Committee<sup>423</sup>.

Minutes of dissent have to be written in ink or typed on foolscap paper are required to be given to the officer of the Committee or handed in at the Parliamentary Notice Office on or before the date and time fixed for this purpose by the Committee<sup>424</sup>; those received after the expiry of the specified time, but before the presentation of the report to the House, may be entertained and appended to the report with the permission of the Chairperson. Minutes of dissent, given in Hindi, are presented as such and no English version thereof is included in the report.

It is permissible for members to give minutes of dissent jointly. A minute of dissent cannot be given after the report has been presented to the House<sup>425</sup> nor can it be altered by the member after the presentation of the report<sup>426</sup>. It has to be couched in temperate and decorous language and should not cast aspersion on the Committee or refer to any discussions in the Committee. In case it contains such words or expressions, they are expunged under the orders of the Chairperson<sup>427</sup> or the Speaker<sup>428</sup>. If expunctions are made under the orders of the Chairperson, the member concerned is informed of the Chairperson's decision with a view to affording the member an opportunity to make an appeal to the Speaker if he/she so wishes, and the Speaker's decision in the matter is final<sup>429</sup>.

If a member, who is absent from the sitting or sitting at which the draft report is considered and adopted by the Committee, wants to give a minute of dissent the member is required, under a direction of the Speaker, to certify in writing that he/she has read the report<sup>430</sup>. In case the member sends a minute of dissent without the required certificate, the minute of dissent is appended to the report with a foot-note that the certificate required under the direction has not been furnished. Where a minute of dissent does not bear any date, the date on which it is received in the Secretariat is so indicated thereon against the name of the signatory<sup>431</sup>.

A member who is in agreement with the report and yet thinks that a particular matter has not been given proper emphasis or who desires to make further suggestions in respect of any matter connected with the Bill or dealt with in the report, may give a 'note' (as distinguished from a minute of dissent) to the report. Notes, like minutes of dissent, are also appended to the report when it is presented to the House. The procedure for submission of notes to the report is the same as is followed in regard to minutes of dissent.

430. Dir. 87. On conclusion of the clause-by-clause consideration of the Bill by Select or Joint Committee, the Chairperson informs the Committee of the provisions of Dir. 87. On the same day, a letter is also sent to all the members drawing their attention to the Direction.

431. Dir. 86.

Presentation of Report to the House

The report presented to the House generally consists of the following papers arranged in that order:

List of members of the Committee<sup>432</sup>; report of the Committee, signed by the Chairperson; notes and minutes of dissent, if any, in original; printed copy of the Bill as reported by the Committee and authenticated by the Draftsman concerned; text of the motion (or motions in the two Houses) appointing the Committee; report of the Sub-Committee, if any, together with the minutes of the Sub-Committee; statement in regard to memoranda/representations received by the Committee, if any; list of witnesses who gave evidence before the Committee, if any; minutes of sittings of the Committee; and other important papers, if any made available to the members of the Committee and approved by the Chairperson of the Committee for presentation to the House<sup>433</sup>.

In the case of a Joint Committee, an authenticated copy<sup>434</sup> of the report together with copies of the other papers referred to in the preceding paragraph, is sent by the Secretariat to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat for being laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha simultaneously with its presentation to the Lok Sabha. In case the Rajya Sabha is not in session on that day, it is laid on the Table of that House on the day it reassembles.

If the Lok Sabha is not in session on the date fixed for the presentation of the report, the report is presented to the Speaker. In such cases, the Speaker arranges to have the report laid on the Table as early as possible after the House reassembles<sup>435</sup>.

Extension of Time for Presentation of the Report

The motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or a Joint Committee invariably mentions a specific date<sup>436</sup> or gives an indication of the time by which the report is to be presented to the House<sup>437</sup>. If, however, the House does not prescribe any time for the presentation of the report, the report is required to be presented before the expiry of three months from the date on which the House adopts the motion for reference of a Bill to the Committee<sup>438</sup>. If at the time of consideration of the motion for reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee, or in exceptional circumstances, soon after the adoption of such motion, it is considered necessary to alter the date of presentation of the report of the Committee, alteration is made through an amendment to the motion, moved in and adopted by the House<sup>439</sup>.

Alteration in the date of presentation made through an amendment to the motion for reference of a Bill to Select or Joint Committee is distinct from a motion seeking extension of time for presentation of a report when the Committee finds itself unable to present the report by the appointed date.

Whenever the progress of a Committee in regard to a Bill is such that the presentation of the report to the House is likely to be delayed, the matter is brought to the notice of the Speaker as soon as it becomes clear to the Chairperson that such delay is likely to occur. The Chairperson briefly states the circumstances necessitating delay, Chairperson's estimate of the time required to complete the work and any other matter which, in Chairperson's opinion, may be brought to the notice of the Speaker<sup>440</sup>. Thereafter, the Committee authorises the Chairman, or in his absence any other member of the Committee, to move in the House for extension of time for the presentation of the report to a definite date which is to be specified in the motion<sup>441</sup>. One day before the day on which the motion for extension of time is to be moved in the House, a memorandum giving reasons for asking extension of time duly signed by the Chairperson of the Committee is circulated to all members. Where it is not feasible or necessary to call a sitting of the Committee merely for authorising the Chairperson to move for extension of time, the Chairperson, on his own, after informing the Speaker, moves the motion in the House for an extension of time. The date upto which the time for presentation of the report of the Committee is sought to be extended is specified in the motion on a reasonable presumption that the House would be in session on that date<sup>442</sup>.

If need is felt by the Committee for extension of time for the presentation of the report and the House is not in session at that time and is also not to assemble till after the expiry of the date fixed for the presentation of the report, the Chairperson, on being authorised by the Committee in that behalf, approaches the Speaker who grants the necessary extension of time on behalf of the House and informs the House as soon as it reassembles<sup>443</sup>.

The motion for extension of time is included in the List of Business on or before the date originally fixed for the presentation of the report to suit the convenience of the Chairperson of the Committee. As the motion for extension of time is a formal matter, usually no discussion on the motion takes place in the House. However, it is open to the House to discuss the motion<sup>444</sup>. In the case of a Joint Committee, after the motion is adopted by the House, the Rajya Sabha is informed of it through a message.

A Committee may be granted more than one extension of time for the presentation of the report<sup>445</sup>.

Printing and Distribution of Copies of the Report

Immediately after the report has been presented to the House, a few typed or cyclostyled copies of the report are placed in the Library for reference by members. Copies are also supplied to the press representatives at the same time.

Committee on Papers Laid on the Table

During every session, Government lays before Parliament a number of notifications, reports, audited accounts and other papers either in pursuance of constitutional/statutory provisions or suo motu to inform the members of Parliament on various matters. While some of these reports/papers used to be referred to different Parliamentary Committees, including the Committee on Subordinate Legislation, bulk of them remained largely unattended until the constitution, in June 1975, of a separate Committee on Papers Laid on the Table.

Composition and Term

The Committee consists of not more than 15 members nominated by the Speaker for a term not exceeding one year<sup>446</sup> from the date of its constitution. The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee.

Scope and Functions

The functions of the Committee are<sup>447</sup> to examine all the papers laid on the Table of the House by Ministers and to report to the House:

- (a) whether there has been compliance of the provisions of the Constitution, Act, rule or regulation, under which the paper has been laid;
- (b) whether there has been any unreasonable delay in laying the paper;
- (c) if there has been such delay, whether a statement explaining the reasons for delay has been laid on the Table of the House and whether those reasons are satisfactory;
- (d) whether both the Hindi and English versions of the paper have been laid on the Table; and
- (e) whether a statement explaining the reasons for not laying the Hindi version has been given and whether such reasons are satisfactory.

A provision has also been made<sup>448</sup> in the rules that a member wishing to raise any of the matters which come within the functions of this Committee shall refer it to the Committee and not raise it in the House.

Procedure of Working

As and when papers are laid on the Table, the Secretariat examines them and selects those (particularly the annual reports/audit reports of various organisations) in which there has been an apparent delay on the part of Government in laying them on the Table of the House. The Ministry concerned is then addressed in the matter with a view to ascertaining the facts of the case, including the reasons for the delay in laying the paper on the Table of the Houses, etc. On receipt of the reply from the Ministry the matter is placed before the Committee in the form of a Memorandum. In case the Committee required further information on any point arising out of the Government's reply, the officials of the concerned Ministry may be called upon to tender evidence before the Committee. In an appropriate case, the Committee may also undertake an on-the-spot study tour. Finally, on the basis of the information thus gathered, the Secretariat prepares a draft report for the consideration of the Committee. The report, after it is adopted by the Committee, is presented to the House by the Chairperson or in the Chairperson's absence by any other member so authorised by the Committee.

The main guidelines laid down by the Committee in respect of laying of papers on the Table of the House are:

- (i) All autonomous organisations/companies, etc. should lay their annual reports/audit reports within 9 months after the close of the accounting year unless otherwise stipulated in the relevant act or rules, etc. And if for any reason these reports cannot be laid within the stipulated period the Ministry should lay within 30 days of expiry of that period of 9 months or as soon as the House meets, whichever is later, a statement explaining the reasons why the report and accounts could not be laid within the prescribed period<sup>449</sup>;
- (ii) autonomous organisation which lay only their annual reports should do so within 6 months after the close of the accounting year<sup>450</sup>;
- (iii) The administrative Ministries should prepare and lay along with the annual reports/audit reports, their own "Review" on the working of the organisations or undertakings under their control, bringing out clearly the achievements or shortcomings of those organisations. Where Government are in agreement with the information given in the report, Government should lay along with the report a statement saying that they are in agreement with the report and hence no review is being laid<sup>451</sup>;
- (iv) All organisations which are financed out of the funds drawn from the Consolidated Fund of India wholly or partly should lay their annual reports/ audit reports before both the Houses of Parliament irrespective of the fact whether the rules of such organisations provide therefor or not. The Government should also consider the feasibility of amending the relevant rules/statutes, etc. of organisations to make it obligatory on the part of the Ministry concerned to lay the reports of such organisations within nine months of the close of the accounting year<sup>452</sup>.

The societies/organisations receiving one time assistance of Rs. 50 lakh or above should lay their annual reports and audited accounts before Parliament. In the case of societies receiving one time assistance of Rs. 10 lakh and below Rs. 50 lakh, all the Ministries/Departments of Government of India should include in their own annual reports a statement showing the quantum of funds provided to each of these societies and the purpose for which the funds were utilised for the information of members of Parliament<sup>453</sup>.

The Voluntary Organisations receiving recurring grants-in-aid to the tune of Rs. 25 lakh and above should lay their Annual Reports and Audited Accounts before Parliament within 9 months of the close of the succeeding financial year. In case of private and voluntary Organisations receiving recurring grants-in-aid from Rs. 10 lakh to 25 lakh, all the Ministries/Departments of the Government of India should include in their Annual Report a statement showing the quantum of funds provided to each of these organizations and the purpose for which they were utilized for the information of Parliament<sup>454</sup>.

Committee on Petitions

At the commencement of the Lok Sabha, or from time to time, as the case may be, the Speaker nominates a Committee on Petitions<sup>455</sup>. The Committee holds office for the period specified by the Speaker or until a new Committee is constituted. However, as per practice, at the end of the one-year term of the Committee, the Speaker's orders are taken whether to reconstitute the Committee or to allow the same Committee to continue in office.

The Committee consists of not less than 15 members, nominated in proportion to the strength of the Parties and Groups in the House so as to make it representative of all shades of opinion in the House<sup>456</sup>.

The Committee on Petitions is one of the oldest Committees of the House and dates back to the Legislative Assembly of the pre-Independence era. It owes its origin to a resolution moved by a member in the then Council of State on 15 September 1921<sup>457</sup>. The resolution called for the setting up of a Committee on public petitions with powers to take evidence. The matter was examined by a Committee appointed by the Government. This Committee did not favour giving to the Legislature the powers proposed in the resolution. The right of petitioning the Legislature, limited to public business, was, however, recommended by it<sup>458</sup>, and in pursuance of this recommendation, Speaker Whyte constituted the Committee on 20 February 1924<sup>459</sup>. Its strength was fixed at five and remained unchanged until early 1954. In April of that year, its strength was raised to fifteen in order to provide adequate representation to all Parties and Groups in the House. The Committee was known as the 'Committee on Public Petitions' until 1933, when its name was changed to 'Committee on Petitions'.

Functions

A petition can be presented by a Member to the House with the consent of the Speaker<sup>460</sup> and the said Petition shall be countersigned by the Member concerned<sup>461</sup>. However, no debate is permitted on the presentation of the Petition<sup>462</sup>. The Committee examines every petition which after presentation to the Lok Sabha stands referred to it<sup>463</sup>. It is the duty of the Committee to report to the House on specific complaints made in the petitions after taking such evidence as it deems fit, and to suggest remedial measures either in a concrete form applicable to the case under review or to prevent such cases in future<sup>464</sup>. The Committee may also direct that the petition be circulated in extenso or in summary form to all members of the House<sup>465</sup>. In the case of petitions on matters of general public interest the Committee examines the suggestions made therein, calls for factual comments from the Ministries concerned, where necessary, and makes suitable recommendations in its report to the House.

The Committee also considers representations, including letters and telegrams from various individuals and associations, which are not covered by the Rules relating to petitions, and gives directions for their disposal<sup>466</sup>. It does not consider anonymous letters or letters on which names and/or addresses of senders are either not given or are illegible, or letters which do not contain any specific prayers. The Committee does not also take into consideration endorsement copies of letters addressed to persons or authorities other than the Speaker or the House unless there is a specific request on such a copy praying for redress of the grievance. Such anonymous letters or endorsement copies are summarily filed in the Secretariat<sup>467</sup>.

466. Dir. 95. Pursuant to the observations made by the Speaker [vide (CP-IL.S.), Appendix VII], the Committee commenced considering representations with effect from 25 April 1956. In its report to the House, the Committee does not give any details about the representations considered.

467. Dir. 95, Proviso.

After a petition has been presented to the House, a serial number is allotted to it and the petition stands referred to the Committee<sup>468</sup>. A memorandum is then prepared by the Secretariat for the consideration of the Committee.

Sittings

When the date and hour of a sitting of the Committee have been fixed, notice thereof, along with the agenda to be considered by the Committee, is circulated well in advance of the date so fixed. The items of the agenda for a sitting are arranged in the following order:

admitted petitions presented to the House; memoranda on the admitted petitions; memoranda on implementation of the recommendations of the Committee contained in its earlier reports; and memoranda on important representations, if any.

If at any sitting of the Committee a petition relating to a Bill sponsored by the Chairperson of the Committee is to be considered, the Speaker appoints another member to act as the Chairperson for that particular sitting.

In the case of a petition received on a Bill which is under discussion in the House or is likely to be taken up immediately for discussion or which is likely to be passed by the House on the day of presentation of the petition, the Committee meets immediately to consider it<sup>469</sup>. In such cases as also in respect of a petition on any other matter connected with the business pending before the House, the Committee, as a rule, does not make a separate inquiry or submit its recommendations to the House, but directs that the petition, where it complies with the rules, be circulated to members in extenso or in summary form<sup>470</sup>.

Discussion on a Bill is not barred if certain petitions against that Bill are pending before the Committee<sup>471</sup>.

The sittings of the Committee are held in private<sup>472</sup>. At such sittings, the Committee deliberates or occasionally examines witnesses according to the agenda circulated in advance. When the Committee deliberates, all persons other than the members of the Committee and officials of the Secretariat have to withdraw<sup>473</sup>. When the Committee is taking evidence, members other than the members of the Committee may watch the proceeding of the Committee with the permission of the Chairperson.

Railway, the officials of the Ministry of Railways were, on 17 February 1959, permitted by the Chairman to take part in a preliminary discussion after their evidence was over.

If the Committee feels that a member other than a member of the Committee can be of assistance to it because of his connection with, or special knowledge of, the facts stated in the petition or representation, that member may be invited to attend the sitting of the Committee under orders of the Chairperson<sup>474</sup>. Such members withdraw as soon as they have rendered the necessary assistance to the Committee.

Contents of Report

The report is drafted on the basis of the minutes of the sittings of the Committee. The introductory paragraphs give the number and dates of the sittings held since the presentation of the last report, the subject-matter of the petitions considered at these sittings in chronological order, the date of adoption of the report, etc. The report then deals in detail with the petitions examined by the Committee. It gives the date of presentation and name of the member presenting the petition<sup>475</sup>. Thereafter, the specific grievance or complaint of the petitioner and arguments advanced by the petitioner to reinforce his plea are enumerated. Wherever comments of the Ministry concerned, of a factual nature, have been obtained for the perusal of the Committee, a summary thereof is incorporated. In conclusion, the decision of the Committee or its recommendation in regard to the disposal of the petition or its suggestion about remedial measures either in a concrete form applicable to the case under review or to prevent such cases in future, is given.

Other matters considered by the Committee and dealt with in their report include action taken by the Government on the recommendations of the Committee contained in their earlier reports or the decisions of the Committee to pursue their recommendations with the Government in spite of the difficulties pointed out by the Government in implementing them or to accept the reply of the Government explaining the reasons for non-implementation of certain recommendations.

The report also makes a mention of the total number of representations received from various individuals, associations, etc. which are inadmissible as petitions to the House but have been considered by the Committee at their sittings held during the period under report<sup>476</sup>. Where the Committee feels that facts arising out of a representation ought to be brought to the notice of the House, a mention of it is made in the report with suitable recommendations<sup>477</sup>. In the end, the report gives the number of cases in which, through the Committee's intervention, petitioners have been granted speedy or due relief<sup>478</sup>.

No minute of dissent can be submitted or appended to the report of the Committee<sup>479</sup>.

Nature of Recommendations

In the case of petitions on Bills or other matters pending before the House, the Committee generally does not make any recommendations but circulates the petitions in extenso or in summary form to the members of the House and makes a report to the same effect giving the dates on which the petitions were circulated<sup>480</sup>. Where, however, adequate time is available before the subject matter of the petition is to be taken up in the House, the Committee examines the petition in detail and makes a suitable recommendation thereon to the House.

In the case of petition on matters of general public interest<sup>481</sup>, the Committee reports to the House giving the facts as stated by the petitioner, the comments of the Ministry concerned obtained thereon, and their conclusions or recommendations.

The recommendations of the Committee may be:

that the petitioner's suggestion(s) in toto ought to be implemented; or that the petitioner's suggestions in the form modified by or acceptable to the Committee ought to be implemented; or that no action is necessary on the petition since the facts or comments furnished by the Ministry concerned or the action taken by the Government meet adequately the petitioner's points, or the Committee are in agreement with the Government's views, or the suggestions would not be feasible as they involve undue additional financial burden on, or heavy loss to, revenue or would hurt the country's economy; or that remedial measures either in a concrete form applicable to the—case under review or to prevent such cases in future might be taken.

Action to Implement Recommendations

After the report of the Committee has been presented to the House, copies thereof are forwarded to the Ministries concerned with the subject-matter of the recommendations made by the Committee. The Ministries are required to furnish to the Secretariat statements of actions taken or proposed to be taken by them on the recommendations. The information so received is placed before the Committee in the form of a memorandum.

When the Ministry concerned has implemented the recommendations or taken action in implementation thereof, that fact is reported by the Committee to the House. Where a Ministry feels any difficulty in implementing some or all of the recommendations of the Committee, it makes a submission to the Committee pointing out the obstacles in the way of implementation of the recommendation(s). The Committee may either accept the replies or decide to press the recommendations. The decision of the Committee is included in its report to the House.

481. For details regarding matters of general public interest, see the relevant footnote in Chapter XXXIV—Petitions and Representations, under the heading 'Scope of Petitions'.

Representations to the Committee

Public bodies, associations or individuals can submit representations to the Committee on any matter within the jurisdiction of the Lok Sabha<sup>482</sup>.

A representation relating to a Bill pending before a Select or Joint Committee is forwarded to that Committee, like petitions on Bills, without being placed before the Committee on Petitions<sup>483</sup>. Other representations on matters within the purview of the Government of India are placed before the Committee.

Where the Committee feels that there is a prima facie genuine grievance, it directs in the first instance that facts might be obtained from the Ministry concerned, and after considering the reply of the Ministry, or getting further clarification from the Ministry or the petitioner, the Committee directs that the petitioner might be informed suitably of their decision<sup>484</sup>; where the Committee feels that though the grievance appears to be genuine it is not of general public importance, it directs that the representation in original be forwarded to the Ministry concerned for disposal after due consideration.

The Committee does not usually call for facts from the Ministry concerned if the representations relate to minor or trivial matters. After considering the representations or the facts thereon whenever these have been obtained under their directions, the Committee where it feels that the grievance ventilated in the representation is genuine but decided not to take it up with the authorities, directs that the representation might be forwarded in original to the Ministry concerned<sup>485</sup> for disposal and the petitioner is also apprised accordingly; and where in its opinion the grievances are trivial or purely personal and do not require its intervention, the Committee invariably directs that these might be filed<sup>486</sup>.

Before disposing of representations, the Committee may invite the petitioner(s) to appear before them and explain their grievances and the remedy sought for. Thereafter, the Committee usually calls the representatives of the concerned Ministry for evidence. On the basis of information collected from the petitioner and the Ministry, the Committee makes a report to the House with suitable recommendations in regard to the representation and may also suggest remedial measures to be taken to alleviate the grievances/complaints of general public importance. The Committee also watches the implementation of its recommendations made through various reports and may present Action Taken Reports to the House<sup>487</sup>.

Public Accounts Committee

The Lok Sabha, having voted large sums of the tax-payers' money, in the interest of the tax-payers expects, in due course, a detailed account of how the moneys have been spent. It must satisfy itself that the moneys so voted were directed to the intended purpose and were spent prudently and economically. The Comptroller and Auditor-General examines<sup>488</sup> the yearly accounts of the Government and after scrutiny certifies the accounts, subject to such reservations as he/she chooses to make, and submits the reports to the President who causes them to be laid before the Parliament<sup>489</sup>. It is difficult, if not impossible, for the Lok Sabha to examine in detail the accounts which are complex and technical; further, it cannot spare the time required for such examination. The Lok Sabha has, therefore, constituted a Committee—the Committee on Public Accounts—and entrusted it with the detailed examination of those accounts.

Composition

The Committee consists of not more than fifteen members from the Lok Sabha and seven members from the Rajya Sabha<sup>490</sup> who are elected by the respective House every year from amongst its members according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote. A Minister is not elected a member of the Committee, and if a member, after election to the Committee, is appointed a Minister, he ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment<sup>491</sup>.

The term of office of members of the Committee is one year<sup>492</sup>; it can, however, be extended in a special case by a motion adopted by the House<sup>493</sup>. A new Committee is elected every year before the expiry of the term of office of the outgoing Committee, but it enters upon office only on the expiry of the term of the previous Committee. Usually, the Committee is set up in May every year and its term expires on April 30 of the following year.

The first Committee set up in 1921 under the Montague-Chelmsford Reforms of 1919 consisted of 12 members out of which 8 were elected by the non-official members of the Central Legislative Assembly according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote. Of the members elected at the time of constitution of the Committee, not less than half, selected by lot, were to retire on the expiry of one year from the date of their election and the rest on the expiry of the second year from the date. The retiring members were eligible for re-election<sup>494</sup>. Three members were nominated by the Governor-General. The Finance Member was the Chairman of the Committee, and in the case of an equality of votes on any matter, he had a second or casting vote<sup>495</sup>. From 1950, when the Constitution came into force, the strength of the Committee was raised to 15 members and all were elected from amongst the members of the Lok Sabha. Since 1954-55 the Committee consists of 22 members, 15 from the Lok Sabha and 7 from the Rajya Sabha.

In the beginning, the term of the Committee was for a period of three years, coinciding with the life of the Assembly. By an amendment to the Indian Legislative Rules in 1933, it was provided that when the duration of the Legislative Assembly was extended beyond the period of three years, a new Committee would be constituted at the end of the said period of three years as if a new Assembly had commenced<sup>496</sup>.

Casual vacancies occurring in the Committee are filled on a motion moved in the House concerned. The motion in the Lok Sabha is moved by the Chairperson of the Committee, and in the Rajya Sabha by a member of the Committee from that House. Members elected to fill the casual vacancies serve for the unexpired term of the Committee.

When any member of the Committee from Rajya Sabha retires under the provisions of the Constitution<sup>497</sup> from that House, the vacancy caused in the Committee by such retirements is filled by nominating another member from that House. In such cases a motion is moved in the Lok Sabha recommending to the Rajya Sabha that they do agree to nominate another member from that House to associate with the Committee for the unexpired term of the Committee. The Lok Sabha is officially informed through a message about the name of the member appointed by that House. On retirement from the Rajya Sabha if the member is re-elected to that House, he/she is eligible for membership of the Committee again.

Up to the year 1949-50, casual vacancies in the Committee were filled by election according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote by the non-official members of the Assembly, if the member who vacated the seat had been an elected member. If the vacancy occurred by the vacation of a seat by a nominated member, it was filled by nomination by the Governor-General. A member elected or nominated to the casual vacancy held office for the period for which the person in whose place he has been elected or nominated would have normally held office<sup>498</sup>.

Chairperson of the Committee: The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee<sup>499</sup> and Chairperson's term of office is one year, as that of the Committee. Up to the end of the Third Lok Sabha, the Chairman of the Committee had been chosen from the majority party in Parliament. However, in 1967, a member of the Opposition Group (Swatantra) was, for the first time, appointed Chairman of the Committee and the practice has since continued.

The Finance Member of the Governor-General's Executive Council was the Chairman of the Committee when it was set up for the first time in 1921. The term of office of the Chairman was co-terminus with the term of the Committee (which was three years)<sup>500</sup>. The Finance Member/Minister ceased to act as the Chairman of the Committee in 1950 when the Constitution came into force, and the secretarial functions of the Committee which till then were in the hands of the Ministry of Finance were also taken over by the Parliamentary (now Lok Sabha) Secretariat.

Functions

The main functions of the Committee are to examine the Appropriation Accounts showing the appropriation of sums granted by Parliament for the expenditure of the Government of India, the annual Finance Accounts of the Government of India and such other Accounts laid before the House as the Committee may think fit<sup>501</sup>. In scrutinising the Appropriation Accounts of the Government of India and the report of the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon, the Committee has to satisfy itself: that the moneys shown in the accounts as having been disbursed were legally available for, and applicable to, the service or purpose to which they have been applied or charged; that the expenditure conforms to the authority which governs it; and that every reappropriation has been made in accordance with the provisions made in this behalf under the rules framed by competent authority<sup>502</sup>.

The Committee has also<sup>503</sup> to—examine the statement of accounts showing the income and expenditure of State corporations, trading and manufacturing schemes, concerns and projects together with the balance sheets and statements of profit and loss accounts which the President may have required to be prepared or are prepared under the provisions of the statutory rules regulating the financing of a particular corporation, trading or manufacturing scheme or concern or project and the report of the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon (excluding such public undertakings as have been allotted to the Committee on Public Undertakings)<sup>504</sup>;

examine the statement of accounts showing the income and expenditure of autonomous and semi-autonomous bodies, the audit of which may be conducted by the Comptroller and Auditor-General of India either under the directions of the President or by a statute of Parliament<sup>505</sup>; and consider the report of the Comptroller and Auditor-General in cases where the President may have required the Comptroller and Auditor-General to conduct an audit of any receipts or to examine the accounts of stores and stocks.

Excess Expenditure

If any money has been spent on any service during a financial year in excess of the amount granted by Parliament for that purpose, the Committee examines with reference to the facts of each case the circumstances leading to such an excess and makes such recommendations as it deems fit<sup>506</sup>. If considered necessary, the Committee submits a separate report on excesses<sup>507</sup>. The report sets out the various excesses with the reasons for them, and states the objections, if any<sup>508</sup>, to their being approved. If the Committee has recommended the regularisation of the excesses, Demands for Excess Grants are presented to the House and the Minister of Finance, Railways or both, as the case may be, approaches the House for grants/appropriations to cover the excess expenditure<sup>509</sup>.

In order to expedite the regularisation of excesses over grants, the Committee has recommended that the Comptroller and Auditor-General should report these excesses to Parliament in advance of his Audit Report on the Appropriation Accounts<sup>510</sup>.

Nature and Scope of Examination

The functions of the Committee extend 'beyond the formality of expenditure to its wisdom, faithfulness and economy'. The Committee thus examines cases involving losses, nugatory expenditure and financial irregularities. When any case of proved negligence resulting in loss or extravagance is brought to the notice of the Committee, the Ministry concerned is called upon to explain as to what action, disciplinary or otherwise, has been taken to prevent a recurrence. In such cases the Committee also records its opinion either disapproving the action of the Government or passing strictures against the extravagance or lack of proper control by the Ministry or Department concerned<sup>511</sup>.

506. Rule 308(4).

507. The Committee have presented a number of separate reports, e.g., 21R, 24R (PAC-1LS); 2R, 9R, 10R, 16R, 23R, 27R (PAC-2LS).

510. 21R (PAC-1LS), para 8.

Another important function of the Committee is the discussion of points of financial discipline and principle<sup>512</sup>.

The Committee is not concerned with questions of policy in the broad sense. As a rule, it expresses no opinion on points of general policy, but it is within its jurisdiction to point out whether there has been extravagance or waste in carrying out that policy<sup>513</sup>.

Since one of the functions of the Committee is to act as the check on unwise methods of expenditure, it undoubtedly possesses the power, if necessary, to intervene in matters of administration and to examine the systems under which the Ministries work. Such intervention is, however, rare. The Committee usually concentrates on the general control to secure economy and leaves questions of internal administration to the Ministry concerned<sup>514</sup>. It can nevertheless call attention to weak points in the administration itself, leaving it to the Ministry to remedy them<sup>515</sup>.

The functions of the Committee, set up under the Indian Legislative Rules in 1921, were confined to the scrutiny of the audited and appropriation accounts of the Governor-General in Council, with a view to satisfying itself that the money voted by the Assembly had been spent within the scope of the demand granted by the Assembly. The Committee was also to bring to the notice of the Assembly every reappropriation from one grant to another grant; every reappropriation within a grant which was not made in accordance with rules prescribed by the Finance Department; and all expenditure which the Finance Department had asked for<sup>516</sup>.

The Committee in the early period of its work was not entrusted with the examination of accounts relating to defence expenditure as that expenditure was 'non-voted'. In 1923, however, it was decided to submit a copy of the Auditor-General's report on defence accounts to the Committee for information only. Subsequently, a decision was taken to subject the report of the Auditor-General to the scrutiny of a Departmental Committee (called the Military Accounts Committee), consisting of the Finance Member, the Finance Secretary and the Army Secretary, and to place the report of this Committee before the Public Accounts Committee which the latter could incorporate in its own report.

516. Indian Legislative Rules, 1921, rules 52(1) and (2).

The constitutional position of the Committee on Public Accounts was examined in 1926 and a conclusion was reached that the Committee was entitled to consider and offer comments on the Audit and Appropriations Report and the Auditor-General's report relating to the expenditure, voted or non-voted, or receipts. The defence expenditure thus came under the jurisdiction of the Committee. But the Military Accounts Committee continued to examine the defence accounts as before prior to their submission to the Public Accounts Committee. In 1931, on the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee, the Military Accounts Committee was reconstituted to consist of the Finance Member as Chairman, the Finance Secretary and three non-official members nominated by the Public Accounts Committee from amongst its members. The Military Accounts Committee so reconstituted continued to function till 1947. The defence expenditure having become a voted expenditure, thereafter, the Appropriation Accounts of the Defence Services and Audit Reports thereon were considered and dealt with by the Committee as a whole in the same way as other voted expenditure and the ad hoc Military Accounts Committee ceased to function.

Examination of Revenue Matters

The receipts of the Customs Department had been a subject of Audit scrutiny since 1929. The Audit of receipts from Union Excise, Corporation Tax and Income Tax had been taken up on a permanent basis by the C&AG only from 1 April 1961. The First Report on the Audit of these Revenue Receipts was given by the C&AG in the Audit Report (Civil), 1962. A beginning was made by the Public Accounts Committee (1962-63) towards examination of these receipts and it presented a separate Report on the subject, namely, the sixth Report (Third Lok Sabha). The practice of scrutinising the Reports of the C&AG on Revenue Receipts has since been followed regularly by the Committee which now examines various aspects of Government's tax administration, including cases involving under-assessment, tax evasion, non-levy of duty, mis-classification, etc.

Suo Motu* Examination of Reports of Comptroller and Auditor-General before their Presentation to Parliament

The Committee can examine the Audit Report even before it is presented to Parliament but the Committee cannot submit any report thereon to the House until the relevant Accounts and Audit Reports are formally laid before Parliament<sup>517</sup>.

517. In 1950, in consultation with the Ministries of Finance and Law, it was decided that the Appropriation Accounts and Audit Reports thereon be circulated to members of Parliament, pending their presentation to Parliament. As regards the question whether the Public Accounts Committee can proceed to examine those documents, Speaker Mavalankar decided that the Committee should examine them at that stage, as this would give them more time to do the work but they could not submit any report thereon to the House until the relevant Accounts and Audit Reports were formally laid before the House.

Examination of cases not included in the Reports of Comptroller and Auditor-General

The Committee has of its own accord inquired into the various irregularities which have become public or which have been brought to the notice of the Government, even though no formal Audit Reports were presented on the subjects or were presented later<sup>518</sup>.

During 1958-59, the Public Accounts Committee examined the working of two Cess Funds<sup>519</sup>—Coal Mines, Labour Safety and Conservation Fund and Coal Mines, Labour Housing and General Welfare Fund, even though there was no mention about these funds in the Audit Report. Similarly, matters regarding unauthorised import of infected hop plants; foreign participation and collaboration in a number of medical and agricultural research projects and experiments carried out in India; tax evasion by a foreign bank; planning process and monitoring mechanism in relation to irrigation projects; time and cost overrun in the development and production of the Main Battle Tank; impact on the central excise duty concessions in respect of manmade fibres and yarn granted in the Budget, 1988 on prices; alleged unauthorised importations of plant and machinery; misdeclaration and under-invoicing of goods by a textiles manufacturer, etc., were examined<sup>520</sup> by the Committee without these being based on audit paragraphs. The Public Accounts Committee (1995-96 and 1996-97) also selected the subject of “Privatisation of Bailadila Iron Ore Mines” for detailed examination on the basis of observations made by the Speaker during the course of a debate on this subject in the Lok Sabha. In view of the severe hardships and the inhuman conditions faced by the lakhs of devotees thronging the hill shrine of Sabarimala the Public Accounts Committee (2003-2004) selected the subject “Pilgrimage to Sabarimala—Human Problems and Ecology” for detailed examination and presented its Report<sup>521</sup> to Parliament. On the basis of nationwide concerns expressed over alleged irregularities committed in the allocation of 2G Spectrum under the Unified Access Service Licence (UASL) regime, the Public Accounts Committee (2009-10) under the Chairmanship of Gopinath Munde, member, decided to take up the subject ‘Recent Developments in the Telecom Sector, including Allocation of 2G & 3G spectrum, for detailed examination and report. The subject was carried forward by the next (2010-2011) under the Chairmanship of Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi. The Committee called for relevant documents from different Ministries/Departments and took evidence of the representatives of the Department of Telecommunications, Ministry of Finance, one ex-Chairman, TRAI and one non-official expert from the Telecom Sector. The C&AG Report on the subject was tabled in the Parliament thereafter (No. 19 of 2010-11).

Examination of Cases Referred to the Committee

In 1986, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha made a reference to the Public Accounts Committee to examine the propriety of the Government issuing and laying certain notifications seeking exemption from levy of customs and Central Excise Duties on the eve of the Budget, 1986. The Committee examined the issue in-depth and furnished a reply to the Chairman, Rajya Sabha giving their comments on the reference. On 11 November 1986, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha made an announcement in the House on the observations of the Committee received by him.

The Committee also examined a specific case in pursuance of a reference made by the Speaker, Lok Sabha, on a specific request by the Minister of Finance for making a comprehensive inquiry into all aspects of the issue relating to refunds of Central Excise Duties in cases of unjust enrichment, and presented a Report<sup>522</sup> thereon.

A later development in the working of the Committee has been its detailed evaluation of performance of the executive in implementing nation-wide development programmes affecting vast segments of the population. The Committee has produced<sup>523</sup> reports on National Highways; Food for Work programme; Planning process and monitoring mechanism in relation to irrigation projects; Drought prone area programme; District Industrial Centres; IRDP; NREP; Central Pollution Control Board; Janata Cloth Scheme; National Cancer Control Programme, etc. In the recent years the Committee examined and presented Reports<sup>524</sup> on Ganga Action Plan; National Scheme of Liberation and Rehabilitation of Scavengers and their Dependents; National AIDS Control Programme; Department of Ayurveda, Unani, Siddha & Homoeopathy; Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan Scheme etc.

Another important feature of the working of the Committee has been to conduct system appraisals in the field of revenue collection with a view to ascertaining as to what extent the existing systems have been able to fulfil the underlying objectives. The Committee has produced reports<sup>525</sup> on Customs Receipts—Working of Inland customs Bonded Warehouses, Union Excise Duties—Price Lists, Assessment Procedure—Summary and Scrutiny Assessment, Assessment of Lottery Business, Project Import, Assessment of Small Scale Industrial Undertakings, Assessment of Religious and Charitable Trusts, Functioning of Investigation Circles, System Defects in the Working of Chief Accounting Offices, Union Excise Duties—Provisional Assessments, the Advance Licencing Scheme, Union Excise Duties—Different classification for Similar Products; Assessment of Private Schools, Colleges and Coaching Centres; Status of Improvement of Efficiency through the ‘Restructuring’ of the Income Tax Department etc.

Examination of Cases Pending before a Court of Law

If the Committee is examining or proposes to examine a case the subject-matter of which is under adjudication by a court of law and the Government put forth the plea that an examination of the case at that stage by the Committee would be prejudicial to the interest of the case, the Committee postpones consideration of that case<sup>526</sup>.

Consideration of Audit Reports and Selection of Paragraphs

At the beginning of the term of each Committee, the Secretariat circulates to the members of the Committee the Reports of the C&AG that have been laid on the Table of the House since the time the last selection of paragraphs for in-depth examination by the Committee was made. In its first meeting the members of the Committee suggest the important Audit Reports/paragraphs which, according to them, might be selected for in-depth examination. After detailed deliberations, the Committee selects the more important Audit Reports/paragraphs for examination during the course of the year keeping in view the availability of time. In making these selections, the Committee is assisted by the Officers of the Secretariat and the representatives of Audit.

Although the Committee takes up only a limited number of Audit Reports/paras every year for detailed examination, it has evolved a built-in system from 1982 onwards to see that action is initiated promptly by the Executive on all the Audit paragraphs. Under this system, the Ministries/Departments concerned are required to intimate to the Committee, through the Ministry of Finance, corrective action taken or proposed to be taken on all the paragraphs contained in the Reports of the C&AG within a period of four months<sup>527</sup> from the date of the laying of the relevant Audit Reports on the Table of the House. This system ensures the accountability of the Executive in respect of all the issues dealt with in the Audit Reports.

Sub-Committees and Working Groups

Whenever the Committee decides to examine a matter involving serious financial irregularities, etc., referred to in the Appropriation Accounts or Audit Reports thereon, or even otherwise, it may appoint a Sub-Committee to go into that matter. A Sub-Committee, so appointed, has the powers of the undivided Committee and its report, after the Committee’s approval, is deemed to be the report of the whole Committee.

527. Revised period introduced w.e.f. the Reports of the C&AG for the year ending 31 March 1996 onwards vide 9 R(11LS).

Commencing from the year 1967-68 the Chairperson every year constitutes an 'Action Taken Sub-Committee' consisting of the conveners of the different working groups of the Committee to examine and report on the replies of the Government to the recommendations contained in the earlier reports of the Committee.

With a view to enabling the Committee to apply itself intensively to certain aspects of its work, Working Groups are constituted by the Chairperson, in consultation with the members of the Committee, as soon as a new Committee is formed. Members of the Groups are chosen by the Chairperson having regard, as far as possible, to the known aptitude of the members and other factors. The Chairperson also appoints a convener and an alternate convener for each Working Group, one or the other of whom acts as the leader of the Group concerned and presides over its sittings.

Working Groups are constituted during each term of the Committee for the different Accounts such as Civil, Defence, Railways, Posts, etc. Sometimes two or more Accounts have also been entrusted to the same Group. Each Group makes a detailed study of the Accounts and Audit Report thereon assigned to it. The Group is assisted by the Comptroller and Auditor-General or by the senior officer with all connected material. In consultation with the Comptroller and Auditor-General or his representatives, the Audit paragraphs are classified under three heads: most important; important; and not so important. The idea underlying the classification by the Working Group is that the Committee should devote greater attention to important paragraphs so that the examination can be conducted in depth. The Working Group does not present any report on its working to the Committee as it works purely in an informal manner.

On-the-spot Study Group

Whenever any irregularities are disclosed in an Audit paragraph or in the Appropriation Accounts relating to a particular office, factory, installation or institution which necessitate an on-the-spot study in order to make an assessment of the actual working of that organisation, institution, etc., the Committee undertakes tour with the approval of the Speaker.

Such tours are undertaken either by the whole Committee or by its Study Groups. Members in their individual capacity do not undertake such on-the-spot study.

At the place of the visit<sup>528</sup>, the Committee does not sit as a Committee. It does not hear witnesses, nor calls for documents, nor examines the officers. In the course of the tour, the Committee's inquiry is not, however, necessarily limited to the points raised in the Appropriation Accounts and Audit Report. No physical verification of stock or stores is conducted by the Committee but the storage conditions and system of store-keeping and stock verification may be studied generally.

528. The first visit undertaken by the Sub-Committee of the Public Accounts Committee was in December 1952, to the Hirakud Dam Project for the purpose of witnessing, on the spot, construction of various works, viz.. bridges, irrigation canals, dams, etc.

Impressions of visits: A note summing up the impressions of the study tour is prepared and further information, if any, required by the Committee in the light of the visit is collected from the Ministries concerned. The notes thus prepared are for the use and information of members.

Members of the Committee cannot individually communicate to the Ministry or the Minister their views or impressions on the working of a Government office, project or undertaking which they might have gathered as a result of their on-the-spot study.

Comptroller and Auditor-General

The Comptroller and Auditor-General (C&AG) is an important adjunct of the Committee. C&AG is appointed by the President by warrant under his hand and seal and can only be removed from office in like manner and on like grounds as a judge of the Supreme Court<sup>529</sup>. The appointment is made by the President on the advice of the Prime Minister. Before the Comptroller and Auditor-General enters upon this office, he/she subscribes before the President or some other person appointed in that behalf by the President, an oath or affirmation according to the form set out in the Constitution<sup>530</sup>.

The duties and powers of the Comptroller and Auditor-General have been described elsewhere<sup>531</sup>. The Audit Reports of the Comptroller and Auditor-General stand automatically referred to the Committee.

When the official witnesses are being examined by the Committee, the Comptroller and Auditor-General sits to the right of the Chairperson and assists as the evidence is being taken. As per established convention, With the permission of the Chairperson, C&AG may ask a witness to clarify a point or pose a question and may further make a statement on the facts of the case<sup>532</sup>.

To assist the Committee in the examination of matters contained in Audit Reports/ paragraphs, the Comptroller and Auditor-General furnishes to the Committee a Memorandum of Important Points (MIP) on each para selected by the Committee. Advance information on these points is called from the Ministry. The MIP is then further supplemented by questions framed by the Secretariat of the Committee in the light of advance information received from the Ministry, tour notes of the Committee, relevant debates of the House, replies to questions in the Houses, press reports and previous reports of the Committee on the subject, if any. These questions form the basis of examination of representatives of the organisation or Ministry concerned.

532. In a sitting of the PAC held on 9 January 2007, Chairman, PAC clarified that CAG has a right to intervene and ask questions with the permission of the Chair.

Sittings of the Committee

Soon after the Committee is constituted, a preliminary sitting is held to consider the programme of work for the year. The programme of sittings is drawn up by the Secretariat and approved by the Chairperson<sup>533</sup>.

A day (usually the first day of the programme) is set apart for an informal sitting of the Committee when members discuss with the Comptroller and Auditor-General or with one of C&AG's senior officers the important points arising from the Accounts to be examined:

According to the decision of the Committee which examined the Accounts of 1926-27, the first ten minutes of each sitting, where departmental witnesses were called in, used to be devoted each day to a preliminary consultation between the members and the Comptroller and Auditor-General. Proceedings of such sittings were recorded. However, a practice has subsequently developed whereby the proceedings of briefing sessions are not recorded.

Evidence

The Committee calls officials to give evidence in connection with the examination of accounts relating to a particular Ministry. A Minister is not called before the Committee either to give evidence or for consultation in connection with the examination of those accounts<sup>534</sup>. Where a Minister makes a specific request to appear before the Committee, he/she may be permitted only if the Chairperson considers it desirable after he/she has had a talk with the Minister<sup>535</sup>. The normal practice is that after the deliberations are concluded, the Chairperson may, when he/she considers it necessary, have an informal talk with a Minister relating to the accounts of that Ministry which were under consideration of the Committee in order to apprise the Minister of: (i) any matter of policy laid down by a Ministry with which the Committee do not fully agree; and

(ii) any matter of secret and confidential nature which the Committee would not like to bring on record in their report.

The Committee may reconsider its conclusions in the light of such talk but the Committee does not otherwise pursue further any of the matters with the Minister after they have been brought to the notice of the Minister concerned by the Chairperson. However, such informal talks between the Chairperson and the Minister concerned have seldom taken place.

533. Copies of the programme are circulated to: Ministries of the Government of India; the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Accounts/Audit Officers concerned; and the Secretariats of the State Legislative Assemblies whenever the sittings of the Committee extend to more than three consecutive days, with a view to facilitating the Chairpersons and the members of State Public Accounts Committees and their officers to witness the sittings, if they so desire. A communiqué notifying the programme of sittings of the Committee is also released to the Press.

534. Dir. 99(1).

535. 50 R (PAC-3 LS)—such instances are, however, rare.

Examination of the representatives of Private Companies, Non-Government Bodies, etc.

Where the Committee takes up examination of the working of an agreement entered into by the Government of India with a private company or any other non-Government body, the Committee may, if it deems fit, summon or give an opportunity to the representatives of the company or the non-Government body, as the case may be, to appear before it and to give evidence on any points arising therefrom on which the Committee might desire to have further information or the representatives might wish to give elucidation<sup>536</sup>.

Preparation and Presentation of Report

After the examination of the Appropriation Accounts and Audit Reports thereon has been completed and all relevant information obtained from Government, the draft report is prepared by the Secretariat based on the evidence, oral and written, given before the Committee by the departmental representatives. The draft report is then submitted to the Chairperson for approval and a copy thereof is forwarded to the Comptroller and Auditor-General for factual verification. When the Committee sits to consider the draft report as approved by the Chairperson, the Comptroller and Auditor-General is also present at the sitting to point out changes in the facts and figures, where necessary.

No minute of dissent is permissible.

The report as finally adopted by the Committee is presented to the House by the Chairperson or in the Chairperson's absence by any other member of the Committee so authorised by the Chairperson. A copy of the report is also laid on the Table of Rajya Sabha by a member of the Committee from Rajya Sabha, duly authorised by the Committee. In case the Rajya Sabha is not in session on the date when the report is presented to the Lok Sabha, an authenticated copy of the report is sent to the Rajya Sabha Secretariat with an intimation about the presentation of the report to Lok Sabha and a request that the report be laid on the Table of Rajya Sabha when it sits next.

The report of the Committee consists of an Introduction, the Report, proper, Proceedings (Minutes) of the relevant sittings of the Committee and Appendices (containing notes submitted by the Ministries and decided by the Committee to be incorporated in the report). Where the material to be incorporated in the report becomes bulky, it is split up into two or more volumes.

Implementation of the Recommendations

Initially a statement showing action taken or proposed to be taken by the Government on the recommendations of the Committee was compiled by the Secretariat. This statement enabled the Committee to watch how far its recommendations have been implemented by the Government. The statement, in which each recommendation of the Committee on the Accounts of a particular year was also summarised, was forwarded to the Ministries concerned for necessary action, who was required to keep the Secretariat informed of the action by them on these recommendations. On the basis of the information thus furnished, the statement was revised and brought up-to-date<sup>537</sup> and was placed before the Committee when it next took up the examination of the Accounts relating to the respective Ministries. The statement enabled the Committee to know at a glance the action taken or proposed to be taken in respect of each of the recommendations listed therein.

In the beginning, the decisions arrived at by the Government on the recommendations made by the Committee in its report were recorded in a Resolution of the Finance Department which was also published in the Gazette. This practice was reviewed in 1929 and in pursuance of the recommendation of the Committee (1929-30), the practice of issuing an omnibus Resolution was discontinued in 1930 and instead the Finance Department started issuing quarterly statements of action taken by various Departments of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Committee<sup>538</sup>. The practice of preparing quarterly statements was discontinued at a later stage and only one statement, which inter alia included items which remained outstanding from the previous reports, was compiled on the basis of the information furnished by the Ministries concerned. This system continued till 1950 when the secretarial functions of the Committee were transferred to the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

In the sixties, the practice of presenting separate Action Taken Report on such main report of the Committee set in. An Action Taken Report is based on the set of replies received from the Government normally within six months of presentation of the main report. It comprises of five Chapters— Chapter I: Report; Chapter II: Recommendations which have been accepted by Government; Chapter III: Recommendations which Committee do not want to pursue in view of Government's replies; Chapter IV: Recommendations which the Committee wants to reiterate; and Chapter V: Recommendations in respect of which final replies of Government have not been received. After presentation of Action Taken Report Government are supposed to intimate to the Committee the action taken or proposed to be taken on the recommendations contained in Chapter I and final replies in respect of Chapter V. Statements containing these

537. In April 1955, the Comptroller and Auditor-General suggested that with a view to ensuring expeditious action being taken on the recommendations of the Committee, the Cabinet Secretariat might be entrusted with the work of consolidating the comments of the various Ministries of the Government of India and submitting them to the Committee early in the year. Centralising of these functions in the Cabinet Secretariat did not seem to the Committee to be the solution for the delays that occurred in the implementation of their recommendations. On the other hand, the Committee thought that this course would divide the responsibilities of the Ministries in the matter of furnishing information to the Committee. It would also mean duplication as the Secretariat already consolidated the information and presented it to the Committee.

The existing arrangement makes the Ministries directly responsible to the Committee and also facilitates disposal of work by the Committee.

538. Finance Department, Government of India, Res. No. D/1200-B, dt. 13 June 1930.

Government replies are laid on the Table of both the Houses without further comments of the Committee. However, the Committee may, if it thinks fit, present another Action Taken Report<sup>539</sup> on the recommendations included in Chapter V, i.e. the recommendations in respect of which Government had furnished interim replies/no reply at the time of finalisation of its Action Taken Report.

Procedure in Case of Disagreement between the Government and the Committee

Recommendations of the Committee are treated with respect by the Government and most of them are accepted and implemented. In the event of any disagreement between the Government and the Committee in regard to any recommendation contained in the report of the Committee, the Government have, in the first instance, to apprise the Committee of the reasons that might have weighed with them in not accepting or implementing a recommendation.

The Action Taken Sub-Committee of the Public Accounts Committee examines the 'action taken' notes received from the Ministries/Departments and draws up separate 'Action Taken' reports which are subsequently adopted by the main Committee and presented to the House. Before finalising its report the Action Taken Sub-Committee can call<sup>540</sup> the representatives of the Ministries/Departments for informal discussions and thus obtain clarification on points arising out of the notes furnished by the Government and also speed up the replies where they have not been received.

In the case of the Fourth Report of the Committee, 1952-53, the Government deviated from this procedure and laid a statement on the Table on 11 August 1953, without placing the views before the Committee in the first instance. Thereupon, the Speaker directed that a circular should be sent to all the Ministries that in cases where Government had reasons to disagree with the recommendation of the Committee, the Ministry concerned should, in consonance with the well-established procedure, place its views before the Committee who may, if they think fit, present a further report to the House after considering the views of the Government in the matter.

Again in 1954, the Minister concerned laid a copy of the note on the Table which had been submitted to the Committee in connection with its observations in the Ninth Report (1953-54), without waiting for the Committee to consider that note and present a further report in the matter to the House. A brief statement by the Finance Minister was also laid along with the note with a request to the House to treat the matter as closed. The Committee considered the procedure as inappropriate and expressed the view that in accordance with the well-established parliamentary practice the consideration stage by the House should arise only after the Committee had made its final recommendation after reconsideration of the Government's views<sup>541</sup>.

539. The Committee (1977-78) presented 64th Action Taken Report.

540. The Committee (1986-87) took the evidence of the representatives of the Ministry of Railways and Deptt. of Public Enterprises.

Discussion on the Report

Although it is open to the Lok Sabha to discuss reports of the Committee, such discussion is seldom held, but members may make use of the Committee's reports in their speeches during the discussion on the Budget, Demands for Grants etc. However, if there is a specific issue over which there is a divergence of opinion between the Committee and the Government or a Minister, that issue can be brought before the House and discussed<sup>542</sup> on a motion, the discussion being confined to the remarks, observations and comments of the Committee, and neither the motion nor a substitute motion thereto is put to the vote of the House<sup>543</sup>.

Till 1946, reports of the Public Accounts Committee had been discussed in the Legislative Assembly on a formal motion moved by the Finance Member. Discussion on the report in the Assembly commenced from the year 1930 on the recommendation of the Committee itself which had in its report said that 'the Government should consider the best methods of giving effect to the strong desire expressed in the Assembly that the House should be given an opportunity to discuss in general terms the report of the Public Accounts Committee on which the excess grants were based<sup>544</sup>. The first discussion was confined to questions of general nature and scope of the Committee. The motion was not put to vote<sup>545</sup>. The following year, however, after the Finance Member had replied to the debate on the report of the Committee, the motion was put to the vote of the House and adopted. This procedure continued to be in force except that in 1944 an amendment to the motion of the Finance Member was also moved and adopted by the House<sup>546</sup>. Another change took place in 1946. The Finance Member, while moving the motion for the consideration of the Committee's report that year, also moved for the regularisation of the expenditure incurred in excess of voted grants during the year to which the report related<sup>547</sup>.

Committee on Estimates

So much of the estimates as relates to expenditure other than that charged upon the Consolidated Fund of India is submitted to the Lok Sabha in the form of Demands for Grants, and the Lok Sabha has the power to assent or to refuse to assent to any demand, or to assent to any demand subject to the reduction of the amount specified

542. Addressing the Conference of Chairmen of Public Accounts Committees in 1959, the Speaker said:

"A rambling discussion of the whole report tends to destroy the effectiveness of the recommendations of the Committee. I am, therefore, of opinion that special points should be raised for discussion, more particularly those points where there is an unresolved difference of opinion between the Committee and the Government."

therein. It has also the power to discuss but not to vote the estimates which relate to expenditure charged upon the Consolidated Fund of India<sup>548</sup>. The Lok Sabha, even though it discusses the estimates for a sufficiently long period<sup>549</sup>, nevertheless finds that it has neither the time nor the flexibility to discuss the details and the technical aspects of the estimates. The Lok Sabha has, therefore, set up a Committee called the Committee on Estimates for this purpose.

After the Constitution came into force, provision was made in the Rules for the setting up of a Committee on Estimates. Speaker Mavalankar, informing the House of the addition made in the Rules, said<sup>550</sup> :

Consequent upon the provisions of articles 113 to 116, as also independently thereof, it was felt necessary to constitute a Committee on Estimates for better financial control of the House over expenditure by the Executive. The chief functions of this Committee will be to examine such of the estimates as may seem fit to it and to suggest economies consistent with the policy underlying the estimates. There will be, in addition, the usual Committee on Public Accounts. The functions of these Committees will be mutually complementary and, it is expected, they will not only give a picture of the entire financial position but the Committees will be mutually helpful in examining the finances for the future in the light of the expenditure in the past.

It was in 1937 that an enquiry was first made<sup>551</sup> in the Central Assembly whether the Government had any proposal for the setting up of an Estimates Committee on the lines of the Select Committee on Estimates of the House of Commons. The Finance Member (Sir James Gigg) replied in the negative. In the following year, an amendment was moved by a member to a resolution moved by a private member for the appointment of a retrenchment Committee, the amendment seeking to constitute instead an Estimates Committee. The constitution of an Estimates Committee was favoured by the Finance member but the Assembly, due to certain reasons, did not accept the amendment<sup>552</sup>. Again in 1944<sup>553</sup> when the suggestion for the setting up of that Committee was revived in the Assembly, the Finance Member turned down the proposal on the plea that the Government officials were already over-burdened in assisting the Public Accounts Committee and the Standing Finance Committee.

In 1949, the Secretary of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative), in a Memorandum on the reform of Parliamentary Procedure in India, emphasized the need for subjecting the estimates, presented to Parliament to a detailed examination. Since sufficient parliamentary time could not obviously be made available for examining in detail the estimates nor did the ordinary members possess expert knowledge of details of administration and financial insight, he stressed that for an effective parliamentary control over expenditure, there must be a properly constituted Committee of the House endowed with necessary powers to examine both the appropriation accounts and the estimates<sup>554</sup>. The proposal was ‘strongly supported’ by Speaker Mavalankar. The Government accepted this recommendation and the Minister of Finance referred to it in his Budget speech on 28 February 1950<sup>555</sup>.

Composition

The Committee consists of not more than thirty members<sup>556</sup> who are elected by the House every year from amongst its members according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote<sup>557</sup> on a motion adopted by the House. This system of election ensures that each Party/Group is represented on the Committee in proportion to its strength in the Lok Sabha. In April each year a motion for election of members to the Committee is moved by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs at the commencement of each Lok Sabha and in subsequent years by the Chairperson of the Committee before the term of that Committee is due to expire<sup>558</sup>.

In order to maintain continuity in membership of the Committee and to make available to the Committee the experience gained by members for a period longer than one year, a convention has been established that while nominating members for election, Parties and Groups in the House keep in view that as far as possible the same members serve the Committee for two consecutive terms.

A Minister is not elected to the Committee and if any member after his election is appointed a Minister, he/she ceases to be a Member of the Committee from the date of such appointment<sup>559</sup>.

The term of the Estimates Committee commences on 1 May every year, but the term of the first Committee of a new Lok Sabha may commence on any day after the constitution of the new House. The term, however, invariably terminates on 30 April of the following year. The term of office of the members of the Committee is limited to the term of the Committee.

Chairperson of the Committee: The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee who, besides the functions common to the Chairpersons of Parliamentary Committees in general<sup>560</sup>, performs certain other functions in connection with the working of the Committee. For instance, the Chairperson, by convention, finally decides as to whether a particular document or information, which is held to be secret, need be called for from the Government and whether such information or document need be made available to all the members of the Committee<sup>561</sup>. The Chairperson determines whether cases regarding the classification of 'charged' items in the Budget require to be examined by the Committee<sup>562</sup> and undertakes informal talks with the Ministers or representatives of the Ministries, if necessary, on specified matters<sup>563</sup>.

If the Chairperson of the Committee ceases to be a member of the Committee, the Committee does not hold any sittings till a new Chairperson is appointed.

Functions

The Committee examines such of the estimates as may seem fit to it or are specifically referred to it by the House or the Speaker, with a view:

to reporting what economies, improvements in organisation, efficiency or administrative reform, consistent with the policy underlying the estimates, may be effected; to suggesting alternative policies in order to bring about efficiency and economy in administration; to examining whether the money is well laid out within the limits of the policy implied in the estimates; and to suggesting the form in which the estimates shall be presented to Parliament<sup>564</sup>.

The Committee does not exercise its functions in relation to such public undertakings as are allotted to the Committee on Public Undertakings under the Rules of Procedure or by the Speaker.

At the beginning of its term every year, the Committee selects subjects concerning any part of the estimates of a Ministry or Ministries for examination during the year.

It is not incumbent on the Committee to examine the entire estimates of any one year. The Committee selects about six to eight Ministries for a year, and reports to the House as its examination proceeds. The guiding principle for selection is that one round of examination of the important estimates of all Ministries should, as far as possible, be completed within the life of each Lok Sabha<sup>565</sup>.

Ad hoc subjects of importance which prima facie appear to deserve examination in detail are also referred to the Committee from time to time by the Speaker or the House. Such references are made either through directions of the Speaker<sup>566</sup> in the House or in the form of communication<sup>567</sup> to the Chairperson of the Committee from the Speaker. The Committee may also take up any matter of sufficient importance for ad hoc examination by itself or on the suggestion of a member of the Committee provided that the matter does not relate to a proposal of Government which has not been finalised<sup>568</sup>.

Examination of ‘Charged’ Items

It is open to the Committee to call the details of expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund of India<sup>569</sup> and to scrutinise whether the classification of items of expenditure between ‘voted’ and ‘charged’ has been done strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution and Acts of Parliament<sup>570</sup>.

The Ministry of Finance informs the Committee of the decisions which the Government may take from time to time regarding the inclusion of ‘charged’ item of expenditure in the Budget for the first time, or whenever a change is made in the classification of an item of expenditure from ‘voted’ to ‘charged’ or vice versa.<sup>571</sup>

Similarly, whenever Government want to make any change in the format or the information to be given in the Budget papers on Demands for Grants, the matter is referred to the Committee for their recommendations<sup>572</sup>.

Examination of Matters of Special Interest

The Committee also examines matters of special interest which, though unconnected with the particular estimates, may arise or come to light in the course of its work and which it may consider necessary to bring to the notice of the House<sup>573</sup>.

After the Committee has selected the subjects, the Ministry concerned is asked to furnish detailed information regarding its organisation, set-up, activities, the broad

571. While examining the Budget Estimates for 1959-60, a question arose whether it was correct to treat the interest payments on capital advanced by the Government of India to Departments run on commercial lines as charged items under article 1 12(3)(c). The matter was referred to the Ministry of Finance for clarification. The Ministry decided after consultation with the Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Ministry of Law that such items of expenditure would be treated in future as voted items and not charged because they did not constitute the liability of the Government of India within the meaning of article 1 12(3)(c). The change in the classification was given effect to in the Budget Estimates for the year 1961-62.

572. 37R (EC-8LS).

573. For example, the Committee presented reports on ‘Administrative, Financial and other Reforms’—9R (EC-1LS); ‘Organization and Administration of Nationalised Industrial Undertakings’—16 R (EC-1LS); ‘Preparation of Budget Estimates of Public Undertakings and Presentation of their Annual Reports and Accounts to Parliament’—73R (EC-2LS); ‘Public Undertakings—Forms and Organization’—80R (EC-2LS), etc.

details of estimates, particulars of expenditure, etc. After studying the material so received, members send their suggestions or any points on which further information is required by them. These points and suggestions are consolidated in the form of a questionnaire and are considered by the concerned Sub-Committee or Study Group. After the questionnaire is approved by the Chairperson, it is sent to the Ministry for furnishing replies.

The fundamental objectives of examination by the Committee are economy and efficiency in administration and ensuring that money is well laid out within the limits of the policy implied in the estimates. The Committee does not go into or comment on a policy approved by Parliament<sup>574</sup> but where it is established on evidence that a particular policy is not leading to the expected or desired results, or is leading to waste, it is the duty of the Committee to bring to the notice of the House that the change in the policy would be desirable.

The Committee is at liberty to examine policies laid down by Governments as distinct from those approved by Parliament. It is also open to the Committee to examine any matter which may have been settled as a matter of policy by the Government in the discharge of its executive functions<sup>575</sup> and the Committee has at times suggested alternative policies in order to bring about efficiency and economy in administration<sup>576</sup>.

Formation of Sub-Committees/Study Groups

The Committee may, whenever considered necessary, appoint Sub-Committees and Study Groups for securing flexibility in working and for detailed scrutiny of the subjects selected for examination.

During the first two years of its existence, the Committee did not appoint any Sub-Committee. It was during 1950-51 and 1951-52 that the Committee for the first time appointed Study Groups to which were allocated specific subjects for intensive study.

574. In the course of his address at the inaugural sitting of the Committee (1959-60), the Speaker clarified the exact scope of the function of the Committee in the following words :

“Your function is not to lay down policy. Whatever policy is laid down by Parliament your business is to see that policy is carried out...not divorced from its financial implications. It is only where a policy involves expenditure and you find that the policy has not worked properly, you are entitled and competent to go into it. Where the policy is leading to waste, you are entitled to comment on it in a suitable way.”

575. For instance, the Committee recommended separation of the Transport Ministry from the Ministry of Railways and placing it under the charge of a separate Minister for Transport-19R (EC-1LS), para 42; amalgamation of the two Shipping Corporations-38R (EC-2LS), para 24; abolition of the Salt Organisation and creation of an autonomous Salt Board—15R (EC-1LS), para 21 and 22; re-examination of the question of continued existence of Cantonments—46R (EC-1LS), para 91.

576. For instance, the Committee suggested transfer of the subject of minor ports from the ‘Concurrent List’ to the ‘Union List’-51R (EC-1LS), para 44; reduction in the excise duty on steel for securing better export market-33R (EC-2LS), para 186; re-adjustment in the allocation of funds under the Second Plan and allotment of additional funds for acquisition of ships-38R (EC-2LS), para 71; levy of customs and excise duties on the aviation fuel used by the Air Corporations-43R (EC-1LS), para 82 and 83.

The formation of Study Groups enables the Committee to divide its work among the members so that they may specialise in particular subjects and study them intensively. The Study Groups are constituted by the Chairperson. Members of the Groups are chosen by the Chairperson after taking into account the wishes of the members to serve on them.

The Chairperson also appoints a Convener for each Study Group who acts as the leader of the Group and presides over its sittings. Study Groups are appointed during the term of the Committee to deal with fresh subjects, action taken by Government on earlier reports, and procedural matters. Study Groups may also be appointed to deal with any ad hoc subjects.

The Study Group dealing with a fresh subject is required to study intensively the material supplied by the Ministry or Department, etc.; to prepare the questionnaire for issue to that Ministry or Department after approval of the Chairperson; to undertake study tours and record impressions thereof; to indicate broad points on which the Secretariat may draft reports; and to discuss draft reports before circulation to the main Committee.

The Study Group dealing with action taken by the Government on earlier reports of the Committee is required to scrutinise replies received from Government; to indicate points on which the Secretariat may draft reports; and to discuss draft reports before circulation to the whole Committee.

The Study Group dealing with the procedural matters is generally composed of Conveners of Groups, and the Chairperson of the Committee acts as its leader. The Group draws up a tentative programme of work for the Committee, Sub-Committee and Study Groups; discusses procedural matters before they are referred to the whole Committee; co-ordinates the work between the various Study Groups or Sub-Committees, etc.

Study Tours by the Committee

The Committee undertakes on-the-spot study tours to acquaint itself with the working of an establishment under examination. Local offices are also visited by the Study Group or Sub-Committee concerned. For the purpose of tours, the Committee usually divides itself into two Study Groups.

Notes relating to the working of the establishments to be visited are called for in advance from the concerned Ministry and circulated to the members of the Study Group. A list of points for informal discussion is also drawn up.

While on tour the Study Group may hold informal sittings but no decisions are taken at such sittings nor is any evidence taken<sup>577</sup>.

The Study Group may discuss points to elicit relevant information but it does not express any view. It is not authorised to give any information or interview to the Press or to any outsider in relation to the discussion held or observations made or impressions gathered.

---

A note summing up the impressions of the study tour is prepared and further information, if any, required by the Committee in the light of the visit is collected from the concerned Department.

After its approval by the Chairperson/Convenor of the respective Study Group, copies of the note are kept in the room of the Chairperson for reference by members of the Committee.

Assistance to the Committee

The Committee does not favour obtaining technical advice on matters selected for examination<sup>578</sup>. Not being a technical Committee, it does not go into matters of technical detail. In order to obtain a fuller picture of the subjects under examination, the Committee usually invites non-official experts and representatives of leading non-official bodies and organisations interested in the subject to give evidence.

Evidence

Calling of Official Witnesses

The Committee calls officials concerned to give oral evidence in connection with the examination of the estimates relating to a particular Ministry or Department. Where a Ministry or Department is required to give evidence before a Committee on any matter, the Ministry or Department is represented by the Secretary or the Head of the Department as the case may be. The Chairperson of the Committee may however, on a request being made to him, permit any other senior officer to represent the Ministry or Department before the Committee. Where it is felt that views of Ministries other than those whose estimates are under examination would be useful, their representatives are also called to give evidence on the subject<sup>579</sup>. A Minister is not called before the Committee either to give evidence or for consultation in connection with the examination of the estimates by the Committee<sup>580</sup>. When considered necessary, but only after the deliberations of the Committee are concluded, the Chairperson may have an informal talk with a Minister, the estimates of whose Ministry were under consideration of the Committee, in order to apprise the Minister of any matters of policy laid down by that Ministry with which the Committee do not fully agree and any matter of secret and confidential nature which the Committee would not like to bring on record in its report.<sup>581</sup> Although it is open to the Committee to reconsider its conclusions in the light of such talk, it does not otherwise pursue further any of the matters with the Minister<sup>582</sup>.

578. Suggestions that experts in the subjects under examination be appointed to assist the Committee in its work have not been accepted by it.

580. Dir. 99(1).

581. Dir. 99(2).

Formal evidence of a Minister is thus not recorded but informal reference to obtain information may be made to him/her in connection with any matter before the Committee. In their capacity as members of a commission or a statutory body, Ministers sometimes appear before the Committee and discuss matters<sup>583</sup>.

Ministers of State Governments are held in the same position as Ministers of the Union Government, and the Committee accordingly does not summon State Ministers to appear before it. The State Ministers may, however, forward their views to the Chairperson for being brought to the notice of the Committee<sup>584</sup>.

Examination of Non-official Witnesses

When necessary, the Committee also calls for oral evidence, experts, representatives of industries, non-official and organisations experts, prominent public men, retired Government officers, etc. whose evidence is considered to be of help to the Committee in its investigations. The selection of non-official witnesses for evidence before the Committee is generally made after taking into account the memoranda, etc. submitted by them.

Examination of the Representatives of Private Companies, Non-Government Bodies, etc.

Where the Committee takes up examination of the working of an agreement entered into by the Government of India with a private company or any non-Government body, the Committee may summon or give an opportunity to the representatives of the Company or the non-Government body, as the case may be, to appear before it and give evidence on any points on which the Committee desires to have further information, or on which the representatives would like to give elucidation<sup>585</sup>.

List of Points/Questions for Oral Examination

A list of points and/or questions for oral examination of the official and non-official witnesses, incorporating therein any suggestions that may be received from members, is prepared by the Secretariat for approval of the Chairperson. After the Chairperson's approval, advance copies of the list are circulated to the members of the Committee<sup>586</sup>. The Chairperson puts questions from the list one by one to the witnesses. If a member desires to ask a supplementary question for elucidating a point, it is done so with the permission of the Chairperson<sup>587</sup>.

Minutes

The minutes of the sittings of the Committee are compiled separately for each report or group of reports as may be convenient. Minutes form part of the Report as Annexures and are presented to the House along with the Report to which they relate<sup>588</sup>.

Recording of Dissenting Views

Minutes of dissent are not appended to a report of the Committee. However, when a member strongly disagrees with certain points in a report and expresses a desire that his views should be recorded, the fact is recorded in the minutes, if agreed to by the Committee.

Preparation of Report

When the examination of any part of the estimates of a Ministry has been completed by the Committee, a draft report is prepared by the Secretariat<sup>589</sup>. After the Chairperson's approval, it is circulated to the members of the Committee for being considered and adopted at its sitting<sup>590</sup>. However, in respect of a report of the Sub-Committee on Defence, such portions of the report as are considered by the Chairperson to deal with confidential matters which it is not advisable to make public in the interest of security are not placed before the whole Committee but forwarded by the Chairperson to the Speaker<sup>591</sup>.

When members are not likely to assemble together for a period of time, they authorise the Chairperson to finalise the report of the Committee by circulation and in the light of the comments offered by them<sup>592</sup>. Likewise, if a sitting of the Committee called for the purpose of consideration of a draft report is adjourned for want of quorum, the report is adopted by circulation.

Factual Verification of the Reports

Advance copies of the report, as adopted by the Committee excluding recommendations, are marked 'Secret' and sent to the concerned Ministry or Department for factual verification. They are required to treat the contents of the report as secret until it is presented to the House<sup>593</sup>. Draft reports which concern more than one Ministry are usually sent to all concerned Ministries or to the nodal Ministry which acts as the co-ordinating agency.

On receipt of the comments of the Ministry or Department, the Chairperson makes suitable modification in the report to correct factual inaccuracies, if any, or places the matter before the Committee for consideration when additional facts, likely to alter recommendations, are furnished by the Ministry<sup>594</sup> before it is presented to the House.

Discussion on the Report of the Committee

As a convention, reports of the Committee, like those of the Public Accounts Committee, are not discussed by the House, the idea being that as the reports are detailed and deal with diverse subjects, recommendations of the Committee in a general discussion may not be viewed in their proper perspective<sup>595</sup>. The discussion may also not afford sufficient time and scope for presentation of full data which is a prerequisite for proper appreciation of the details of the reports.

Moreover, the discussion of the report in the House may proceed on party lines and thus come in the way of the healthy convention under which the Committee's recommendations are made without reference to party affiliations.

As far as the Government are concerned, they are given full opportunity to present their point of view both at the time of factual verification of a draft report and again at the time of sending intimation regarding action taken on the recommendations of the Committee, and the Government's view point finds due place in the reports of the Committee.

It is open to the members to ask questions during Question Hour or raise points with regard to the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee when the Demands for Grants of the Ministry concerned are placed before the House<sup>596</sup>.

Implementation of the Recommendations

Although technically the recommendations of a Parliamentary Committee are not formally described as directions by the House, they are in practice regarded as such by a long-standing convention. The recommendations of the Estimates Committee are generally accepted by the Government and acted upon.

After the Committee's report is presented to the House, copies thereof are forwarded to the Ministry concerned by the Secretariat with a request that replies to recommendations contained in the report be sent not later than six months<sup>597</sup> from the date of its presentation to the House. On receipt of the replies showing the action taken by the Government on the recommendations contained in the report of the Committee, these are examined by the Secretariat or the Study Group/Action Taken Sub-Committee appointed for the purpose and is placed before the Chairperson together with the recommendations of the Study Group.

597. If the replies are not received within six months, a reminder is issued to the Ministry concerned and they are asked to furnish replies within three months failing which the Committee would finalise report on the action taken by Government without waiting further.

If there is any point which in the opinion of the Study Group and/or the Chairperson requires consideration by the Committee, it is specifically referred to the Committee<sup>598</sup>.

On the basis of the comments made by the Committee or the Study Group, a draft Action Taken Report is prepared consisting of the following Chapters: I. Report; II. Recommendations/Observations that have been accepted by the Government; III. Recommendations/Observations which the Committee do not desire to pursue in view of Government replies; IV. Recommendations/Observations in respect of which replies of the Government have not been accepted by the Committee; and V. Recommendations/Observations in respect of which final replies of the Government are still awaited<sup>599</sup>.

The draft report is considered by the concerned Study Group/Action Taken Sub-Committee and after the Chairperson's approval, it is circulated to the members of the Committee for adoption. Sitzings of the full Committee are convened for consideration and adoption of the report. The report, after factual verification by the Ministry or Department concerned, is finalised by the Chairperson and is presented to the House.

Laying of Action Taken Statements

While forwarding the Action Taken Report to the Government, the Ministry concerned shall be asked to furnish as early as possible statements of action taken or proposed to be taken by them on the recommendations contained in Chapter I and final replies to the recommendations contained in Chapter V of the Report. The replies so received are consolidated in the form of a statement and after Chairperson's approval, laid on the Table of the House without further processing or comments by the Committee<sup>600</sup>.

Committee on Public Undertakings

The introduction of planned economic development in the country and the adoption of the Industrial Policy Resolutions by the House in 1948 and 1956 led to a steady growth of various enterprises which are controlled and managed by the Government of India. Several statutory corporations and Government companies involving large investment of capital funds thus came into existence. The performance of such public undertakings became a live subject for discussion, and the Lok Sabha decided that since the moneys required to finance them are appropriated from the Consolidated Fund of India, Parliament should have adequate control over their affairs. With this object in view, a Committee on Public Undertakings was constituted.

The question of exercising adequate parliamentary control over public enterprises was discussed for the first time in the Lok Sabha in 1953<sup>602</sup>. The creation of separate Parliamentary Committee to look into the affairs of various categories of public corporations, companies and institutions was suggested<sup>603</sup>, but Government thought it inadvisable to proceed with the setting up of the Committee at that time<sup>604</sup>.

Speaker Mavalankar, in a letter of 19 December 1953, addressed to the Prime Minister, had observed that there was a general feeling in favour of appointing a standing Parliamentary Committee to examine the working of autonomous public corporations. He pointed out that the Estimates Committee and the Public Accounts Committee were already over-burdened with work and would not be able to find time to go into the working of these corporations<sup>605</sup>. The Prime Minister, in his reply, observed that there should be overall control of Parliament over autonomous and semiautonomous corporations. He, however, added that the object of having autonomous corporations would be defeated, to some extent, if there was any interference in their day-to-day working.

The demand for setting up a separate Committee to take over the functions in relation to public corporations or autonomous bodies from the Estimates and the Public Accounts Committee was again put forward in 1956 but with no result<sup>606</sup>. On the suggestion of the Chairman of the Estimates Committee, a Sub-Committee of the Estimates Committee was constituted in July 1957 to deal with the public undertakings.

On 10 April 1958, the Prime Minister appointed a Sub-Committee of the Congress Party in Parliament to consider the problems relating to State-owned corporations and companies and to suggest how broad supervision could be maintained by Parliament in the day-to-day activities of these concerns. The Sub-Committee endorsed the suggestion of Speaker Mavalankar for the setting up of a separate Committee of Parliament for public undertakings. On 24 November 1961, the Government decided to appoint a Joint Committee on State Undertakings. On the same day a motion for the constitution of the Committee, with 10 members from the Lok Sabha and 5 from the Rajya Sabha, was moved in the House but further discussion was postponed due to objections raised by some members<sup>607</sup>. Later, the matter was taken up in the Rajya Sabha and the members of that House objected to their association with the Committee unless they were given full rights<sup>608</sup>. After taking into consideration the various objections raised by members in both the Houses, the Government, on 21 September, 1963, moved in the Lok Sabha two revised motions for constituting the Committee which were later adopted by the House<sup>609</sup>, and the Rajya Sabha also agreed to associate its members with the Committee<sup>610</sup>. In pursuance of these motions, the Committee was constituted for the first time with effect from 1 May 1964.

Composition

When initially set up, the Committee on Public Undertakings consisted of fifteen members. Ten members were elected by the Lok Sabha from amongst its members according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote. Five members from the Rajya Sabha, elected in like manner, were associated with the Committee. In order to cope with the increase in the number of undertakings, the strength of the Committee was raised from fifteen to twenty-two since 1974-75, fifteen members being elected from the Lok Sabha and seven from the Rajya Sabha<sup>611</sup>. The members of the Rajya Sabha are invited to associate with the Committee on a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha and concurred to by the Rajya Sabha. A Minister is not elected a member of the Committee. If a member, after his election to the Committee, is appointed a Minister, he/she ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment.

The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee.

The term of office of members of the Committee does not exceed one year<sup>612</sup>. However, the term of office of members of the Committee constituted for the first time with effect from 1 May 1964, was for the duration of the Third Lok Sabha, i.e. for about three years. "The term of the Committee is usually between 1 May of the year of constitution to 30 April of the following year. In case, if the Committee is constituted later than 1 May of a particular year, like in an election year, the term of that Committee shall nevertheless end on 30 April of the following year<sup>613</sup>".

Filling of Casual Vacancies

Casual vacancies occurring in the Committee are filled on a motion moved in regard thereto in the House concerned. The motion in the Lok Sabha is moved by the Chairperson of the Committee and in the Rajya Sabha by a member of the Committee from that House<sup>614</sup>. Prior to the moving of such a motion in the Rajya Sabha that they do agree to nominate a member from that House to associate with the Committee for the unexpired term of the Committee, a motion is adopted by the Lok Sabha recommending to the Rajya Sabha to fill a casual vacancy and the Lok Sabha is officially informed through a message about the name of the member elected by that House. The same procedure is followed to fill a casual vacancy when any member of the Committee from the Rajya Sabha retires under the provisions of the Constitution.

Functions

The functions of the Committee are:

- (a) to examine the reports and accounts of such public undertakings as have been specifically allotted to the Committee for this purpose<sup>615</sup>;
- (b) to examine the reports, if any, of the Comptroller and Auditor-General on public undertakings;
- (c) to examine, in the context of the autonomy and efficiency of public undertakings, whether the affairs of the public undertakings are being managed in accordance with sound business principles and prudent commercial practices; and
- (d) to exercise such other functions vested in the Public Accounts Committee and the Estimates Committee in relation to the public undertakings specified for the Committee as are not covered by clauses (a), (b) and (c) above and as may be allotted to the Committee by the Speaker from time to time<sup>616</sup>.

614. A motion was to be moved in the Rajya Sabha to nominate three members in the vacancies caused by the resignation of three members from the Committee. There was no member of the Rajya Sabha on the Committee to move the motion (as there had already been two vacancies due to the retirement of members from the Rajya Sabha which had not been filled by then). The motion was moved by the Minister of State in the Department of Parliamentary Affairs—R.S. Deb., 12-5-1956.

615. The public undertakings specified for the Committee are:

I. Public undertakings established by Central Acts namely, Damodar Valley Corporation; Life Insurance Corporation; Central Warehousing Corporation; Food Corporation of India; The Airports Authority of India; The Industrial Development Bank of India.

II. Every Government company whose annual report is placed before the Houses of Parliament under sub-section (1) of section 619A of the Companies Act, 1956.

III. Specific enterprises, namely Hindustan Aeronautics Ltd., Bharat Electronics Ltd., Mazagon Dock Ltd., and Garden Reach Shipbuilders and Engineers Limited.

As in March 1999, there were 248 Public Undertakings (including their subsidiaries) within the purview of the Committee.

616. State Government Undertakings do not fall within the purview of the Committee. Kerala State came under the President's rule from 10 September 1964, and the Government of India became responsible for the administration of the State. During 1965-66, the Committee took up the examination of seven Kerala State Government Companies under the direction of the Speaker on a request made by the Governor of the State.

Besides, a matter of public importance with which a public undertaking is concerned may be referred to the Committee by the Speaker for examination and report<sup>617</sup>.

The Committee does not examine and investigate any of the following:

matters of major Government policy as distinct from business or commercial functions of the public undertakings; matters of day-to-day administration; and matters for the consideration of which machinery is established by any special statute under which a particular public undertaking is established<sup>618</sup>.

The examination of public undertakings by the Committee is generally in the nature of an evaluation of the performance of an undertaking covering all aspects like implementation of policies, programmes, management, financial working, etc.

Procedure in Committee

At the beginning of each term, the Committee selects<sup>619</sup> the subjects or the undertakings for examination during the course of the term. It is also the practice to select<sup>620</sup> a few subjects or undertakings in advance for the ensuing year.

Besides the full-fledged examination of an undertaking or a subject, a Committee can also conduct a limited inquiry into the affairs of an undertaking which are of topical interest. In such cases, the Chairperson is authorised to ascertain full facts from the undertaking concerned without prior reference to the Committee<sup>621</sup>.

The Ministry or the undertaking concerned with the subjects to be examined by the Committee is asked to furnish preliminary material for use of the members of the Committee. The material on receipt is circulated to the members who, after going through it, frame questions or points on which further information is required by them. Based on these points as also on an independent scrutiny of the preliminary material and other available literature on the subject, the Secretariat, with the approval of the Chairperson, prepares a questionnaire for the examination of concerned undertakings and the Ministries. The questionnaire is circulated to the members of the Committee as well as to the concerned undertaking/Ministry well before the evidence of the representatives of undertaking/Ministry is held. If the evidence of an undertaking/Ministry is not completed on the affixed dates, the undertaking/Ministry is required to send written replies for the remaining questions within a specified period. The replies, when received, are circulated to members of the Committee and if the Committee considers necessary, further evidence of the undertaking/Ministry may be taken.

620. Min. (CPU), 24-12-1964 and 10-3-1966.

621. Ibid., 8-9-1964.

The Committee may also invite memoranda on the subjects under examination from non-official organisations such as chambers of commerce, trade organisations, professional consultants, companies in the private sector and also from private individuals. Memoranda are called for from such non-official organisations, etc. as have shown a keen interest in the subject or have expert knowledge of the industry and whose views may be of help to the Committee.

The Committee may also call for memoranda from the chief office-bearers of registered unions of the undertakings taken up for examination. As and when the Committee visits any of the undertakings or projects under examination, an opportunity is given to the registered unions of employees or workers of that undertaking to express their views on the working of the undertaking. If it is deemed necessary, the Committee asks the unions to send their representatives to Delhi, at their own expense, to give further evidence before the Committee. The views of the unions on matters like productivity, cost of production, avoidance of waste, efficiency and economy are taken into consideration but the Committee does not go into individual cases or matters pertaining to industrial disputes<sup>622</sup>.

Horizontal Study of Public Undertakings

In addition to the public undertakings selected for examination, the Committee also takes up horizontal study of a few common aspects or problems of these undertakings<sup>623</sup>. In such cases, information on the particular aspects or problems selected for examination is called for from all the undertakings. After the information has been received and scrutinised, evidence of the representatives of the concerned Ministries is taken. In other respects, the procedure adopted by the Committee in such horizontal studies does not differ much from that followed in the examination of individual undertakings.

Study Groups/Sub-Committees

After the selection of subjects, Study Groups are appointed for carrying out detailed studies of the subjects selected and providing assistance to the Committee in intensive examination of the subjects. A Sub-Committee is also appointed to consider the replies of the Government indicating action taken on the various recommendations of the Committee in their earlier reports and also to consider the draft 'action taken' report.

622. Min. (CPU), 8-9-1964 and 24-9-1964.

623. The Committee has examined important aspects like Material Management, Financial Management, Public Relations and Publicity, Production Management, Personnel Policies and Labour Management Relations, Role and Achievements of Public Undertakings, Foreign Collaboration in Public Sector Undertakings, Structure of Boards of Management of Public Undertakings, Appointment of Auditors in Government Companies, Management and Control Systems, Productivity in Public Undertakings, Accountability and Autonomy in Public Undertakings, Disposal of scrap of Public Undertakings, Litigations pending in Public Undertakings, Social Responsibilities and Public Accountability of Public Undertakings and Sickness in Public Undertakings, Oil Exploration, Health Insurance, and Performance of Power generating PSUs.

Study Tours

The Committee undertakes tours to make a study of the working of the undertakings under examination if it appears to the Committee that a study on-the-spot should be made<sup>624</sup>. The itinerary is so prepared as to enable the Committee to visit a number of projects and offices of the undertakings under examination in the same tour. The tours are arranged when Parliament is not in session. Besides such tours, visits to a project or an office near about Delhi or visits to local offices are also arranged during a weekend.

While on tour, the Committee, like the other Parliamentary Committees, holds informal sittings at the place of the visit where the working of the undertaking is discussed with the project authorities but at such sittings, no decisions are taken nor any evidence recorded<sup>625</sup>. Occasionally, the Committee holds discussions with the representatives of non-official organisations to have their views and suggestions on the working of the undertakings under examination. A note summing up the impressions formed and discussions held with the officials and others during the tours is prepared by the Secretariat and circulated to the members of the Committee after it is approved by the Chairperson.

Evidence

The Committee calls officers of the undertaking to appear before it to give evidence in connection with the examination of that undertaking, and the evidence is usually completed in two to four sittings of the Committee. Thereafter, the Committee takes evidence of the officers of the administrative Ministry concerned. Whereas discussion with the Officers of the undertaking relates to matters connected with the detailed working of the organisation, evidence of the Ministry is concerned with policy matters and such other matters for which the Ministry is responsible, partly or wholly. The practice of calling the representatives of an undertaking separately from those of the concerned administrative Ministry has been established in view of autonomy claimed for the undertakings and in order to afford them full scope to put forward their points of view freely.

When the evidence of the representatives of an undertaking is being held, the representatives of the administrative Ministry concerned are not permitted to be present and vice versa.

Assistance of Comptroller and Auditor-General

The Committee takes the assistance of the Comptroller and Auditor-General or his representatives in pursuing such matters as have been raised in the Audit Report (Commercial) or in the Audit Reports pertaining to Government companies or statutory corporations which have been taken up for examination. The Committee obtains a 'Memorandum of Important Points' from the Comptroller and Auditor-General on the issues raised in the Audit Reports. Suitable questions are framed on the basis of the Audit Reports and the memorandum furnished by the Comptroller and Auditor-General. When the Committee takes evidence of the representatives of the undertakings under examination, it is assisted by the Comptroller and Auditor-General or his representatives who may, with the permission of the Chairperson, ask a witness to clarify a point or may make a statement on the facts of a case. The association of the Comptroller and Auditor-General or his representatives in the discussion is confined only to points relating to Audit paras; when such discussion is over, they withdraw from the Committee room.

Before taking evidence of the representatives of an undertaking, the Committee holds an informal meeting with the Comptroller and Auditor-General for clarification of any points arising out of the Audit paragraphs.

Preparation and Presentation of Report

After the examination of a subject has been completed, the Committee frames its conclusions and recommendations for inclusion in the report<sup>626</sup>. On the basis of these conclusions and recommendations, a draft report is prepared by the Secretariat. After the Chairperson's approval, it is circulated to the members of the Committee and considered at a sitting held for the purpose<sup>627</sup>.

Advance copies of the report (excluding recommendations) as adopted by the Committee are marked "Secret" and sent to the Ministry and undertaking concerned for verification of factual details. Portions of the report which are based on, or are related, to Audit paragraphs are sent to the Comptroller and Auditor-General for factual verification. It is enjoined on them to treat the contents of the report as secret until its presentation to the Lok Sabha<sup>628</sup>.

Any comments that may be offered by the Ministry and the undertaking are placed before the Chairperson who makes suitable modifications in the report to correct factual inaccuracies. When additional facts which are likely to alter decisions contained in the report are furnished by the Ministry, the Chairperson may place the matter before the Committee for consideration<sup>629</sup>.

An authenticated copy of the report is presented in the Lok Sabha by the Chairperson but if the Chairperson is unable to do so then one of the members of the Committee is authorised to present it on Chairperson's behalf. Simultaneously, the report is laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha by one of the members of the Committee belonging to that House authorised by the Committee in this behalf. If the Rajya Sabha is not in Session on the day on which the report is to be presented to the Lok Sabha, the report is laid on the Table of that House when it assembles next.

626. On matters of minor importance, the Committee authorises the Chairperson to convey the views of the Committee directly to the Ministry concerned, instead of incorporating them in the report.—Min. (CPU).

As a convention, the reports of the Committees like those of the Estimates Committee and the Public Accounts Committee are not discussed in the House.

Minutes of Sitzings

The minutes of the sittings of the Committee are prepared by the Secretariat for each report and copies thereof, duly authenticated by the Chairperson are laid on the Tables of both the Houses alongwith the report to which they relate<sup>630</sup>.

Implementation of Recommendations

After the presentation of the Committee's report to the Lok Sabha, copies thereof are forwarded to the Ministry and the undertaking concerned who are required to furnish to the Secretariat within six months of the presentation a statement showing the action taken by the Government on the recommendations contained in the report. The Action Taken Sub-Committee headed by the Chairperson examines the statement and prepares an Action Taken Report consisting of the following Chapters:

I. Report; II. Recommendations that have been accepted by the Government; III. Replies of the Government that have been finally accepted by the Committee; IV. Replies of the Government that have not been finally accepted by the Committee; and V. Recommendations in respect of which final replies of the Government have not been received.

The draft report is later considered and adopted by the whole Committee. The draft 'Action Taken Report' as adopted by the Committee without recommendations is sent to the Ministry/Department and undertaking concerned for factual verification. The Chairperson of the Committee finalises the Report in the light of comments of the Ministry, etc. and decides the date of its presentation.

Replies received from the Government to the recommendations<sup>631</sup> in respect of which comments were made by the Committee in Chapter I and the final replies to the recommendations contained in Chapter V of the Action Taken Report are laid on the Tables of both the Houses by the Chairperson or a member of the Committee without further processing or comments by the Committee.

Committee of Privileges

Each House of Parliament collectively, and its members individually, enjoy certain privileges, i.e. certain rights and immunities without which the House and its members cannot discharge the functions entrusted to them by the Constitution. The object of these privileges is to safeguard the freedom, the authority and the dignity of the House, its Committees and members<sup>632</sup>. Where there is any question of an

631. The Ministry/Department/Undertaking is not required to furnish comments on the 'Action Taken Reports' except in cases where replies to any recommendation in the original reports have been reported as outstanding or the Committee have otherwise specifically desired so in Chapter I of the Report.

632. For details about powers, privileges and immunities of the Lok Sabha, etc., see Chapter XI.

alleged breach of a privilege, the matter may be examined by the House but generally it is referred by the House to its Committee of Privileges for examination, investigation and report.

At the commencement of a new Lok Sabha and thereafter from time to time, the Speaker nominates the Committee consisting of not more than fifteen members<sup>633</sup>. Usually, the Committee is reconstituted each year alongwith other Parliamentary Committees of the Lok Sabha. In constituting the Committee, the Speaker takes into consideration the claims, interests and the strength of various Parties and Groups in the House so that the Committee is fully representative. The Minister of Law and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs are generally included in the Committee. The Deputy Speaker, when a member of the Committee, functions as the Chairperson of the Committee<sup>634</sup>.

The Committee of Privileges was first appointed by the Speaker on 1 April 1950<sup>635</sup>. Initially, only ten members were appointed to the Committee. Subsequently, the strength of the Committee, as in the case of the other Parliamentary Committees, was increased to fifteen in order to give adequate representation to various Parties and Groups in the House. The Committee reconstituted on 2 May 1955, for the first time consisted of fifteen members<sup>636</sup>.

Functions

When leave to raise a question of privilege is granted by the House, the House may consider the question itself and come to a decision or refer it to the Committee for consideration and report on a motion made either by the member who raised the question or by any other member<sup>637</sup>. In practice, the House usually refers almost all questions of privilege to the Committee and reserves its judgment until the report of the Committee is presented<sup>638</sup>.

Besides, the Speaker may also suo motu refer any question of privilege to the Committee for examination, investigation and report<sup>639</sup>. In such cases, the Committee presents its report to the Speaker who may either direct that the report be laid on the Table<sup>640</sup> or that no further action be taken on the report. When the report is laid on the Table, further action in the matter is taken in accordance with the decision of the House. In certain cases, where the question of privilege was referred to the Committee by the Speaker after a brief discussion in the House, the Committee presented its report to the House<sup>641</sup>.

There arose a case in 1967 when opinion was divided in the House about the alleged breach of privilege. Instead of referring the matter to the Committee of Privileges, the issue was decided on the floor of the House—L.S. Deb., 5-4-1967, cc. 2914-3001. In another case, in 1970, a question of alleged breach of privilege was decided on the floor of the House without referring the matter to the Committee by summoning two concerned police officers and accepting their apologies—L.S. Deb., 3-12-1970, cc. 185-87.

It is the duty of the Committee to examine every question of privilege referred to it to determine with reference to the facts of each whether a breach of privilege is involved and, if so, the nature of the breach, the circumstances leading to it, and make such recommendations as it may deem fit<sup>642</sup>. Thus, the Committee may recommend some specific form of punishment to be awarded to the offenders<sup>643</sup>. The Committee may also suggest the procedure that might be followed by the House in giving effect to the recommendations made by it<sup>644</sup>.

The Committee has also sometimes been required by the House or the Speaker to consider questions of procedure relating to the privileges of the House<sup>645</sup>. In one case, the Committees of Privileges of the Lok Sabha and of the Rajya Sabha held joint sittings and presented a joint report on the question of procedure to be followed in cases where a member or an officer of one House is alleged to have committed a breach of privilege or contempt of the other House<sup>646</sup>.

With the coming into force with effect from 18 March 1986, of the Members of Lok Sabha (Disqualification on Ground of Defection) Rules, 1985 made by the Speaker under paragraph 8 of the Tenth Schedule to the Constitution<sup>647</sup> an additional function has been assigned to the Committee. The Speaker may, if he/she is satisfied having regard to the nature and circumstances of the case that it is necessary or expedient to do so, refer<sup>648</sup> a petition regarding disqualification of a member on ground of defection to the Committee for making a preliminary inquiry and submitting a report to the Speaker<sup>649</sup>. The procedure<sup>650</sup> followed by the Committee for the purposes of making a preliminary inquiry is generally the same as the procedure for inquiry and determination by the Committee of any question of breach of privilege of the House. The Committee does not come to any finding that a member has become subject to disqualification under the Tenth Schedule without affording a reasonable opportunity to such member to represent his case and be heard in person<sup>651</sup>.

The Committee does not associate any person or body from outside, formally or informally, with its deliberations.

When a question of privilege is referred to the Committee by the House or by the Speaker, a memorandum on the subject is prepared by the Secretariat for the consideration of the Committee. The memorandum sets out briefly the issue(s) involved, the facts of the case, and the law, practice and precedents bearing on the question. This memorandum is circulated to the members of the Committee along with the notice of the sitting at which the matter is to be considered by the Committee. The Committee may also ask the Secretary-General to have a memorandum prepared for their consideration on any specific point of fact or law involved in the matter<sup>652</sup>.

For a proper examination of the question of privilege involved, the Committee may hear the member who raised the question of privilege in the House<sup>653</sup>, or permit that member to explain the case in a written statement<sup>654</sup>, or hear any other member of the House who may desire to place his views before the Committee on the question of privilege under consideration<sup>655</sup> or decide not to hear that member<sup>656</sup>. Where the breach of privilege involved is that of a member of the House, usually the Committee affords that member an opportunity to explain the case before the Committee in person<sup>657</sup>.

The Committee has the power to send for persons, papers and records<sup>658</sup>. A witness may be summoned by an order signed by the Secretary-General to appear before the Committee and to produce such documents as may be required for the use of the Committee<sup>659</sup>. It is the general practice for the Committee to give an opportunity to the person alleged to have committed a breach of privilege or contempt of the House to submit his explanation to the Committee in writing<sup>660</sup>, and also in person<sup>661</sup>. The Committee may, under the direction of the Speaker, permit a witness to be heard by a counsel appointed by him and approved by the Committee<sup>662</sup>. The Committee may, where the facts of the case are disputed, administer oath or affirmation to a witness examined before it<sup>663</sup>.

Where the charge of a breach of privilege or contempt of the House is based on some document, the Committee may ask for the production of the document in original<sup>664</sup>.

The Committee decides in each case whether the evidence, oral or written, given before it should be appended to its report<sup>665</sup>. No minutes of dissent are appended to the reports<sup>666</sup>, but the Committee may agree that it be mentioned in the minutes that a member expressed dissent from its report or findings or recommendations<sup>667</sup>. The Committee has also permitted a note containing the views of its member(s) being appended to its report<sup>668</sup>.

Consideration of Report

After the report of the Committee has been presented to the House, the Chairperson or any member of the Committee or any other member may move that the report be taken into consideration, whereupon the Speaker may put the question to the House. Before putting the question, the Speaker may permit a debate on the motion which normally does not exceed half an hour in duration. In this debate it is not permissible to refer to the details of the report further than is necessary to make out a case for the consideration of the report by the House<sup>669</sup>.

To the motion that the report be taken into consideration, there can be a motion or an amendment that the House agrees, or disagrees, or agrees with amendments, with the report.

668. Deshpande Case (1LS); 4R and 5R (CPR-3LS); Indira Gandhi Case 3R (6LS).

669. Rule 315(1) and (2).

After the motion that the report be taken into consideration was adopted, a motion that the person incriminated against be asked to attend the House was moved and held to be in order, before the motion that the House agrees or disagrees, or agrees with amendments, with the report, was moved<sup>670</sup>.

A motion or an amendment relating to matters not covered by the report under consideration or referring the report back to the Committee is not in order<sup>671</sup>. In case of further developments after presentation of the report, the House may consider the matter itself instead of referring it back to the Committee<sup>672</sup>.

However, on a motion moved by the Leader of the House, a report was referred back to the Committee for consideration of certain matters arising out of that report<sup>673</sup>; and on another occasion, after hearing the member who had originally raised the question of privilege, a report was referred back, at the consideration stage, for reconsideration of the Committee<sup>674</sup>. On one occasion, the House, while accepting the findings of the Committee, referred back the report to the Committee for a review of the quantum of punishment to be awarded<sup>675</sup>.

Where the Committee reports that no breach of privilege of the House has been committed, no further proceedings are usually taken in reference to the report<sup>676</sup>. However, on the Committee reporting that no breach of privilege has been committed and recommending that no action be taken in the matter, the House may consider the report and then resolve that the matter need not be proceeded with<sup>677</sup>.

Where a regret is expressed or clarification is given by the alleged offender, the Committee may not give a finding whether or not a breach of privilege has been committed and recommend that no further action be taken by the House in the matter<sup>678</sup>. In such cases, the recommendation is invariably accepted by the House.

A motion that the report of the Committee be taken into consideration is normally accorded the priority assigned to a matter of privilege unless there has been delay in bringing it forward. The Speaker fixes the date on which the motion can be taken up, after taking into consideration the state of business before the House and the urgency of the matter. The Speaker may also consult the Leader of the House before giving the decision in the matter. However, if a date has already been fixed for the consideration

Committee on Subordinate Legislation

With the ever-widening governmental activity in a welfare State, subordinate legislation has become a necessity<sup>680</sup>. While Parliament lays down broad principles in a legislative measure, it leaves it to the Executive to frame, in conformity with those principles, formal and procedural details about that measure in the form of rules, regulations, etc. The authority so delegated to the Executive has to be kept under scrutiny. Parliament exercises the necessary check and control in this respect through the Committee on Subordinate Legislation. It is the function of the Committee to see that the rule-making power of the Executive, conferred by the Constitution or delegated by the Parliament, is being exercised within the scope of such delegation<sup>681</sup>. Each House of Parliament has its own Committee and they function independent of each other.

Composition

In the Lok Sabha, the Committee consists of fifteen members who are nominated by the Speaker<sup>682</sup>. In making selection from a panel of names submitted by the Leader of the House and by the Leaders of other Parties and Groups, the Speaker gives preference to those who have legal background and experience.

The suggestion for having a Standing Committee on Subordinate Legislation was first made in the Provisional Parliament during the Budget Session in 1950<sup>683</sup>. The rules for constituting such a Committee were framed and incorporated in the Rules on 30 April 1951<sup>684</sup>. The first Committee was constituted on 1 December 1953, and consisted of ten members. The strength of the Committee was raised to fifteen by amending the relevant rule on 9 January 1954<sup>685</sup>.

The term of office of the Committee is one year from the date of its appointment<sup>686</sup>. Like most other Standing Committee on Subordinate Legislation is constituted in the beginning of a new Lok Sabha and then reconstituted annually.

Functions

The main function of the Committee is to scrutinise and report to the House whether the powers to make regulations, rules, sub-rules, bye-laws, etc. (hereinafter referred to as 'orders') conferred by the Constitution, or delegated by Parliament, are being properly exercised within such delegation<sup>687</sup>.

The Committee also examines Bills which seek to delegate powers to make 'orders' or to amend earlier Acts delegating such powers, with a view to seeing whether suitable provisions for the laying of the 'orders' before each House of Parliament, while it is in session, for a total period of thirty days which may be comprised in one session or in two or more successive sessions, have been made therein, as also for their being subject to modification by both the Houses before the expiry of the session immediately following the session or the successive sessions aforesaid<sup>688</sup>.

The Speaker, if he so desires, may refer a Bill containing provisions for delegation of legislative powers to the Committee to examine the extent of such powers sought to be delegated<sup>689</sup>. Where powers are proposed to be delegated to State Governments or other authorities for bringing into operation any subsidiary provisions or for making any further 'orders', the Committee is to examine the necessity for such delegation as well as the extent and the manner in which such powers are to be exercised by the subordinate authorities concerned. If the Committee is of the opinion that the provisions delegating legislative powers should be annulled wholly or in part, or should be amended in any respect, it reports that opinion and the grounds thereof to the House before the Bill is taken up for consideration or further consideration in the House<sup>690</sup>.

687. Rule 317.

688. In practice, all Bills are examined by the Secretariat immediately after their introduction in, or on being transmitted by the Rajya Sabha to the Lok Sabha. If a Bill does not contain provisions for laying of 'orders' for their being subject to modification by Parliament, the matter is placed before the Committee and necessary amendment to the Bill is sponsored by a member of the Committee wherever possible. Such amendments are normally accepted by the House. See 3R (CSL-2LS), paras 25-29 and 5R (CSL-2LS) paras 28-29. Where the Bill in question is to be referred to a Select/Joint Committee, this defect is brought to the notice of that Committee at the appropriate time for incorporating the necessary provision in the Bill—5R (CSL-2LS), paras 26-27. re. the Gold (Control) Bill, 1963.

689. During the discussion on the motion for consideration of the Essential Services Maintenance Bill, 1968, the Chair referred the Bill to the Committee for examination and report, when doubts arose whether the delegation of rule-making powers contained in the Bill was of a normal or exceptional nature. The Committee was of the opinion that although the delegation of powers was normal and within the ambit of the legislative policy laid down in the Bill, the relevant clause of the Bill should be recast to provide for a positive approval by Parliament of the rules framed thereunder within forty days from the day of their being laid on the Table or from the reassembly of Parliament, as the case may be; otherwise, the rules would cease to be operative. The amendment recommended by the Committee was adopted by the House—See 3R (CSL-4LS); L.S. Deb., 12-12-1968, cc. 173-74 and 17-12-1968, cc. 217-25, 227-369 and 370.

690. Dir. 103 A.

Besides reporting to the House its opinion about annulment or modification of any ‘order’, the Committee brings to the notice of the House any other matter relating to ‘orders’ which it feels should be placed before the House<sup>691</sup>.

In practice, the Committee scrutinises all ‘orders’ made by the Government of India or by any other subordinate authority<sup>692</sup> ultimately responsible to the Government, and which are published in the Gazette or laid on the Table. The Committee does not scrutinise the ‘orders’ which are made by the State Governments in exercise of powers conferred on them by an Act of Parliament<sup>693</sup>. Similarly, the Committee does not scrutinise the rules which are made by the Supreme Court under article 145, by High Courts under the Code of Civil Procedure, and the rules made by the President in consultation with the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha and the Speaker of the Lok Sabha<sup>694</sup>.

Scope of Deliberations and Inquiry

While examining an ‘order’, the Committee considers in particular<sup>695</sup> whether it is in accord with the general objects of the Constitution or the Act pursuant to which it is made<sup>696</sup> whether it contains matter which in the opinion of the Committee should more properly be dealt with in an Act of Parliament<sup>697</sup>; whether it contains imposition

691. Rule 321(2) and Dir. 103(3).

The Committee has brought several matters before the House in the form of recommendations; e.g. giving of short titles and adequate references in the amending orders, the numbering of rules, reprinting of original rules whenever they are extensively amended, non-exercise of rule-making powers, and the avoidance of unusually long sentences in the rules, etc.—see 3R(CSL-1LS) paras 41-46; 4R (CSL-1LS), paras 30-38; 6R (CSL-1LS), paras 75-76; 3R (CSL-2LS), paras 4-6 and 30-59; 4R (CSL-2LS), paras 32-35; 5R (CSL-2LS), para 21; 6R (CSL-2LS), para 21.

692. For instance, ‘orders’ of legislative character issued by the Textile Commissioner in exercise of powers delegated by the Government of India under the Essential Commodities Act, 1955, or the rules made thereunder—See 2R (CSL-2LS), paras 55-62; bye-laws, etc. made by various Cantonment Boards under the Cantonments Act, 1924.

693. For instance, the orders made by the State Governments under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, and under several labour laws enacted by Parliament.

694. For instance, rules made by the President after consultation with the Speaker/Chairman under art. 98(3).

695. Rule 320.

696. In the case of the Delhi Transport Authority Rules, 1952, the Committee observed that the Chairman’s powers to overrule the views of the Chief Accounts Officer were contrary to section 16(3) of the Delhi Road Transport Authority Act, 1950, under which the rules had been framed—2R (CSL-1LS), paras 20-22. For other similar instances, see 3R (CSL-1LS), paras 30-31; 4R (CSL-1LS), paras 18-20; 6R (CSL-1LS), paras 29-31; 1R (CSL-2LS), paras 30-33, 62 and 72; 5R (CSL-2LS), paras 24 and 25; 20R (CSL-5LS), para 111.

697. The provisions of rule 6A of the Cinematograph (Censorship) Rules, 1951, as inserted by SRO 85 of 1953, were regarded by the Committee as substantive which ought to have been incorporated in the relevant Act rather than in the rules—2R(CSL-1LS), paras 6-8. Subsequently, the provisions were incorporated in the Act—4R(CSL-2LS), p. 19, item 1; see also 2R(CSL-1LS) paras 23-24; 3R(CSL-1LS), para 8; 3R(CSL-2LS), paras 21-25; and 19R(CSL-5LS), para 27.

of any tax<sup>698</sup>; whether it directly or indirectly bars the jurisdiction of the courts<sup>699</sup>; whether it gives retrospective effect to any of the provisions in respect of which the Constitution or the Act does not expressly give any such power<sup>700</sup>; whether it involves expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India or the Public Revenues; whether it appears to make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the Constitution or the Act pursuant to which it is made<sup>701</sup>; whether for any reasons its form or purport calls for any elucidation<sup>702</sup>; and whether there appears to have been unjustifiable delay in its publication<sup>703</sup> or in laying it before Parliament<sup>704</sup>.

Normally, all 'orders' should be published before the date of their enforcement or they should be enforced from the date of their publication. However, if in any particular case the 'orders' have to be given retrospective effect in view of any unavoidable circumstances—the retrospection having otherwise legal validity—a clarification is required to be given either by way of an explanation in the 'orders' or in the form of a footnote to the relevant 'orders' to the effect that no one will be adversely affected as a result of the retrospective effect being given to such 'orders'<sup>705</sup>.

While examining an 'order', the Committee also keeps in view the following points:

that it is couched in simple language<sup>706</sup>; that it contains, if it is an amending regulation or rule, adequate references to the principle regulation, rules, etc., and to the last amendment, if any, so that one could keep a track of the amendments in the principal rules<sup>707</sup>; that it indicates exact statutory

699. Provision of rule 6A was held by the Committee to oust the jurisdiction of courts and accordingly the provision was beyond the limits of rule-making powers—2R (CSL-1LS), paras 6-8; see also 1R (CSL-1LS), paras 14-17, and 26R (CSL-7LS), paras 28-29.

702. On the recommendation of the Committee, the term "Port Authority" was subsequently defined in the Calcutta Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Scheme, 1956, 2R (CSL-2LS), p. 20, item 13. For another instance, see 4R (CSL-2LS), paras 12-13; and 23R (CSL-7LS), para 67.

703. The Committee reported a number of cases where corrigenda to statutory rules, etc. had been published after an inordinate delay—see 6R (CSL-1LS), paras 26-28; and 6R (CSL-8LS), para 67.

704. For instance, a total of 222 cases involving delay in the laying of the orders on the Table were reported by the Committee during the First Lok Sabha, 279 cases during the Second Lok Sabha and 160 cases during the Third Lok Sabha; 93 cases during the Fifth Lok Sabha see 3R (CSL-6LS), para 7; and 99 cases during the Sixth Lok Sabha.

authority under which it has been made<sup>708</sup>; that it does not involve sub-delegation of legislative power without the authority of the parent Act<sup>709</sup> or where sub-delegation is authorised, it should not be wide and general, without proper safeguards<sup>710</sup>; that it is not likely to cause any hardship to any citizen on the ground of lack of ‘adequate notice provisions’<sup>711</sup>, that it does not contain provisions whereby the Executive is empowered to issue orders affecting the interests of citizens without affording them an opportunity of being heard, and without the right of appeal<sup>712</sup>; that it does not contain any provision which may result in arbitrary exercise of powers<sup>713</sup>; and that any of its provisions is not unjustifiable on general democratic principles<sup>714</sup> and is not ambiguous<sup>715</sup>.

Where an Act provides that certain matters might be regulated by rules, regulations, etc. framed thereunder, the Committee considers and reports to the House if there has been an undue delay in framing such rules<sup>716</sup>.

Since there is no general statutory obligation<sup>717</sup> on the Government to reprint those orders which undergo extensive amendments, the Committee suggested to the Ministries concerned that such rules should be reprinted from time to time for the convenience of the public<sup>718</sup>.

Procedure of Working

As soon as an 'order' is published in the Gazette<sup>719</sup> or laid on the Table, it is examined by the Secretariat to determine whether any of its provisions require to be brought to the notice of the Committee on any of the grounds specified in the Rule<sup>720</sup>, or in accordance with any practice or direction of the Committee<sup>721</sup>.

The Committee also takes cognizance of the representations/complaints received from individuals or organisations in regard to practical working of any rule/regulation and makes appropriate recommendations for modifications/amendments in the rules through its reports<sup>722</sup>.

If in the course of examination of an 'order' it is considered necessary to seek a clarification regarding any point arising out of it, the matter is referred to the concerned Ministry for comments<sup>723</sup>. When the comments are received, the matter is re-examined and if it is considered necessary to bring any point or points to the notice of the Committee, a self-contained memorandum on each point is prepared for approval of the Chairperson of the Committee<sup>724</sup>. After the Chairperson's approval, the memoranda, together with copies or extracts of relevant 'orders', are circulated to the members of the Committee in advance of the date of the sitting<sup>725</sup>.

At the sitting of the Committee, memoranda are taken up one by one and at the end of the discussion, the Chairperson, taking into account the trend of the discussion, announces the decision of the Committee which is invariably unanimous and is recorded accordingly.

Sometimes when important legal issues arise out of an 'order' under examination of the Committee and if the Committee feels that an authoritative opinion of the Attorney-General is necessary, such opinion is invited and placed before the Committee

719. All rules and regulations framed by the Central Government are normally required by the respective parent Acts to be published in the Gazette. They become operative only on such publication unless otherwise expressly laid down in the Act or the rules.

720. Rule 320.

721. In accordance with the recommendation of the Committee, an 'order' is examined to see whether it bears a short title and whether an explanatory note explaining the general purport of the 'order' is necessary and is attached to the 'order' for the convenience of the public concerned.—See 3R (CSL-1LS), paras 44 and 46, and 2R(CSL-2LS), p. 16, item 9.

In the case of an amending 'order', it is also checked whether it contains adequate references to the principal 'orders'.—See 3R (CSL-1LS), para 45 and 7R (CSL-2LS), paras 33-35.

722. For instance, see 16R (CSL-5LS), paras 104-128, 7R (CSL-8LS), para 7; 19R (CSL-8LS), paras 1-8.

723. Dir. 105(2). In practice, on most points arising out of an 'order', the views of the Ministry concerned are obtained in the first instance so that both the opinion of the Secretariat and the point of view of the Ministry may be placed before the Committee at the same time.

At the instance of the Committee, the opinion of the Attorney-General has also been invited in some cases, e.g. on the Delhi (Control of Building Operations) Regulations, 1955; the Punjab Sugarcane (Prohibition of Use or Manufacture of Gur) Order, 1959; and the Exports (Control) Order, 1977.

724. Dir. 105(3).

725. Dir. 106.

in the form of a memorandum<sup>726</sup>. The Committee then takes a decision after taking into consideration the opinion of the Attorney-General.

Evidence of Officials

The Committee may call the Secretary of a Ministry or head of a Department to appear before them for giving evidence on any aspects of the ‘orders’ under examination of the Committee.

Study Tours

In rare cases, the Committee may also undertake study tour to any organisation for on-the-spot study and discussions with officials and representatives of the organisation about the impact of the ‘orders’ issued by the Government in pursuance of an act governing their functioning.

Presentation of Report

From time to time, the Committee reports to the House on various ‘orders’ examined by it or on any other matter connected therewith<sup>727</sup>.

The introductory chapter begins with a paragraph indicating the number of the report and the fact that the Committee have permitted the presentation of the report to the House. The remaining paragraphs of this chapter inter alia show the number of the sittings held and the number of ‘orders’ considered by the Committee during the period mentioned therein and also the date on which the Committee adopted the report.

Then follow the chapters dealing with the ‘orders’ in respect of which the Committee makes their observations and recommendations. Each chapter contains the point or points raised in respect of a particular rule or regulation, the substance of the reply, if any, given by the Ministry concerned and the views of the Committee. Normally the concluding chapter includes information about the action taken or proposed to be taken by the Government on various recommendations contained in the earlier reports of the Committee<sup>728</sup>. A summary of recommendations is appended at the end of the report.

The report, after being signed by the Chairperson, is presented to the House on the date fixed by the Chairperson.

After a report of the Committee is presented to the House, copies thereof are circulated to all the members. Reports of the Committee are not discussed in the House but on occasions the recommendations of the Committee have been referred to by members during questions or debates in the House<sup>729</sup>. Sometimes, the ‘orders’ which are laid on the Table are discussed in the House<sup>730</sup>. When notices of motions for modification of 'orders' which have been laid on the Table are given by members, the Business Advisory Committee sometimes refers such motions to the Committee for consideration and report to the House before the motions are discussed. The Committee, after hearing the views of the members concerned, considers the suggested modifications and presents a report to the House. In such cases also, the report of the Committee is not discussed, but the members, in the course of the debate, may refer to the views expressed by the Committee in its report<sup>731</sup>.

Implementation of Recommendations

The Committee keeps a constant watch on the implementation of their recommendations<sup>732</sup>. The Ministries concerned are asked to furnish from time to time a statement of action taken or proposed to be taken by them on the recommendations made by the Committee and on the assurances<sup>733</sup> given by them in the course of their correspondence with the Committee. The information so received is examined in the Secretariat and placed before the Committee in the form of a memorandum with the approval of the Chairperson<sup>734</sup>. If a Ministry is not in a position to implement, or feel any difficulty in giving effect to, any recommendation, it represents to the Committee its case explaining the difficulty. The Committee, if satisfied with the views of the Ministry, either modifies or drops the recommendation<sup>735</sup>. If the reply of the Ministry is not satisfactory, the recommendation is pursued further<sup>736</sup>. The progress of implementation of the various recommendations is reported to the House by the Committee from time to time<sup>737</sup>.

Committee on Government Assurances

Various assurances, promises and undertakings are given by Ministers from time to time on the floor of the House either to consider a matter, take action or to furnish information to the House later. In order to ensure that these assurances, etc. are implemented and in reasonable time, the Lok Sabha has constituted a Committee on Government Assurances. The Committee on Government Assurances is an innovation of Indian Parliament. Parliament made this innovation with a view to institutionalising the procedure to ensure the fulfilment of promises and undertakings given from time to time by the Ministers on the floor of the House<sup>738</sup>.

The Committee consists of not more than fifteen members who are nominated by the Speaker. The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee. If, however, the Deputy Speaker is a member of the Committee, he/she is appointed as Chairperson. The Rules prohibit nomination of a Minister as a member of the Committee, and if a member, after that member's nomination to the Committee is appointed a Minister he/she ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment<sup>739</sup>. The term of office of members of the Committee does not exceed one year<sup>740</sup>.

The Committee was first nominated by the Speaker on 1 December 1953 with six members only. Nine members were subsequently nominated to the Committee by the Speaker on 13 May 1954<sup>741</sup>. In the life of the First Lok Sabha, the Committee was reconstituted twice thereafter, on 21 May 1955 and 13 June 1956. Since then the Committee has been reconstituted with fifteen members every year.

Functions

The Committee scrutinises the assurances, promises and undertakings given by the Ministers on the floor of the House from time to time in reply to questions or during the discussions on Bills, resolutions, motions, etc. and reports on the extent to which such assurances, etc. have been implemented and where implemented, whether such implementation has taken place within the minimum time necessary for the purpose<sup>742</sup>.

The Committee has approved a standard list of expressions or forms which are treated as constituting assurances, undertakings, etc. given by the Minister<sup>743</sup>. These expressions, though not exhaustive, are meant for the guidance of the Committee. Any addition to, or deletion from these expressions is decided by the Committee.

On behalf of the various Ministers, the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs is responsible for culling out assurances, etc. from the proceedings of the House. The Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs initially examines the Lok Sabha Debates and furnish to the Lok Sabha Secretariat, Statements of assurances within a week of the dates to which they relate. The Lok Sabha Secretariat also independently examines the Lok Sabha debates to mark the replies/statements of the Minister which constitute assurances<sup>744</sup>. Both of them are later reconciled and the Ministries/Departments of Government of India are apprised of the assurances so culled out. Similarly the reply by a Minister treated by the Ministry of Parliament Affairs as an assurance, but which in the opinion of Lok Sabha Secretariat does not constitute an assurance is excluded from the list of pending assurances and a communication thereof is sent to the concerned Ministry as well as to the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs for their exclusion.

If it is represented by a Ministry or Department that a particular statement of a Minister should not be treated as an assurance and if the Chairperson or the Committee feels unable to accept such representation, the Committee may hear a representative of the Ministry or Department concerned with the subject matter of the assurance before it decides whether the assurance should be dropped or pursued for its implementation.

Where necessary, the Chairperson or the Committee may refer the matter to the Speaker for guidance.

Implementation of Assurances

The Committee on Government Assurances has prescribed an outer limit of three months for the implementation of an assurance to be calculated from the date of its being given in the House<sup>745</sup>. However, if the Government foresees any genuine difficulty in implementing the assurance within the stipulated period, the Ministry concerned may submit to the Committee a request for extension of time as considered minimum for fulfilment of the assurance<sup>746</sup>. Normally, the Committee accedes to such requests unless it finds the request to be frivolous.

The assurances are, according to a decision taken by the Committee, categorised into three categories—A, B and C. Category ‘A’ consists of those assurances which pertain solely to the Union subject for the implementation of which action is to be taken or information is to be compiled by the Union Government only. In category ‘B’ come those assurances where the assurance pertains to a matter which is in the Concurrent List and information needed for implementation of the assurance pertains partly to the Union Government and partly to the State Government. Category ‘C’ consists of assurances which pertain to a matter which falls purely in the jurisdiction of the State Government and where action is to be taken or information supplied by the State Government(s) and the Union Government have to simply place it before the House. The Committee expects category ‘A’ assurances to be implemented within three months. In the case of category ‘B’ assurances one or more extensions may be given after three months if the information to be supplied by the State Government is still awaited. In the case of category ‘C’ assurances, the Committee grant extensions of time for implementation more liberally because the Union

745. Prior to April 1968, the period permissible for implementation of an assurance was two months. In April 1968, Government represented to the Committee to extend this period to six months. Not agreeing with the plea of the Government and stressing the need for the earliest implementation of assurances, the Committee agreed to increase the period to three months on an experimental basis. The matter was reviewed in November 1969 and the Committee confirmed the period of three months for implementation of assurances.

Government here are dependent solely on the State Government<sup>747</sup>. However, in practice this decision of the Committee has not been implemented keeping in view the practical difficulties of categorization of assurances. But in order to expedite implementation of pending assurances, the Committee on Government Assurances (2009-10) took a policy decision to call the representatives of the various Ministries/Departments of the Government of India in a phased manner, to review the pending assurances and also look at the reasons for pendency or the quality of assurances implemented by the Government. During the review, the Committee also ensures that the assurances are implemented fully or satisfactory by the Ministry/Department of Government of India concerned.

Similarly, if for any valid reasons the Government finds that it is not feasible to implement an assurance given on the floor of the House, the Government have to approach the Committee and place the facts for its consideration. If the Committee agree that it is not possible to implement the assurance, it may recommend dropping of the assurance in its report to the House. On one occasion the Committee agreed with the Ministry concerned that it was not desirable to fulfil an assurance, given earlier, on the ground of secrecy or public interest<sup>748</sup>. The work of the Committee is of a continuous nature and it is generally the practice that the work of the Committee left unfinished at the end of the term is taken up by the succeeding Committee at the stage where it was left. Assurances do not lapse on the dissolution of the Lok Sabha. The first Committee appointed after constitution of the new Lok Sabha goes into the pending assurances and drops only those assurances which have lost their public importance and utility due to the efflux of time. The remaining assurances are pursued by the Committee for implementation<sup>749</sup>.

Statements showing action taken by the Government in the implementation of the assurances, etc. given by Ministers in the House are laid periodically<sup>750</sup> on the Table by the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs. The Committee, having noted a marked deterioration in the matters of disposal of pending assurances and observing that the delay in the implementation of unfulfilled assurances resulted in their importance being lost by the lapse of time, amended its rule to the extent that the statements showing action taken by the Government in the implementation of assurances may be laid on the Table by the Minister concerned. The idea in introducing this change in the procedure was to make the Ministries which delayed the action accountable to the House<sup>751</sup> and thus fasten responsibility on them for such lapses<sup>752</sup>. However, the amended Rule has not yet come into force, as the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs has undertaken to speed up the implementation of assurances by the various Ministers.

Further, as per the decision taken by the Committee on Government Assurances (2009-10), oral evidence of the representatives of the Ministry/Department concerned are undertaken with a view to expediting the disposal of pending assurances. After the conclusion of oral evidence of the representatives of a particular Ministry, the Committee on Government Assurances presents reports to the Lok Sabha. The Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs are also directed occasionally to impress upon various Ministries/Departments to scrupulously follow the instructions/guidelines issued by the former in this behalf. The Committee also direct that the Ministries/Departments concerned should review their system and ensure that the assurances are fulfilled within the prescribed time limit and the instructions issued in this regard are carefully complied with by all concerned<sup>753</sup>.

The statements laid on the Table are examined by the Secretariat. Such of the assurances as do not appear to have been fully or satisfactorily implemented, are placed before the Committee for its consideration, as also the cases where, considering the nature of the assurances, inordinate delay has occurred in implementation thereof.

Study Tours

If during the course of examination of pending assurances or a statement laid about implementation of assurances, the Committee feels that it is necessary to undertake an on-the-spot study tour to have first hand knowledge about reasons for delay in the implementation of an assurance or to find out whether the assurance has been adequately implemented within the minimum reasonable time, it may do so with the approval of the Speaker. Notes of such study tours are prepared by the Secretariat and approved by Chairperson and with the approval of the Speaker, circulated to all members of the Committee.

Evidence

If necessary, the Committee may call for officers of the concerned Ministries to give evidence before them in regard to action taken by the Government in the implementation of certain assurances<sup>754</sup>. The Chairperson of the Committee may also in an appropriate case call the Secretary of a Ministry or the Head of a Department or public undertaking to explain in person the reasons for delay in the implementation of the assurances which are pending for an unusually long time.

Preparation and Presentation of the Report

After the examination of the action taken by the Government to implement the assurances, the extent to which they have actually been implemented and whether such implementation has taken place within the time necessary for the purpose, etc., the Committee forms its conclusions and recommendations for inclusion in the report. On the basis of these conclusions and recommendations, a draft report is prepared by the Secretariat. After the Chairperson's approval, the report is circulated to the members of the Committee and considered at a sitting held for the purpose.

After the Report has been adopted by the Committee, the Chairperson's or in his absence another member of the Committee as authorised by the Chairperson presents the Report to the House. The Report of the Committee, as a convention, is not discussed in the House. The decisions of the Committee are unanimous and there is no minute of dissent to the Report<sup>755</sup>.

Laying of Minutes

The Minutes of the sittings of the Committee usually form part of the Report which is presented to the House. Minutes of the sittings of the Committee are not laid on the Table of the House separately.

Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House

The Constitution provides that if for a period of sixty days a member is without permission of the House absent from all the sittings thereof, that member's seat may be declared vacant by the House<sup>756</sup>. Provision has accordingly been made in the Rules prescribing the method for seeking permission of the House by a member for remaining absent and, where it has become necessary, for the vacation of a seat. To deal with applications from members for leave of absence and other cognate matters, the House has constituted a Committee called the Committee on Absence of Members from the Sittings of the House.

The Committee consists of fifteen members nominated by the Speaker, and holds office for a term not exceeding one year<sup>757</sup>.

The Committee is constituted at the commencement of each Lok Sabha and reconstituted in the month of May or June every year.

Prior to 12 March 1954, when this Committee was first constituted, applications received from members desiring leave of the House to remain absent from sittings thereof were considered by the House. On receipt, the application was read out to the House by the Speaker and the pleasure of the House was taken by him.

---

755. Dir. 68(3).

756. Art. 101(4).

757. Rule 325.

The procedure for granting leave was reviewed by the Rules Committee. Noting that in view of the increase in the number of cases of absence of members, it was difficult for the House to consider and decide such cases direct, the Rules Committee recommended that the House should appoint a Committee to examine the applications in the first instance and the House might consider the matter on a report made to it by the proposed Committee<sup>758</sup>.

Functions

The functions of the Committee are<sup>759</sup>

to consider all applications from members for leave of absence from the sittings of the House; and to examine every case where a member has been absent for a period of sixty days or more, without permission, from the sittings of the House and to report whether the absence should be condoned or circumstances of the case justify that the House should declare the seat of the member vacant<sup>760</sup>.

Besides, the Committee performs such other functions in respect of attendance of members in the House as may be assigned to it by the Speaker from time to time<sup>761</sup>.

Whenever a member is continuously absent from the sittings of the House for a period of forty days, without obtaining permission, a letter is addressed to that member by the Secretariat drawing his attention to the relevant provisions of the Constitution and the Rules of Procedure and advising that member to apply for leave of absence well in time. A further reminder is sent to the member when his continuous absence amounts to fifty days<sup>762</sup>. On receipt of the reply or if no reply is received within a reasonable time, the case is considered by the Committee.

758. Min. (RC), 17-12-1953, p. 2.

759. Rule 326. The Committee does not, however, consider those applications which request for leave of absence for a period of less than 15 days.—7R (CAM-1LS).

760. The seat of a member who had been absent from the sittings of the House without permission for a long period was, on a motion moved and adopted by the House, declared vacant—18R (CAM-1LS) and L.S. Deb., 5-12-1956, cc. 1922-36.

761. The following points, raised by a member, were referred to the Committee by the Speaker for examination:

what the purpose is behind granting leave of absence for 59 days only in the first instance and not for the entire period applied for by a member; and nature of transport difficulties experienced by a member who had advanced it as a reason for grant of leave—L.S. Deb., 29-9-1955; and Min. (CAM-1LS), 13-12-1955.

On another occasion, the Speaker directed that the following point be referred to the Committee for consideration and report:

“Whether members who do not attend the sitting of the Lok Sabha in the first hour should be treated as absent for the whole day.”

The matter was examined by the Committee on 29 May 1956, and a report thereon was presented to the Speaker.

762. Min. (CAM), 15-3-1956, paras 4 and 5, 13R (CAM-1LS); para 16; Min. (CAM-5LS) 24-3-1975, 11-4-1975, 25-7-1975.

The previous practice was of addressing the member after the continued absence exceeded sixty days. It was later felt that unless applications for leave of absence were sent in time, there might be complications and the Committee might find it difficult to recommend condonation for the period of absence where applications were received after the expiry of sixty days of continuous absence<sup>763</sup>.

Normally, the Committee recommends that the leave be granted or the absence condoned. It is only where disregard is shown to the House by a member of furnishing unsatisfactory explanation for continuous absence without permission from the sittings of the House for sixty days or more that the Committee recommends that the absence may not be condoned and the House should declare that seat vacant<sup>764</sup>. Such a report is presented to the House after the Speaker and the Leader of the House have agreed to the recommendations contained therein. Where leave of absence is applied for by members due to certain extraneous factors beyond their control, the Committee has brought such matters to the notice of Speaker and the Ministry concerned<sup>765</sup>.

Proceedings in the Committee

After preliminary scrutiny by the Secretariat, all applications from members for leave of absence from the sittings of the House are placed before the Committee<sup>766</sup> except those with requests for leave of absence for a period of less than fifteen days<sup>767</sup>.

Generally, the memorandum containing particulars regarding all the leave applications to be considered by the Committee forms the main item of discussion by the Committee<sup>768</sup>. Each application is considered on its merits<sup>769</sup>. The Committee notes in particular that the period of leave of absence applied for by a member does not exceed sixty days and that the reasons stated by a member for the absence are not vague<sup>770</sup>.

763. 1R (CAM-1LS).

764. Rule 241; see also 18R (CAM-1LS), para 9(9). Where the reasons are considered satisfactory by the Committee, condonation of absence for over 60 days has been recommended. See 3R, 7R, 13R (CAM-1LS) and 20R (CAM-2LS).

765. While recommending grant of leave to a member who had applied for leave due to difficulties in getting a boat from Port Blair, the Committee suggested that in view of his standing complaint in this regard, the attention of the Ministry concerned should be drawn to this matter. Min. (CAM), 30-11-1954.

In another case where a member who was undergoing imprisonment and had applied for leave of absence on the ground that the appeals filed by him in the cases pending against him had not yet been heard, the Committee recommended grant of leave and suggested, inter alia, that the matter be brought to the notice of the Speaker as the appeals had been pending for an unduly long time. Min. (CAM), 11-3-1955.

766. Rule 243. As already stated, before the Committee was constituted in 1954, every application for leave of absence was read out to the House by the Speaker.

767. Recommendation contained in 7R (CAM-1LS), adopted by the House, on 23-12-1954.

768. The particulars contained in the memorandum include the name of the member, date of application, period for which leave has been asked for, the total period of absence and reasons therefor.

769. 1R(CAM-1LS).

770. 4R(CAM-1LS).

The Committee does not recommend leave of absence for more than fifty-nine days at a time to a member even if he/she has asked for a longer period<sup>771</sup>. In such cases, the member concerned is advised to apply again for the remaining period<sup>772</sup>. However, in the case of a member applying for leave of absence after the expiry of sixty days of continuous absence, the period of absence of the member upto the date of the application is recommended for condonation and grant of leave of absence is recommended for the period after the date of application<sup>773</sup>.

Where an application for leave of absence from a member is on grounds of illness, the Committee does not insist on a medical certificate from the member concerned<sup>774</sup>.

The recommendation of the Committee in respect of each application forms part of the report which is presented to the House within a day or two of the sitting of the Committee<sup>775</sup>.

Minutes

The minutes contain decisions of the Committee on the applications for leave of absence considered by it. Any observation made by the Committee having a bearing on their procedure is also included in the minutes<sup>776</sup>. In cases where the Committee so desires, extracts from the minutes are also sent to the member whose application for leave of absence has been considered by it.

The minutes of sittings of the Committee held during a session are laid on the Table of the House towards end of the session.

Nature and Contents of the Report

The report of the Committee normally contains recommendations on applications for leave of absence after giving particulars regarding period of absence and the reasons therefor, and recommendations and decisions on other matters, if any, considered by the Committee.

After the report is presented to the House<sup>777</sup>, generally two days elapse before the pleasure of the House is taken by the Speaker in respect of recommendations of the Committee in order to enable members to give notice of any point that they may like to raise on the report. An entry is made in the List of Business.

Where leave of absence is not recommended by the Committee in respect of any application, any member can move a motion that the House agrees or agrees with amendment or disagrees with the recommendation of the Committee in respect of that application<sup>778</sup>.

Where a report of the Committee contains recommendations regarding grant of leave of absence to members or condonation of their absence only, the report is not adopted by the House on a motion, but the Speaker takes pleasure of the House in respect of the recommendations of the Committee. Where, however, report contains recommendations in regard to certain other matters also, a motion for its adoption is moved in the House<sup>779</sup>.

A report which exclusively dealt with grounds on which leave could be granted to members was adopted on a motion moved in the House<sup>780</sup>.

Rules Committee

The Rules Committee is nominated by the Speaker and consists of fifteen members, including the Speaker who is the ex officio Chairperson of the Committee<sup>781</sup>. While nominating members of the Rules Committee, efforts are made to give representation on the Committee to all the major Parties/Groups in the House. Upto the Third Lok Sabha, it was a normal practice to nominate the Deputy Speaker as a member of the Rules Committee. During the Fourth Lok Sabha (from 28 March 1967 to 1 November 1969), though the Deputy Speaker belonged to the Ruling Party, he was nominated to the Rules Committee. With the election of a member of the Opposition Party/Group in the Lok Sabha on 9 December 1969 as the Deputy Speaker, the practice of nomination of the Deputy Speaker to the Rules Committee has been discontinued. Since 1977, the Deputy Speaker is being invited to attend the sittings of the Rules Committee as a special invitee.

Apart from the members of the Committee, other members of the House may also be invited to attend particular sittings of the Committee either to provide representation to some sections of the House not already represented on the Committee<sup>782</sup>, or to acquaint the Committee with their points of view on a matter before the Committee in regard to which they may have special knowledge or interest. The Committee have also, by invitation, heard the Attorney-General on matters involving complex and legal and constitutional issues<sup>783</sup>. While considering proposals made by a member and/or Minister for amendments or additions to the Rules, the member and/or Minister concerned may also be invited to explain to the Committee their viewpoint. As in the case of other Committees, the invitees, however, have no right of vote in the Committee.

Functions

The functions of the Committee are to consider matters of procedure and conduct of business in the House and to recommend any amendments or additions to the rules that may be deemed necessary<sup>784</sup>. Suggestions for amendments or additions to the rules can be made by any member of the House<sup>785</sup>, including a Minister, or by the Committee themselves<sup>786</sup>.

All proposals for amendment and addition to the rules are first examined by the Secretariat and, after the Chairperson's approval, placed before the Committee in the form of memoranda stating the implications of each proposal. The memoranda are circulated to the members of the Committee well in advance of the sitting at which the proposals are to be considered by the Committee.

Proposals for amendment or addition to the rules based on suggestions made by members in the House or otherwise, or for removing difficulties in the working of the rules, or for giving a basis in the rules to the practice and conventions in the House are also made by the Secretariat for consideration of the Committee.

The draft report and minutes of the Committee are prepared by the Secretariat for the approval of the Chairperson.

Procedure for Amendment of Rules

The recommendations of the Committee are laid on the Table in the form of a report<sup>787</sup>. Any member may, within a period of seven days beginning with the day on which the recommendations are so laid, give notice of an amendment to such recommendations<sup>788</sup>. Any such notice given by a member stands referred to the Committee and after the expiry of the said period of seven days' a sitting of the Committee is held at which all such notices of amendments are considered<sup>789</sup>.

(RC) 31-8-1957, para 5; During the Sixth Lok Sabha, a D.O. letter was issued by the Speaker, Lok Sabha, to all the Leaders of the Parties and Groups inviting their suggestions/comments on the working of various rules. A para was also issued in Bulletin Part-II inviting comments/suggestions from members of the House on the working of the various rules. Several suggestions were made by members and the same were considered by the Rules Committee. The Rules Committee, after considering the matter, suggested certain changes in the practice regarding Question Hour, Calling Attention, etc. However, no formal amendment to any of the rules was recommended by them.

If notice of an amendment to the recommendations is received from a member after the expiry of the prescribed period, that amendment is not placed before the Committee.

Members who give notices of amendments to the recommendations of the Committee are invited to attend the sitting of the Committee at which their amendments are considered so that they may acquaint the Committee with their point of view in regard to the amendments suggested by them<sup>790</sup>. Such members, however, withdraw after presenting their views to the Committee and the Committee then deliberate and formulate a decision<sup>791</sup>.

The final report of the Committee, after taking into consideration the amendments suggested by the members is laid on the Table. Thereafter, on the House agreeing with the report on a motion made by a member of the Committee, the amendments to the Rules as approved by the House are published in the Bulletin under the orders of the Speaker<sup>792</sup>.

While a motion for agreement of the House with the report of the Committee is before the House, the Speaker gives an opportunity to members who had given notices of amendments and whose amendments had not been accepted by the Committee to move their amendments and present their points of view<sup>793</sup>.

If no notice of amendment to the recommendation of the Committee is received within seven days, the recommendations are deemed to have been approved by the House, and on the expiry of the said period the amendments to the rules as recommended by the Committee are published in the Bulletin under the orders of the Speaker<sup>794</sup>.

The amendments to the rules, unless otherwise specified, come into force on their publication in the Bulletin<sup>795</sup>.

General Purposes Committee

The General Purposes Committee is constituted to consider and advise on such matters concerning the affairs of the House as may be referred to it by the Speaker from time to time<sup>796</sup>. The Committee consists of the Speaker, the Deputy Speaker, members of the Panel of Chairpersons, Chairpersons of all standing Parliamentary Committees, leaders of recognised Parties and Groups in the Lok Sabha and such other members as may be nominated by the Speaker<sup>797</sup>. The Speaker is the ex-officio

Chairperson of the Committee<sup>798</sup>. If the Speaker, for any reason, is not present at any sitting of the Committee, the Deputy Speaker, and if he is not present, a senior member of the Panel of Chairpersons, takes the Chair.

The Committee may also invite a Minister or any other member to its sittings as special invitee<sup>799</sup>.

The Committee was for the first time appointed by the Speaker on 26 November 1954, with the object that the Speaker might take into confidence, and have informal consultations with, the representatives of the various Parties and Groups in the House in regard to the various directions in which the work of the House could be improved and organised on better lines so that in all such matters he might be able to proceed with their full support which meant practically the co-operation of the whole House<sup>800</sup>.

The Committee considers and advises the Speaker on matters concerning the affairs of the House, which do not appropriately fall within the purview of any other Parliamentary Committees<sup>801</sup>. The Committee has so far considered a variety of subjects such as additional building requirements for the increasing parliamentary activities; adjournment of the House on the death of a sitting member; summoning of officers of State Governments to appear as witnesses for giving evidence before Committees of the House; provision of an automatic vote recorder; admission of visitors to the Central Hall during sessions of Parliament; maintenance of order within Parliament House Estate<sup>802</sup>; naming of new Parliament Building; observance of holidays by the Lok Sabha; functioning of Railway Catering Unit in Parliament House; requests for display of portraits, statues and busts, etc. of national leaders in Parliament House Complex; farewell to retiring Presidents; Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Independence of India; payment of subsidy to Northern Railway Catering Units; procedure regarding punishment to officers of Government in cases of breach of privilege; notice to the Speaker, Lok Sabha received from the Supreme Court of India in the matter of Special Reference No. 1 of 1974 under article 143 of the Constitution of India regarding Presidential election; treatment of proceedings of meetings of the Speaker with the leaders of Parties and Groups in the Lok Sabha at par with the proceedings of Parliamentary Committees for purposes of publication in newspaper<sup>803</sup>; a documentary film on 'Indian Parliament'; setting up of a Hall of National Achievements in Parliament House Annexe; setting up of a Parliamentary Museum and Archives; security arrangements in Parliament House; The Members of Lok Sabha (Disqualification on Ground of Defection) Rules, 1985; group photograph of members;

Every year after the reconstitution of all standing Parliamentary Committees the question of reconstituting this Committee is reviewed by the Speaker. The Committee was not formally reconstituted during the Third Lok Sabha. However, the Speaker held several meetings with the leaders of Parties and the Groups on various matters.

The Committee may appoint one or more Sub-Committees for the detailed examination of particular matters. Members of the House other than those who are members of the Committee may also be appointed as ad hoc members of, or associated with, a Sub-Committee by invitation.

The Committee may make an on-the-spot study of any of the matters under its consideration<sup>804</sup>.

Sittings of the Committee are held in private. The Committee may take evidence, where it finds necessary<sup>805</sup>. It may also send for persons, papers or records if it considers it necessary for the execution of its work<sup>806</sup>. A verbatim record of the proceedings of the Committee may be kept where it is deemed necessary to do so.

The Committee may hold joint meeting with the General Purposes Committee of the Rajya Sabha and also hold meetings with leaders of Parties and Groups in the Rajya Sabha to consider matters concerning both the Houses<sup>807</sup>.

The Committee does not present any report to the House. Where, however, any matter is referred to a Sub-Committee thereof, the Sub-Committee presents a report to the Speaker. If the Sub-Committee is appointed by the Speaker<sup>808</sup>, the Speaker may pass final orders on the report or direct that it be placed before the whole Committee. If the Sub-Committee is appointed by the Committee<sup>809</sup>, the report of the Sub-Committee is, with the approval of the Speaker, placed before the whole Committee<sup>810</sup>.

Implementation of Recommendations

When recommendations of the Committee are required to be implemented by the Government, copies of the relevant minutes/Report of the Sub-Committee are sent to the Ministries concerned for necessary action.

(GPC), 24-5-1972; 2-8-1972; and 8-8-1972. A joint sitting of the General Purposes Committees of both the Houses was held on 26-11-1991 to consider telecasting of the proceedings of the Parliament.

808. Sub-Committees were appointed by the Speaker on adjournment of the House on the death of a member, former member or an outstanding personality (April 1955); on Printing; and Accommodation and Maintenance of Parliamentary Buildings (May 1956 and July 1957). In pursuance of the decision of the GPC, the Speaker, in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, appointed a Committee on Catering Establishments in Parliament House.—Min. (GPC), 30-8-1973.

809. Sub-Committees were appointed by the Committee on duration of sittings of Lok Sabha (November 1954), Printing of Parliamentary Papers (November 1954) and a new building for the Constitution Club (July 1956).

Sub-Committee on Portraits (1978, 1980 and 1986); on Printing of Parliamentary Papers (1980-81); to scrutinise the script of Film 'Indian Parliament' appointed as per a decision of GPC on 20-12-1983. Members of the Rajya Sabha were also nominated to the Sub-Committee by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha.

810. 1R (GPC) rule 10, see Min. (GPC), 8-5-1981.

The general rules applicable to Parliamentary Committees apply to the Committee with such adoptions, whether by way of modification, addition or omission, as the Speaker may consider necessary or convenient<sup>811</sup>.

House Committee

The House Committee consists of not more than twelve members, including the Chairperson, and is nominated by the Speaker every year. A member can be renominated for another term to the Committee. The quorum to constitute a sitting of the Committee is five.

There was dissatisfaction among members of the Central Legislative Assembly in regard to arrangements for the allotment of residential accommodation and other administrative matters connected therewith.

A Committee was appointed in pursuance of a motion adopted in the Assembly on 14 September 1927, to consider the question of residence and accommodation for members of the Indian Legislature<sup>812</sup>. The Committee submitted its report but in the meantime the Legislative Assembly Department was created and the work of allotment of accommodation to members was taken over by it. In November 1931, however, a representation signed by fifty-five members was made to the Speaker inviting his attention to the unsuitability and insufficiency of the accommodation provided to members. In pursuance of the representation, the Speaker, in consultation with party leaders, nominated a House Committee on 22 February 1932, consisting of ten members, including the Chairman<sup>813</sup>. Thereafter, the Committee has been constituted by the Speaker, from time to time.

The Committee works in an advisory capacity and its functions are:— to deal with all questions relating to residential accommodation for members of the Lok Sabha; and to exercise supervision over facilities for accommodation, food, medical aid and other amenities accorded to members in members' residences and hostels in Delhi.

All proposals, suggestions, etc. relating to members' residences and amenities are examined by the Secretariat in consultation with the executive authorities, where necessary. When a sufficient number of items for the consideration of the Committee is available, a date and time for a sitting of the Committee is fixed in consultation with the Chairperson. Representatives of the executive authorities concerned are also invited to apprise the Committee of the implications of the proposals under consideration and furnish such information as the Committee might ask for. A member other than members of the Committee may, on request, be permitted by the Chairperson to attend a sitting of the Committee but without the right to vote.

811. Ibid., rule 3—So far, no such adaption of the rules has been made.

812. The motion was moved on 5 September and was adopted, as amended, on 14 September 1927. L.A. Deb., 5-9-1927, pp. 3968-72; 14-9-1927, pp. 4332-35. The Council of State was also requested to associate with the Committee.—C.S. Deb., 19-9-1927, pp. 1276-78.

813. L.A. Deb., 22-2-1932, pp. 1017-18.

The Committee do not present any report as such. The minutes of the sittings of the Committee are circulated to all the members of the Committee and relevant extracts therefrom are forwarded to appropriate authorities for necessary action. The Committee is informed from time to time about the progress made in regard to implementation of its recommendations. The recommendations made by the Committee are generally implemented by the Government. In case the Government are unable to implement any recommendation, their objections are considered by the Committee and its earlier recommendation modified, if necessary.

The Committee can appoint one or more Sub-Committees, each having the powers of the undivided Committee, to examine any specific points relating to the residential accommodation, food, medical aid and other amenities in members' residences.

There is an Accommodation Sub-Committee which is a standing Sub-Committee to advise on the allotment of residential accommodation to the members. The Sub-Committee consists of not more than four members, including the Chairperson of the Committee who is its ex officio Chairperson. The quorum to constitute a sitting of the Sub-Committee is two. An appeal against the decision of the Committee or the Accommodation Sub-Committee lies to the Speaker whose decision is final.

Proposals, suggestions, etc. which are of common interest to members of both the Houses are considered and decided by the Chairpersons of the House Committees of both the Houses, at joint sittings, if so authorised by their respective House Committees. The secretarial functions for such sittings are performed by the Lok Sabha Secretariat, but the minutes are approved by both the Chairpersons.

After the dissolution of the Lok Sabha, allotment of residential accommodation to members of the new Lok Sabha is made by the Secretariat under the directions of the Speaker till a new House Committee is constituted.

Library Committee

Founded in 1921, the Parliament Library caters to the information needs of members of both the Houses. With a view to advising him on matters concerning the Library, the Speaker has constituted an Advisory Committee called the Library Committee. The Committee was first constituted by an announcement made by the Speaker in the Provisional Parliament on 21 November 1950<sup>814</sup>.

The Committee, at present, consists of the Deputy Speaker, five other members from the Lok Sabha nominated by the Speaker, and three members from the Rajya Sabha nominated by the Chairman of Rajya Sabha. The Deputy Speaker is the ex-officio Chairperson of the Committee. Casual vacancies in the Committee are filled by nomination by the Speaker in respect of the members from Lok Sabha, and by the Chairman of Rajya Sabha in respect of the members from Rajya Sabha.

814. Like other Parliamentary Committees, the Library Committee is constituted every year and functions from the beginning of June to the last day of May next year.

The functions of the Committee are:—

to consider and advise on such matters concerning the Library as may be referred to it by the Speaker from time to time; to consider suggestions for the improvement of the Library; and to assist members of Parliament in fully utilising the services provided by the Library. The main function of the Committee is thus to help members in the use of the material available in the Library and make use of the services of the staff provided therein. The Committee in a way acts as a liaison between the members of Parliament and the Library. It also encourages members to make helpful and constructive suggestions for the development of the Library and its Reference Service. It advises the Speaker on matters pertaining to the Library, e.g., selection of books, framing of rules, future planning, etc.

A Sub-Committee of the Library Committee keeps a watch on the quality and quantum of all acquisitions of the Library and gives comments and suggestions to further improve the functioning of the Parliament Library and its ancillary services.

The sittings of the Library Committee and its Sub-Committee are held as and when necessary. Minutes of the sittings are kept but the Committee does not as such present any report to the Houses or the Speaker.

Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament

The Joint Committee on Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament was constituted for the first time on 6 September 1954, to frame rules under the Salaries and Allowances of Members of Parliament Act, 1954<sup>815</sup>. It consists of ten members from the Lok Sabha nominated by the Speaker, and five members from the Rajya Sabha nominated by the Chairman of Rajya Sabha. The Joint Committee is reconstituted from time to time but the members hold office for one year from the date of their nomination<sup>816</sup>.

The functions of the Committee are to make, after consultation with the Government of India, rules to provide for matters like medical, housing, telephone facilities, constituency allowance, advance for the purchase of conveyance, etc., and generally for regulating the payment of daily and travelling allowances under the Act<sup>817</sup>.

The Committee is empowered to regulate its own procedure<sup>818</sup>. All questions at any sitting of the Committee are determined by a majority of the members present and voting. The quorum to constitute a sitting of the Committee is five, and the secretarial functions for the Committee are performed by the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

The Committee can appoint one or more Sub-Committees, each having the powers of the undivided Committee to examine any matter that might be referred to them.

Copies of the minutes as approved by the Chairperson are circulated to the members of the Committee, the Rajya Sabha Secretariat and the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs. The Committee does not present any report to either of the two Houses.

Rules<sup>819</sup> made by the Committee do not take effect until they are approved and confirmed by the Presiding Officers of the Houses and are published in the Gazette and such publication of the rules is conclusive proof that they have been duly made<sup>820</sup>.

Joint Committee on Offices of Profit

A person is disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member of either House of Parliament if he/she holds any office of profit under the Government of India or the Government of any State other than an office declared by Parliament by law not to disqualify its holder<sup>821</sup>. Parliament has passed legislation on the subject<sup>822</sup>. But as new Committees, Commissions, etc. are set up by the Government (hereinafter referred to as Government Committees) to which members are also appointed, it was felt that a continuous scrutiny of the matter was necessary. This work is performed by the Joint Committee on Offices of Profit.

The Committee is constituted on the adoption of a motion to that effect by the House and concurred in by the Rajya Sabha<sup>823</sup>. The Committee consists of fifteen members, ten from the Lok Sabha and five from the Rajya Sabha elected from amongst the members of each House respectively according to the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote. A casual vacancy occurring in the Committee from amongst members of the Lok Sabha is filled on a motion<sup>824</sup> adopted by the Lok Sabha in that behalf, while in the case of the Rajya Sabha the vacancy is filled on a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha recommending to the Rajya Sabha to fill that vacancy<sup>825</sup>.

The Committee is constituted for the duration of each Lok Sabha<sup>826</sup>. The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee.

Although certain enactments had been passed by Parliament keeping in view the provisions of article 102(1)(a), it was felt that none of them met comprehensively the needs of the situation. Upon representation from members of Parliament, Speaker Mavalankar, in consultation with the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, appointed on 24 August 1954, a Committee on Offices of Profit (known as the Bhargava Committee after its Chairman, Pt. Thakur Das Bhargava) to make recommendations, inter alia, in order to enable the Government to consider the lines along which a comprehensive legislation should be brought before the House. In pursuance of the recommendations of the Committee, the Government introduced in the Lok Sabha on 5 December 1957, the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Bill, 1957. It was referred to a Joint Committee of the Houses and its report was presented to the Lok Sabha on 10 September 1958<sup>827</sup>.

As recommended by the Joint Committee and in implementation of the assurance given by the Minister of Law in this behalf<sup>828</sup>, a Parliamentary Joint Committee on Offices of Profit for the duration of the Second Lok Sabha was constituted<sup>829</sup> in August 1959, with a membership of fifteen, 10 from the Lok Sabha and 5 from the Rajya Sabha. Its terms of reference were:

to examine the composition and character of all existing 'Committees' [other than those already examined by the Joint Committee to which the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Bill, 1957, had been referred] and all 'Committees' that may thereafter be constituted, membership of which may disqualify a person for being chosen as and for being a member of either House of Parliament under article 102 of the Constitution; to recommend in relation to the 'Committees' examined by it as to what offices should disqualify and what offices should not disqualify; and to scrutinise from time to time the schedule to the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Act, 1957, and to recommend any amendments in the said schedule, whether by way of addition, omission or otherwise.

A Committee with almost similar terms of reference was constituted for each new Lok Sabha excepting the Sixth Lok Sabha.

Procedure of work

All Ministries of the Government of India, Chief Secretaries of the State Governments and Administrators of Union territories furnish from time to time for the consideration of the Committee relevant information in respect of Government

826. L.S. Deb., 3-8-1959, c. 146; 8-6-1962, c. 9742.

827. For details, see Chapter VI—'Office of Profit.'

829. Motion adopted by the Lok Sabha on 3 August 1959, and concurred in by the Rajya Sabha on 31 August 1959.

Committees (which include commissions, boards, etc.) constituted by them. A detailed memorandum is then prepared by the Secretariat for the consideration of the Committee in respect of each Government Committee, giving, inter alia, the following information:

- (i) whether it is a purely advisory Committee/Body, or whether it also wields influence or power by way of patronage; whether it is a non-advisory Committee which carries executive, legislative or judicial powers, or confers powers of disbursement of funds, allotment of lands, issue of licences, etc., or gives powers of appointment, grant of scholarship, etc., and whether it is an office of an occasional or contractual nature; and
- (ii) whether the holder draws any remuneration other than the 'compensatory allowances' as defined in section 2(a) of the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Act, 1959.

The Committee, after examination of the relevant information in respect of each Government 'Committee', records its recommendation whether it should be placed in Part I or Part II of the schedule<sup>830</sup> to the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Act, 1959, or whether it should be exempted from disqualification.

The Committee recommends from time to time in its reports to the Lok Sabha, in relation to the Government 'Committees' examined by it as to what offices should disqualify and what offices should not disqualify to or on any other connected matter.

Simultaneously with the presentation of the report to the Lok Sabha, a copy thereof is laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha by a member of that House on the Committee who is specifically authorized by the Committee in that behalf.

Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes

The Constitution provides several safeguards for the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, as also the machinery to watch the implementation of the safeguards<sup>831</sup>. In pursuance of constitutional provision<sup>832</sup> a special officer designated as the Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes was appointed in 1950 and had been presenting reports to the President, which inter alia brought to the notice of the authorities concerned any waste and insufficiency noticed by him in the implementation of the welfare schemes for the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. Parliament could hardly spare the time for necessary scrutiny in detail of the points raised in these reports. It was accordingly felt necessary that this work should be entrusted to a standing Parliamentary Committee and suggestions to that effect were made by several members when the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Reports of the Commissioner were being discussed in the Lok Sabha<sup>833</sup>.

830. Part I of the Schedule to the Parliament (Prevention of Disqualification) Act, 1959, enumerates the 'Committees' whose Chairman, and Part II enumerates the 'Committees' whose Chairman and Secretaries are not exempted from disqualification for being chosen as or for being a member of Parliament.

831. Relevant articles are 15(4), 16-17, 330, 332, 334-335, 338 and 341-342.

833. L.S. Deb., 2-8-1967, 3-8-1967, 7-8-1967 and 8-8-1967.

A Committee of both the Houses of Parliament, called the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, was, therefore, constituted on a motion adopted by the Lok Sabha on 30 August 1968<sup>834</sup>. The motion was concurred in by the Rajya Sabha on 25 November 1968<sup>835</sup>.

By the Constitution (Sixty-fifth) Amendment Act, 1990 which came into force from 12 March 1992, the Office of the Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes was abolished and replaced by the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. Consequent upon the implementation of the Constitution (Eighty-ninth) Amendment Act, 2003 in February 2004, the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes was bifurcated into two separate Commissions viz., the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes.

Composition

The Committee consists of thirty members—twenty from the Lok Sabha and ten from the Rajya Sabha—elected in accordance with the system of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote. The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Committee.

The term of the Committee was initially for two years from the date of the first meeting of the Committee<sup>836</sup>. It is now one year as in the case of other Parliamentary Committees<sup>837</sup>.

Functions

The functions of the Committee are<sup>838</sup>:

to consider the reports submitted by the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Articles 338(5)(d) and 338A(5)(d) respectively of the Constitution and to report as to the measures that should be taken by the Union Government in respect of matters within the purview of the Union Government, including the Administrations of the Union Territories;

to report on the action taken by the Union Government and the Administrations of the Union territories on the measures proposed by the Committee;

836. The first meeting of the Committee was held on 18-12-1968.

837. Rule 331B(2).

Two motions for extension of the term of office of the members of the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes from Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha were adopted after the House suspended sub-rule (2) of Rule 331B—L.S. Deb., 28-7-1975, cc. 11-13; R.S. Deb., 30-7-1975, cc. 4-6 and L.S. Deb., 5-2-1976, cc. 13-15, R.S. Deb., 6-2-1976, c. 10.

838. Rule 331A.

to examine the measures taken by the Union Government to secure due representation of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes in services and posts under its control (including appointments in the public sector undertakings, statutory and semi-Government bodies and in the Union territories) having regard to the provisions of article 335;

to report on the working of the welfare programmes for the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes in the Union territories; to examine such matters as may seem fit to the Committee or are specifically referred to it by the House or the Speaker.

There are instances where the Speaker referred to the committee the notices tabled by members about specific cases of atrocities on Harijans for enquiry (i) through the erstwhile Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes<sup>839</sup> or (ii) by the Committee itself<sup>840</sup>. In one case, the House after considering the situation arising out of large-scale disturbances and some killings in Marathwada adopted a motion asking the Committee to investigate and identify those who are responsible for such incidents and to suggest remedies to meet the present situation and prevent recurrence thereof in any part of India in future<sup>841</sup>.

A Study Group of the Committee visited the affected areas and the Committee presented a report excluding incidents in the Nagpur Municipal Area about which a judicial enquiry had been ordered by the State Government<sup>842</sup>.

In another atrocity-related instance, the Committee visited the affected Mirchpur village in Hissar District of Haryana and presented a report about which a Judicial enquiry had been ordered by the State Government. The report was laid in both Houses of Parliament on 30 August 2010.

The Committee also visited some of the villages of Jind and Kaithal districts in Haryana where atrocities against the Scheduled Caste women were reported. The Committee met the affected women and their family members and held discussion with the State Government officials and directed them to take stringent action against the accused and release compensation to the victims as per the SC/ST Prevention of Atrocity Act, 1989 and to provide security to the SC/ST women in Haryana. The Committee laid their report in both the Houses of Parliament on 19 December 2012.

Procedure in the Committee

The Committee has made rules of procedure for its internal working, which are approved by the Speaker. These rules follow those relating to the financial Committees,

839. Notices tabled by three members for raising matters under Rule 377 regarding (i) Murder of two Harijans of Village Amla Kaur (Distt. Banda) and (ii) Murder of a Harijan agricultural labour in Village Budhachak (Distt. Patna) were referred by the Speaker to the Committee for enquiry through the Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. The Committee after getting information from the Commissioner, took evidence of the representatives of Ministry of Home Affairs and presented the 51 Report (5LS) on 31 March 1976.

840. On 6 December 1976, the Speaker informed the Lok Sabha that he had referred a number of complaints about atrocities on Harijans to the Committee for enquiry and report. These instances were covered by the Committee in its report. Ibid.

namely, the Committees on Public Accounts, Estimates and Public Undertakings. The Committee, inter alia, can examine witnesses, both official and non-official, and may send for papers, persons and records in connection with the examination of subjects, and can call for statements showing action taken by the Government on the recommendations made by it in its reports.

Selection of Subjects

The Committee selects, from time to time, such subjects as it deems fit and as fall within the scope of its terms of reference. The Ministry/Department/Undertaking/Nationalised Bank are asked in writing to furnish a detailed note and material on the subject selected by the Committee. The same, when received, is circulated for the use of the members of the Committee. On the basis of the material received and suggestions made by the members of the Committee, questionnaires for elucidating further information from the Ministry/Department, etc., are prepared. In preparing the questionnaire, the recommendations made by the National Commission for the Scheduled Castes and the National Commission for the Scheduled Tribes in their reports are also taken note of.

Sub-Committees/Study Group

The Committee is authorised to constitute Sub-Committees.

The functions of one such Sub-Committee is to study in detail the Reports of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes. The Committee may appoint from time to time a number of Study Groups for intensive study of different subjects concerning the welfare of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, including one Study Group on Procedure and Action Taken Reports.

Representations

Ever since the constitution of this Committee, complaints/representations from the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes ventilating their grievances on matters pertaining to their welfare have been coming to the Committee. The complaints/representations received in the Secretariat are examined and in all apparently genuine cases, they are referred to the Ministries concerned for factual comments.

In the light of facts received, if the Ministry/Department/Undertaking satisfactorily explains the position or redresses the grievance, the representationist concerned is apprised of the position. Where, however, a question of policy or principle is involved the matter is, with the approval of the Chairperson, is placed before the Committee/Study Group on Procedure for consideration and further directions. Complaints/representations falling within the purview of States Governments are forwarded to the Chief Secretary of the State Governments concerned for due consideration and disposal.

On-the-spot Study Visits

The Committee undertakes on-the-spot visits in connection with the subjects taken up for examination and to examine the representation of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes in the services and also socio-economic condition of Scheduled Castes/Scheduled Tribes in various States/Union Territories. The Committee divides itself into two or three Study Groups for purposes of tours. On return from the tour, a Tour Report is prepared and laid on the Tables of the Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha. After that Report has been laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha, copies of the Tour Reports are also placed in the Parliamentary Library for the use of members.

Evidence

The Committee takes evidence of official and non-official witnesses. When evidence is being taken no strangers are permitted. The proceedings are taken down verbatim, and are treated as confidential.

Preparation and Presentation of Reports

After the evidence has been taken, a report on the subject/subjects of inquiry is prepared and presented to the House by the Chairperson or any other member of the Committee duly authorised to do so.

Minutes of Sitzings

After the approval of the Chairperson, the Minutes of sittings of the Committee are circulated to Members of the Committee and are laid on the Table of each House of Parliament alongwith reports which they relate to.

Impact of the Committee Work

Over the years, the Committee on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes has developed into an effective instrument for safeguarding the interests of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. The Committee has made tremendous impact on the Government and the Public Sector Undertakings in reservation, employment and the social-economic development of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. An awareness has been created that there is a watch-dog Committee of Parliament to keep surveillance on the implementation of the constitutional safeguards for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. By virtue of its terms of reference, the Committee has taken special care to elicit information or clarification from the Government as to the action taken on the recommendations made by the National Commission for Scheduled Castes and National Commission for Scheduled Tribes with particular reference to the subjects selected by the Committee for examination.

Committee on Empowerment of Women

To ensure equality and status to women and to protect them against discrimination, several safeguards are provided in the Constitution and other laws. In fact, article 15(3) empowers the State to make any special provisions for women on an overriding basis. In pursuance of these constitutional obligations and to catapult women's rights on to the centre stage, the Parliament of India enacted the National Commission for Women Act, 1990. The Commission, intended to serve as a high-powered autonomous apex body to deal with issues concerning women, was set up on 31 January 1992 and has since been functioning and making reports in the mandated areas.

While giving constitutional sanctity to the institutions of the Panchayati Raj and Nagar Palikas, the Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth Constitution Amendment Acts of 1992 inter alia earmarked one-third of seats for women in these institutions mainly to ensure increased say to women in the political and developmental decision-making process.

Considering the growing need for empowerment of women and their upliftment, two identical resolutions for constituting a Standing Committee of both the Houses for improving the status of women were moved in the Rajya Sabha and the Lok Sabha on the occasion of the International Women's Day on 8 March 1996.

In pursuance of the aforesaid resolution, the matter was considered by the Rules Committee (Eleventh Lok Sabha). The Rules Committee, in their Second Report, laid on the Table of the House on 6 March 1997, recommended that a Committee for the purpose may be constituted. Accordingly, the Committee on Empowerment of Women was constituted on 29 April 1997.

Composition

The Committee consists of 30 members, 20 nominated by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Lok Sabha and 10 nominated by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha from amongst the members of the Rajya Sabha.

The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst its members. A Minister cannot be a member of the Committee and if a member after nomination to the Committee is appointed a Minister, he/she ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment. As in the case of the other Parliamentary Committees, the term of the Committee does not exceed one year.

Functions

The functions of the Committee on Empowerment of Women are:

to consider the reports submitted by the National Commission for Women and to report on the measures that should be taken by the Union Government for improving the status/conditions of women in respect of matters within the purview of the Union Government, including the Administrations of the Union territories; to examine the measures taken by the Union Government to secure for women equality, status and dignity in all matters; to examine the measures taken by the Union Government for comprehensive education and adequate representation of women in legislative bodies/services and other fields;

to report on the working of the welfare programmes for the women; to report on the action taken by the Union Government and Administrations of the Union territories on the measures proposed by the Committee; and to examine such other matters as may seem fit to the Committee or are specifically referred to it by the House or the Speaker and the Rajya Sabha or the Chairman, Rajya Sabha.

Procedure in Committee

The Committee selects subjects relating to women's issues for detailed examination. The Committee calls for preliminary material from the concerned Ministries/Departments and other Government bodies as well as some Non-Governmental Organisations in regard to these subjects. The Committee also calls for written replies including supplementary and post-evidence replies through List of Points. Further, the Committee takes oral evidence of the representatives of respective Ministries/Departments. The Committee also undertakes on-the-spot study visits in connection with the subjects selected and interacts with women representatives concerned. On the basis of the preliminary material, written replies, Memoranda from non-officials, evidence of the Ministry, inputs received during the study visits, press clippings and relevant books and journals, the Committee examines the subject and prepares reports and presents them to the Parliament.

After presentation of the Report to the house, a copy of the Report is forwarded to the Ministry/Department/Organisation concerned who are required to furnish to the Lok Sabha Secretariat a statement showing the action taken by them on the recommendations contained in the Report within six months from the date of presentation of the Report or within the time stipulated in the Report itself. Further Action Taken Notes on Action Taken Reports received from the Ministries/Departments are examined by the Committee and laid in the House in the form of a statement on further Action Taken by the Government on the Action Taken reports.

Railway Convention Committee

The Railway Convention Committee is an ad hoc Committee constituted from time to time to review the rate of dividend which is payable by the railway undertaking to the general revenues as well as other ancillary matters in connection with railway finance vis-a-vis general finance and make recommendations thereon. Apart from recommending the rate of dividend payable by the Railways to the General Revenues, it also suggests the level of appropriation to various Railway funds like the Depreciation Reserve Fund, Pension Fund, Capital Fund, Development Fund, Land Safety Fund and Committed Liability Fund.

The growth and development of Indian Railways owes much to Lord Dalhousie, Governor-General of India (1848-1856), who suggested a system of trunk lines connecting the hinterland of Bombay, Bengal and Madras Presidencies with their principal ports and also with each other. As the Government had neither the funds nor the technical personnel to undertake the work, the same was entrusted to private companies who were guaranteed a return of five per cent on their Capital for a period of twenty five years. In return, the companies were expected to share their surplus profit with the Government and to sell the Railways to the Government after twenty-five years. As the expected profit failed to materialise and the guaranteed return continued to be a drain on the exchequer, the Government purchased the Railways on the expiry of the period of contract, though the management of the Railways continued to be with the companies. Subsequently, following the recommendations of the Acworth Committee (1920-21), the Government took over the management of the bulk of the Railways. The Committee also recommended the separation of Railway Finances from the General Finances primarily to secure stability for civil estimates by providing for an assured contribution from Railway Revenues and also to introduce flexibility in the administration of the Railway Finances.

While submitting to the Legislative Assembly the resolution for separation of Railway Finances from General Finances on 17 September 1924, the then Commerce Member, Sir Charles Innes stated very briefly in the following words the objects which they had in view:

“In the first place, as far as State Railways are concerned, we want to abolish altogether this system of programme revenue voted for a year. We want to establish a proper depreciation fund, a depreciation fund arranged in a scientific and intelligible manner. Secondly, we want to build up Railway reserves. We want to build them up in order that our finances may be more elastic, in order that we may have provision to equalize dividends. And generally, we want to introduce a system of finance which, while maintaining unimpaired the control of this House and while ensuring to general revenues a fair return from their Railway property, will be more suited to the needs of a vast commercial undertaking. Finally, and most important of all, we want to establish a principle. It is right and proper that the taxpayers, the State, should get a fair and stable return from the money it has spent on its Railways: but if you go further, if you take from the Railways more than that fair return, then you are indulging in a concealed way, in one of the most vicious forms of taxation, namely a tax on transportation. One of the objects we have most at heart in putting these proposals before this House is to establish that principle.

These then are the reasons why we are asking the House to accept this reform which was insistently pressed by the Acworth Committee, namely, the reform of separating your Railway from your General Finance. We considered the possibility of legislating in the matter, but we decided that it would be preferable to proceed in the manner suggested in the Resolution; that is, we decided that it would be preferable to ask this House to agree to a convention; there are some advantages in a convention which can be adjusted from time to time to varying needs and difficulties. It can even be adjusted to the ordered progress of the Constitution. It was always our intention whatever the arrangements we might come to with the House that these arrangements should be subject to periodical revision; and the House will see that on the recommendation of the Committee we have definitely provided for this in the last clause of the amended Resolution.”

The Convention, commonly known as the ‘Separation Convention’, was adopted through a resolution of the House on 20 September 1924, and was approved by the Secretary of State. Under the ‘Separation Convention’, the Railways were required to pay dividend at a fixed rate on their Capital, the whole of which was advanced by the Government of India. The Resolution provided that General Revenues should receive a definite annual contribution from the Railways which was to be the first charge on the receipts of the Railways. The contribution was to be calculated at 1 per cent of the capital-at-Charge at the end of the penultimate financial year, plus 1/5th of any surplus profits remaining after payment of this fixed return, subject to the condition that, if in any year, Railway revenues were insufficient to provide 1 per cent on the Capital-at-Charge, surplus profits for the next or subsequent years would not be deemed to have accrued for purposes of division, until such deficiency had been made good. The interest on the Capital-at-Charge of, and the loss in working strategic lines, was to be borne by General Revenues and was to be deducted from the contribution payable by Railways. Any surplus remaining after this payment to the General Revenue was to be transferred to Railway Reserve, provided that if the amount available for transfer to the Railway Reserve exceeded in any year three crores of rupees, only two-thirds of the excess over three crores would be transferred to the Railway Reserve and the remaining one-third would accrue to General Revenues.

The most notable features of the 'Separation Convention' were, firstly, the fixation of a definite annual contribution from Railways to General Revenues calculated with reference to the Capital-at-Charge of the Railway system and the profits earned by it and secondly, the establishment of a Reserve Fund and a Depreciation Fund for Railways. These arrangements were supported in the main by the following reasons:

- as the Government has raised the money for the construction of Railways in India on its credit, it is reasonable that the return given by the Railways should be chiefly based on the moneys thus raised;
- such a return is best calculated on the moneys expended on lines expected eventually to yield a return, and not on lines built for quite different reasons; and
- while it is only fair that in prosperous years the taxpayer should share in the prosperity of the Railways which he has financed, it is to his advantage to be certain of a gradually increasing income in the long run, as the invested capital increases. With this end in view, it is desirable that only a comparatively small proportion of the contribution should depend on Railway surpluses, and that the major part should represent a definite and secured profit on the moneys supplied by the Government for the construction of commercial lines.

The Convention itself contained provision for its own review within three years. A Committee of the House looked into the matter in 1928 but came to no conclusions. The general economic depression in the early thirties hit the Railways' Finances hard and depleted all their reserves in the endeavour to maintain the contribution to the General Revenues and also resulted in the postponement of renewals and replacements on the Railways. Ultimately, the situation deteriorated to such an extent that a moratorium had to be declared and General Finances received no contribution from the Railways until the early forties when the Second World War brought heavy traffic to the Railways in India and they showed huge earnings.

There had been numerous Cut Motions, Resolutions and Questions all of which pointed to failure of the Convention to give satisfaction under varying conditions. During the debate on the Cut Motion moved on 20 March 1942, several members who participated emphasised this fact.

On 2 March 1943, therefore, Sir Edward Benthall, the then Member for Railways and War Transport, moved the following Resolution in the House:

“That whereas it has been found that the Convention, which was adopted under the Assembly Resolution, dated 20 September 1924 and which was intended to relieve the General Budget from violent fluctuations caused by the incorporation therein of the Railway estimates and to enable Railways to carry on a continuous Railway policy based on the necessity of making a definite return to General Revenues on the money expended by the State, has not achieved these objects, this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that:

- (i) For the year 1942-43, a sum of Rs. 2,35,32 thousand shall be paid to General Revenues over and above the current and arrear contribution due under the Convention,
- (ii) From the 1 April 1943, so much of the Convention as provides for the contribution and allocation of surpluses to General Revenues shall cease to be in force,
- (iii) For the year 1943-44, the surplus on commercial lines shall be utilised to repay any outstanding loan from the depreciation fund and thereafter be divided twenty five per cent to the Railway reserve and seventy five per cent to General Revenues, the loss, if any, on strategic lines being recovered from General Revenues, and
- (iv) For subsequent years and until a new Convention is adopted by the Assembly, the allocation on the surplus on commercial lines between the Railway Reserve and General Revenues shall be decided each year on consideration of the needs of the Railways and General Revenues, the loss, if any, on strategic lines being recovered from General Revenues.”

While explaining the reasons for bringing forward the above Resolution, Sir Edward Benthall stated:

“There are two reasons for bringing forward the present Resolution now in its present form. The first is the necessity of relieving General Revenues this year and next. The General Budget introduced by the Honourable the Finance Member on Saturday in itself illustrates the justification for this. The second is the necessity of relieving the Railway Budget in the future years, if we are to meet the first necessity to the extent proposed in the present emergency. We should, in my opinion, definitely not be justified in giving such a large share of the surplus profits to General Revenues, unless Railways are relieved of the one percent contribution in the future. From the Railway point of view, I consider paragraph (ii) of the Resolution to be an essential element of the proposals for distributing the anticipated surplus of 1943-44. If Railways are not relieved of the one per cent contribution for future years, we should allocate more to the Railway Reserve now in order to provide for payment of this contribution in times of depression. Any other course would be unsound finance on the long term view."

Some members then urged an immediate wholesale revision of the Convention. But Sir Edward Benthall cautioned that they were at that time budgeting on boom conditions (as the War was in full swing) and for final revision it would be necessary to forecast the probable gross receipt and expenditure in normal times before an appropriate basis of allocation between Railways and General Revenues could be settled. During the debate that took place on the above Resolution, three proposals were made. One was that there should be an ad hoc Committee to examine the whole question. The second was that an expert commission should be appointed. The third proposal was that a Committee of the House should be set up to examine this question. The suggestion made by Sir Edward Benthall was that this matter should be referred to the Standing Finance Committee for Railways and, if appropriate, to the Central Advisory Council for Railways. While winding up the debate, Sir Edward Benthall offered to appoint a special Committee of the House to consider this question and the Resolution was adopted.

The essence of the Resolution adopted in 1943 was that so far as the contribution to General Revenues was concerned, the provisions of the 1924 Resolution should cease to operate. The Resolution directed an ad hoc basis according to the circumstances attending both the administration of General Finances and the administration of Railway Finance.

In pursuance of this Resolution passed by the Legislative Assembly on 23 March 1943, to consider matters arising out of clause (iv) of the Assembly's Resolution of 2 March 1943, amending the Separation Convention adopted by the Assembly on 20 September 1924, a Railway Convention Committee was constituted but it was wound up soon after it issued an interim report. The Committee inter alia recommended that until the Convention was revised, the present rate of contribution to the Depreciation Fund should not be reduced. In 1947, during the Budget Session, a Committee of the Central Legislative Assembly was set up for the purpose of investigating into this matter; but owing to the impending constitutional changes on account of transfer of power, the Central Legislative Assembly and its Committee ceased to exist on the dissolution of the Assembly after the Budget Session of 1947.

The matter of revision of the Convention was also considered by the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee (1946-47) of which Pandit H.N. Kunzru was the Chairman. That Committee was against the immediate revision and suggested that it should wait till the Railways had fully recovered from the impact of accumulated arrears of replacements, etc. as a result of the war.

This Committee stated:

“As in the present unstable conditions, no fixed principle can be laid down for making allocation to the Fund, we content ourselves to recommending that an annual contribution to the Fund for the next five years be made at about Rs. 22 crore per annum.”

The Government, however, did not accept this recommendation.

The arrangements laid down in the Convention Resolution of 1943, which, though continued till 1948-49, did not work in a very satisfactory manner. While introducing the Railway Budget for 1948-49, the Railway Minister announced the appointment of a Committee consisting of three members of the Standing Finance Committee and three members of the Railway Standing Finance Committee under the Chairmanship of G.V. Mavalankar, Speaker of the Constituent Assembly (Leg.) to decide the question of allocation of the Railway Surplus. This Committee fixed the share payable to General Revenues as 50 per cent (viz. Rs. 4-1/2 crore) of the anticipated budget surplus of Rs. 9 crore for 1948-49 and any excess over Rs. 9 crore was to be credited to the Betterment Fund. However, this amount was raised to Rs. 7.34 crore on the basis of the Revised Estimates of Railways for 1948-49. The same principle was followed while framing the Budget Estimates of the Railways for 1949-50.

Convention of 1949—The first after Independence

In the course of his Budget Speech for 1949-50, the Railway Minister made an announcement about the setting up a Railway Convention Committee consisting of members of the House to go into this matter, including also the problems relating to the Depreciation Fund and make its recommendations before the end of the calendar year 1949.

The Committee decided finally to discard the 1924 formula and adopt in its place a simpler, more just and more easily workable arrangement. They came to the conclusion that a fixed dividend would assure to General Revenues, over the term agreed on, a dependable return on the Capital-at-Charge and that this would facilitate forward planning while, at the same time, it would assist the Railway Undertaking in planning and implementing a comprehensive programme of rehabilitation for overtaking the heavy arrears of renewals, replacements and neglected maintenance as well as of improvement and expansion of Railway service.

The Committee inter alia made the following recommendations:

General Finances should be guaranteed a fixed dividend on the loan capital invested in the undertaking as computed annually. The rate of dividend should be 4 per cent on such capital for a period of five years commencing from 1950-51.

A Committee of the House should review the rate towards the end of this period and suggest for the years following it any adjustment considered necessary, having regard to the revenue returns of the Railway undertaking, the average borrowing rate of Government and any other relevant factor; the contribution to the Depreciation Fund should be a minimum of Rs. 15 crore a year for the five years commencing from 1950-51. The full cost of replacement should be charged to this Fund.

The Committee also made recommendations about the modification of the existing rules of allocation of expenditure between capital and revenue, the constitution of a Development Fund and the separation of the loan account from the block account, etc.

Gopalaswami Ayyangar, the then Railway Minister, on 21 December 1949, while moving the Resolution for adoption of the 1949 Convention said:

To divert any portion of such a surplus as an extra contribution to general revenues either on the formula of the 1924 Resolution or in an ad hoc manner for each year as in the 1943 Resolution could not be related to any acceptable principle of sound financing applicable either to Railway or to General Finance. To do so would introduce a certain amount of uncertainty into both General and Railway Finances. It will be unhealthy from the point of view of both. General Finance has to count upon something definite which it can get from the working of the Railway each year; otherwise any planning that it may undertake is prejudiced by the uncertainty that will prevail. Railway Finance has also to be assured that if the administration of the Railways does bring into existence a surplus, it can have full control over that surplus for the purpose of overtaking heavy arrears of maintenance and improvements. Also, it will be enabled to find money for expansion in various directions.

The Constituent Assembly (Legislative) adopted the Resolution on the same day.

One of the basic principles enunciated by this Committee was the fixation of definite rate of dividend which included an element of contribution to the General Revenues over and above the bare interest paid by the Government on the Capital provided for Railways. This principle was enunciated on the consideration that, in essence, the general tax payer is the owner and sole shareholder of the undertaking. The working of this Convention ensured a steady return to the General Revenues and also enabled the Railways to strengthen their reserves for discharging their obligation towards rehabilitation, increasing operating efficiency and provision of adequate amenities. It also arrested the growth of over capitalization in the Railway undertaking.

Composition

The working of the Separation Convention has been reviewed from time to time by Committee appointed in 1954, 1960, 1965, 1973, 1977, 1980, 1985, 1989, 1991, 1996, 1998, 1999, 2004 and 2009.

The Railway Convention Committee is constituted by a resolution moved in the Lok Sabha by Government and concurred in by the Rajya Sabha. It consists of twelve members from the Lok Sabha and six members from the Rajya Sabha who are nominated by the Speaker, Lok Sabha and the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, as the case may be. The Chairperson of the Committee is appointed by the Speaker from amongst the members of the Lok Sabha. The Ministers of Finance and Railways are among the members nominated to the Committee<sup>843</sup>.

Term of Office

The Committee, once constituted, functions till the dissolution of the Lok Sabha unless it presents its final report earlier and thus becomes functus officio.

Functions

Although the Railway Convention Committee has not drawn up any separate rules to regulate its internal working, it functions more or less on the same lines as those of the Financial Committees of the Parliament, viz., the Public Accounts Committee<sup>844</sup>, the Committee on Estimates<sup>845</sup> and the Committee on Public Undertakings<sup>846</sup>.

The functioning of the Committee is also governed by the general rules relating to Parliamentary Committees<sup>847</sup>. These rules are further supplemented by Directions issued by the Speaker in exercise of the powers conferred on the Speaker under Rule 389 and other Rules.

Examination of other Subjects

While the Convention Committees of 1949, 1954, 1960 and 1965 confined themselves only to the question of determining the rate of dividend payable by the Railway undertaking during the succeeding quinquennium, the Railway Convention Committee of 1971 for the first time selected some subjects having a bearing on the 843. However, for the first time, the Minister of Finance was not nominated as a member of the Convention Committee (1989). After the change of Government at the Centre on 10 November 1990, the new Railway Minister was also not nominated to the Committee and the former Railway Minister continued to be a member of the Committee. In the Convention Committee (1991), both the Railway Minister and the Finance Minister were not nominated as members of the Committee. However, both the Ministers were nominated to the Committee against subsequent vacancies. In the Railway Convention Committee (1996), only the Railway Minister was nominated as a member of the Committee. In 2004 neither of the two Ministers was nominated as a member. K.C. Venugopal, was nominated as a Member of RCC vide Bulletin Part II, Para No. 1256 dt. 15-3-2010. He became Minister of State for Power on 19-1-2011 vide Notification No. 1/34/1/2011-Cab. However, he continued as a Member of RCC and attended sitting of the Committee on 04-02-2011. Venugopal resigned from the Membership of Railway Convention Committee w.e.f. 21-12-2011 vide Bulletin No. 3572 dt. 27-2-2011.

P. Balram Naik and Girija Vyas were nominated as members of RCC vide Bulletin Part II, Para No. 1256 dt. 15-03-2010 and they became Minister on 28-10-2012 and 17-06-2013. However, they continued to be the members of RCC as on 28-6-2013.

Railway Finances for detailed examination. The subsequent Committees appointed in 1973, 1977, 1980, 1985, 1989, 1991, 1996, 1998, 1999, 2004 and 2009 also examined various aspects of the working of the Railways and Railway Finances. The Committee has been selecting subjects for examination shortly after its constitution and inviting memoranda from the Ministry of Railways and other concerned Ministries as also from individuals/organisations. Sometimes it also invites memoranda from State Governments.

Rate of Dividend

As regards the rate of dividend that may be payable by the Railways to the General Revenues, the Committee invites a memorandum from the Financial Commissioner of Railways. The memorandum contains the views of both the Ministry of Railways and the Ministry of Finance on various proposals made therein.

After considering Interim Memorandum furnished by the Ministry of Railways, the Railway Convention Committee (2009) in their First Report had purely as an interim measure, recommended Rate of Dividend at the rate of 6% for the year 2009-10 and 2010-11 on the entire capital invested on Railways from the General Revenues irrespective of the year of investment, inclusive of the amount that was payable to the Railways to the General Revenues for payment to States as grant in lieu of passenger fare tax and contribution for assisting the States for financing safety works during the financial year 2008-2009. This was 1% less than the rate of dividend of 7% fixed for the year 2007-08. All other concessions were allowed to continue on the existing basis for the year 2009-10 and 2010-11.

The Convention Committee (2009) in their Third Report had recommended Rate of Dividend at 4% for the year 2012-13<sup>848</sup>. The Committee (2009) in their Sixth Report had, however, recommended Rate of Dividend for the year 2013-14 to the General Revenue at 5% on the entire capital (excluding dividend free capital) invested on Railways from the General Revenue, irrespective of the year of investment, inclusive of the amount that was payable by the Railways to the General Revenue for payment to States as grant in lieu of passenger fare tax and contribution for assisting the States for financing safety works during the financial year 2012-13.

Consideration of Report

The report of the Committee on the rate of dividend is considered by the House on a resolution moved by the Minister of Railways in the House. However, other reports of the Committee are normally not discussed in the House.

848. The Railways Convention Committee (2009) in their 3rd Report recommended 4% rate of dividend payable by the Railways to the General Revenues for the year 2012-13. The Notification vide their OM No. F7(2)-B (AC) 2011 dated 16-08-2012 requested the Railways Convention Committee to reconsider the recommendation relating to rate of dividend for the year 2012-13 and retain it at least at 5%. The Committee considered the request of Minister of Finance but did not accede to the same.

Committee on Members of Parliament Local Area Development Scheme (Lok Sabha)

During the Fourth Session of the Twelfth Lok Sabha, a new ad hoc Committee on Members of Parliament Local Area Development Scheme (Lok Sabha) was constituted<sup>849</sup>. This Committee consisted of 23 members and the tenure of the Committee was not to exceed one year. Presently there are 24 members in this Committee. The main functions of the Committee were to: (i) monitor and review periodically the performance and problems in implementation of the MPLAD Scheme (Lok Sabha); (ii) consider complaints of members of Lok Sabha in regard to the Scheme; and (iii) perform such other functions as may be assigned to it by the Speaker from time to time.

C. DEPARTMENTALLY RELATED STANDING COMMITTEES

Evolution and Constitution of Standing Committees

With the unprecedented growth of governmental activities over the years, Parliament had been finding itself somewhat handicapped in exercising fully its pivotal role of ensuring administrative and financial accountability. Enormous budgetary allocations of various Ministries were also being passed by Parliament without sufficient debate for want of time. For instance, in 1989, the Demands of Grants of only 3 Ministries/Departments were discussed and Demands in respect of as many as 34 Ministries/Departments were guillotined.

In 1978, the Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India had deliberated on this issue. The matter was also brought into sharp focus during the Third Regional Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Seminar held in New Delhi in January 1984. The matter was further debated in the Presiding Officers Conference held in Calcutta in 1984. Thereafter, the Rules Committee of the Lok Sabha considered a proposal for having 9 ad hoc Committees for pre-voting scrutiny of the Demands for Grants. However, no final decision could be reached.

Even while the proposal to set up the Budget Committees awaited finalisation, another proposal of a far-reaching nature designed to strengthen the Committee System and to secure administrative accountability in a far more effective way was placed before the Rules Committee in the closing months of life of the Eighth Lok Sabha. The Rules Committee, at their sittings held on 30 March and 9 May 1989, considered and approved the proposals to set up three Subject Committees—one each on Agriculture, Science and Technology and Environment and Forests. Necessary recommendations to this effect were made by the Rules Committee in their Second and Fourth Reports laid on the Table of the House on 2 May and 25 July 1989, respectively. The Rules relating to these Committees were finally approved by the House and the Committees were constituted for the first time with effect from 18 August 1989.

849. For details regarding the MPLAD Scheme. see Chapter XIII—‘Salaries, Allowances, Other Entitlements, Amenities and Facilities.

These Subject Committees were, inter alia, to examine the activities of the concerned Ministries/Departments and to report as to what economies, improvements in organisation, efficiency or administrative reforms consistent with the policy approved by Parliament might be effected. Apart from other functions, these Committees were to examine the Annual Reports and Plan Projects/activities of the concerned Ministries.

After observing the functioning of the three Subject Committees for some time, in 1992, during the Tenth Lok Sabha, the matter relating to Departmentally related Parliamentary Standing Committees was again considered by the General Purposes Committee and the Rules Committee and they felt that a full fledged system of Departmentally related Standing Committees be created covering under their jurisdiction all the Ministries/Departments of the Government of India.

Subsequently, the whole matter was considered afresh during February and March 1993 by the General Purposes Committee and the Rules Committees of both the Houses of Parliament together. As a result of these discussions, a broad consensus was arrived at that Standing Committees be set up to consider the Demands for Grants, Bills and rational basic long-term policy documents presented to the Houses and referred to them by the Speaker/Chairman of the Rajya Sabha and the annual reports of the related Ministries/Departments.

The Reports of the Rules Committees of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha adopted by the two Houses on 29 March 1993, paved the way for the setting up of the Departmentally related Standing Committees covering under their jurisdiction all the Ministries/Departments of the Union Government. With the setting up of these Committees, the three Subject Committees, constituted in August 1989, ceased to exist. The new Committee System covering all Government Ministries/Departments, was inaugurated on 31 March 1993 and 17 Standing Committees were constituted w.e.f. 8 April 1993. Out of these 17 DRSCs, 11 were under Lok Sabha and 6 under Rajya Sabha.

After experiencing the working of the DRSC system for over a decade, the system was re-structured in July 2004 wherein the number of DRSCs was increased from 17 to 24. These Committees cover under their jurisdiction the following Ministries/Departments:

Rules Governing Standing Committees

Like any other business of the House, business of the Standing Committees is also governed by certain Rules relating to Departmentally Related Standing Committee incorporated in Chapter XXVI (Rule 331C to 331N along with General Rules relating to Parliamentary Committees (Rule 253 to 286 of Chapter XXVI) of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha (Fifteenth Edition).

Composition

At the time of introduction of DRSC system in 1993, composition of the 17 DRSCs was 45 members—30 nominated by the Speaker, Lok Sabha from amongst the members of Lok Sabha and 15 members nominated by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha from amongst the members of Rajya Sabha. However, with restructuring of DRSCs in July 2004<sup>850</sup> when number of DRSCs was raised from 17 to 24, the membership was reduced from 45 to 31 members—21 from Lok Sabha and 10 from Rajya Sabha. Seats on each Committee are allocated to different Parties and Groups in the House as far as practicable in proportion to their respective strength in the House. Suitable number of seats on these Committees are also allocated to independent and unattached members. In principle, all members of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha, other than the Ministers are nominated to one or the other Standing Committee.

Appointment of Chairperson

The Chairperson of each of the Standing Committee specified in Part I is appointed by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and in respect of Committees specified in Part II by the Speaker, from amongst the members of the Committee.

850. Bn. (11), 20-07-2004.

Minister not to be Member of the Committee

A Minister is not eligible to be nominated as a member of any of the Standing Committee and if a member, after nomination to any of the Standing Committees, is appointed a Minister, he/she ceases to be a member of the Committee from the date of such appointment.

Term of Office

The term of office of the members of each Standing Committee is one year from the date of its constitution.

Functions

The functions of each of the Standing Committees are:

- (a) to consider the Demands for Grants of the concerned Ministries/ Departments and make a report on the same to the Houses. The Report shall not suggest anything of the nature of Cut Motions;
- (b) to examine such Bills pertaining to the concerned Ministries/Departments as are referred to the Committee by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha or the Speaker, Lok Sabha as the case may be, and make report thereon;
- (c) to consider annual reports of Ministries/Departments and make reports thereon; and
- (d) to consider national basic long term policy documents presented to the Houses, if referred to the Committee by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha or the Speaker, Lok Sabha as the case may be, and make reports thereon<sup>851</sup>.

The Standing Committees do not consider the matters of day-to-day administration of the concerned Ministries/Departments.

The Standing Committees also do not generally consider the matters which are under consideration by the other Parliamentary Committees.

Procedure Relating to Consideration of Demands for Grants

After the general discussion on the Budget in the House is over, the Houses are adjourned for a fixed period. The Committees consider the Demands for Grants of the concerned Ministries during the aforesaid period and submit their report within the period without seeking any extension of time for the same. There is a separate report on the Demands for Grants of each Ministry. The Demands for Grants are considered by the House in the light of the reports of the Committees.

Procedure Relating to Consideration of Bills

The Committees consider only such Bills introduced in either of the Houses as are referred to them by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha or the Speaker, Lok Sabha as the case may be. The Committees consider the general principles and clauses of the Bills referred to them and make report<sup>852</sup> thereon within the given time.

---

851. Rule 331E.

Examination of Annual Reports

Besides consideration of the Demands for Grants and the Bills referred to them, the Committee may select other subjects for examination on the basis of Annual Reports of the Ministries/Departments within the jurisdiction of the respective Committee.

Appointment of Sub-Committees/Study Groups

The Chairperson of a Committee may appoint Study Groups/Sub-Committees from amongst the members of the respective Committees with a view to making detailed study/examination of the subject selected by them, scrutinising the action taken by the Government on the recommendations contained in their previous reports and for considering procedural and general matters.

Procedure for Examination of Subjects

The rules applicable to other Parliamentary Committees are applicable to the Standing Committees also. The examination of a subject is done in various stages, viz. calling of preliminary material, calling for written replies, Including supplementary and post-evidence replies, calling of memoranda from non-officials and evidence of the non-officials and officials, and inputs received during the study visits and from press clippings, relevant books and journals etc.

Association of Specialists/Technical Experts/Consultants, etc.

The Standing Committees may associate specialists/technical experts/consultants, etc. and even may seek public opinion at various stages of examination of a subject, if necessary, to make the Report.

852. 'The Multi-State Cooperative Societies (Amendment) Bill, 2010' was referred to the Committee on Agriculture on 20.12.2010 for examination and Report. During the Fourth Sitting held on 4-1-2011, the Committee on observing several commonalities and contradictions between some of the proposed clauses of the Bill under examination and;— The Constitution (One Hundred and Eleventh Amendment) Bill, 2009' on which the Committee had presented their Twelfth Report to Parliament on 30-8-2010, decided to defer the examination of Bill, till the enactment of 'The Constitution (One Hundred and Eleventh Amendment) Bill, 2009'. Speaker, Lok Sabha acceded to the decision of the Committee on 9-2-2011. The decision was conveyed to the Ministry of Agriculture (Department of Agriculture and Cooperation).

On 4-3-2011, the Minister of Agriculture and Food Processing Industries addressed a letter to Speaker, Lok Sabha for re-considering and advising the Committee on Agriculture to take up examination of 'The Multi-State Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Bill, 2010' and make their recommendations at the earliest so that the Bill may be taken up during Budget Session, 2011 or Monsoon Session, 2011. The said request was considered by the Committee and after an in depth discussion they felt that since some of the provisions of 'The Constitution (One Hundred and Eleventh Amendment) Bill, 2009', which was yet to be enacted, had a bearing on 'The Multi-State Cooperative Societies (Amendment) Bill, 2010', they would not be in a position to arrive at a well-considered conclusion on the latter. Speaker, Lok Sabha concurred with the decision of the Committee. The examination of the Multi-State Cooperative Societies (Amendment) Bill, 2010' was resumed only after the Government notified the Constitution (97th Amendment Act) 2011 and informed the Committee Secretariat about the fact of notification on 23-1-2012.

Reports and Minutes

The conclusions of each of the Standing Committees on a subject examined are contained in its report, which, after its adoption by the respective Committee and factual verification by the Ministry concerned, is presented by the concerned Chairperson to the respective Houses. Minutes of the sittings of the Committees are laid on the Table of the House along with the relevant reports.

The reports are adopted by the broad consensus among the members. However, a member of a Standing Committee may give a note of dissent on the report of the Committee and it is presented to the House along with the report.

Action Taken Reports

The Reports of the Standing Committees have persuasive value and are treated as influential advice given by the Committee. The Bills which are reported upon by the Committee are considered by the Houses in the light of the reports of the Committees. In respect of reports on Demands for Grants and other subjects, the Ministry or the Department concerned is required to take action on the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report and furnish action taken replies thereon.

Action taken notes received from the Ministries/Departments are examined by the Committee and Action Taken Reports thereon are presented to the House.

Further Action Taken Notes on Action Taken Reports received from the Ministries/Departments are examined by the Committee and laid in the House in the form of a statement on Further Action Taken by the Government on the Action Taken Reports.

Statement by Minister on Committee Reports

The Minister concerned makes, once in six months a statement in the House regarding the status of implementation of recommendations contained in the Reports of Departmentally Related Standing Committees of Lok Sabha with regard to his Ministry/Department<sup>853</sup>.

D. COMMITTEES OTHER THAN PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEES ON WHICH MEMBERS WERE/ARE REPRESENTED

Standing Committees of Legislative Bodies

Till the constitution of the First Lok Sabha, there were Standing Committees for the various Departments of the Government of India to which members of the Central Legislature were elected.

The institution of Standing Committees owed its origin to the recommendation contained in the Montague-Chelmsford Report and the main purpose of these Committees was stated to be to “familiarise elected members with the process of administration” and “assist the political education of India”<sup>854</sup>. These Committees functioned in an advisory capacity and would record their opinions for consideration of the Government on matters of policy, new schemes involving expenditure above a fixed limit and annual reports of the Departments which they were attached to.

Standing Finance Committee

On a motion adopted by the Legislative Assembly in 1921, a Standing Finance Committee was set up<sup>855</sup>. The Committee consisted of ten members elected by the Assembly, besides the Finance Member who was nominated by the Governor-General as its Chairman. Next year, the number of elected members of the Committee was increased from ten to fourteen, besides the Chairman. This composition of the Committee remained unchanged till 1949 when, on a motion adopted by the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) on 23 November, 1949, the Government Chief Whip was nominated as an ex officio member of the Committee<sup>856</sup>. On a motion adopted by the Provisional Parliament on 5 April 1950, the strength of the elected members of the Committee was increased to sixteen. In March 1951, the Minister of State for Finance was also made an ex officio member of the Committee<sup>857</sup>. This composition of the Committee continued till 1952 when the Standing Finance Committee, alongwith the other Standing Advisory Committees, ceased to exist.

The functions of the Standing Finance Committee, like its composition, changed from time-to-time. In 1921, when the Committee was first appointed, its functions were stated by the Finance Member as<sup>858</sup>:

shortly before the introduction of the budget, the Committee would be given an opportunity of examining the civil voted estimates; proposals for supplementary grants should be examined by the Committee and the Committee should in the course of the year deal with any scheme for fresh votable expenditure put forward by Departments, but those schemes should be limited to major schemes which would be sufficiently large to have an influence on the budget.

In 1922, at the instance of the Assembly, the functions assigned to the Standing Finance Committee were<sup>859</sup>:

to scrutinise all proposals for new votable expenditure in all Departments of the Government of India; to sanction allotments out of lump sum grants; to suggest entrenchment and economy in expenditure; and generally to assist the Finance Department of the Government of India by advising on such cases as may be referred to it by the Department<sup>860</sup>.

From 1946, the scope of the Committee's functions was enlarged to include consideration of new items of expenditure covering non-voted heads.

Other Standing Committees

In January 1922, the Legislative Assembly adopted by a resolution recommending to the Governor-General that the Standing Committees be also associated with the different Departments of the Government of India, 'other than the Army and the Foreign and Political Departments'<sup>861</sup>. The Government decided to give effect to the resolution in a restricted manner and Standing Committees for four Departments<sup>862</sup> were constituted. An essential feature of these Committees was that three members of the Assembly and two members of the Council were to be nominated to each Committee by the Governor-General from separate panels of members elected by the two Chambers.

An important change in the constitution of the Committees was effected in 1931 when the practice of nomination by the Governor-General from panels was replaced by the system of direct election of members of the two Houses.

The position continued till 1944 with occasional amendments making additions to, and omissions of, Departments for which Standing Committees were elected. The new notification issued in that year ensured the election of Standing Committees for almost all the Departments of the Government of India.

The Standing Committees attached to the Departments then existing came to an end when the Legislature ceased to exist with the attainment of Independence on 15 August 1947. These were, however, revived by the Cabinet although the Ministry of Law were of the view that in the new set up, when the Government became fully responsible to the Legislature, the institution of Standing Committee was of doubtful utility.

It was also decided that the Rules for the Committees would henceforth be adopted by the Legislature instead of being made by the Government<sup>863</sup>. However, no significant change was effected in other respects; the advisory character of the Committees remained intact; they continued to function under the Chairmanship of the Minister or Minister of State in-charge of the respective Ministry or Department and the secretarial work of these Committees also remained with the concerned Ministry or Department.

The following subjects were normally laid before the Standing Committees:

All non-official Bills introduced or proposed to be introduced in the Assembly and legislative proposals which the Ministry concerned intended to undertake;

862. These are the Home Department; the Department of Revenue and Agriculture; the Department of Commerce and Industries; and the Department of Education and Health.

863. The Rules were adopted by the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) on 19 November 1947.

Reports of Committees and Commissions, excluding unpublished reports of Departmental Committees on which the Legislature was not adequately represented;

Major questions of general policy and financial proposals; Annual Reports; and

With the approval of the Minister in-charge, any topic of public importance within the field of the Committee which a member of the Committee might propose for discussion.

Subsequently, it was felt that such Standing Committees were out of date and did not fit in with the constitutional changes that had taken place in the country and the democratic pattern under which the formulation of policies and their execution had become the responsibility of the Council of Ministers responsible to Parliament. When the first Lok Sabha met and the Government did not move for the constitution of these Committees, some members raised the matter during the debate on the Appropriation (No. 2) Bill, 1952. Announcing the decision of the Government to discontinue these Standing Committees, the Prime Minister inter alia observed:

These Standing Committees were formed under very special circumstances which obviously no longer exist. The Committees met roughly—except for Standing Finance Committee which met more frequently—two or three times a year and they met to consider certain projects which they recommended or passed to the Finance Committee or whatever it was. There was hardly any real insight into the administration, any opportunity for that. It was a formality and a certain check, if you like, on the previous Government that we used to have. Now as we function today, that particular type of Standing Committee has no meaning.

I am not talking of cooperation in this House but actual consultations, etc., in regard to important matters. I am perfectly prepared to consider any proposal. But I do think that this old system of Standing Committees as they were is completely out of place. It was a relic of the old British days which has no place today. Therefore, we decided to do away with it, but not to do away with the possibility of consultation or co-operation<sup>864</sup>.

Consultative Committees

After the abolition of the Standing Committees, the question of acquainting members of Parliament with the working of the various Ministries/Departments and providing them with the opportunities for discussion of broad policies of Government in an informal manner continued to engage the attention of the Government. In pursuance of a decision of the Cabinet, Informal Consultative Committees were constituted for the purpose in 1954 for the various Ministries/ Departments.

On the reconstitution of these Informal Consultative Committees in 1957, a desire was expressed by leaders of the various Parties/Groups in Parliament to make the functioning of these Committees more purposeful. As a result of discussions at various levels, a general agreement between the 864. H.P. Deb. (II), 4-7-1952, cc. 3261-62.

Government and the Opposition parties was arrived at in April 1969. As a part of this agreement, these Committees came to be named as “Consultative Committees” and mutually agreed guidelines were formulated for the constitution and functioning of these Committees. The suggestion of the Opposition for the formation of Parliamentary Committees in place of Consultative Committees, was however, not agreed to.

Members from both Houses of Parliament are nominated on the Consultative Committees by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs on the basis of the preferences indicated by the members themselves or by the party leaders. Members belonging to the ruling party and unattached members are nominated on the basis of the preferences indicated by them and sent individually to the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs and members of the Opposition Parties/Groups are nominated on the basis of the preferences indicated by their Party Leaders/Chief Whips.

Membership of these Committees is voluntary. A member of Parliament is nominated on one Consultative Committee only. The maximum membership of a Consultative Committee is 40.

There are also Consultative Committees for the Railway Zones. These Committees continue to be known as “Informal Consultative Committees”. A member of Parliament is nominated on the Informal Consultative Committee of the Railway Zone in which the member’s constituency falls. If the member’s constituency happens to fall more than one Railway Zone, then that member may be nominated on the Informal Consultative Committees of all such Railway Zones, if he so desires.

According to the Guidelines, the Consultative Committees are to be reconstituted each year during the Budget Session. But it has become a practice to reconstitute the Committees every alternate year.

The Minister concerned is the Chairperson of the Consultative Committee and he/she presides over its meetings. In the Chairperson’s absence, the Minister of State in the Ministry may preside over the meeting.

The Consultative Committees provide a forum for informal discussion among the members, Ministers and senior officers of the Government on the problems and policies of the Government and the working of administrative Ministries/Departments in a manner which is not practicable on the floor of the House. Ministers are free to decide how they would like to share with members the information on questions and problems concerning their Ministries. The deliberations of these Committees are informal and no reference to the discussions held in the meetings thereof is made on the floor of the House; this is binding on both the Government and the members.

The agenda for a meeting of a Consultative Committee may consist of subjects suggested by members or by the Ministry. Notes on the agenda items are prepared and circulated to the members in advance. Minutes of the meetings and Action Taken Reports on the minutes are also circulated to the members, except in the case of the Ministries of Defence, External Affairs and Department of Atomic Energy and other Scientific Departments. The Committees have no right to summon any witness or to examine any official records. The Chairperson of the Committee may furnish any additional information required by the members.

A Consultative Committee is required to hold its meeting once during each session period and once during each inter-session period, the only exception being the Committee of the Ministry of Railways which is to hold meetings only during inter-session periods. The reason is that the Ministry of Railways holds meetings of the Informal Consultative Committees of the Railway Zones during session periods.

Keeping in view the need for economy in expenditure, there was a ban (since July 1981) on holding the meetings of the Consultative Committees outside Delhi. In October 1995, it was decided, with the approval of the Ministry of Finance, that Ministries/Departments may hold one meeting of the Consultative Committee in a year, during inter-session period, anywhere in India if the Chairperson of the Committee so desires and that the number of officers attending such meeting outside Delhi would be kept to the minimum. Study visits of members of the Consultative Committees to project sites of major Public Sector Undertakings can, however, be made outside Delhi. Members of the Consultative Committee who attend the inter-session meetings and the Study visits are entitled to TA/DA.

Where there is unanimity of view in the Committees, the Government normally accepts the view subject to certain exceptions, viz. any view having financial implications; any view concerning security, defence, external affairs and atomic energy; and any matter falling within the purview of an autonomous corporation. In case there is any difficulty in accepting the views, the reasons for non-acceptance of that view are explained to members of that Committee.

While opinion is often expressed in some quarters that the Consultative Committees should be replaced by Parliamentary Committees, the experience of the working of the Consultative Committees over the past 28 years has proved that these Committees have come to stay as useful fora for informal discussions between Ministers and Officers on the one hand and the members of Parliament on the other matters relating to Government's policies and programmes and the manner of their implementation. It is also noteworthy that while there is no obligation on the part of a member of Parliament to be a member of a Consultative Committee, almost all the members of Parliament have opted to be members of the Committees and they actively participate in the deliberations.

Government Committees

There are a number of Committees, Councils, Boards, etc., (hereinafter referred to as Government Committees) constituted by the Government on which members of either House are represented partially<sup>865</sup>. The Government Committees are set up in pursuance of a provision in an Act of Parliament or a Government resolution. Broadly, the function of these Committees is to advise the Government on certain issues or to inquire into certain matters. In some cases, these Committees are also called upon to frame rules, regulations or bye-laws for the governance of educational institutions, promotion of industrial development, trade, etc.

865. Members of the Lok Sabha are, for instance, represented on bodies such as the Advisory Council of the Delhi Development Authority; All India Council for Technical Education; All India Institute of Medical Sciences; Central Silk Board; Court of the Aligarh Muslim University; Haj Committee, etc.

For the list of such Committees, see brochure "Committees and other bodies on which Lok Sabha is represented wholly or partially" which is brought out every year by the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Members of the Lok Sabha are nominated thereon by the Speaker on a request from the Minister concerned. When such a request is received, the leaders of Parties and Groups in the House are asked by the Secretariat to suggest, for consideration of the Speaker, a panel of names in the order of priority. While inviting names from Party or Group leaders, it is insisted that only names of those members be suggested who are not already serving on other Parliamentary or Government Committees. After the members selected for nomination have furnished their written consent to serve on the Committee, their names are published in the Bulletin and also communicated to the Ministry concerned<sup>866</sup>. These Committees neither work under the direction of the Speaker nor present their reports to the House or the Speaker.

Even where a Government Committee is set up directly by the Government and members from the House are proposed to be included therein, the Speaker is to be consulted in the matter by the Minister concerned<sup>867</sup>. When the question of consultation with the Speaker by the Government on the matters which involve nomination of members of Lok Sabha on the Committees/Bodies set up by the Government was raised in the House on 4 November 1965, the Speaker observed that such consultation was necessary as it would avoid complications. In reply the Prime Minister had stated that he had more or less no objection to such consultation but would finalise it after having a talk with the Speaker. However, the same has not been finalized in the form of a formal decision or convention to provide for consultation with the Speaker by the Government in such matters. Similarly, when the Government send delegations abroad and members of the Lok Sabha are to be included in such a delegation, the Minister concerned submits the names of members for the approval of the Speaker. The following are the broad guidelines which are kept in view by the Government in nominating members on Government Committees or delegations<sup>868</sup>.

- (i) Appointments on Government Committees, Commissions, etc. are made on the basis of the aptitude, interest, past experience, etc. of members as ascertained from the bio-data furnished by the members to the Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha Secretariat, their participation in and association with the various Parliamentary activities and the options given by the members for nomination on Consultative Committees;
- (ii) In order to give as wide a chance as possible to members, names of those members who have not already been elected or nominated on other parliamentary or Government Committees are preferred; and
- (iii) Members serving on Financial Committees are not ordinarily nominated on other Committees.

Before finalising nominations, the consent of the members to the assignments is obtained by the Government.

Nominations on Parliamentary Delegations are, however, made by the Presiding Officers of Parliament<sup>869</sup>.

CHAPTER XXXI

Parliamentary Forums

Parliament is the highest platform for deliberation in a democracy which discusses various matters of public importance. Some of these are of critical importance to the betterment and survival of the humanity and as such require constant focus. Therefore, it is indispensable for members of Parliament to have a proper appreciation of the relevant issues concerning these vital subjects so that they can deal with these concerns in an effective manner inside and outside the Parliament. In order to achieve this objective, Speaker Somnath Chatterjee conceived the idea of constituting specific Parliamentary Forum on each of the important subjects wherein the members of Parliament could participate in informed discussions to gain deeper insights into various aspects of the subject matter. Accordingly, Parliamentary Forum on Water Conservation and Management was constituted on 12 August 2005. Prior to the constitution of the Forum, the Speaker also made an observation in the Lok Sabha on 12 May 2005 about his decision to constitute the Parliamentary Forum on Water Conservation & Management so that the members of Parliament can discuss the critical issue of water in a structured manner and also raise the related issues more effectively on the floor of the House. Subsequently, Parliamentary Forums on Children; Youth; Population & Public Health; and Global Warming and Climate Change were constituted. These Forums were reconstituted during the Fifteenth Lok Sabha also. Subsequently, three more Parliamentary Forums have been constituted. Thus, at present, there are eight Parliamentary Forums, one each on:

1. Water Conservation & Management
2. Children
3. Youth
4. Population & Public Health
5. Global Warming & Climate Change
6. Disaster Management
7. Artisans & Craftspeople
8. Millennium Development Goals

The broad aim and objectives of these Forums are to equip the members of Parliament with information and knowledge regarding issues and developments in the areas falling under the jurisdiction of the respective Forum, so as to make the members of Parliament aware of the seriousness of the situation and to enable them to adopt a result-oriented approach towards these issues. The guidelines of the Forums provide that the Parliamentary Forum will not interfere with or encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Departmentally Related Standing Committees of the Ministry/Department concerned.

Objectives

The objectives behind the constitution of the above eight Parliamentary Forums are to :

- a. provide a platform to the members of the Forums to have interaction with Ministers concerned, Experts and key officials from the nodal Ministries with a view to have a focused and meaningful discussion on critical issues with a result-oriented approach for speeding up the implementation process;
- b. sensitize the members about the key areas of concern and also about the ground-level situation and equip them with latest information, knowledge, technical know-how and valuable inputs from experts both from the country and abroad for enabling them to raise these issues effectively on the Floor of the House and in the meetings of the DRSCs; and
- c. prepare a data-base through collection of data on critical issues from Ministries concerned, Internet, reliable NGOs, newspapers; and United Nations, etc. and circulation thereof to the members of the Forums, so that they can meaningfully participate in the discussions and seek clarifications from the experts or officials from the Ministry present in the meetings.

Composition

The Guidelines of the respective Forum provide that the Speaker, Lok Sabha shall be the ex-officio President of the Parliamentary Forum on (i) Water Conservation & Management; (ii) Youth; (iii) Children; (iv) Global Warming & Climate Change; (v) Disaster Management; and (vi) Artisans & Craftspeople. In case of Parliamentary Forum on Population and Public Health, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha shall be the ex-officio President and the Speaker, Lok Sabha shall be the ex-officio Co-President of the Forum. Apart from President, the Deputy Chairman, Rajya Sabha, Deputy Speaker, Lok Sabha, concerned Ministers and Chairpersons of the respective Departmentally Related Standing Committee shall be ex-officio Vice-Presidents of the Forums.

Meeting

Salman Khurshid, Minister of External Affairs, inaugurated the Parliamentary Forum on Millennium Development Goals at a meeting held on 17 February 2014.

Distinction between Parliamentary Committees and Parliamentary Forums

Parliamentary Committees are distinct from Parliamentary Forums. Parliamentary Committees have statutory sanction as they owe their origin, powers, functions and privileges to the Constitution, the rules made thereunder, Acts of Parliament or Motions/Resolutions adopted by the House. The composition of the Parliamentary Committees which scrutinize the functioning of the Government consists of members of Parliament only and Rules do not permit appointment of Ministers as members of such Committees. Parliamentary Committees examine subjects within their mandate and present reports to the Houses. They also follow up with the Government the implementation of the recommendations contained in their reports and thereafter present action taken reports to the House. The Parliamentary Committees have been vested with the powers to call for records and persons in connection with the examination of the subjects and to report to the House any breach of privilege for investigation and suitable action. On the other hand, Parliamentary Forums are an informal mechanism consisting of members of Parliament and Ministers for interaction on critical issues of current importance to enable the members to acquaint themselves with such issues so that they may participate effectively in deliberations and discussions on the floor of the House in evolving suitable strategies and policies to deal with the problems at hand. The constitution of Forums do not have any statutory sanction nor they have been vested with powers, privileges conferred on the Parliamentary Committees. The Forums do not present any report to the House(s). Therefore, while appreciating the role and importance of the Parliamentary Forums, care should be taken not to equate or confuse Parliamentary Forums with Parliamentary Committees in terms of their status, powers, privileges, etc.

CHAPTER XXXII

General Rules of Procedure

Notices

Every matter proposed to be raised in the House by a member, whether it is in the form of a question, resolution, motion, Bill, an amendment, or otherwise, requires a notice. The Speaker does not allow any matter to be raised on the floor of the House unless he has received the requisite notice thereof. Every notice required under the Rules has to be given in writing addressed to the Secretary-General, signed by the member giving notice and handed in at the Parliamentary Notice Office within the notified hours<sup>1</sup>. The Speaker has deprecated the practice of members addressing notices to him by his personal name or sending them to his residence<sup>2</sup>. Notices may be delivered by members personally or through their messengers and can also be sent by post. In exceptional cases, a notice may be given telegraphically. Such notices have, however, to be immediately confirmed in writing. If no confirmation is received, the telegraphic notice is held out of order.

Notices are required to be given on standard printed forms. The practice of giving notices on scraps of paper or written in pencil has been deprecated by the Speaker<sup>3</sup>.

Since notices are in respect of business to be transacted in the House during a session, various notices are accepted from 1000 hours on the day following the day on which summons to members are issued.

As per the decision taken at a meeting of Speaker, Lok Sabha with the Leaders of Parties on 24 July 2005, the notices relating to matters of urgent public importance to be raised after the 'Question Hour' should be addressed to Secretary-General and given by the members by 0930 hours (now being submitted by members between 0830<sup>4</sup> hours and 0900 hours) on the day on which the member desires to raise the matter.

It is now an accepted practice that before the commencement of a session, notices of adjournment motions, calling attention, motions of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers or any other notices which are required to be given before the commencement of the sitting on the day on which the matter is proposed to be raised in the House, are entertained only from the day notified for the purpose in Bulletin Part II as it is not possible for the Speaker to consider these notices received too much in advance of the session<sup>5</sup>.

1. Rule 332. The hours fixed for the receipt of notices are from 10.00 hours to 15.15 hours on the working days. Notices received after 15.15 hours are deemed to be notices received on the following day, i.e. next working day.
  2. L.S. Deb., 20-11-1970, c. 218; 23-3-1964. c. 6898.
  3. L.A. Deb., 9-4-1934, p. 3423.
  4. Bn. (II), 29-7-2005, Para 1425.
  5. Bn. (II), 8-1-1973, para 991. The day notified for receiving these notices is usually the fourth working day before the commencement of the session.

Notices have to be given by the prescribed period laid down for the various items of business. Where a notice is required to be given “before the commencement of a sitting”, the notice should be received by the Speaker and the Secretary-General by 1000 hours on that day<sup>6</sup>. If it is received after the prescribed hour, it is deemed to be a notice for the next sitting. Where no period of notice is prescribed as in the case of discussion on matters of urgent public importance or no-day-yet-named motions<sup>7</sup>, the member is at liberty to give it at any time and the Speaker may take as much time as he requires to consider its admissibility.

However, notices for raising short duration discussion or motion regarding statements to be made in the House by Ministers or statements, reports and papers to be laid on the Table, are entertained from 1000 hours on the day the List of Business wherein the item has been included, is circulated to members. In case that day happens to be a Saturday, Sunday or a public holiday, the notices are entertained from 1000 hours on the next working day. In case a Supplementary List of Business is circulated in the House in regard to a statement, the notices in respect of that statement, received within 15 minutes of completion of circulation of the List of Business, are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot. In a case where an announcement is made by the Chair about a statement to be made by a Minister in the House, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the announcement is made by the Chair and the notices received within 15 minutes of announcement by the Chair are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot. When a statement is made without being listed in the List of Business or Supplementary List of Business, the notices in respect of that statement are entertained from the time the statement is actually made in the House and the notices received within 15 minutes of completion of the statement are deemed to have been received at the same point of time and their inter se priority is determined by ballot.

The period of notice prescribed under the Rules is generally insisted upon, and motions or resolutions falling short of the stipulated notice period are not allowed to be moved. However, the Rules prescribing the period of notices also empower the Speaker to waive the period of notices in appropriate cases and to admit a particular motion with a shorter notice or even without notice<sup>8</sup>, but such cases are rare.

In calculating the period of notice in regard to questions and resolutions, the day on which notice has been received and the day on which the question is to be answered or the resolution is to be moved, are excluded.

Notices of amendments to a Bill or a resolution may be given by members in advance, of the inclusion of the relevant item in the List of Business. Such amendments are, however, circulated to members on or after the day on which that item is included in the List of Business or in the statement made by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs regarding Government Business for the ensuing week<sup>9</sup>.

6. Dir. 113B.

7. See Rules 193 and 185.

8. The cases under which the period of notice can be or has been waived by the Speaker are described at appropriate places under respective Chapters.

9. Dir. 113.

It is open to a member to give notices before making and subscribing the oath or affirmation but a member who has not made and subscribed the oath or affirmation cannot ask a question or move a resolution, a cut motion or an adjournment motion or introduce a Bill, although he may have given notices of the same.

Where two or more members give separate notices of an identical motion or on the same matter, the names of all such members are bracketed on the admitted notice, the names of the members inter se being arranged in the order in which notices are received in point of time or in the order determined by ballot, as the case may be. The right of moving the motion in such cases belongs, in the first instance, to the member whose name appears first on the list.

Identical or substantially similar questions, notices of which are given by several members separately, are either consolidated or the one which is most appropriately worded is admitted and the names of all the other members are added thereto. However, if a member objects to his name being so added, his name is deleted. Similarly, where two or more notices of an adjournment motion on the same matter have been received, the Speaker may, in his discretion, admit a notice which is appropriately framed although it may not be the first received in point of time. The names of the other members are then appended to the notice in the order of receipt of the notices. In the case of Bills also, the names of all the members who give notice of an identical Bill are appended to the Bill in the order in which notices are received in point of time. The member whose notice is received first gets the right to move the motion for leave to introduce the Bill<sup>10</sup>. However, if a Bill is pending in the Lok Sabha, notice of an identical Bill cannot be given by another member, unless the Speaker otherwise directs<sup>11</sup>.

Where a motion, an amendment or a cut motion admitted in the names of several members is not actually moved but is treated as moved on an indication given by such members in writing to the Speaker<sup>12</sup>, the motion, amendment or cut motion, as the case may be, is deemed to have been moved by the member whose name appears first in the List of Business and if he is not present in the House or has not indicated his intention to move, then by the second member or the third member, etc., who may be present. In the printed debates also the name of such member is shown as the mover of the motion, amendment or cut motion, as the case may be<sup>13</sup>.

In the case of a private member's Bill which has been admitted in the names of more than one member, the member whose name appears first in the List of Business gets the right to move the motion for leave to introduce the Bill. In case the 11. For a case where a Bill was not considered identical with the pending Bill, see P. Deb., (II), 12-12-1950, cc. 1548 and 1552-53.

12. Where substitute motions, cut motions or amendments are received in large numbers, in order to save the time of the House the practice has been for the Speaker to ask members to hand in at the Table, slips indicating the numbers of the selected substitute motions, cut motions or amendments which they desire to be treated as moved.

13. Dir. 42.

first member is absent, the next member present may make the motion for leave to introduce the Bill<sup>14</sup>.

A member who has given notice of his intention to move for leave to introduce a Bill may authorize any other member to make the motion on his behalf<sup>15</sup>. However, the Speaker may refuse to allow a member to introduce a Bill on behalf of another member if he has not been informed sufficiently in advance of such authorization<sup>16</sup>. An amendment or a cut motion, however, cannot be moved by a member on behalf of another member<sup>17</sup>. The member giving notice of an amendment or cut motion must be present in the House when the amendment or cut motion is taken up<sup>18</sup>; otherwise he loses the opportunity to move it<sup>19</sup>. Authorization is, however, permissible in the case of resolutions and a member may, with the permission of the Speaker, authorize any other member in whose name the same resolution stands lower down in the List of Business to move it on his behalf<sup>20</sup>.

Contingent Notices

A member may give notice of a motion or resolution or Bill which he desires to be taken up on the conclusion of another item of business on which that motion is contingent and, if such a notice is admitted by the Speaker, it is included in the List of Business under the heading—Contingent Notice of Motion or Resolution or Bill, as the case may be. Any such notice can be taken up in the House only after the item of business on which the notice is contingent is disposed of<sup>21</sup>.

Contingent notices are generally given in respect of Appropriation Bills which the Government desire to be passed as early as possible after the relevant Demands for Grants are voted by the House. In special cases where such Bills are required to be passed expeditiously, the Minister concerned makes a special request to the Speaker that motions regarding introduction, consideration and passing of the Bill under ‘Contingent Notice of Bill’ may be included in the List of Business on the same day on which the relevant demands are to be voted by the House.

Where the debate on a Government Bill is adjourned sine die on a motion adopted by the House, further discussion of that Bill is included under the heading ‘Contingent Notice of Bill’ in the List of Business for the day on which the relevant motion for resumption of the adjourned debate on the Bill is to be adopted by the House.

In case the debate on a private member’s resolution is adjourned sine die on a motion adopted by the House and the adjourned debate on such a resolution is sought to be resumed without determining its relative precedence again by ballot by suspending Rule 30(2) in its application to the resolution, the motion for resumption of adjourned debate on such a resolution is included under the heading ‘Contingent Notice of Motion’ in the List of Business for the day on which the motion for suspension of the relevant rule is to be adopted by the House.

Modification of Notices

If in the opinion of the Speaker any notice contains words, phrases or expressions which involve argument or are unparliamentary, ironical, irrelevant, verbose or otherwise inappropriate, he may, in his discretion, have such notice amended before it is circulated<sup>22</sup>.

Notices of amendments which are not intelligible or which make a clause of the Bill to which they relate or the resolution or motion unintelligible or ungrammatical, are suitably edited before they are circulated to the members. If necessary, the members concerned are also consulted while editing the amendments.

Power of Speaker to rule out Motion

Apart from the power to amend or modify notices of motions, resolutions, etc., the Speaker is also empowered to decide whether a resolution or a motion or a part thereof is or is not admissible under the Rules and may disallow any resolution or motion, or a part thereof, when in his opinion it is an abuse of the right of moving the same or is calculated to obstruct or prejudicially affect the procedure of the House<sup>23</sup>. The Speaker has the inherent power to rule out a motion at any time before it is voted upon on the ground that it involves an abuse of the forms and procedure of the House<sup>24</sup>. All the items entered in the List of Business or in any Parliamentary Paper are provisional. Members can raise points of order on an item so entered and if the Speaker is satisfied, he may rule out the item<sup>25</sup>.

Anticipating Discussion

A member seeking to raise discussion on any matter of which notice has already been given by another member or Minister is not permitted to do so on the ground of anticipation<sup>26</sup>. However, in determining whether a notice is out of order on the ground of anticipation, the probability of the matter being brought before the House within a reasonable time is taken into consideration by the Speaker before deciding about the admissibility of the discussion. Thus an amendment to a resolution anticipating a later resolution of which notice had been given prior to the amendments has been held to be not in order<sup>27</sup>. Similarly, notice of resolution relating to a matter already before the House in the form of a private member's Bill was held inadmissible on the ground of anticipation. Amendments to the Motion of Thanks on the President's Address relating to a matter on which a resolution has been put down for discussion after a few days are held to be inadmissible on the ground of anticipation<sup>28</sup>.

Likewise, even questions by way of clarification or any sort of discussion on a statement made by a Minister may not be permitted on a subject that is likely to be discussed shortly on some other motion<sup>29</sup>. But an objection that a substitute motion approving the policy of Government cannot be put to vote when a motion of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers was to be discussed shortly, has been overruled on the ground that the rule prohibited the anticipation of discussion and not voting on a substitute motion to the motion on which discussion had concluded<sup>30</sup>.

Lapse of Notices

On the prorogation of the House, all pending notices other than notices of intention to move for leave to introduce a Bill, lapse and if the members concerned desire to raise the matter in the next session, they must give fresh notice of the same<sup>31</sup>. However, fresh notice is required of intention to move for leave to introduce a Bill in respect of which sanction or recommendation of the President is necessary and if such sanction or recommendation, earlier granted, has ceased to be operative<sup>32</sup>.

When a member gives a notice after the adjournment of the House sine die but before its prorogation with the intention of moving the matter in the next session, such notice is not treated as valid for the next session. Fresh notice is required for moving of supplementary Demands for Grants which were not voted before the prorogation of a session.

Bills pending before the House do not lapse on the prorogation of the House<sup>33</sup>. Similarly, Bills before Select or Joint Committees are also protected<sup>34</sup>.

A motion, a resolution or an amendment which has been moved and is pending in the House does not lapse by reason only of the prorogation of the session and fresh notice is not required for further consideration thereof<sup>35</sup>. Discussion on a matter of urgent public importance for a short duration raised but not concluded in a session does not also lapse on prorogation and may be resumed in a subsequent session<sup>36</sup>. Amendments moved or motions made in respect of a pending Bill and not disposed of are also saved from lapsing upon prorogation. Further proceedings on such amendments or motions can be continued from the stage reached in the following session<sup>37</sup>.

If a member, subsequent to his giving notice in writing in respect of any matter under the rules, is appointed a Minister, the notice given by him is treated as having lapsed from the date of such appointment<sup>38</sup>. On the other hand, if a Minister incharge of a Government Bill resigns or is allocated a different portfolio before the Bill is actually introduced, the notice of the Bill does not lapse. However, the name of the new Minister incharge who introduces the Bill is substituted in the Statement of Objects and Reasons and docket page in the copy of the Bill meant for publication in the Gazette. Copies of the Bill, as introduced in the Lok Sabha, are also reprinted in the same way.

In the case of Government Bill, an amendment of which notice has been received from the member in-charge, does not lapse by reason of the fact that the member in-charge has ceased to be a Minister or a member and such amendment is printed in the name of the new member in-charge of the Bill<sup>39</sup>. However, when there is a change in the Ministry a new Cabinet takes oath in which some of the Ministers who had given notices of consideration of motions, etc., in regard to Government Bills are also in the new Cabinet, or when some of the Ministers who had given notices are not holding the same portfolios in the new Cabinet, the notices tabled earlier are not treated as valid and fresh notices for introduction, consideration and passing of Bills and consideration of motions, etc. are obtained from the new Ministers.

Recommendation of the President

Recommendation of the President is required for introduction of Bills in the following cases—

Bills relating to formation of new States and alteration of areas, boundaries or names of the existing States<sup>40</sup>; Money Bills and Financial Bills<sup>41</sup>; and Bills affecting taxation in which the States are interested<sup>42</sup>.

A Bill requiring the President's recommendation for introduction is withdrawn in case it is introduced without the recommendation being obtained. It may be reintroduced with the requisite recommendation.

42. Art. 274(1).

The recommendation of the President is necessary for the consideration and passing of a Bill involving expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India<sup>43</sup>. Recommendation for consideration would also be necessary,

If the Bill would, if enacted, involve expenditure indirectly;

In the case of a continuance Bill involving expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India although the recommendation was not obtained when the original Bill was passed;

In the case of a Bill consolidating an existing Act or Acts which involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund;

For an amending Bill seeking to convert an existing Act into a permanent one, if the recommendation was necessary for the consideration of the Principal Act.

The recommendation of the President for consideration of a Government Bill may, however, be obtained while discussion on the Bill continues<sup>44</sup>.

Every recommendation of the President is communicated to the Secretary-General by the Minister concerned in writing<sup>45</sup>.

Where a Bill having been considered and passed by the Rajya Sabha is transmitted to the Lok Sabha, the Minister concerned forwards to the Secretariat also the necessary recommendation for consideration of the Bill in the Lok Sabha even though a similar recommendation has been sent earlier to the Rajya Sabha when the Bill was pending before that House.

Printing of the Recommendation on Bills

Every recommendation of the President for introduction or consideration of a Bill is printed along with the Bill for the information of members. The letter from the Minister concerned to the Secretary-General conveying the recommendation is reproduced verbatim in the Bill after the Statement of Objects and Reasons. In cases where the recommendation is not received in time for being printed along with the Bill, it is published in the Bulletin<sup>46</sup>. Here also, the letter of recommendation is reproduced in extenso.

The recommendation of the President for consideration of a Bill which is introduced in the Rajya Sabha and is transmitted to the Lok Sabha after having been passed by that House, is published in the Bulletin for the information of members.

The recommendation of the President is also indicated as a footnote in the relevant proceedings of the House in the following form<sup>47</sup> :

“Introduced/moved with recommendation of the President”.

How members are called upon to speak

A member who desires to take part in a debate or discussion in the House may adopt any one of the following three methods<sup>48</sup>:

He may have his name communicated to the Speaker through the Parliamentary Party or Group to which he belongs.

In all important debates, each Party or Group forwards a list of the members who would be their spokesmen in such debates. The Speaker is not bound by the list or the order in which the names have been given but gives due consideration to such lists while calling upon members to speak.

He may prefer to write direct to the Speaker without having to go through the machinery of Parliamentary Party or Group.

A member may write direct to the Speaker or the Secretary-General that he wishes to take part in a debate. When such requests are received either direct from the members or through their Party or Group, the Secretariat prepares a list of such members party-wise and places it before the Speaker.

He may catch the Speaker's eye.

A member who wishes to catch the Speaker's eye has to stand in his seat whenever he wishes to take part in a debate. Catching the Speaker's eye is a well-established parliamentary convention. Every member has to catch the eye of the Speaker to get a chance to speak even if he has written to the Speaker in advance or forwarded his name through his Party or Group. Unless a member rises in his place, he may not be called upon to speak even though his Party or Group or he himself has made a request in writing to Speaker to permit him to speak.

Selection of Members called upon to speak

The Speaker determines the order in which he would call upon members to speak: a member cannot indicate the order in which he should be called<sup>49</sup>.

List of spokesmen are supplied by Whips of the Parliamentary Party and Groups to enable the Speaker to select members so as to ensure a well-regulated and balanced debate. He is, however, not bound by such lists. The list prepared by the Secretariat for the guidance of the Speaker on the basis of the lists supplied by Whips and requests received direct from members can be changed or altered by the Speaker<sup>50</sup>. Requests from members received direct or through Parties are for the guidance of the Speaker and cannot be read out to the House<sup>51</sup>.

The Speaker has the right to regulate the debate and select members to take part in a debate: a member cannot insist on being called<sup>52</sup>.

During the Fifth Lok Sabha, when the number of members who wished to speak on the Motion of Thanks on the President's Address was too large to be accommodated, the Speaker, in order to ensure that smaller Groups also got a chance to speak, decided to call two members from the major Parties/Groups, followed by one from a medium Group and one from a small Group, in that order<sup>53</sup>. The major Parties/Groups are those which have more than 15 members in the House. While the medium ones have 5-15 members, the small Groups comprise less than five members.

No member can claim to speak as a matter of right: he should try to catch the Speaker's eye and wait for his turn<sup>54</sup>. The one who is called upon to speak is deemed to have caught the Speaker's eye<sup>55</sup>. A member who tries to catch the Speaker's eye by shouting may not be called<sup>56</sup>; so also a member who does not stick to his seat<sup>57</sup>. A member who is absent or inattentive and does not respond when called upon to speak loses his chance<sup>58</sup>. The one who is not called upon to speak has no right to protest against the decision of the Speaker<sup>59</sup>.

In the matter of selection of members, the person who is sitting in the Chair for the time being is not bound by any direction given by the person who occupied the Chair earlier<sup>60</sup>.

Every Group in the House cannot insist on being given an opportunity to take part in every debate<sup>61</sup>. Further a member who moves an amendment or a cut motion cannot claim to speak as a matter of right<sup>62</sup>.

A member proposed to serve on a Select or Joint Committee does not try to catch the Speaker's eye to participate in the debate on the motion for reference of a Bill to that Select or Joint Committee. Even if he has tabled an amendment to the motion for reference of the Bill to the Select or Joint Committee<sup>63</sup>, except in special circumstances, he is not called upon to speak in the particular debate<sup>64</sup>.

A member who has had no opportunity to speak at the time of reference of a Bill to a Select or Joint Committee is, as far as possible, accommodated during the discussion on the Bill as reported by the Committee<sup>65</sup>.

A member who is not on the Joint or Select Committee on a Bill is generally given preference to speak during the discussion on the Bill as reported by the Joint or Select Committee<sup>66</sup>. A member who is on the Committee may be given a chance if a reply is called for on the points raised by the other members.

A member cannot speak twice during the same debate even if he may have a new amendment to move or the time allotted to the debate has been extended<sup>67</sup>. As a special case, however, the Speaker may permit a member to speak again on the same motion or resolution if the debate on it is spread over in two sessions and during the interval some new developments have taken place<sup>68</sup>.

As far as possible, time is divided between the party in power and the Opposition in proportion in their strength in the House<sup>69</sup>: time taken by Ministers is counted within the time allocated to the party in power<sup>70</sup>.

Usually, on important discussions, such as the Motion of Thanks on President's Address, General Budget, Railway Budget or on any other important Bill, a large number of members intend to participate in the debate. However, as the time allotted is limited, the Chair at times permits members to lay their written speeches on the Table. As a result, many members lay their written speeches fully or partially and the same form a part of the proceedings and are published in the debates<sup>71</sup>.

71. Before commencement of a Session, members are requested through a para published in Bulletin Part-II to keep the following points in view while laying their written speeches on the Table of the House:—

1. The text of the speech, addressed to the Speaker, should be typed in double line space in English or Hindi and the speech should not be too lengthy but confining preferably to two or three pages.
2. The speech should not contain ironical expressions, defamatory statements, etc.
3. Enclosures, such as letter to Government, tabulated statistical statements, etc., may not be appended to the text of speeches.
4. The text of the speech, duly signed along with division number of the member, may be handed over to the officer at the Table.
5. In case a member makes part of his speech on the floor of the House and lays the remaining part as a written speech, he must ensure that points already made by him in the House are not repeated in the written speech.

Mode of addressing the House

A member who desires to make an observation on a matter before the House is required to speak from his place and rise while speaking<sup>72</sup>. He is always to address the Speaker. A member who is disabled by sickness or infirmity may, however, be permitted by the Speaker to speak sitting<sup>73</sup>.

The practice requiring members to stand up and speak from their places was observed even in the Central Legislative Assembly. In 1920, a proposal was mooted that in the interests of acoustic facilities it might be well to provide for delivery of speeches from a central rostrum in the Chamber, but the proposal was not accepted. The question was again raised at the Conference of Secretaries held at Jaipur in 1957, and it was agreed that the practice of members speaking from their seats had considerable merit in it and should continue.

Rules to be Observed While Speaking

While participating in debates or discussions in the House, members are required to observe certain rules regarding the manner of speech. These have been described in Chapter-XII dealing with 'Conduct of Members'.

Discussion on Sub Judice Matters

Members cannot refer to any matter of fact on which a judicial decision is pending<sup>74</sup>.

Member Appointed Minister in a State

Where a member of either House of Parliament is appointed a Minister in a State but does not resign his seat in Parliament, he incurs no disqualification and continues to be a member of that House as well as Minister in the State for a period of six months without being elected to State Legislature<sup>75</sup>. In such cases, though there are no constitutional provisions to debar him, it is desirable that the member, if he comes to the House, should not participate in the proceedings of the House<sup>76</sup>. As regards voting in the House, the Presiding Officers have left it to the good sense of the member concerned to decide for himself in the matter<sup>77</sup>.

On 17 April 1999 during the Fourth Session of the Twelfth Lok Sabha, before the Motion of Confidence in the Council of Ministers was put to vote of the House, the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs submitted that as per convention, a member (Giridhar Gamang) who had assumed the office of the Chief Minister of Odisha, should not be allowed to cast his vote. The Leader of Opposition (Sharad Pawar) and some other members of the Opposition submitted that since he continued to be a member of the House, he was entitled to cast his vote on the Motion of Confidence in the Council of Ministers. Thereupon, the Speaker observed:

Making of Allegation against a Person

Members have freedom of speech in the House and, as a necessary corollary to this privilege, they are immune from proceedings in any court, civil or criminal, for anything said on the floor of the House<sup>78</sup>. It is not necessary that a member should make speeches or statements which would stand the test in a court of law. While speaking a member may criticize any authority or person or make any statement which might ordinarily amount to defamation under the law of the land, and unless the Speaker has prevented him from making such a statement or has expunged it, it remains on record.

The constitutional privilege of freedom of speech is, however, subject to the other provisions of the Constitution and to the Rules of the House.

Conduct of high dignitaries cannot be questioned incidentally in the course of a speech by a member on a Bill, motion, resolution or any other form of discussion. The Constitution provides for discussion on the conduct of some of the authorities in the manner indicated therein, e.g. President, Vice-President, Speaker, Deputy Speaker, Judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts, Comptroller and Auditor-General, Chief Election Commissioner, etc. Other high functionaries such as Governors, Ministers, Statutory authorities can be discussed on appropriate motions drawn in a form approved by the Speaker. In fact, the House has discussed many times the conduct of Governors in the discharge of their functions as Governors on specific resolutions confined to the subject<sup>79</sup>. Questions can be asked on the conduct of Chief Ministers and Ministers of State Governments if the matters have been referred to the Union Government or are under their consideration. Whenever the Union Government has taken up for consideration or investigation any matter concerning or involving a dignitary, a Question or Calling Attention is admissible as to what the Union Government is doing or proposes to do<sup>80</sup>.

A question has arisen from time to time as to the scope of discussion in the House on the conduct of a person in high authority which is not connected with the discharge of the duties of the office he is holding, e.g. if before he assumed office, or while in office, he has done anything unconnected with the office, it would be in order to refer to it in a debate on any bill, motion, resolution or any other form of discussion, provided that the Union Government is primarily responsible for answering such criticism.

There are instances where members, on their appointment as Ministers in the States, have signed the Attendance Register of Lok Sabha to avoid loss of seats for non-attendance in the House. However, in a few instances, it had been observed from the Chair that while such Ministers continued to be members, it would not be desirable for them to participate in the deliberations of the House. Accordingly, such members withdrew from the House forthwith.

Giridhar Gamang who is the Chief Minister of Odisha continues to be a member of Lok Sabha. He has come to cast his vote on the Confidence Motion. In view of the aforesaid, I leave it to the good sense of the member as regards the question of casting his vote on the Confidence Motion. The member voted against the Motion—see L.S. Deb., 17-4-1999, cc.30-31.

78. Art. 105(1) and (2).

79. For details and instances, see Chapter XLII—‘Parliament and the States’, infra.

80. Ibid.

As a rule, no allegation of a defamatory or incriminatory nature can be made by a member against any person unless the member has given previous intimation to the Speaker and taken his permission<sup>81</sup> and has also informed the Minister concerned, so that the Minister could make an investigation into the matter for the purpose of a reply<sup>82</sup>. Nevertheless, the Speaker may at any time prohibit a member from making any allegation if he is of the opinion that such allegation is derogatory to the dignity of the House or that it does not serve any public interest<sup>83</sup>.

While proposing this rule, the Rules Committee observed:

It was against the rules of parliamentary debate and decorum to make defamatory statements or allegations of incriminatory nature against any person and the position was rather worse if such allegations were made against persons who were not in a position to defend themselves on the floor of the House. The House should not be made a forum where the conduct and character of persons should be brought into disrepute, as the person against whom allegations were made had no remedy against a speech made on the floor of the House which was privileged. In order to safeguard the honour of the people generally it was imperative that the members applied voluntary restraint and resorted to making allegations in cases of extreme necessity where there was an element of public interest. Even in such cases, it was necessary that reasonable opportunity should be given to the Minister concerned to investigate into the matter and to produce, if necessary, defence on behalf of the person concerned.

It would not be right to place an absolute ban on members making such allegations as that might stand in the way of their discharging their duties as responsible members. While a member should be given absolute right to bring to the notice of the House any matter which on proper investigation he feels should be ventilated even though it involves the character or reputation of any person, he should in the interest of public morality and high parliamentary decorum inform the Speaker beforehand of his intention to do so and also the Minister concerned. The Minister will then have an opportunity to look into the matter beforehand and to come prepared with a reply also. At the same time the Speaker will have also an opportunity of satisfying himself that the member has made reasonable inquiries and has in his possession prima facie evidence in support of his allegations.

The Committee thought that the proposed rule would have a salutary effect in regulating the debate and provide the necessary safeguards both for the member and the persons against whom allegations might be made as also the Government<sup>84</sup>.

A member has to be careful while making an allegation. He has to satisfy himself that the source is reliable and allegation is based on facts. In effect, he is required to make prima facie investigation into the matter before he writes to the Speaker or the Minister, and more so before he speaks in the House. A notice relating to an allegation based on newspaper reports is not allowed unless the member tabling it gives the Speaker substantial proof that the allegation has some factual basis<sup>85</sup>.

In the notice to the Speaker, a member is required to give brief details about the allegation which he proposes to make against a person or another member so that the Speaker could judge the matter beforehand<sup>86</sup>.

As already stated, unless advance notice is given to the Speaker and the Minister concerned, a member is not permitted to make allegations in the House<sup>87</sup>. Where allegations are made without fulfilling this requirement, an objection to that effect can be taken by any member in the House and the Chair in such a case may uphold the objection and forbid the member from proceeding further in the matter<sup>88</sup>. The Chair may also suo motu object to the allegations being made where these are made without following the prescribed procedure. In appropriate cases, the member may be asked to withdraw them<sup>89</sup> or the Chair may even order the expunction of the allegations from the proceedings<sup>90</sup> though this is done in exceptional cases only.

When allegations are made by a member against another member or a Minister and the latter denies those allegations, the denial should normally be accepted by the member who made the allegations unless he is sure about the correctness of the charges made and is prepared to take full responsibility for the same<sup>91</sup>. Where both the member who made the allegations and the member or the Minister against whom those allegations have been made stick to their respective versions and are prepared for an inquiry being held by the Speaker, they may be asked to adduce such evidence as may be in their possession in support of their statements. After examining the evidence and going into the facts of the case, the Speaker may inform the House of the result of his findings. If the Speaker comes to the conclusion that the allegation had not been substantiated as there was doubt about the genuineness of the documents, the member may be informed accordingly<sup>92</sup>. In the event of the member who made the allegations expressing regret, the House may agree to treat the matter as closed<sup>93</sup>.

Normally when a member makes an allegation in the House against a Minister or a member without giving advance notice thereof, provisions of the rule on the subject are invoked and the member is called to order<sup>94</sup>. In many cases these allegations find a place in the proceedings and if they go unchallenged they might affect the honour and dignity of the member concerned. Therefore, where any such allegations have gone on record, the Minister or member against whom allegations have been made is allowed, if he so requests, to make a statement in the House clarifying the position either on the same day or later on and that brings the matter to an end<sup>95</sup>.

When an allegation is made against a Minister or member, it is for that Minister or member to take any course of action to refute the allegation<sup>96</sup>. A Minister may be permitted to refute then and there allegations made against him in his capacity as a Minister without being required to furnish written text of the statement to be made by him<sup>97</sup>. Where a member of the Rajya Sabha feels aggrieved because of certain derogatory remarks alleged to have been made against him by a member of the Lok Sabha, he may approach the concerned Minister to make a statement in the Lok Sabha contradicting the allegatory remarks<sup>98</sup>.

Where allegations are made in the House against a particular political party, the leader or the Chief Whip of that Party or Group in the House is permitted to make a statement in regard thereto. The member desiring to make the personal explanation is, however, required first to submit to the Speaker the text of the statement to be made by him. He can make the statement if the Speaker after going through the statement accords him the permission<sup>99</sup>.

However, a member who makes an allegation in the House cannot be compelled to disclose the source of his information or the documents or evidence on which his allegation is based, even though a document may have been obtained through leakage or stealth or in an irregular manner<sup>100</sup>.

It is a parliamentary convention that no allegation or criticism is usually made by a member against heads of foreign Diplomatic Missions<sup>101</sup>.

The Speaker has not permitted and has deprecated making of casual allegations against persons who are not present in the House to defend themselves<sup>102</sup>. Where a citizen feels aggrieved that his name has been brought in debate with a view to slander, defame or criticize him, he may write to the member concerned giving him true facts with a request to make necessary corrections in the House. He may also write to the appropriate Minister giving him all the facts and the Minister may, after such investigations as he deems fit, make a statement in the House clarifying the position. The Minister can refute the allegation made in the House by a member against an outsider, but he cannot read the statement furnished to him by the individual concerned<sup>103</sup>. The aggrieved citizen cannot also ask the Speaker to intervene in the matter or to read his statement or submission to the House. As a remedy, however, the aggrieved person may make a representation to the Committee on Petitions of the House placing all the facts before it, and the Committee after examining the case in all its aspects may make a report to the House<sup>104</sup>. It is open to the House to take such further action as it deems fit.

A citizen who has been criticized in the House may make a factual statement in the Press or circulate it to members of Parliament for their information. He should, however, refrain from making any aspersions or casting reflections on the member or the House or the Presiding Officer while clarifying his position, as by doing so he may be held guilty of the contempt of the House<sup>105</sup>.

References to officers present in the Official Gallery of the House are not permissible<sup>106</sup>. Where a public servant feels aggrieved by anything said in the House, he may, through proper channel, bring to the notice of the Minister concerned whatever he has to say in this regard. Thereafter, the Minister if he considers it necessary may, with the previous permission of the Speaker, make a statement in the House<sup>107</sup>.

It is not enough for a member merely to give notice to the Speaker in general terms before making allegations in the House. For this purpose, it is necessary that:

- (i) the member gives adequate advance notice to the Speaker and the Minister concerned;
- (ii) the details of the charges sought to be levelled are spelt out in precise terms and are duly supported by the requisite documents which are to be authenticated by the member;
- (iii) the member before making the allegations in the House satisfies himself after making enquiries that there is a basis for the allegations;
- (iv) the member is prepared to accept responsibility for the allegations; and
- (v) the member is prepared to substantiate the allegations.

The Speaker has laid down the following procedure to be followed in dealing with allegations made against outsiders<sup>108</sup>:—

- (1) No member shall be allowed to make an allegation against an outsider unless he has obtained the prior permission of the Speaker after giving advance notice thereof to the Speaker and the Minister concerned. Such notice shall give the name of the person concerned, the nature of allegation against him and some evidence to show that there is a prima facie case.

- (2) Where a member makes an allegation in the House against an outsider without obtaining the prior permission of the Speaker, the same may not form part of the record of the House.
- (3) In the case of allegations made against Government officers, it will be for the Minister concerned to make a statement in the House, if he so wishes.
- (4) When a representation from an outsider is substantiated by documentary evidence, the Speaker may, in his discretion, refer the matter to the Government or the Committee on Petitions for inquiry and report.

If a member makes an allegation against any outsider on the floor of the House and the subject-matter thereof becomes later a case for investigation by police or any other investigating authority, the police or the investigating authority cannot approach the member and call upon him to divulge the source of his information or give up evidence in his possession which may assist the police or investigating authority in their investigations. It will be a breach of privilege on the part of such authorities to approach the member direct in such cases. The proper course for the authorities concerned is to submit their case to the Minister and the Minister, if he is satisfied that the evidence in the possession of the member is relevant or necessary for the completion of the investigation, may write to the member and ask him to co-operate in the matter but it is entirely in the discretion of the member whether he should give the information that is in his possession. If he declines to give the information, the matter cannot be pursued further<sup>109</sup>.

The Chair has on occasions impressed upon the members that a member who makes an allegation against any person should ensure about the correctness of the facts beforehand and should realise his responsibility as a member of Parliament. Where a member is alleged to have acted in a manner which is inconsistent with the dignity of the House or the standard expected of him as a member of Parliament, a motion on his conduct may be allowed to be discussed in the House. However, certain preliminary procedure has to be followed before such a motion is admitted by the Speaker<sup>110</sup>.

Order of Speeches and the Right of Reply

After the member who moves a motion has spoken, other members may speak on the motion in such order as the Speaker may call upon them. If any member who is so called upon does not speak, he is not entitled, except with the permission of the Speaker, to speak on the motion at any later stage of the debate<sup>111</sup>.

109. 12R (CP-RS), presented on 6 December 1968. The report was adopted by the Rajya Sabha.

110. For the procedure antecedent to the discussion of such a motion in the House, see Chapter XII, supra.

111. Rule 358(1).

Except in the exercise of the right of reply, no member can speak more than once to any motion, save with the permission of the Speaker<sup>112</sup>. A member who has moved a motion may speak again by way of reply, and if the motion is moved by a private member the Minister concerned may, with the permission of the Speaker, speak (whether he has spoken previously in the debate or not) after the mover has replied. It is not permissible for a member to reply to the debate on a motion or resolution on behalf of another member<sup>113</sup>. The right of reply, however, does not extend to the mover of an amendment to a Bill or a resolution, save with the permission of the Speaker<sup>114</sup>.

Where a motion or an amendment standing in the names of several members is moved by one of them, others can only speak in support thereof and cannot move the motion or amendment again<sup>115</sup>. In such cases, the motion or the amendment, as the case be, is moved by the member whose name appears first on the List of Business and if he is not present in the House, then by the second member or third member, etc., who may be present and the name of only such member is shown in the proceedings as the mover of that motion<sup>116</sup>.

No member can speak more than once on any motion even if he may have a new amendment to move or the time allotted for the debate has been extended<sup>117</sup>, unless specifically provided for in the Rules<sup>118</sup> or permitted by the Chair<sup>119</sup>.

A second speech by a member, allowed through oversight, was expunged from the debates<sup>120</sup>.

If the speech of the mover of a motion or resolution remains unfinished, it is treated as concluded if the mover is absent on the next occasion when the discussion is resumed<sup>121</sup>. It is not permissible for the mover to authorize another member to continue the unfinished speech. This applies to any speech which remains unfinished

During the Tenth Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, a member, who could not finish his speech while moving resolution on Centre-State relations on 18 March 1968 when the House adjourned for the day, was allowed to resume, with the consent of the House, his unfinished speech on 29 April 1968, although he was not present on 30 March 1968 when further discussion on the resolution was resumed—L.S. Deb., 18-3-1968, cc. 450-52; 29-4-1968, cc. 468-69.

and the member in question is absent at the time when discussion on that item is resumed<sup>122</sup>.

The Speaker does not undertake the responsibility of ascertaining in every case before putting the question whether the mover of a motion or resolution would like to speak in reply. It is for the mover himself to protect his own right of reply by rising in his place and asking for permission to reply<sup>123</sup>.

The reply of the mover of the original motion concludes the debate<sup>124</sup> and the Speaker declines to permit further speeches thereafter<sup>125</sup>. Reply on amendments does not, however, conclude the debate<sup>126</sup>.

After a combined discussion on a statutory resolution seeking disapproval of an Ordinance and a motion for consideration of the Government Bill seeking to replace that Ordinance, the Minister is called first to speak so that the mover of the resolution gets a chance to reply to the arguments put forward by the Minister; if the member raises any new points in his reply, the Minister may be given a second opportunity to speak<sup>127</sup>.

Address by Speaker

The Speaker may by himself, or on a point being raised or on a request made by a member, address the House at any time on a matter under consideration in the House with a view to aiding members in their deliberations<sup>128</sup>. Such expression of views cannot be taken to be in the nature of a decision<sup>129</sup>.

129. Rule 360.

The Speaker generally makes valedictory references on adjournment sine die of the House.

Closure

At any time after a motion has been made, a member can move for closure and if he does so, the motion "That the question be now put" is put by the Speaker unless it appears to him that the closure motion is an abuse of the Rules or an infringement of the right of reasonable debate<sup>130</sup>. If the motion "That the question be now put" is carried, the question or questions consequent thereon are put forthwith without further debate, subject to the right of reply which may be allowed by the Speaker to a member<sup>131</sup>.

A closure motion may be moved at any time, subject to the condition that if another member is speaking he should be allowed to conclude his speech, and also subject to the right of reply, if any, being exercised by the mover. It is in the discretion of the Speaker to accept the motion if he considers that there has been sufficient debate and the time is ripe for such a motion<sup>132</sup>. The discretion of the Speaker is limited to the acceptance of the closure motion but the final decision rests with the House to decide whether the debate should end or not<sup>133</sup>. Even if there appears to be a general feeling in the House in favour of the closure motion, the Speaker has the full discretion to refuse it if he is of the opinion that there has not been sufficient debate<sup>134</sup>. However, once the closure motion has been accepted by the Speaker, no discussion is permissible on the question whether there has been sufficient debate or not<sup>135</sup>. When a motion for closure is put, no debate, argument or appeal is permitted<sup>136</sup>. However, the practice of resorting to the device of the closure motion has practically gone out of use with the coming into being of the Business Advisory Committee in 1953, and is resorted to rarely<sup>137</sup>. The time for discussion of various classes of business is now recommended by this Committee whose recommendations are presented to the House in the form of a report (in the case of private members' Bills and private members' Resolutions, the time for discussion is recommended by the Committee on Private Members' Bills and Resolutions). The allocation of time, as approved by the House, takes effect as if it were an order of the House. At the appointed hour, in accordance with the allocation of time order, every question necessary to dispose of all the outstanding matters in connection with the stage of a Bill or other business before House is put by the Speaker. Thus, the need to move a motion for closure of debate rarely arises.

Limitation of Debate

If the debate on any motion in connection with a Bill or any other motion becomes unduly protracted, the Speaker may, after taking the sense of the House, fix a time-limit for the conclusion of discussion on any stage or all stages of the Bill or the motion, as the case may be<sup>138</sup>.

At the appointed hour, in accordance with the time-limit fixed for the completion of a particular stage of a Bill or a motion, unless the debate is concluded sooner, the Speaker puts every question necessary to dispose of all the outstanding matters in connection with that stage of the Bill or the motion<sup>139</sup>.

Question for Decision

Every question requiring the decision of the House is decided by means of a question put by the Speaker on a motion made by a member<sup>140</sup>. After the motion has been moved, the Speaker formally proposes or places the motion for the consideration of the House. At the end of the debate on the motion, he puts the motion for the decision of the House in the following terms:

“The question is : ‘.....’ (In proposing the question, the Speaker here repeats the motion as moved by the member)

Those in favour will say ‘Aye’; those against will say ‘No’ ”.

If a motion embodies two or more separate propositions, those may be proposed by the Speaker as separate questions<sup>141</sup>.

The Speaker may put the question to the House in such manner as he deems necessary or proper to ascertain the decision of the House on the question<sup>142</sup>. In some cases, members may be requested by the Speaker to stand in their places at the time of adopting a resolution to mark the solemnity of the occasion<sup>143</sup>.

No debate on a motion can take place until the question has been proposed by the Speaker and the House is in possession of the motion, and the question is proposed at the conclusion of the speech of the mover.

No question can be put for the decision of the House without debate unless there is agreement in the House or where it is specifically provided in the rules<sup>144</sup>. In all other cases, it has to be put to vote after the debate<sup>145</sup>. But a motion may not be proposed by the Speaker if the mover in the course of his speech expresses his intention not to move the motion<sup>146</sup> or where the Speaker regards that the motion involves an abuse of the forms and procedure of the House<sup>147</sup>.

No member is allowed to speak on a question after the Speaker has collected the voices both of the 'Ayes' and of the 'Noes' on that question<sup>148</sup>. The Rule, however, does not come into operation if the Chair collects voices of 'Ayes' only and then says that the question will be put after debate<sup>149</sup>.

Division

When the debate on a motion concludes, the Speaker puts the question and invites those who are in favour of the motion to say "Aye" and those against the motion to say "No". The Speaker then says; "I think the Ayes (or the Noes as the case may be) have it,". If the opinion of the Speaker as to the decision on a question is not challenged, he says twice, "The Ayes (or the Noes, as the case may be) have it" and the question before the House is determined accordingly. But if the opinion of the Speaker as to the decision on a question is challenged, the Speaker orders that the Lobbies be cleared. After the lapse of about three and a half minutes<sup>150</sup>, the Speaker puts the question a second time and declares whether in his opinion the "Ayes" or the "Noes" have it. If the opinion so declared is again challenged, the Speaker directs that the votes be recorded either by operating the automatic vote recorder or by using 'Aye' or 'No' or 'Abstention' slips in the House or by the members going into the Lobbies<sup>151</sup>. However, the practice of going into the Lobbies for the purpose of vote recording is not in vogue at present.

Questions are generally decided by voice vote unless the opinion of the Speaker is challenged by members and they demand a division, in which case the Speaker orders a division. When a question is decided by voice vote, the Speaker does not announce the numbers of 'Ayes' and 'Noes'<sup>152</sup>.

If a member wants to challenge the opinion of the Speaker as to the decision on a question, he must do so immediately after the Speaker expresses the view, "I think the Ayes/Noes have it and before he declares the result"<sup>153</sup>. After the declaration of the result, Chair has no power to reopen the matter<sup>154</sup>. When a division is about to be taken, only members of the House have the right to be present in the Inner

This is done to enable members who may be anywhere in the precincts of the House to make it to the Chamber to participate in the Division. Lobby and all other persons, including those to whom a courtesy right of access is allowed, must vacate it<sup>155</sup>. A member of the other House who is a Minister can be present in the House during a division though he has no right to vote. He should preferably not be present in the House to avoid objections at a later stage<sup>156</sup>. Objection can be taken if such a member taking advantage of his presence goes into the Lobby<sup>157</sup>.

A convention was followed during 1954-1962, under which no question between 1300 hours and 1430 hours used to be decided finally which required a vote of the House<sup>158</sup>. A voice vote was taken during the period, but if it was challenged the matter was postponed and division was held only after 1430 hours<sup>159</sup>. If, however, a division having commenced earlier continued after 1300 hours, it was not regarded as a breach of this convention<sup>160</sup>.

If a division was claimed on an amendment to the motion for consideration of a Bill during these hours, the Bill could not be proceeded with till the amendment was disposed of. In such cases, the House was either adjourned<sup>161</sup> till 1430 hours or discussion on the Bill was held over and the next item on the List of Business taken up<sup>162</sup>.

With the unanimous consent of all Parties and members, exceptions were occasionally made to this convention and divisions held between 1300 hours and 1430 hours<sup>163</sup>. However, since the commencement of Third Lok Sabha in 1962, this convention has not been followed.

Where there are several divisions on the clauses of a Bill or amendments to clauses or cut motions to Demands for Grants or substitute motions to the original motions, these are to be held one after the other and Lobbies need not be cleared again and again<sup>164</sup>.

Two or more amendments or cut motions may, with the unanimous consent of the House, be put to vote together and disposed of by voice vote. But where division is asked for, division is held on each amendment or cut motion separately<sup>165</sup>. On occasions, division was held by first asking members who were for 'Ayes' and then those for 'Noes' to rise in their places without the Lobbies being cleared beforehand<sup>166</sup>.

If division is ordered immediately before the normal hour for the House to rise for the day, objection cannot be taken that division be postponed to the next day<sup>167</sup>. When the sitting of the House is extended beyond this normal hour, a division may be held during the extended period of the sitting<sup>168</sup>. However, if any objection is raised that intimation had not been given well in advance to members regarding the extension of the sitting, the Speaker normally upholds the objection and postpones the division<sup>169</sup>.

Ringling of Division Bells

When a division is ordered by the Speaker, division bells ring normally for three-and-a-half minutes. Immediately after the bells stop ringing, all the outer doors of the Inner Lobby of the Chamber are closed to prevent any entry until division is concluded.

Division bells are only for the convenience of members. Members should take sufficient precaution to ensure that they are present at the time of division to record their votes. Non-ringing of division bells in a sector of the Parliament House is no ground for the reopening of division list<sup>170</sup>. However, if division bells in general are out of order, doors may be opened again for two minutes before recording votes<sup>171</sup>. On one occasion when the division bells could not function due to failure of electricity, the Speaker directed the members to rise in their places and, on a count being taken, declared the result<sup>172</sup>. Normally, voting is not invalidated if division bells do not ring due to some mechanical or other defect. It is the duty of Party Whips to keep the members informed about the probable time of division<sup>173</sup>.

Where the bells are rung to clear the Lobbies for holding a division and after the doors are closed it is found that there is no quorum in the House, the Speaker may order the bells to be rung again. The division is held after the doors are closed when the bells stop ringing for the second time<sup>174</sup>. However, if it is found again that even then there is no quorum in the House, the House is adjourned for want of quorum and the division is held over<sup>175</sup>.

After the Lobby doors have been closed, members cannot enter the Chamber through the antedoor behind the Speaker's Chair or through any other door<sup>176</sup>. If any part of a member's body is inside the Lobby when the door is in the process of being closed, he is allowed to enter before the door is actually closed. Any complaint or point regarding non-admission of a member to the Chamber before closing of the doors is to be brought to the notice of the Speaker immediately after recording of votes but before the result is announced<sup>177</sup>.

No Speeches during Division

When a division has been called and the Lobbies are being cleared, the debate is closed and no member can rise to speak<sup>178</sup>. A point of order may be allowed by the Speaker after the Lobbies have been cleared but it should be strictly related to the issue before the House which is whether a division should be taken or not. During a division if any irregularity occurs, it is the duty of the members to invite the attention of the Speaker thereto in writing, but addressing the House in any other form is irregular<sup>179</sup>.

When the Lobbies are being cleared, no speech, point of order or submission is recorded in the proceedings<sup>180</sup>.

Discretion of Speaker not to allow Division

The Speaker has to see that a division is not claimed unnecessarily. Frivolous requests for division have been disallowed by the Speaker<sup>181</sup>. When members insist on a count being taken, the Speaker may ask members for and against to rise in their places and on a count being taken, declare the determination of the House<sup>182</sup>; in such cases, names of voters are not ordinarily recorded in the debate<sup>183</sup>. In some cases, however, the Speaker may direct the members in support of, or against a motion to send their names to the Table for inclusion in the proceedings<sup>184</sup>. The Speaker has also on occasions allowed the names of the members who were in minority to be recorded in the proceedings<sup>185</sup>.

Without challenging a decision declared by the Speaker on a voice vote, a member may request the Speaker that names be recorded; it is the inherent right of a member to demand that it be noted in the proceedings as to how he voted on a particular question<sup>186</sup>. The Speaker may accede to the request if the matter is important and the general consensus in the House is in its favour. Normally, no division or recording of names is considered necessary when majority of members are against the question and the matter itself is relatively unimportant<sup>187</sup>. It has been held that division cannot be ordered merely to enable members to record their names<sup>188</sup>.

If the amendment on which division has been claimed is ruled out of order, a division is not permitted even though the Lobbies might have been cleared<sup>189</sup>.

Division by the Automatic Vote Recorder

Under the Automatic Vote Recorder (AVR) system, each member casts his vote from the seat allotted to him by pressing the requisite button provided for the purpose. However, there are instances when some members were unable to cast votes by the AVR from their seats as they were seriously ill; such members were permitted by the Speaker, after taking the sense of the House, to cast their votes by filling up of slips from the inner Lobby<sup>190</sup>.

In the automatic vote recorder system, a push-button-set containing a Light Emitting Diode (LED) and four push buttons — a green button for ‘Ayes’, a red button for ‘Noes’, a yellow button for ‘Abstain’ and an amber button for ‘Present’ together with a Vote Initiation Switch mounted on the Language Selector Switch Assembly has been provided on the seat of each member. After the result of the voting appears on the Total Result Display Boards, the result of the division is announced by the Speaker and it cannot be challenged by any member. A member who is not able to cast his vote by pressing the button due to any reason considered sufficient by the Speaker may be permitted to have his vote recorded verbally by stating whether he is in favour of, or against the motion before the result of the division is announced. Similarly, if a member finds that he has voted by mistake by pressing the wrong button, he may be allowed to correct his mistake provided he brings it to the notice of the Speaker before the result of the division is announced<sup>191</sup>.

When a division by AVR machine takes place and the result on the Total Result Display Boards shows that there is a big margin of votes recorded by the members for ‘Ayes’ and ‘Noes’, then the Chair announces the result of the division subject to corrections. If there is a close margin of votes recorded by the members for ‘Ayes’ and ‘Noes’, the votes recorded/corrected by the members by means of correction slips have to be taken into account and the officer at the Table scrutinises the ‘Ayes’/‘Noes’ and ‘Abstentions’ slips, counts the votes thereon and compiles the final result. The final result so arrived at is announced by the Chair.

However, as per the present practice the result of division as indicated on the Total Result Display Boards is not altered on the representation of members that they could not vote rightly, unless the machine has gone wrong or the result of the division is materially affected by the correction pointed out by the member<sup>192</sup>. Where due to some mechanical defect in the AVR equipment a wrong result appears on the Total Result Display Boards, the Speaker may, with the concurrence of the members, announce the result after correcting it, if the mistake is evident<sup>193</sup>.

Where names of all the members who have voted in a division are not shown in the print-out showing the result of that division, such names only as are shown in the print-out are recorded in the debates. As regards the missing names, an asterisk is given on the figures for 'Ayes' or 'Noes' as the case may be, and the position explained through a foot-note<sup>194</sup>.

On 17 April 1999, a member represented that in the Division held on that day on the motion of confidence in the Council of Ministers, he had pressed Red 'N' button (for Noes) but in the computer print-out, his vote was not recorded. He requested that since the computer had printed only 'No Vote' against his name, the mistake might be corrected.

The matter was enquired into and got examined through the CPWD authorities and their report said that—

The only possible reason appears to be that the member on seat No. 101 might have left the buttons a few milliseconds before the display of '00' in Timing Board and before the second gong. While the computer could sense this change immediately and interpreted as "No Vote", before it could send appropriate signal to the Display Board, the countdown ended, thus retaining the 'N'(Noes) light on the Display Board. Such incidents are, however, extremely rare.

From the above, it is evident that the member from seat No. 101 did operate 'Noes' button.

The Speaker, G.M.C. Balayogi permitted the member to raise the matter in the House through a personal explanation on 22 April 1999.

The member was informed accordingly through a letter. The member requested for further clarification. However, the matter was treated as closed and no further clarification was given. No correction in the result was made.

When the result of the division was washed off due to the sudden blowing off of a fuse of the machine before the photograph could be taken, the names of members who participated in the division could not be given in the debates. The position was explained by a footnote in the debates as follows—

On 28 August 1987, division was held on the motion for consideration of the Constitution (Fifty-eighth Amendment) Bill, 1987, by AVR machine and the indicator board showed wrong results twice. The Deputy Speaker who was in the Chair, directed that the division might be held by distributing 'Ayes' and 'Noes' slips under rule 367AA as the AVR machine had gone wrong.

Names of members who had recorded votes have not been included as the photograph of the division result could not be taken on account of defect developed in the automatic vote recording machine<sup>195</sup>.

The Speaker may, on a representation by members that the automatic vote recorder did not record the votes correctly, direct the members to record their votes by distribution of 'Ayes' and 'Noes' slips or going into the Lobbies. In such case, the Speaker orders that the Lobbies be cleared again<sup>196</sup>.

Where, before announcement of the result of a division, a large number of members desire to have their votes corrected, the Speaker may, after taking the sense of the House, direct that the votes be recorded again by operating the AVR equipment without clearing the Lobbies again<sup>197</sup>. There is an instance during the Fifteenth Lok Sabha (Ninth Session) when during the division on the Constitution (One Hundred and Eleventh Amendment) Bill, 2011, Speaker allowed the members to re-cast their votes on the request of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, after taking votes on the request of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs and after taking the sense of the House. The lobbies were allowed to be cleared again. Speaker while giving her decision in the case made the following observation:

"Hon. Minister made a request. So, as a very special case, which is not to be quoted in future as a precedent, I am allowing deviation<sup>198</sup>."

If the AVR equipment is fused after the members have recorded their votes but before the result has appeared on the indicator board, the Speaker may direct the members to record their votes again either by operating the equipment if it has been put in order in the meantime, or by distributing 'Ayes' and 'Noes' slips or by rising in their places<sup>199</sup>.

Division by Distribution of 'Ayes', 'Noes' and 'Abstention' Slips

The method of division by distribution of slips in the House is used only when the AVR machine goes wrong or when seats/division numbers are not allotted to the newly elected members at the commencement of a new Lok Sabha.

Whenever it becomes necessary to hold division by the above method, members are supplied at their seats with 'Ayes'/'Noes' printed slips for recording their votes. An 'Ayes' slip is printed in green colour both in English and Hindi on one side and the 'Noes' in red colour on its reverse. On these slips members are required to record votes of their choice by signing and writing their names, division numbers and dates legibly at the appropriate places. Members who desire to record 'Abstention' may fill in the Abstention slip printed separately in yellow colour both in English and Hindi. These slips may be obtained by the member from the division clerks on demand. In case a member has not been allotted a seat/division number, is provided with a separate slip wherein he may write his name, constituency, State and date legibly below his signature.

After the votes have been recorded, the division clerks collect the slips from all members and hand over the same to the officer at the Table. Then the officer at the Table scrutinises the 'Ayes'/'Noes' and 'Abstention' slips and counts the votes recorded thereon and compiles the result. The result so arrived at is announced by the Chair. The particulars of voting of each member together with the final result of each division is incorporated in the printed debates.

Division by going into the Lobbies

When the Speaker decides that the votes should be recorded by members going into the Lobbies he directs the members for 'Ayes' to go to the right Lobby and those for 'Noes' to the left Lobby. For the purpose of recording votes, four booths are provided in the 'Ayes' Lobby and four in the 'Noes' Lobby with consecutive division numbers. In the 'Ayes' or 'Noes' Lobby, as the case may be, each member states his division number and the division clerk, while marking off his number on the division list, calls out the name of the member. A division may be held de novo if it is found that due to a mistake in the direction given by the Chair as to the Lobbies, members had voted in the wrong Lobbies<sup>200</sup>.

After the recording of votes is completed in the Lobbies, the division lists are brought to the Table where the votes are counted by the officers at the Table and the totals of 'Ayes' and 'Noes' presented to the Speaker. Division lists once brought to the Table cannot be taken back to the Lobbies without the Speaker's permission<sup>201</sup>. The result of the division is then announced by the Speaker and it cannot be challenged by any member.

A member who is unable to go to the division Lobby owing to sickness<sup>202</sup> or infirmity may, with the permission of the Speaker, have his vote recorded either at his seat or later in the Lobby, but before the result of the division is announced. If a member finds that he has voted by mistake in wrong Lobby, he is allowed to correct his mistake provided he brings it to the notice of the Speaker before the result of the division is announced. When the division lists are brought to the Table, a member who has not, up to that time, recorded his vote but subsequently wishes to have his vote recorded can do so with the permission of the Speaker before the result of the division is announced<sup>203</sup>.

It is a contempt of the House to force a member into a particular Lobby. The right of free decision in the division Lobby is a very important element in the right of freedom of speech<sup>204</sup>.

A member who goes into the wrong Lobby and gives his name to the teller but realizes his mistake before the teller actually records his vote can go to the correct Lobby and vote<sup>205</sup>.

On one occasion when a member wishing to remain neutral as he declared, afterwards recorded his vote in both the Lobbies, his name was excluded from the division lists under orders of the Speaker<sup>206</sup>.

Divisions in Lok Sabha are held normally with the help of the AVR machine. In case of failure of the machine, divisions are held by distributing 'Ayes', 'Noes' and 'Abstention' slips to the members in the House.

Irregularities in a Division

If irregularities in a division are brought to the notice of the Speaker before the announcement of the result of the division, he may order a division de novo either immediately or, if that is the hour for the House to adjourn, on the following sitting of the House<sup>207</sup>.

Division when Division Numbers have not been allotted

At the commencement of a new House, before seats and division numbers have been allotted to members, the division is held by distributing 'Ayes' and 'Noes' slips to members on which they are required to put their signature<sup>208</sup> along with their names, constituency, State and date.

Division Lists

Division lists or computerised list of vote recorded showing the division numbers of members for 'Ayes', 'Noes' and 'Abstentions' are not supplied to any Party or Group and Leaders/Whips of parties might ascertain whether their members have abided by the directions issued by them in respect of voting. The duly corrected List is displayed on the Notice Board in the Outer Lobby for information of members and the same is also included in the debates of that day.

Voting by Deputy Speaker and Members on the Panel of Chairpersons

Under the Constitution, the Speaker or the person acting as such cannot vote in a division: he has only a casting vote which he must exercise in the case of an equality of votes<sup>209</sup>. If the Deputy Speaker or a member of the Panel of Chairpersons who is in the Chair at the time of actual voting leaves the Chair and the Speaker occupies it before the announcement of the result, the former cannot get his vote recorded because it was he who was in the Chair at the commencement of the voting<sup>210</sup>.

210. L.S. Deb., 18-9-1964, c. 2562.

While the voting is going on, that is, the period from the commencement of the voting up to the moment it has ceased, the Deputy Speaker, who was in the Chair at the commencement of the voting is debarred from putting a member of the Panel of Chairmen in the Chair in order to record his vote, for he would still be in the Chamber. It is only when he is going out of the Chamber that he can request a member of the Panel to take the Chair. The latter, when in the Chair, is also debarred from voting on a division, but he is given casting vote—not a second vote—which he is bound to exercise in the case of an equality of votes.

Hence the Deputy Speaker or a member of Panel of Chairmen, as the case may be, who has already recorded his vote, is precluded by clear implication from presiding at the time of division—say, at the least, when the voting has concluded and the result of the division is to be announced—as he would not be in a position to determine the question at issue by his casting vote, if there happened to be an equality of votes<sup>211</sup>.

Casting Vote

Casting vote is the deciding vote in a deliberative or parliamentary assembly cast by the Presiding Officer in the event of a tie. It sometimes signifies only such a vote, and sometimes the double vote of one who first votes as a member, and afterwards votes to cast off the tie, if one results.

The Constitution, as stated above, debars the Speaker or the person acting as such from voting in the first instance, i.e. he cannot vote in a division as an ordinary member; he has only a casting vote which he must exercise in the case of an equality of votes<sup>212</sup>. It is customary for the Presiding Officer to exercise the casting vote in such a manner as to maintain the status quo.

In the Central Legislative Assembly, during discussion on the clauses of the Motor Vehicles Bill, a division on a motion to omit a clause resulted in a tie and the Speaker gave his casting vote in favour of the motion. When a member pointed out that according to the practice<sup>213</sup> the casting vote was usually given in favour of the status quo and wanted to know the principle behind the exercise of the vote in the manner done by the Chair, the Speaker observed:

I have taken that principle into consideration. I took into consideration not only the clause and the amendment proposed but the existing law as embodied in the Criminal Procedure Code which was sought to be modified. I must say that the status quo ante is a good rule in ordinary cases, but it is not an invariable rule<sup>214</sup>.

It has been held that the casting vote exercised by the Speaker or the person acting as such should not be discussed<sup>215</sup>.

215. Ibid., 12-3-1936, pp. 2403-09.

In the case of Parliamentary Committees, the Chairman of a Committee or the person acting as such has a second or casting vote in the event of an equality of votes on any matter<sup>216</sup>. Hence as distinct from the Speaker or the person acting as such, the Chairman of a Committee or the person acting as such votes in the first instance as an ordinary member and later, if there is a tie, he must exercise a second or casting vote. The distinction is based on the ground that whereas the Speaker does not take part in the debate in the House as a member, the Chairman of a Committee not only guides the deliberations of the Committee but also plays a leading role in formulating conclusions arrived at by the Committee. Accordingly, he has been given the right to vote initially on any issue just as any other member of the Committee.

Maintenance of Order

It is the responsibility of the Speaker to maintain order in the House and for this purpose he exercises all powers necessary for enforcing his decision<sup>217</sup>. If grave disorder arises in the House, the Speaker has the power to adjourn the House or suspend the sitting for such time as he may deem fit<sup>218</sup>.

Point of Order

Any member can and should invite the Speaker's immediate attention to any instance of what he considers a breach of order or transgression of any law of the House, written or unwritten, which the Chair has failed to perceive and he may also seek the guidance and assistance of the Chair in respect of any obscurities in procedure. A point of order should, therefore, relate to the interpretation or enforcement of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in the House or conventions or such articles of the Constitution as regulate the business of the House and must raise a question which is within the cognizance of the Speaker<sup>219</sup>. The test whether a point raised is a point of order or not is not whether the Chair can give any relief but whether it involves such interpretation or enforcement of the Rules, etc. and whether it raises a point which the Speaker alone can decide<sup>220</sup>.

The point of order as a procedural device governed by Rule 376 of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha, when raised, has the effect of suspending the proceedings before the House. It can be raised only in relation to the business before the House at the moment<sup>221</sup>: the term 'business before the House' means business included in the List of Business for the day<sup>222</sup>. But a point of order cannot be raised in respect of an item of business after it has been disposed of<sup>223</sup>. A point of order cannot also be raised in vacuum in between two items. However, the Speaker may permit it to be raised during the interval between the termination of one item of business and the commencement of another if it relates to maintenance of order in, or arrangement of business before the House<sup>224</sup>. Thus, a point of order may be raised during this interval if it relates to the enforcement of Rules in regard to the suspension of members<sup>225</sup>.

When a member desires to raise a point of order about a matter which is not on the List of Business, he must give advance notice to the Speaker specifying clearly the actual point to be raised<sup>226</sup>. He cannot raise the matter in the House unless permitted by the Speaker to do so.

The right to raise and formulate a point of order is a valuable right of a member and can be exercised by her/him at any time on a matter or any business then under discussion, subject to certain conditions described below.

A point of order is not a point of privilege<sup>227</sup>, and it is not permissible for a member to raise a point of order to ask for information or to explain his position or that division bells did not ring or were not heard or when a question on any motion is being put to the House<sup>228</sup>. A point of order regarding a clause of a Bill should, therefore, be raised before the clause is disposed of by the House<sup>229</sup>. Further, a member shall not raise a point of order which may be hypothetical or merely academic<sup>230</sup>.

No point of order can be raised on contradictory statements alleged to have been made by Ministers or members<sup>231</sup> or regarding disqualification of a member. There cannot be point of order during Question Hour<sup>232</sup>. Also no point of order can be raised during the period when matters of urgent public importance are raised after the Question Hour.

A point of order must refer to procedure and not to substantive arguments on a motion, resolution, question, etc.<sup>233</sup> On a point of order, a member is not entitled to go into explanation of the subject under discussion<sup>234</sup>. There cannot be a point of order on a point of order<sup>235</sup>. Points of order relating to the same matter cannot be raised by a member more than once<sup>236</sup>.

A point of order on a Bill or a resolution cannot be raised unless the motion in respect of the Bill or the resolution entered in the List of Business has been moved and placed before the House<sup>237</sup>. Similarly, a point of order regarding the admissibility of a resolution<sup>238</sup> or motion or urging that a resolution or motion should not be allowed to be moved, can be raised only after the resolution or motion has been moved and placed before the House. Where such point of order is sought to be raised, the member concerned is asked to move the resolution or motion without making a speech. Thereafter, the Speaker places the resolution or motion before the House and then decides on the point of order. In such cases, the mover may make his speech after the point of order has been disposed of by the Speaker<sup>239</sup>.

A point of order on the motion for leave to introduce a Bill cannot be raised before the motion has been moved by the member in charge of the Bill and placed before the House by the Chair<sup>240</sup>.

A point of order cannot be raised while a division is being taken in the House<sup>241</sup> or while the Speaker is placing a motion before the House<sup>242</sup> or delivering his ruling or making observations or otherwise speaking.

It is an accepted practice of the House that the Speaker does not give any ruling on a point of order which raises the question whether a Bill is constitutionally within the legislative competence of the House or about the constitutionality of any Declaration/Agreement/Treaty under discussion on a motion/resolution: it is the responsibility of the House to decide such matters<sup>243</sup>. The Speaker also does not give his decision on the question whether an amending Bill goes against an article of the Constitution<sup>244</sup>.

244. L.S. Deb., 31-8-1976, cc. 164-245.

There are instances when certain matters have been raised in the House in the garb of points of order<sup>245</sup>. Ministers are expected to answer questions asked by members in the garb of points of order: it is the Speaker, and not Ministers, who has to give decision on points of order<sup>246</sup>.

It has now become a practice that before a member is permitted to raise a point of order, he is required to quote the particular article of the Constitution, Rule, Direction or ruling or practice which was being infringed or violated. Members who fail to quote the Rule, etc., are not allowed to raise the point of order<sup>247</sup>.

On 8 March 1965, the Speaker announced in the House the following procedure for raising points of order and asked members to keep it in mind so that there could be a better conduct of business<sup>248</sup>.

A member who has a point of order should stand up and say “point of order”. He should not proceed to formulate it until the member is identified by the Chair. Only after he has been identified, he should proceed to speak on his point of order;

While formulating his point of order a member should quote the specific Rule or the provision of the Constitution relating to the procedure of the House which might have been ignored or neglected or violated;

No member should rise or speak, either standing or sitting, when the Speaker is on his feet. A point of order cannot be raised when Speaker is addressing the House<sup>249</sup>. The Speaker should be heard in silence and any member wanting to speak should rise only after the Speaker sits down and also calls the member to speak;

Matters on which the Speaker cannot give any relief should not be the subject matter of a point of order. Should a member desire to have a clarification from a Minister or object to any statement which a Minister might have made, he should say so in the House with the permission of the Speaker and should not raise it in the garb of a point of order<sup>250</sup>.

Points of order already decided cannot be reopened on the plea that when it was first raised the member could not locate and quote the rule under which he wanted to raise the point of order<sup>251</sup>.

On a point of order being raised, the member who is speaking at that time must give way<sup>252</sup>. No debate is allowed on a point of order, but the Speaker may, if he thinks fit, hear members before giving his decision<sup>253</sup>.

When two or more points of order are raised on a subject-matter, the Speaker may take them one by one and give his decision<sup>254</sup>.

A member wishing to raise a point of order has the right to be heard before a decision can be given by the Speaker. On his formulating a point of order, the Speaker decides whether the point raised is a point of order and if so, gives his decision thereon which is final<sup>255</sup>. Members cannot protest against the Speaker's ruling: to do so is a contempt of the House and the Speaker<sup>256</sup>. Rulings given by the Chair cannot be discussed in the House nor can any clarification or explanation sought<sup>257</sup>.

A point of order cannot be raised against the decision of the Speaker in regard to the admissibility of notices<sup>258</sup>.

It is perfectly in order if the Speaker does not take cognizance of a point of order raised by a member<sup>259</sup>. The Speaker may reserve his ruling on a point of order at the moment<sup>260</sup> and may deliver it on a later date<sup>261</sup>. Similarly, the Deputy Speaker or a member occupying the Chair may reserve a point of order for the decision of the Speaker.

When a point of order relating to a particular business before the House is raised the time taken in the disposal of the point of order is accounted towards the total time allotted for that business<sup>262</sup>.

Raising of Matters Under Rule 377

Under Rule 377, a member may, with the prior consent of the Speaker, bring to the notice of the House any matter not being a point of order. For this purpose a notice in writing has to be given to the Secretary-General stating briefly the point proposed to be raised. While earlier, matters allowed to be raised under Rule 377 were limited to questions of constitutional or legal importance which were within the jurisdiction of the House or which related to the business of the House or its procedure—something akin to points of order but which fell short of being points of order as such—a more liberal attitude was adopted since the Fourth Session of the Sixth Lok Sabha. As many as five notices under Rule 377 were allowed each day so that members could raise at the earliest, various matters of public importance, particularly those concerning their constituencies<sup>263</sup>. The practice of allowing eight matters per day which started during the Seventh Lok Sabha continued till November 1997. Thereafter, it was decided that the number of matters presently being raised under Rule 377 might be increased from 8 to 24 per day to be allocated on the basis of the strength of Parties/Groups. Members would read the brief subject of the text of their notices given by the Secretariat and the text of the matter shall be treated as laid on the Table<sup>264</sup>.

However, the decision could not be put into practice till the dissolution of the Eleventh Lok Sabha, i.e. upto 4 December 1997, since matters under Rule 377 could not be taken up in the House due to continued interruptions.

It was actually put into practice with effect from 26 March 1998, i.e. the First Session of the Twelfth Lok Sabha. Subsequently, at the meeting of the Business Advisory Committee held on 29 May 1998, it was decided that 12 members, instead of 24, would be allowed to raise matters per day to be allocated on the basis of the strength of Parties/Groups in the Lok Sabha. At the meeting of the Speaker with the Leaders of Parties held on 19 November 2000, it was decided, on an experimental basis to increase the number of matters to be raised under Rule 377 from 12 to 15 per day and to reduce the text of the notice from 250 to about 150 words. This practice was made effective w.e.f. 27 November 2000<sup>265</sup>. Further, at the meeting of the Speaker with Leaders of Parties in Lok Sabha held on 20 April 2005, it was decided that the number of matters to be raised under Rule 377 be increased from 15 to 20 per day, the decision was made effective from 25 April 2005<sup>266</sup>. This practice is still continuing. The members are permitted to read the text of the matter<sup>267</sup>.

The scope of the Rule has thus been extended to enable the members to register their point in the House. These should normally relate to matters which cannot be raised under the rules relating to Questions, Short Notice Questions, Calling Attention, Motions, etc. There is no obligation on the Government or the Minister concerned to reply immediately to the point raised. The Minister concerned may not even be present in the House at the time the point is raised.

On 30 June 1977, a member wanting to raise a point under Rule 377 complained to the Speaker that the concerned Minister (Minister of Finance) was not present in the House. Drawing the attention of the member to the presence of another Minister (Minister of Parliamentary Affairs), the Speaker held that what Rule 377 said was that a member could raise an issue with the permission of the Speaker; it did not compel the Minister to be present in the House and answer the point immediately. The other Ministers present in the House could take note of the matter and the Minister concerned could take time to study and examine the point raised<sup>268</sup>.

Notice for raising a matter under Rule 377 is required to be given in writing addressed to the Secretary-General. The text of the statement proposed to be made has to be brief, specific to the point proposed to be raised and should not ordinarily exceed one hundred and fifty words. No matter can be raised unless the Speaker has given her/his consent thereto and only the approved text is allowed to go on record.

When to Table the Notice?

Notices for raising matters under Rule 377 can be tabled from the date specified in Bulletin Part II circulated along with the summons for the Session. Normally the notices are entertained three working days before the commencement of the Session.

Notices received between 10.00 hrs. and 10.30 hrs. on the first day are considered to have been received at the same point of time and are balloted together to determine their inter se priority. Notices received subsequently are arranged in accordance with the date and time of their receipt.

On other days such notices are to be given by 10.00 hrs. Notices received after 10.00 hrs. on a day are deemed to have been given for the next sitting of the House. It is, however, not necessary that notices given for a particular day will be permitted to be raised on that very day.

Notices received at the same point of time on a day are balloted to determine their inter se priority.

Validity of Notices

All notices under Rule 377 are valid for the week in which these have been tabled. Notices received upto 10.00 hrs. on the last day of the week on which the House sits automatically lapse, if not selected. However, such notices can be revived for the following week. The notices for the following weeks can be given only after 10.00 hrs. on the last day of the week on which the House sits and are valid for the entire following week. All such notices received after 10.00 hrs. but upto 10.30 hrs. are considered to have been received at the same point of time and are balloted together to determine their inter se priority. Notices received after 10.30 hrs. are listed thereafter according to the time of receipt.

Where the Speaker wants to know facts of the matter raised in the notice, it may be referred to the concerned Ministry to ascertain the facts. A notice referred for facts remains alive till it is finally disposed of.

Conditions of Admissibility<sup>269</sup> : In order that a notice may be admissible, it shall satisfy the following conditions:

- (i) it shall not refer to a matter which is not primarily the concern of the Government of India;
- (ii) it shall not relate to a matter which has been discussed in the same session or which is substantially identical to the matter already raised by a member under this Rule during the session;

- (iii) it shall not exceed 150 words;<sup>270</sup>
- (iv) it shall not raise more than one issue;
- (v) it shall not contain arguments, inferences, ironical expressions, imputations, epithets or defamatory statements; and
- (vi) it shall not refer to proceedings of a parliamentary/consultative committee.

When raised?

A copy of the text as approved by the Speaker is provided to the member on the day on which he is allowed to raise the matter. Previously, the item was not included in the List of Business and was taken up at the stage prescribed in Direction 2, i.e. after laying of papers and introduction of Bills, etc. However, with effect from 7 August 1990, a general entry under the heading 'Matters under Rule 377' is included in the List of Business. Since November 1997 it was decided that the item would be taken up at 17.30 hours.

Subsequently, at the meeting of the Business Advisory Committee held on 29 May 1998, it was decided that the item relating to matters under Rule 377 would be taken up after Question Hour and after disposal of other formal items listed in the agenda paper as per Direction 2 of the Directions by the Speaker regarding relative precedence of different classes of business.

Limit on raising Matters

A member can raise only one matter during a week.

On the days (usually Fridays) when the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs makes a statement regarding Government Business, matters under Rule 377 are not raised.

The relevant proceedings of matters raised under Rule 377 are sent to the Ministry concerned on the next working day for being placed before the Minister. Copies of such communications together with the relevant proceedings are also sent to the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs which is entrusted with the responsibility of coordinating action in respect of matters raised by the members. The Ministers write to the members with regard to matters raised by them under Rule 377, informing them of Government's view and/or action taken in the matter. Further, as per the decision taken by the Rules Committee (Eighth Lok Sabha – Fourth Report) and agreed to by the Lok Sabha, the Ministers send their replies direct to members regarding matters raised by them in the House under Rule 377 within one month. Further clarifications, if any, may be obtained by members directly from the Minister/Ministry concerned.

Normally, Ministers do not make statements on matters raised under Rule 377.

However, if a Minister so desires, he may make a statement on the subject with the permission of the Speaker.

The position of the replies to matters raised under Rule 377 sent by Ministries is reviewed by the Speaker at the Leaders' meeting held before the commencement of each session.

When Heated as Laid on the Table

As the members are permitted to read only the approved text of their matter, a convention developed where under, sometimes, in order to save the time of the House for consideration of other important items listed in the agenda, matters under Rule 377 were treated as laid on the Table of the House after an announcement was made by the Chair to that effect. All the twenty matters under Rule 377 approved for being raised on the day were treated as laid and used to form part of the proceedings.

However, when it came to notice that under this convention matters of even those members who might have been absent from the House on that day were also being incorporated in the proceedings of the House, the procedure was modified.

On 5 November 2009, the Speaker decided that, in case, matters under Rule 377 are to be treated as laid on the Table of the House, an announcement shall be made by the Chair that those members who have been permitted to raise matters under Rule 377 on that day may send text of the approved matters within 20 minutes. Thereafter, members who have been permitted and are desirous of laying their matters, may personally hand over text of the matters at the Table within 20 minutes for inclusion of the same in the proceedings of the House. Only those matters shall be treated as laid and shall form part of the proceedings which have been received at the Table within the stipulated time. Matters under Rule 377 which are not received at the Table within the stipulated time shall not form part of the proceedings and shall be treated as lapsed.

The decision was made effective from the third session of the fifteenth Lok Sabha.

Matters of Urgent Public Importance raised after 'Question Hour' i.e. during 'Zero Hour'

As representatives of the people, members of Parliament and State Legislatures are duty-bound to raise matters of public importance in the House; ventilate popular grievances and seek their redressal; elicit information from the Government and enforce Executive accountability to the Legislature.

In a large country like India issues of serious and emergent nature arise almost daily and need to be immediately brought to the notice of the Government. When such matters arise and agitate the minds of the members, they feel that they cannot wait for complying with normal rules of procedure and that they must raise those matters at the first available opportunity in the House before the House takes up regular business as per the Agenda.

It is in this background that the evolution of 'Zero Hour' in the Lok Sabha – which provides an opportunity to the members to raise matters which they consider to be of urgent public importance and which cannot brook any delay, even if there are no rules permitting them – has to be viewed.

'Zero Hour' thus, may be defined as the interregnum between the conclusion of the Question Hour and taking up of the listed items of the day's business. Parliament meets at 11.00 hours and after the Question Hour at 12.00 hours, the 'Zero Hour' begins. The 'Zero Hour' as the term seems to denote, may not necessarily last for an hour.

Emergence of the term 'Zero Hour'

The emergence of 'Zero Hour' in the Lok Sabha can be traced back to the 1960s when urgent issues of public importance began to be raised by members, immediately after the Question Hour, in the garb of Adjournment Motions, Points of Order, etc. Even though most of such notices were disallowed by the Speaker, the members sometimes got opportunities to mention those matters on the floor of the House. This served their purpose to some extent and gave them some satisfaction that they were at least able to bring those matters to the notice of the House and the Government and demand appropriate action.

Gradually, the interregnum after the Question Hour and before the taking up of the listed items of business in the House – popularly known as 'Zero Hour' – began to be used by many members for raising such issues and this practice became a regular but unacknowledged feature of the proceedings of the House. Veteran parliamentarians utilized the period with consummate skill to draw the attention of the House and thereby, of the Nation to some truly important issues. With the passage of time, the Zero Hour proceedings started stealing the limelight in the media, thereby encouraging more and more members to take resort to the quick and handy device.

Over the years, the practice has become popular in many State Legislatures also.

While, the 'Zero Hour' was gaining popularity and acceptability amongst members, it did not, many a time, find approbation from Presiding Officers in view of the unexpected encroachments upon the precious time of the House, sometimes leading to acrimonious and unruly scenes and disorderly conduct on the part of some members. At the same time, it was also realized that 'Zero Hour' had become lively and important. It was a device to raise important matters and ventilate public grievances and as such it could not be dispensed with. While at one spectrum, a view was taken that it was a big hurdle for Presiding Officers to ensure transaction of the normal business; at another, it came to be regarded as something original by way of contribution to parliamentary practice.

Since considerable time of the Lok Sabha is consumed in raising such matters, it was decided in 1990 to regulate the 'Zero Hour' so as to ensure orderly transaction of business and also to enable the Presiding Officer to know, in advance, the issues which the members wish to raise.

Since then, efforts to regulate proceedings during the ‘Zero Hour’ have been a continuing process. Successive Speakers of Lok Sabha have discussed this matter in their meetings with Leaders of Parties and in the Business Advisory Committee. They have, on several occasions, advised the leaders to impress upon their party members to exercise self-restraint and not to raise matters which are not of emergent national importance.

Evolution of Procedural Regulations

The matter relating to regulation of ‘Zero Hour’ has been engaging the attention of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India for quite some time. It was also discussed by the Committee of Presiding Officers on ‘Procedural Uniformity and Better Management of the Time of the House’, headed by Prof. Narayan S. Pharande, Chairman, Maharashtra Legislative Council, which presented its report to the Conference of Presiding Officers in June 2001. The Committee recommended that the matters taken up after Question Hour and before the formal business of the House whether known as Zero Hour or Special Mention or by any other name need to be strictly regulated by laying down proper guidelines for the purpose. It also expressed the view that in any case not more than thirty minutes per day must be allowed by the Presiding Officer to be consumed by the Zero Hour.

At the Sixty-sixth Conference of the Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India, held at Mumbai from 4 to 6 February 2003. Manohar Joshi, Speaker, Lok Sabha and Chairman of the Conference constituted, on 6 February 2003, a Committee of Presiding Officers on “Regulation of Zero Hour”.

The Committee held four meetings viz., at Bhopal on 29 March 2003, at Jaipur on 24 June 2003, at New Delhi on 23 September 2003 and in Jammu on 14 November 2003. The Committee inter alia recommended that:—

- (i) Zero Hour may be given the nomenclature: Special Mentions;
- (ii) Special Mentions may be taken up after the Question Hour;
- (iii) A member may give notice for raising a matter during Special Mentions only when at the relevant time, no other device is available to him to draw the attention of the Government to the issue;
- (iv) Only those matters which arise during the period after the conclusion of the previous day’s sitting and before the commencement of the day’s sitting, be permitted to be raised;
- (v) The gravity, importance and urgency of a matter should be the prime criteria for raising it during Special Mentions;
- (vi) The notices may be given by the members at least one hour before the commencement of the sitting;
- (vii) The text of the notice may be restricted to a maximum of 150 words;
- (viii) The duration of the Special Mentions should be 20 minutes. However, this duration may vary depending upon the strength of the Legislature and at the discretion of the Chair;

- (ix) The concerned Minister may respond immediately to the matter raised, if he has the information readily available with him, otherwise the reply may be given by the Minister at the earliest.

At the Sixty-Seventh Conference of the Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India held at Kolkata on 9-10 October 2004, it was decided that it might be left at the discretion of the Presiding Officers of the Legislative Bodies to implement the recommendations contained in the Report presented by the Committee constituted at Sixty-sixth Conference held at Mumbai to look into various aspects for regulating Zero Hour.

In pursuance of decision taken at the Conference of Presiding Officers held at Kolkata, the Speaker in a meeting with Leaders of Parties in Lok Sabha held on 24 July 2005, and it was decided that the matters of urgent public importance raised after Question Hour may be taken up in a phased manner. In the first phase, five matters of extremely urgent national and international importance may be taken up after the Question Hour. In the second phase, remaining admitted matters of public importance for the day may be taken up after 1800 hours or at the end of the regular business of the House. For this purpose, members are required to give notices, addressed to Secretary-General by 0930 hours on the day on which the matter is proposed to be raised.

This system of raising matters during 'Zero Hour' was made effective from 1 August 2005.

Present Scenario

After coming into effect of the above procedure for raising matters of urgent public importance a considerable increase was observed in the number of notices received from members for raising these matters. Sometimes, the number of notices received reached 100 to 120 every day. As it was proving to be a drain on the precious time of the House, it was decided to further regulate the raising of matters of urgent public importance. Under the present dispensation, a ballot is held in the presence of a member (or in his absence of some senior officer) of all the notices of matters of urgent public importance (Zero Hour) received in Parliamentary Notice Office between 0830 hours and 0900 hours. Notices received after 0900 hours are marked as 'time barred'. Twenty notices selected through the ballot are serially numbered as per their priority in the draw of lot. A list of such notices is prepared indicating names of members, their party affiliation and subject of the notices. The list is submitted to the Speaker for selection of five matters of national or international importance. The members whose matters have been so selected are intimated in advance that they will be called by the Speaker to raise their matters after the laying of papers, etc. at 1200 hours in the House. The remaining members get the opportunity to raise their matters in the House after 1800 hours or after the listed business is over.

It was, however, observed that ballot being based purely on chance, sometimes, notice of matters which were really of urgent national or international public importance could not come up in the ballot. In order to provide an opportunity to members to raise such matters in the House, the Speaker on being convinced of the importance of the matter, permits the members to raise their matters even though they might not have secured a priority in the ballot.

Though neither the term ‘Zero Hour’ nor the procedure thereof is mentioned in the Rules, the device is now being fully used by members belonging to different parties in the House. In some cases, the Ministers have instantly responded to the matters so raised, though it is not obligatory on their part to do so.

Submissions

On the days (usually Fridays) when the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs makes a statement regarding Government Business for the following week, matters under Rule 377 are not taken up. Members who desire to make submission on the statement of the Minister are required to give notice containing the text of maximum two subjects to be included in the next week’s agenda. The notices for making submissions are required to be given by 1000 hrs. on the day on which the statement of Minister of Parliamentary Affairs regarding next week’s business is included in the List of Business.

The purpose of allowing submissions is to afford opportunity to members to bring to the notice of the House, particularly of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, the need to provide time for discussion of a matter of general public interest which may otherwise not get priority for discussion in the House on account of constraint of time.

All the notices received up to 1000 hours, except the notices tabled by the members of the Business Advisory Committee, are balloted to determine the names of ten members and the order in which they are to be called. As per convention developed over the years, members of the Business Advisory Committee (BAC) are not permitted to make submissions. In the event of members of the BAC giving notice of submissions, permission to raise matters is withheld.

The text of submissions has to be brief and specific and should not ordinarily exceed 50 words each (i.e. a total of 100 words for two suggestions). No matter can be raised unless the Speaker has given his consent thereto and only the approved text is allowed to go on record. The Minister of Parliamentary Affairs either assures the members that he would try to find time for discussions on the various subjects suggested by members or that he would place them before the Business Advisory Committee for consideration.

The practice of allowing members to make ‘submissions’ on the statement of the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs regarding Government Business was dispensed with from 4 August 1989<sup>271</sup> and members were allowed to raise matters under Rule 377 on all days of the week<sup>272</sup>. However, the Rules Committee, at its sitting held on 28 August 1990, reconsidered its earlier recommendations for dispensing with the procedure for making submissions by members on statement by Minister of Parliamentary Affairs regarding Government Business for the following week with effect from 28 December 1990 and the practice of raising matters under Rule 377 on such days was dispensed with<sup>273</sup>.

Suspension of Rules

A member may, with the consent of the Speaker, move that any rule may be suspended in its application to a particular motion before the House and if the motion is carried the rule in question is suspended for the time being.<sup>274</sup>

The Speaker alone is vested with the power to give his consent to the moving of a motion for suspension of a rule: no reference to the Rules Committee is necessary in the matter<sup>275</sup>, and it is for the House to decide whether a particular rule should be suspended or not<sup>276</sup>. Consent given by the Speaker for moving a motion for suspension of rules cannot be questioned<sup>277</sup>.

A rule or sub-rule may be suspended as a whole or only in part<sup>278</sup>. Where only a part of a rule or sub-rule is suspended, the rest of the rule continues to be operative. It is not in order to suspend a sentence or a few sentences in a rule or sub-rule.

A part of a clause of a rule may also be suspended, provided it is self-contained in its essence and meaning<sup>279</sup>.

A rule or sub-rule cannot be suspended if it has the effect of creating a vacuum<sup>280</sup>.

The Minister in-charge of a Bill even though he may be a member of the Rajya Sabha is entitled to move in the Lok Sabha a motion for suspension of a rule<sup>281</sup>.

Although it is in the discretion of the Speaker to give his consent to the moving of a motion for suspension of a rule, the discretion is exercised with utmost care and caution after taking into consideration all the accompanying circumstances of an individual case<sup>282</sup>. There are no set rules to guide the Speaker in this matter and every request is considered on its merits before the Speaker gives his consent. However, factors like avoidance of delay in the passing of important legislation or getting over a technical objection generally influence the decision of the Speaker in giving consent to the moving of such motions. On occasions, the Speaker has refused permission for the moving of a motion on the ground that the circumstances of the case did not warrant such a step.

282. Unless there is unanimity in the House, motion for suspension of Rule 26 re. private members' business cannot be moved.—L.S. Deb., 9-5-1975, cc. 338-59.

The Constitution (Tenth Amendment) Bill, 1961, and the Dadra and Nagar Haveli Bill, 1961, were introduced on 11 August 1961. The latter Bill was dependent on the former. On the grounds of urgency the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs sought the Speaker's permission to move a motion for suspension of Rule 66, if it became necessary. The Speaker did not agree to this proposal<sup>283</sup>.

Motion for suspension of a rule in its application to a particular motion may be moved only when that motion is before the House, i.e., if it is included in the List of Business.

There are three classes of business: business before the House at the moment; business before the House for the day (i.e., included in the List of Business but not before the House at the moment); and business pending in the House but not before the House (i.e., not included in the List of Business). It has been ruled that business pending in the House but not included in the List of Business is not "business before the House" for purposes of the rule relating to suspension of rules<sup>284</sup>.

Notice of a motion for suspension of a rule has to be given in advance and circulated to members before such a motion can be moved in the House<sup>285</sup>.

On a motion moved by the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs that only Government business be transacted during the Fourteenth Session of the Fifth Lok Sabha and that all relevant rules do stand suspended to that extent, it was contended by some members that there could be no blanket suspension of rules and the motion must relate to a specific rule in regard to the business before the House. The Speaker ruled that the motion was moved by the Minister under article 118 of the Constitution and was in order<sup>286</sup>.

The Speaker can refuse to give permission to move for suspension of a rule in its application to the rules relating to a motion for removal of the Speaker<sup>287</sup>.

In certain circumstances, e.g., when a motion to suspend a rule in relation to the suspension of a member from the service of the House is sought to be moved, the Speaker may require that the concurrence of the Leader of the House should be obtained before the motion is included in the List of Business.

In another case, a motion for suspension of a rule in its application to the motion to rescind the decisions given by the House in regard to a report of the Business Advisory Committee was included in the List of Business with the concurrence of the Leader of the House<sup>288</sup>.

A Bill negatived by the House cannot be withdrawn by suspending the relevant rule in order to facilitate the Government to reintroduce it without any change in the same session<sup>289</sup>.

An exception was made in the case of the Constitution (Twenty-second Amendment) Bill, clause 2 of which was not adopted by the House as on division it did not get the required special majority. On the recommendation of the Business Advisory Committee where leaders of the Opposition Parties/Groups were also present and in view of the urgency of the Bill, the Speaker gave his consent to the motion for suspension of the relevant rule and the Bill was reintroduced, but he made it clear that it was not to be taken as a precedent for the future and the Prime Minister gave an assurance to that effect<sup>290</sup>.

Presence of Ministers in the House

There is no rule which provides that Ministers must be present in the House during its proceedings. The Speaker also has no power to enforce the attendance of any particular Minister in the House<sup>291</sup>. But certain conventions regarding presence of Ministers in the House have developed as a result of observations made by the Speaker from time to time under his inherent powers.

It is now an established convention that on important occasions like Questions Hour, discussion on the Budget or the President's Address or the motion regarding international situation, concerned Ministers are required to be present in the House as far as possible<sup>292</sup>. On other occasions, the Minister or Ministers in-charge of the business before the House are required to be present<sup>293</sup>. In the case of unavoidable absence of the Minister in-charge from the House, it is expected that an arrangement is made for some other Minister to take notes of the debate in the House. Where the Minister goes out of the House for a short while, he is required to send an intimation to the Speaker and also to inform him of the name of the Minister deputed in his absence<sup>294</sup>. It has been ruled by the Speaker that in the absence of Ministers, the Government cannot be represented by private members<sup>295</sup>. The Speaker has observed that when the House is sitting the Law Minister or one of his deputies should be available to give opinion on legal matters which might arise during any discussion<sup>296</sup>.

Whenever a Minister goes out of Delhi on official business or otherwise, he is required to inform the Speaker in advance and intimate to him the arrangements made by him to attend to his business in the House during his absence. A Minister need not be present in the House when a Minister of State or a Deputy Minister attached to his Ministry is present in the House to answer for him.

The Speaker has, however, made observations from time to time that Ministers in-charge should be present when business relating to their Ministries and Departments, directly or indirectly, is before the House.

Residuary and Inherent Powers of the Speaker

The Speaker has the power to deal with all matters which are not specifically or adequately provided for in the Rules. All questions relating to the detailed working of the Rules are also regulated by the Speaker<sup>297</sup>. In exercise of these powers the Speaker has issued directions from time to time, which have been collected and issued as Directions from the Speaker. Further, the Speaker gives rulings or private decisions (on departmental files) on specific matters or issues which arise from time to time and on which he is required to give decisions.

The Speaker has also certain inherent powers. As stated above, under his inherent powers the Speaker made observations, from time to time, regarding the presence of Ministers in the House and as a result thereof certain conventions have developed. Under his inherent powers, the Speaker may, in certain special cases, allow motions to be moved or withdrawn which are not covered by the Rules of Procedure<sup>298</sup>, may order expunction of words from the proceedings of the House on any ground not provided for in the rule relating to expunction<sup>299</sup>, and may revise or correct a decision given by him earlier<sup>300</sup>.

Normally, he works within the powers given to him by the House and the rules and takes care to see that there is no deviation from the established procedure<sup>301</sup>. If any change in procedure is desired, the matter is referred to the Rules Committee for examination and report and then the House takes decision thereon.

It is not customary for the Speaker to enter into public correspondence with regard to proceedings of the House or with a view to elucidating observations made by the Speaker in the House. The Speaker does not enter into correspondence with anyone regarding the scope and functions of parliamentary committees and other matters of procedure, or in regard to proceedings in Lok Sabha even though something might have been said in the House against an individual or a public body.

In case a communication is received from a Minister of a State Government about anything said against him in the House, he may be advised to write to the Union Minister concerned to make a statement in the House clarifying the position, if the latter deems it necessary. The Speaker may also, in his discretion, forward that communication to the member concerned for his comments. If a communication in this regard is received from a former member, it is forwarded to the Minister concerned for such action as he considers necessary; where such a communication is received from a foreign diplomat regarding anything said in the House against his country, a copy of the communication may be sent to the Ministry of External Affairs with a view to explaining to the diplomat that it is not the practice of the Speaker to enter into correspondence regarding proceedings of the House.

Further, it is not the practice for the Speaker to enter into correspondence with the individual members of State Legislatures on procedural matters arising in their Legislatures and to express any opinion on rulings given by the Presiding Officers of those Legislatures. It is also not the practice for the Speaker to undertake an obligation not connected with his functions as such and which is susceptible of leaving his conduct open to question.

The Speaker is not bound to lay on the Table any communication or representation received by him.<sup>302</sup>

The Speaker is not bound to give reasons for his decisions<sup>303</sup>, and any observations made by him from the Chair cannot be interpreted in private correspondence. Members cannot enter into argument with the Speaker about a decision given by him<sup>304</sup>. An order passed by the Speaker is final and there is no appeal against it<sup>305</sup>. A decision given by the Speaker privately (i.e., on a departmental file) is as binding as a ruling given by him in the House<sup>306</sup>.

The Speaker may not preside over the sittings of the House under certain conditions<sup>307</sup>.

The Speaker possesses necessary powers of an administrative nature in connection with the functioning of the House and its members.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Admission of Strangers to Lok Sabha

During the sittings of the Lok Sabha, admission of strangers to those portions of the House which are not reserved for the exclusive use of members is regulated in accordance with the orders made by the Speaker<sup>1</sup>. When the House is sitting, the Chamber is reserved for the exclusive use of members and no strangers are permitted therein. If any stranger comes and sits in the House knowing that he is not qualified or that he is disqualified for membership thereof, he shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred rupees to be recovered as a debt to the Union<sup>2</sup> apart from any other action which the House may take for its contempt. The other portions of the House where strangers may be permitted to go under specified conditions are the Inner and Outer Lobbies, the Galleries, and the Central Hall, which is treated as a part of the Lobby. The area covered by the Chamber, the Lobby and the Galleries, forms the 'inner precincts of the House'.

The procedure for admission of strangers was initiated on a minute recorded by the Governor-General on 17 May 1854. Under a Standing Order adopted late in that year, strangers could be admitted to the Chamber, but on a motion moved by any member and carried by the House, they were to withdraw from that sitting, unless a motion for their readmission was carried.

In 1921, a Standing Order<sup>3</sup> was adopted for regulating the admission of strangers to the Galleries of the Assembly in accordance with the orders made by the Speaker with the approval of the Governor-General. With India becoming independent, the control of the Governor-General in this regard was dispensed with, and admission came to be regulated in accordance with the orders of the Speaker.

Admission of strangers to the various Galleries<sup>4</sup> is regulated in accordance with the rules made in this behalf under directions of the Speaker, and any matter not provided for in these rules is regulated by the Speaker at his discretion. With the exception of the Special Box for which no admission cards are issued, admission to the Galleries is by cards which are issued through the Centralised Pass Issue Cell (CPIC) by an order of the Secretary-General. In the case of the Speaker's Gallery, cards are, however, issued by the Speaker at his discretion.

1. Rule 386.—All persons other than members of the House are regarded as strangers with the exception of officers of the House and certain messengers on duty.

2. Art. 104.

3. S.O. 35.

4. These Galleries have been in existence since the inception of the Central Legislative Assembly in 1921, excepting the Diplomatic Gallery which was introduced in 1950.

The Speaker may cancel any admission card to any Gallery at any time and order the holder of the card to leave the Gallery, without assigning any reason therefor. No question can be raised in the House regarding such a cancellation<sup>5</sup>.

The Speaker may, whenever he thinks fit, order the withdrawal of strangers from any part of the House<sup>6</sup>. Any stranger who, when so ordered to withdraw, does not do so or otherwise misconducts himself or wilfully infringes the regulations<sup>7</sup> made in regard to the admission of strangers, is removed from the precincts of the House or taken into custody<sup>8</sup>.

6. Rule 387.

7. The following instructions are printed on the back of the Visitors' Card:

1. Admission is subject to accommodation being available.
2. This pass is liable to be cancelled without notice and without assigning any reason therefor.
3. The Person (in whose name this pass has been issued) shall be responsible for its safe custody and proper use. This pass must be returned or get revalidated to the CPIC Branch, after the period for which it is issued, is over.
4. After witnessing the proceedings of the House, the visitors should come out of the Parliament House Complex immediately after the time is over or security staff advices to do so, whichever is earlier.
5. In case of found roaming in non-permitted areas, the Visitors shall be liable to be sent out of the Parliament House Complex immediately.
6. Visitors are required to maintain silence. Demonstration, Applause, Shouting and Distribution of leaflets are prohibited. Movement of any kind is to be avoided as much as possible.
7. On demand by security staff on duty, this pass should be shown.
8. Any visitor may be asked to withdraw at any time from the gallery without assigning any reason therefor, even though holding a visitor's card, which may otherwise be valid.
9. Visitors are not permitted to take any objectionable items (like sticks, umbrellas, handbags, attaché cases, books etc.) and electronic items (like mobile phones, Cameras, CD, Pen Drive, Radio, I-Pod/I-Pad, Laptop, etc.) inside the building. They must declare and deposit such articles at the Token Cabin.
10. No Fire-arms is permitted inside the Parliament House Complex. In case of possession, leave the same outside the Parliament House Complex.
11. Visitors carrying cash or valuables in their handbags should invariably ask for lockers.
12. Children below ten years of age are not allowed inside the Gallery.
13. Any infringement will render the persons concerned liable to action being taken against them.
14. Smoking is strictly prohibited in the Parliament House Complex.
15. Interaction or Interview with Media is not allowed.
16. Please co-operate with Security Staff on duty in maintaining the discipline and decorum of the Parliament House Complex.
17. In case of any need, contact the nearest security personnel and extend co-operation to them.
18. Photocopy/scanning/tampering of the pass for any purpose is strictly prohibited.
19. This entry permit must be deposited with the Security Assistant on duty at the exit gate after completion of visit.
20. The loss of this pass should be reported immediately to CPIC Lok Sabha and Communication Control Room.

8. Rule 387A. Any misconduct or infringement of regulations is treated as a grave offence and as contempt of the House punishable with imprisonment.—L.S. Deb., 15-12-1967, cc. 7471-82; 15-11-1968, cc. 355-56; 9-4-1969, cc. 227, 332-38; 13-12-1969, cc. 211, 228-29.

Till 1929-30 the Government of India were the sole judge of the adequacy of the security measures in the precincts of the Central Legislative Assembly. In that year, Speaker Patel disagreed with this view and held that the precincts of the Assembly were within the supreme control of the Speaker and no measure which did not have his previous approval could be enforced within those precincts. The Galleries of the Assembly began, therefore, to be guarded by the Assembly staff and only one policeman in plain clothes was allowed inside the Public Gallery on the analogy of the practice in the House of Commons, U.K. In 1930, the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, in contravention of the practice, posted four policemen in uniform in the Public Gallery. The Speaker apprised the House of this and directed that all Galleries except the Press Gallery be cleared forthwith and no further passes issued without his orders<sup>9</sup>.

When the House sits in secret session, no strangers, except persons authorized by the Speaker, is permitted to be present in the Chamber, Lobby or Galleries<sup>10</sup>.

A member may go inside the Galleries but it is not desirable that he should remain in the Visitors' Gallery for any length of time<sup>11</sup>. In case a member has been asked to withdraw from the House or has been suspended from the service of the House, he is not permitted to enter the Galleries before expiry of the period of his withdrawal or suspension. He may, however, visit the Central Hall, Lobbies and other outer premises of the House.

Lok Sabha Galleries

The Speaker's Gallery is generally intended for the use of close friends and relatives of the Speaker and the Presiding Officers of State Legislatures and their spouses. Ministers of State Governments and their spouses, and Presidents of All India political parties are also accommodated in the Speaker's Gallery in case the Distinguished Visitors' Gallery is full.

The 'Distinguished Visitors' Gallery is intended for the use of ex-members of Parliament, members and Secretaries of State Legislatures, Judges, Vice-Chancellors and high officials of the Government of India and State Governments, men of standing in public life such as Presidents of All India political parties and distinguished visitors from foreign countries.

Former members of the Central Legislature, Constituent Assembly, Provisional Parliament and Lok Sabha are issued ex-member photo passes, which entitle them admission to the Distinguished Visitors' Gallery, Lobbies and Central Hall. Any former member, not having this photo pass, may be issued Distinguished Visitors' Gallery Cards on day-to-day basis from CPIC. Passes to the Distinguished Visitors Gallery are issued for full day. Former Secretaries-General of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha are entitled to enter Distinguished Visitors' Gallery on the approval of the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha and the passes so issued are valid for full day.

Sessional cards are issued from CPIC to wives/husbands of sitting members of Lok Sabha on the request of the members concerned. Ministers and Deputy Ministers' who are members of the Rajya Sabha and who have the right to sit and participate in the proceedings of the Lok Sabha are also entitled to get sessional cards for admission to this Gallery for their wives or husbands, as the case may be.

Special Gallery is for the use of spouses of sitting members and other close relatives, namely son, daughter, father and mother.

The Diplomatic Gallery is meant for the exclusive use of foreign diplomats. Two types of cards are issued for admission to this Gallery, viz., annual card for the heads of Foreign Missions, and bar-coded passes on day-to-day basis for other members of the diplomatic corps.

The Special Box is reserved for the family and guests of the President, Governors of States, heads of foreign States and their Prime Ministers, Crown Princes of foreign States and other high personages, e.g. ex-Presidents and ex-Governor-General, Chief Justice of India, Chief Ministers of States, Foreign Parliamentary Delegations, etc.

The Public Gallery is generally for the use of the public. A member can apply for issue of Visitors' Cards only for those who are very well known to them personally. While applying for such cards, members are to give a certificate stating as under: "The above named visitor is my relative/personal friend/known to me personally and I take full responsibility for him/her." In view of the security reasons, visitors are required to carry their Photo Identity Card and show it whenever asked for by the security officials.

Members are also to ensure that the particulars required in the application forms are duly filled in. The names of visitors are required to be given in full and not with initials. The father's/husband's name of a visitor should also invariably be given in full. Requests for cards for admission to the Public Gallery should be delivered in the CPIC, preferably by 1600 hours on the working day previous to the date for which the Visitors' Cards are required. One Visitor's Card is ordinarily issued to the member for a particular day for fixed hour(s). In exceptional cases, however, two cards may be issued.

In emergent cases, when it has not been possible for a member to apply for a Visitor's Card within the prescribed time-limit, application for a card for the same day may be made. In such a case, subject to accommodation being available, a card is issued from CPIC to a member on the following conditions:

- (i) Not more than two 'Same-day' Visitor's Cards are issued to a member for a particular day.
- (ii) The card is required to be collected by the member personally.
- (iii) The specific hour for which the card is valid is indicated on the card.
- (iv) Cards are made available for use at least two hours after the time of receipt of application therefor. Members may not press for the entry of their guests prior to the time indicated in the card.

On the occasion of the presentation of General Budget, a member may apply for a Visitor's Card for one person only. Preference is given to the spouse of the member. Further, the issue of Visitors' Cards is stopped as soon as the number of cards issued reaches the seating capacity<sup>12</sup>.

A portion of the Gallery is set apart for the exclusive use of ladies who express a wish to be seated separately.

Parties of bona fide students from approved educational institutions or employees of Government Departments or other institutions are admitted, if a written request furnishing the necessary particulars about the members of the party is made to the Secretary-General by the head of the institution or Department one clear day before the date of the sitting for which cards are required.

The Rajya Sabha Gallery is meant for the exclusive use of the members of Rajya Sabha who are admitted to this Gallery on production of their Identity Cards issued to them by the Rajya Sabha Secretariat.

The Official Gallery is intended only for officers of the Government of India and in certain cases for officials of the Governments of States, whose presence is required in connection with the business before the House. There are two types of passes which entitle admission of officials to this Gallery, viz. Sessional Official Gallery Cards and day-to-day Pass.

During the Question Hour, preference is given to the officers of those Ministries whose Ministers are to answer questions on that day; normally not more than one officer from a Ministry is permitted to be present during that hour. No officer is, ordinarily, permitted to remain in the Gallery longer than his business requires.

The admission of Press correspondents to the Press Gallery is generally regulated on the basis of the advice given by the Press Gallery Committee which is reconstituted every year from among the representatives of the Press having Press Gallery Cards.

In 1929, the first Committee, then called the Press Advisory Committee was appointed by Speaker Patel and consisted of seven members, out of whom four were 'sitting members' of the Assembly and the Secretary of the Assembly functioned as the Secretary of the Committee. In 1933, the name of the Committee was changed from the Press Advisory Committee to the Press Gallery Committee; its membership was increased from seven to nine, all the members being selected from amongst the Press representatives; and a member of the Committee itself was selected as the Secretary of the Committee.

The membership of the Committee was raised to ten in 1970-71 and twelve in 1974-75 so as to make it a more representative body covering English, Hindi and regional language newspapers. In 1993, the name of the Committee was again changed from the Press Gallery Committee to the Press Advisory Committee and its membership was increased from twelve to twenty-one. In 2004, the membership was again raised to twenty-seven to give representation to regional language newspapers and the electronic media from across the country. The members nominated to the Committee are from amongst the Press representatives accredited to the Lok Sabha Press Gallery. Four members of the Committee are nominated as the office bearers of the Committee, viz. Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary and Joint Secretary. The functions of the Committee are:

12. Bn. (II), 6-3-1976, para 2682.

- (i) To recommend the issuance of permanent passes to the representatives of the Newspapers/News Agencies/Media intending to report the proceedings of the House.
- (ii) To recommend the issuance of temporary passes to the representatives of the Newspaper/News Agencies/Media intending to attend and cover the proceedings of the House from the Gallery and/or any other parliamentary event or activity.
- (iii) To examine the complaints made against the representatives of the Newspapers/News Agencies/Media and to recommend appropriate action to the Speaker, Lok Sabha.
- (iv) The complaints relating to media made to Hon'ble Speaker, Lok Sabha for appropriate action.
- (v) The Hon'ble Speaker, Lok Sabha, may also act as per the provisions of law and rules and as per the advice of the General Purposes Committees.
- (vi) To recommend to the Speaker, Lok Sabha, the kind of facilities that may be given to them to discharge their duties.
- (vii) To perform such other tasks which are in line with the duties entrusted to them.

All applications for admission of the newspapers and their correspondents to the Press Gallery are ordinarily referred by the Secretariat to the Committee for opinion and advice. Similarly, its opinion is sought in all matters relating to allotment of seats in the Press Gallery. The factors that are generally taken into consideration by the Committee in allotting a seat to a newspaper are the space devoted by the paper to the proceedings of the House, and its daily circulation.

In recommending the admission of new correspondents to the Press Gallery, the Committee has set up a convention that the correspondent should have a minimum experience of five years in journalism.

Press Gallery Passes: Admission of Press correspondents to the Press Gallery is by cards issued through CPIC by the Secretary-General in accordance with the general orders of the Speaker. A photo-laminated pass is issued to each correspondent for the period of a calendar year now.

On the recommendation in writing by any two members of the Press Advisory Committee, temporary Press Gallery Cards without allotment of seats are also issued for a period not exceeding one week to bona fide journalists who are on a short visit to Delhi during the sessions of Lok Sabha.

Admission of Foreign Correspondents: Applications from foreign correspondents for the issue of Press Gallery Cards are considered only if they are accredited to the Government of India and if requests to that effect are received in the Secretariat through the Press Information Bureau of the Government of India.

Cancellation of a Press Gallery Card: The Speaker may, at his discretion, cancel a card issued for admission to the Press Gallery<sup>13</sup>. Any deliberate misreporting of the proceedings of the House<sup>14</sup>, advance publication of questions and answers, or publication of any matter which is not intended for the public may be considered as a sufficient ground for withdrawal of a Press Gallery Card.

Apart from the Press Gallery facilities, certain other facilities are also provided to the Press correspondents to assist them in reporting the proceedings of the House. These have been described in Chapter XLV—Parliament and the Press.

Lobby

The Lobby of the Lok Sabha comprises the Inner Lobby (also called Division Lobby) and the Outer Lobby. The Lobby is intended for the use of members of Parliament and former members of the Lok Sabha to whom Lobby facilities are granted at the discretion of the Speaker.

Former members of Central Legislature, Constituent Assembly, Provisional Parliament, Lok Sabha (other than the preceding Lok Sabha) or Rajya Sabha are admitted to the Central Hall on the basis of Identity Cards issued by respective PNOs.

Sessional passes for admission to the Lobby are issued to the Secretary of the Ministry of Law and the Secretary to the Prime Minister. These officers are admitted to the Lobby whenever they are required to go there on official business pertaining to the drafting of Bills or on behalf of the Prime Minister.

Only those journalists are admitted to the Lobby whose Press Gallery Cards are endorsed for Lobby under the directions of the Speaker. The number of such passes has been frozen at 12. However, if any vacancy out of the 12 correspondents who already hold passes occurs on account of death or correspondents leaving the profession, it could be filled up by another suitable journalist fulfilling the criteria.

13. In 1928, in the report of the Times of India and also in the message of the Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, London, there were certain criticisms against the Speaker. The Press Gallery Cards of both the correspondents were cancelled. The Press Gallery Card was later reissued to the concerned correspondent of the Times of India after unqualified apologies were tendered by him and the proprietor of the newspaper.

On 5 September 1936, the Press Gallery Card issued to the correspondent of the Amrit Bazar Patrika of Calcutta was cancelled because of the publication of an article casting reflections on the Speaker.

In pursuance of the decision of the House, the Speaker announced in the House on 21 August 1961, that he had "cancelled the Lok Sabha Press Gallery Card and the Central Hall pass issued to A. Raghavan", correspondent of the Blitz.—L.S. Deb., 20-4-1961, cc. 2659-70; 19-8-1961, cc. 3335-80; 21-8-1961, c. 3786.

Central Hall and its Galleries

The Central Hall is an extension of the Lobby and is primarily meant for the use of members of Parliament. Former members of Parliament, Press correspondents holding Press Gallery Cards endorsed for the Central Hall and Lobby are admitted to the Central Hall on production of passes. Certain categories of journalists holding temporary Press Gallery passes may also be permitted to the Central Hall for very brief periods during the Session. On the specific request of members, Governors and Ministers of States and the Presiding Officers and members of State Legislatures are admitted to the Central Hall for having discussions on matters of public importance. Admission is regulated through passes which are issued by the Secretariat of the House to which members making the request belong.

At the commencement of the first session after each general election to the Lok Sabha and at the commencement of the first session of each year when the President addresses members of both Houses of Parliament assembled together, visitors are allowed to witness the event from the Lobbies or the Galleries of the Central Hall.

On this occasion, four Lobbies of the Central Hall are reserved for family members and guests of the President; heads of foreign missions and their wives; family members and guests of the Chairman, the Speaker, the Deputy Chairman and the Deputy Speaker; and officers of the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Secretariats and senior officers of the Government of India.

The Galleries of the Central Hall are earmarked for Press Correspondents, guests sponsored by members of Lok Sabha guests sponsored by members of Rajya Sabha and distinguished visitors (including spouses of members of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha, visiting foreign dignitaries, Ministers and members of Legislative Assemblies and Councils of States) and former members of the Central Legislature and Parliament.

The admission to the Lobbies and Galleries of the Central Hall is regulated by passes issued for the occasion. A member may apply for a Visitor's Card for one person only, preference being given, as far as possible, to the spouse of the member of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha. As the seating capacity of the Visitors' Galleries for the guests of members of Lok Sabha is only 150, applications in excess of the seating capacity are considered for issue of Visitor's Cards for the sitting of Lok Sabha, half-an-hour after the conclusion of the President's Address<sup>15</sup>.

Addresses to members of Parliament by the heads of foreign States or their Prime Ministers or by other distinguished foreign visitors are arranged in the Central Hall. On such occasions the seating arrangement in the Central Hall remains almost the same as in the case of President's Address except that special guests accompanying the distinguished visitors addressing members of Parliament are seated in a block of seats kept reserved for them in the Central Hall itself.

Admission of Visitors when Lok Sabha is not in Session

During the inter-session period, arrangements are made to take visitors round to see the Parliament House during specified hours on working days only. Such visitors are taken by a Security Assistant in convenient batches of 40-50 persons at a time after every half-an-hour. A Casual Entry Permit is issued to them on the direction of Competent Authority of Parliament Security Service from the Reception Office. These visitors are taken to the Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha Chambers, and the Central Hall between 1100 hrs. and 1700 hrs.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Petitions and Representations

Petitions

It is an inherent right of the people in a democracy to present petitions to the Legislature of the land with a view to ventilating grievances and offering constructive suggestions on matters of public importance. This right has been well recognized in India and has been in vogue since time immemorial. The concept of petitioning for redress of grievances now finds an indirect recognition in the Constitution also<sup>1</sup>.

The Lok Sabha has framed rules of procedure for the presentation of petitions by the people and their consideration by the House<sup>2</sup>.

Scope of Petitions

Petitions may be presented or submitted to the Lok Sabha with the consent of the Speaker on a Bill which has been published or which has been introduced in the House<sup>3</sup>, or on any matter connected with the business pending before the House<sup>4</sup>, or on any matter of general public interest<sup>5</sup>, provided that it is not one which falls within

---

1. Art. 350.

2. Rules 160-69.

3. Certain important Bills and Acts on which petitions have been received are: the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954; the Proceedings of Legislatures (Protection of Publication) Bill 1956; the States Reorganization Bill, 1956; the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes Order (Amendment) Bill, 1956; the Andhra Pradesh and Madras (Alteration of Boundaries) Bill, 1959; the Constitution (Ninth Amendment) Bill, 1960; the Advocates Act, 1961; the Banking Laws (Application of Co-operative Societies) Act, 1965; the Repeal of Essential Services Maintenance Act, 1968; the Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Bill, 1969; the Hindustan Tractors Ltd. (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1978; the Sales Promotion Employees (Conditions of Service) Amendment Bill, 1980; the Delhi Municipal Corporation (Amendment and Validation) Bill, 1980; The Punjab Municipal Corporation Law (Extension to Chandigarh) Act, 1994.

4. Petitions presented on certain important matters other than Bills include those on the Report of the States Reorganisation Commission, the Report of Committee of Parliament on Official Language, withdrawal of exemption from levy of excise duty on vegetable non-essential oil proposed in the Budget Speech of the Minister of Finance in 1958, educational policy of Government and funds earmarked for education since independence, unemployment and other grievances of youth, complaints regarding overtoiling and working of STD system in Delhi Telephones, accommodation problem of retiring Government servants, unemployment of agricultural graduates and post-graduates and agricultural engineers, rising prices, unemployment and other problems, exemption from payment of road tax and supply of petrol to physically handicapped persons, grievances and demands of pensioners, hardships of Bombay suburban commuters.

5. Petitions and representations, inter alia, on the following subjects have been received and admitted: Preparation and Publication of Railway Time Tables and Guides; grant of rail concessions at single fares for double journeys to students who wish to appear in competitive examination; for award of merit scholarships in public schools, etc.; amendment of Post Office Savings Bank Rules for extension of nomination facilities to a single depositor; welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled the cognizance of a court of law having jurisdiction in any part of India or a court of inquiry or a statutory tribunal or authority or a quasi-judicial body, or a commission, or which should ordinarily be raised in the State Legislature, or which can be raised on a substantive motion or resolution, or for which remedy is available under the law, including subordinate legislation.

If a petition deals with financial matters or involves expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India, it cannot be presented to the House unless recommended by the President<sup>6</sup>.

Petitions serve two principal objects: one is to state the merits of a public matter to which the petitioner wishes to invite the attention of the Lok Sabha, and the second is to show and stress the degree of importance which the public outside are giving to the matter. The object of the petitions relating to the second category is to intensify and focus opinion so that the Government may be moved to take quick action in cases of genuine grievance<sup>7</sup>.

Requirements of a Petition

A petition has to be submitted in a prescribed form and should contain: a formal superscription to the House, i.e., it must be addressed to the Lok Sabha<sup>8</sup>; a concise statement of grievance; a prayer regarding the definite object in regard to the matter to which the petition relates<sup>9</sup>; name and designation of the petitioner with address,

(MCL) and other related issues; recognition of the BDS degree awarded to students of different dental colleges of Darbhanga, Bihar, L.N. Mithila University by the Dental Council of India; role of authorities in permitting the entry of S.S. Blue Lady Ship carrying hazardous waste in Indian territorial waters; serious revenue loss to Government of India due to misdeclared imports as worn clothing; regularization of contract workers of Bhojudih Coal Washery, a unit of BCCL; and appointment of hearing impaired handicapped persons as Inspector of Central Excise.

6. Rule 160 A—The financial matters referred to in this rule are those which are specified in sub-clauses (a) to (f) of clause (1) of article 110 of the Constitution.

7. 9R (CP-1LS), Annexure A.

8. Rule 165.

authenticated by his signature or, if illiterate, by his thumb impression<sup>10</sup>. Moreover, the petition must be free from interlineations or erasures.

Where there is more than one signatory to a petition, at least one person must sign or if illiterate, affix his thumb impression on the sheet on which the petition is inscribed. If signatures or thumb impressions are affixed to more than one sheet, the prayer of the petition has to be repeated at the head of each sheet<sup>11</sup>.

A petition, received direct from a petitioner, which is defective in parts or infringes one or more provisions of the rules relating to petitions, is returned to the petitioner pointing out the defects therein and suggesting its transmission to the Secretariat, if so desired by the petitioner, after carrying out necessary amendments.

When a petition received through a member infringes any of the rules, it is suitably edited by the Secretariat and consent of the member is obtained to the changes. Whenever it is not possible to edit a petition without carrying out substantial amendments to it, it is returned to the petitioner with the member's consent pointing out the modifications to be made in it.

Every petition to the Lok Sabha has to be either in Hindi or in English. If a petition in any other Indian language is made, it has to be accompanied by a translation either in Hindi or in English, and signed by the petitioner<sup>12</sup>.

Letters, affidavits or other documents should not be attached to a petition<sup>13</sup>. A petition thus has to be self-explanatory and self-contained. In practice, however, no petition has been rejected so far only on the ground that letters, documents, etc., were annexed thereto.

An admissible petition which refers to and encloses newspaper clippings or other statements or statistics without which the petition would not be intelligible, is edited so as to incorporate at an appropriate place the news item or the statement or statistics in the main body of the petition itself. If a member has countersigned such a petition, he is apprised of the changes made therein.

Petitions identically worded and received from different persons are treated as a single petition, and the first petitioner is treated as the first signatory to such a petition and only the number of other petitioners is indicated thereon. Where such petitions are received through a member for presentation by him to the House, the member is informed of this procedure before processing the petitions<sup>14</sup>.

However, in exceptional cases where identical petitions are received from persons eminent in public life, instead of mentioning merely the total number of other petitioners after the name and address of the first signatory, the names, but without the addresses, of all the other petitioners may also be mentioned.

---

10. Rule 162(1).

11. Rule 162(2).

12. Rule 161(3).

13. Rule 163.

14. The petitioner who is to be treated as the first signatory in such cases is generally indicated by the member presenting the petition.

In case the signatory to a petition dies before its presentation to the House, it is rejected, as petitioner has to be a living person or a corporate body in existence at the time of presentation of the petition.

Admissibility of Petitions

A petition must concern a matter which is within the competence or jurisdiction of the House and in which it can interfere and grant the relief prayed for<sup>15</sup>. Petitions pertaining to matters which should ordinarily be raised in a State Legislature are, therefore, not admitted. A member of Lok Sabha may, however, give a petition to be presented in the Rajya Sabha by a member of that House<sup>16</sup>.

The object of the petition, that is, the matter to which it relates should be precisely stated. A petition which does not contain any definite suggestion or a grievance for removal is rejected. Moreover, it must be couched in respectful, decorous and temperate language. A petition which is not so couched or which imputes motives or which is in the nature of a political indictment, is not admitted.

Petitions making complaints against the members in regard to their conduct in private life which has no relation to their conduct as members of Parliament are not admissible<sup>17</sup>.

A petition is not admissible for presentation to the House if it raises a question substantially identical with the one dealt with in a Bill or a resolution within one year of its discussion in the House<sup>18</sup>. The principle behind this practice is that after the House has taken a decision on a Bill or a resolution, it would be necessary to place a time-limit within which the same matter should not be discussed again, unless some new facts have been brought out in the petition.

A petition should not relate to personal or individual grievances. If it does, it is rejected as a petition<sup>19</sup>. If, however, the personal grievance relates to a matter connected with the business pending before the House and the petition is otherwise in order, it is admitted for presentation by the member countersigning it<sup>20</sup>.

Petitions suggesting remission or abolition of existing taxes or imposition of fresh taxes or suggesting withdrawal of moneys from the Consolidated Fund of India towards expenditure by Government, etc., are not admissible, unless recommended by 15. Rule 160—See this Chapter under ‘Scope of Petitions’, supra.

16. List of Business, Rajya Sabha, 5-12-1973.

17. The Speaker disposes of such complaints by having a discussion with the member concerned or by calling for facts from the member with regard to the allegations.

18. Rule 182. An exception may, however, be made by the Speaker in special cases. For instance, a petition was admitted during the Third Lok Sabha relating to high taxes. Compulsory Deposit Scheme, etc., (matters which had been discussed earlier by the House) in view of the large number of signatories to the petition and the publicity the matter had received in the Press—2R (CP-3LS), para 24.

19. Dir. 40(1) (i). However, such petition is placed before the Committee on Petitions as a representation. For details, see this Chapter infra under ‘Representation’ and Chapter XXX—‘Parliamentary Committees’, under Committee on Petitions.

20. Rule 160(ii), and 2R(CP-3LS), para 7.

the President. The principle on which this is based is that under the Constitution, the Lok Sabha alone has the right to vote the Demands for Grants which are recommended by the President.

Letters and telegrams from foreign Parliaments or from residents of foreign countries relating to matters beyond the competence and jurisdiction of the Lok Sabha are not admitted as petitions, since a petition to the House should set forth a grievance which is within its jurisdiction and powers and in which it can give relief<sup>21</sup>.

A petition suggesting amendment of the Constitution is not admissible because an amendment to the Constitution can only be initiated by introduction of a Bill for the purpose in the House<sup>22</sup>.

Where a petition contains official facts which are not known, a reference is sometimes made to the Ministry concerned to verify the accuracy of the facts and its admissibility is decided on receipt of such verification<sup>23</sup>.

Presentation of Petitions to the House

Every petition which a member proposes to present to the House has to be countersigned by him<sup>24</sup>. If the petition is submitted in any Indian language other than Hindi, its translation in Hindi or English has also to be countersigned by the member who proposes to present it as a token of its being a true and faithful rendering of the original petition.

If a petition is received direct from any person without the counter-signature of a member and on scrutiny by the Secretariat is considered admissible, it is returned to the petitioner who is asked to have it countersigned by a member for presentation to the House. This practice is based on the principle that petitions are normally to be presented by members in their capacity as elected representatives of the people and that they have to take responsibility for the statement made in the petitions and answer questions on them in the House, if any, are raised.

Requirements of Notice and Manner of Presentation

A member who intends to present a petition to the House gives an advance intimation thereof to the Secretary-General<sup>25</sup>. Before giving notice, the member is expected to satisfy himself that the petition does not infringe any of the rules relating to petitions. In case of doubt, he may in his notice of intention intimate that objectionable portions therein, if any, might be deleted or modified to make it conform to the rules. While giving notice, the member has also to forward to the

---

Such requests or telegrams, where necessary, are placed in the Library for information of members.

22. See art. 368.

23. Dir. 40(2). Reference to a Ministry is made in exceptional cases and, as a general rule, petitions are examined in the Secretariat itself in the light of Rules, etc., on the admissibility of petitions.

24. Rule 164(1)—The principle behind this practice is that a member who desires to present a petition has to take responsibility for the subject-matter or other statements made therein.

25. Rule 166.

Secretary-General the original petition signed by the petitioner and duly countersigned by him<sup>26</sup>.

No minimum period is specified for an advance notice: ordinarily two days notice is considered sufficient. In exceptional cases, the condition of advance notice is also waived.

Where a notice for presentation of a petition relating to a matter pending before the House which is likely to be taken up for discussion immediately is received too late for inclusion in the List of Business for the day, the petition may be presented by the member with the permission of the Chair without notice<sup>27</sup>.

The member in his notice of intention generally specifies the date on which he would like to present the petition. In case he fails to specify the date, it is fixed by the Secretariat in consultation with him.

When a petition is to be presented to the House by a member on a specified date, an entry is included in the List of Business for that day.

No member can present a petition from himself<sup>28</sup>, except as a member or officer of a public corporate body or society when he might present it on their behalf.

The Speaker does not present a petition either from himself or on behalf of another member.

A petition countersigned by two or more members is usually presented by the member who has countersigned it as the first signatory or, if he is absent, by the second or third or any other member who has countersigned it. The name of the member who presents a petition is placed first while printing the petition and is followed by the names of the other members who may have countersigned it.

A petition, which after presentation is found defective in some respects, may be ordered to be withdrawn by the Speaker and the petitioner informed accordingly<sup>29</sup>.

Ordinarily, a petition is presented to the House after the Question Hour<sup>30</sup>. If a member who has given notice of his intention to present a petition is not in his seat when called upon by the Speaker, he is normally not permitted to present the petition later during that day. The member can, however, specify another date on which he would like to present the petition.

No debate is permitted on the presentation of a petition<sup>31</sup>.

26. Rules 164(1) and 167.

27. During the Eighth Session of the Second Lok Sabha, a member, on 25 August 1959, forwarded a petition regarding the Andhra Pradesh and Madras (Alteration of Boundaries) Bill, 1959, with the request that he might be allowed to present it on the same day. As the Bill in question was likely to be taken up on 27 August 1959, the member was permitted to present the petition on the same day.

28. Rule 164(2).—He can, however, entrust his petition to some other member to countersign and present it.

29. Dir. 39.

30. Item (xviii) under Dir. 2.

31. Rule 168.

Reporting of Petitions by the Secretary-General

In exceptional cases where presentation of a petition by a member cannot be arranged or would not be possible before the subject-matter of the petition is taken up in the House and the Speaker considers that the petition should be presented to the House, the Secretary-General is directed by the Speaker to report the petition to the House. The form in which the receipt of a petition is to be reported to the House by the Secretary-General is specified in the Rules<sup>32</sup>. In practice, however, the Secretary-General while reporting the receipt of a petition uses a short formula to save the time of the House. The long formula as specified in the rules is, however, shown as having been used, in the cyclostyled and printed debates of the House<sup>33</sup>.

As in the case of presentation of a petition by a member, no debate is permitted on the report of a petition by the Secretary-General.

Petitions after Presentation stand referred to the Committee on Petitions

Every petition after it has been presented by a member or reported by the Secretary-General, as the case may be, stands referred to the Committee on Petitions<sup>34</sup>. Thereafter, a memorandum is prepared by the Secretariat for the consideration of the Committee indicating briefly the grievance and prayer of the petitioner, the background of the case and the suggested remedy, if any. In case any facts or comments on a petition have been received from the Ministry concerned<sup>35</sup>, they are suitably incorporated in the memorandum.

The Committee usually meets as early as possible after the presentation of a petition to consider it<sup>36</sup>. This applies equally to petitions on Bills or other matters pending before the House<sup>37</sup>, although in urgent cases, where the Bill dealt with in, or the subject-matter of, a petition is under discussion in the House, the Committee may meet to consider the petition immediately on its presentation<sup>38</sup>.

In case a petition deals with a Bill or other matter which is under discussion or is to be discussed immediately in the House and the Committee is not able to meet for want of time or quorum, the petition is placed before the Speaker who directs that it be circulated in extenso or in summary form<sup>39</sup>. When, however, adequate time is available before the subject matter of the petition is to be taken up in the House, the Committee may examine the petition in detail and make suitable recommendations to the House.

38. Dir. 94.—For details, see Chapter XXX—‘Parliamentary Committees’, under Committee on Petitions.

39. Rules 307(1) and (2).

Petitions on Bills Pending before a Select/Joint Committee

A petition received on a Bill pending before a Select/Joint Committee and otherwise admissible under the rules is not presented or reported to the House, but stands referred to the Select/Joint Committee and the petitioner is informed accordingly<sup>40</sup>. The principle behind it is that as a Select or Joint Committee examines the Bill in details and submits its report to the House, it would be desirable that the Committee is seized of all petitions, representations, etc., relating to that Bill so that it may, if deemed necessary, effect appropriate amendments in the Bill.

Representations

Petitions ventilating personal or individual grievances are not admitted as petitions but are placed before the Committee on Petitions as representations<sup>41</sup>. Representations seeking employment, requesting monetary or financial assistance in some form, regarding grievances on matters under the control of State Governments and on sub-judice matters are excluded from the purview of the Committee, as also the representations which are mere endorsement copies of letters to other authorities and do not contain a specific request in the endorsement for relief. Anonymous representations or those in which signatures are illegible or which do not contain full names or addresses, are not admitted.

Representations ventilating the grievances of employees or ex-employees of the Government of India or State Governments or Statutory Corporations in which the Central Government have a controlling interest are filed in view of the fact that a number of remedies are available to the employees, right up to the highest dignitary in the land. However, such representations are placed before the Committee with the Chairman's approval, if they raise any of the following points:

that rules, regulations, etc., on the subject are contrary to, or are not in consonance with the provisions of the Constitution or of equity; that decision has been taken arbitrarily, i.e. without applying the rules or that it has not the force of law or rules; that the petitioner has not been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard or to represent his case, or relevant and material information necessary for representing his case has been denied to him; that the reasons given for decision or executive action taken against the petitioner disclose a patent error of law or of application of rules; that there appears to be a prima facie case of miscarriage of justice; and that the grievance of the petitioner is such that rules or regulations need amendment, although his case has been correctly decided, e.g., if some class or category of Government servants has been adversely affected by enforcement of the rules.

Sometimes, letters, telegrams, copies of resolutions, etc., which are not strictly admissible under the rules as petitions are received in the Secretariat. These are treated as representations and considered by the Committee.

Public bodies, associations or individuals can submit representations to the Committee on any matter within the jurisdiction of the Lok Sabha. A representation to be admissible and placed before the Committee should be written in respectful, decorous and temperate language.

41. However, a petition from an individual relating to administrative delays and inefficiency and corruption or vindictiveness of officers, if substantiated, can be admitted as such.

Unlike petitions, no special form for submission of a representation has been prescribed. It can be in the form of a letter. A representation differs from a petition in other respects also. The scope of a representation is wider. Unlike petitions, a representation, even when it raises a question substantially identical with the one dealt with in a Bill or resolution within one year of its discussion in the Lok Sabha, is admissible<sup>42</sup>. Moreover, a representation may contain suggestions for amendment of the Constitution, for remission or abolition of taxes, or for imposition of fresh taxes. Further, a representation can suggest withdrawal of money from the Consolidated Fund of India, and a member can submit a representation from himself ventilating his individual grievances<sup>43</sup>. In such cases, the Committee may say that they are not in a position to give relief as the House itself cannot do so, or the Committee may suggest to the Ministry to look into the matter if it merits examination by the Government, and to take such action as it deems fit.

Representations complaining of alleged inaccurate statements by members during the debates in the House are not taken notice of unless documentary evidence in support of the allegation is furnished by the petitioner. Where, however, the Speaker so directs, copies of such representations may be forwarded to the members concerned for information.

Even if the petitioner's complaint is substantiated by relevant proceedings of the House, the complaint is filed by the Secretariat as the speeches of a member in the House are privileged and it is solely within the Speaker's discretion to regulate the debate. However, representations containing protests against utterances or actions of a member in the House which offend the religious sentiments of a section of the people or protests against alleged incorrect statements about an individual made by members in the House are admissible for being placed before the Committee on Petitions<sup>44</sup>.

Letters, representations, etc., relating to the proceedings in the House or the conduct and behaviour of members in the House are not admitted in view of the convention that the House does not permit outside interference in its internal procedural matters. However, these may be placed before the Committee for their consideration under orders of the Speaker<sup>45</sup>.

Complaints against members of the House regarding their conduct in private life which has no relation to their conduct as members of Parliament are neither treated as petitions nor placed as representations before the Committee on Petitions. Such complaints are dealt with by the Speaker personally after obtaining, where necessary, facts from the members concerned.

CHAPTER XXXV

Papers Laid on the Table and Custody of Papers

Papers Laid on the Table

Papers are laid on the Table in order to provide authoritative facts and information to the House with a view to preparing ground for discussion pertaining to various matters. Papers are so laid either in compliance with specific provisions contained in the Constitution, various Central Statutes and the Rules of Procedure, or in pursuance of the directions issued by the Speaker from time to time or in pursuance of the recommendations of parliamentary committees and the settled practices and conventions in regard thereto.

The practice of laying papers on the Table is a long established one. The Central Legislative Assembly, from its very inception, claimed its right to have certain information laid before it<sup>1</sup>. In certain Central Acts, though very few in number, there used to be specific provision for the laying on the Table of certain documents, including the draft rules framed by the Government in exercise of delegated powers of legislation<sup>2</sup>. Sometimes Government on their own accord laid on the Table important reports<sup>3</sup>, agreements<sup>4</sup> and other miscellaneous papers.

However, before Independence, the practice of laying papers was very much limited. The Executive had the unfettered power to frame various rules and regulations without any control of the Legislature and could refuse the production of any paper or the supply of information without assigning any reason therefor. In fact, till 1950, there was no specific rule providing for a document cited in the House to be laid on the Table though, in practice, the documents cited by the Government Members were so laid during the days of the Central Legislative Assembly<sup>5</sup>.

Papers Laid under the Constitution

The Constitution stipulates the laying of the following papers: —

Budget and other documents connected therewith<sup>6</sup>; Ordinances promulgated and Proclamations issued by the President and orders incidental thereto<sup>7</sup>; and Reports of the various authorities constituted under the Constitution and other papers connected therewith.

In the last category are the reports of the Comptroller and Auditor-General regarding the accounts of the Government of India (commonly known as the Audit Reports)<sup>8</sup>; the recommendations of the Finance Commission together with an explanatory memorandum as to the action taken thereon<sup>9</sup>; the reports of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes<sup>10</sup>; National Commission for Scheduled Tribes<sup>11</sup> and the reports of the National Backward Classes Commission<sup>12</sup> together with a memorandum explaining the action taken thereon; the reports of the Commissioner for Linguistic Minorities<sup>13</sup>; and the reports of the Union Public Service Commission<sup>14</sup> together with memorandum about the cases, if any, where the advice of the Commission was not accepted by the Government and the reasons for such non-acceptance. In regard to the Union Public Service Commission, the regulations framed by the President defining the scope of the Commission's functions are also laid on the Table<sup>15</sup>.

Except the reports of the Finance Commission and the National Backward Classes Commission, which are laid on the Table as and when submitted to the President, all the above reports are laid annually.

Papers Laid under the Statutes

Papers required to be laid on the Table under various statutes may be broadly classified under the following categories—

- (i) Rules, sub-rules, regulations, bye-laws framed by Executive authorities in exercise of the delegated powers of legislation—every statute containing rule-making provisions provides for the laying of such rules as soon as these are framed for a certain period and such rules are subject to modification by the House<sup>16</sup>.
- (ii) Annual reports and audited accounts of public undertakings whether incorporated under the Companies Act, 1956 or created under specific Acts.
- (iii) Reports, etc., of statutory bodies, other than public undertakings constituted under specific laws of Parliament. The provision regarding laying of papers of these bodies is, however, not uniformly laid down in the statutes. In many of them, the requirement is either confined merely to the laying of accounts or the annual reports or their ad hoc reports.

In addition, various statutes also provide for the laying of Government Resolutions, Statutory or Executive Orders or any other paper issued or prepared thereunder.

No statutory report can be treated as a privileged document and must, therefore, be laid on the Table<sup>17</sup>.

Where a State has come under President's rule, under article 356, the Appropriation Accounts and the Audit Report thereon have also to be laid on the Table. However, it is not necessary for the Government to relay these documents before Parliament to enable the Public Accounts Committee at the Union to examine them, if they were laid before the State Assembly before it ceased to exist.

Reports required to be laid under the Statutes should be laid as per requirement of the Statute. Similarly, reports under the Commissions of Inquiry Act should be laid together with the Memorandum of action taken thereon within a period of six months of submission of the report by the Commission to the Government. An interim report can also be laid on the Table<sup>18</sup>.

Papers Laid under the Rules of Procedure

Papers required to be presented to the House or to be laid on the Table<sup>19</sup> under various provisions contained in the Rules include:

Reports of Select or Joint Committees on Bills<sup>20</sup>; Reports of the Standing

17. It was ruled that the Report of the Commissioner for SC, ST regarding disturbances at Ramanathapuram was a statutory report under article 338 of the Constitution and must be laid on the Table of the House. Such a report was not covered by First Proviso to Rule 368 and could not be claimed as a privileged document—L.S. Deb., 18-12-1957, c. 6249.

18. L.S. Deb., 9-3-1978, cc. 258-80.

19. In the Constitution as well as in the Rules, both the expressions namely, 'presentation' and 'laying' have been used and connote the same meaning, though their use in respect of each particular document or paper has got special significance by virtue of usage. Whether a particular document is presented to the House or is laid on the Table, the net effect is the same, i.e. the House takes cognizance of such a paper, and the same consequences would follow.

A paper or document is, however, not to be treated as a paper laid as such if it does not fulfil the primary condition of authentication by the member or Minister laying it on the Table. For instance, the replies given to starred questions not reached for oral answer in the House and to unstarred questions are not treated as papers laid, though these are deemed to be laid on the Table under the Rules. Similar is the case with regard to Bills received from the other House in their various stages and laid on the Table. See also L.S. Deb., 23-11-1959, c. 1231.

Papers Laid under the Directions of the Speaker

In pursuance of the directions issued by the Speaker, the following documents or papers are required to be laid on the Table:—

Statements by Ministers in reply to half-an-hour discussion: When a half-an-hour discussion is interrupted for want of quorum or when there is no time for the Minister to give a full reply to the debate, the Speaker directs the Minister to lay a statement on the Table<sup>29</sup>.

Opinions on Bills: Opinions on a Government Bill are laid on the Table by the Minister concerned and on a private member's Bill by the member in-charge of the Bill soon after the opinions are received<sup>30</sup>. In the case of private member's Bill, if the member in-charge is absent, opinions thereon are laid by the Minister concerned with the Bill. Opinions received when the Lok Sabha is not in session are laid on the Table as soon as the House reassembles.

Bills assented to by the President: Every Bill passed by the Parliament and assented to by the President is required to be laid on the Table by the Secretary-General. In the case of a Bill on which assent is obtained by the Rajya Sabha Secretariat, the Bill, as assented to by the President, is authenticated by the Secretary-General of the Rajya Sabha before being laid on the Table<sup>31</sup>.

Except for the report of the Rules Committee, which is laid on the Table, reports of all the Standing Parliamentary Committees are presented to the House. However, in case of the Departmentally Related Standing Committees, the reports of the Committees serviced by the Lok Sabha are presented to the House and simultaneously, these are laid on the Table of the Rajya Sabha and vice-versa.

Statements in response to calling attention notices: If two calling attention notices have been put down in the List of Business of the same sitting, the statement in respect of the first notice is made in the House and the statement in response to the second notice may be laid on the Table by the Minister concerned<sup>32</sup>. In practice, however, whenever a statement to be made by a Minister in response to a calling attention notice is long, a synopsis of the statement may be read out by the Minister and the full statement laid on the Table.

Minutes of Parliamentary Standing Committees: After the minutes of a sitting or sittings of a Committee are approved by the Chairman of the Committee, an authenticated copy thereof is laid on the Table<sup>33</sup>.

Documents connected with the report of a Select or Joint Committee: Along with the report of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill, the minutes of the various sittings, Government Amendments, if any, to the Bill and other important papers made available to the members of the Committee and approved by its Chairman for presentation to the House, are also presented to the House. Evidence given before a Select or Joint Committee is not presented to the House with the report. If the Committee decides to lay it before the House, it is laid on the Table separately, usually on the same day after the report has been presented<sup>34</sup>.

Parliamentary Committees may make recommendations in their reports requiring certain reports or explanatory memoranda to be placed before the House. In response to such recommendations certain papers are laid on the Table of the House.

Statement by Ministers under Direction 73A: Direction 73A requires the Ministers to make statement once in six months in the House regarding status of implementation of recommendations contained in reports of Departmentally Related Standing Committees concerning to their Ministry/Department. As the statement usually runs into many pages, the Minister concerned generally, with the permission of the Speaker, lays the same on the Table of the House.

Papers Quoted to be Laid on the Table

If a Minister quotes in the House a despatch or other State paper which has not been presented to the House, he is required on demand to lay the relevant paper on the Table<sup>35</sup>; even when a document is partly quoted by him, the entire document has to be laid on the Table<sup>36</sup>. The rule does not apply to a document which is stated by the Minister to be of such a nature that its disclosure would be inconsistent with public interest<sup>37</sup>. As to what constitutes public interest is a matter entirely for the Government to decide<sup>38</sup>. The privilege of refusal to lay on the Table a document on the ground of public interest should be claimed specifically by the Minister himself who quotes the document<sup>39</sup>.

The Secretary-General reports to the House on the second day of the session and thereafter on the last day of every week on which the House sits, all Bills assented to by the President since such a report was last made to the House and also lays on the Table the assented copies of the relevant Bills. For this purpose, there is an informal arrangement between the two Secretariats for the mutual supply of authenticated copies of Bills assented to by the President.

Refusal by a Minister to place a confidential document on the Table is not a breach of privilege<sup>40</sup>. The Speaker cannot compel a Minister to lay a document if its disclosure is claimed to be against public interest<sup>41</sup>. No breach of collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers is involved if a Minister declines to disclose contents of a document claiming privilege and a part of the contents thereof is later divulged by the Prime Minister<sup>42</sup>. If a Minister declines to lay a document on the Table on the ground that it is against public interest, it is the Government's responsibility to see that the contents thereof do not leak out.

Where a Minister gives in his own words a summary or gist of such despatch or State paper and does not actually quote from it, it is not necessary for him to lay the relevant paper on the Table<sup>43</sup>. Similarly, if a document is referred to casually, it need not be so laid. But if it is pressed that the document should come on the record of the House, the Minister is required to lay the document on the Table<sup>44</sup>. There has been a case where on the Minister's assertion that he had given a gist of the document being challenged, the Speaker asked the Minister to show him the document confidentially to enable him to decide whether the gist of the document had been given and later informed the House that the Minister has given the gist<sup>45</sup>. Sometimes documents, even though read in full, have been laid on the Table<sup>46</sup>.

If a Minister, during his speech, is reading from a statement, the veracity of which is challenged and it is not possible for him to continue his speech due to continuous interruptions, the Speaker may ask him to lay the rest of the statement on the Table. The Speaker is not to judge as to what the Minister is saying is correct or not. By placing the statement before the House it is not proved that what is said therein is correct or that the statement is in reply to what has been said in the House. After the statement is laid, it is subject to examination in the normal course<sup>47</sup>.

Correspondence between Ministers

It follows from the principle of collective responsibility of the Council of Ministers to the Lok Sabha<sup>48</sup> that all communications between Ministers are regarded secret or confidential unless the Government itself decides to make any particular communication or part thereof public. The Government's right to decide what is secret or confidential and what should be laid on the Table of the House is absolute. Even if a Minister quotes in the House from a document, he may refuse to lay it on the Table of the House on the ground that its disclosure would not be in the public interest. What constitutes 'public interest' would again be entirely for the Government to determine.

Even if a private member quotes from or places on the Table of the House the copy of a document certified by him as a true copy of the original, still it may not be necessary for the Government either to place the original on the Table or to admit or deny the correctness of the alleged copy. While the Lok Sabha can force a Government to quit by passing a vote of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers, neither the Speaker nor the House can compel a Minister to lay on the Table of the House any communication between Ministers which the Government regards as secret or confidential and the disclosure of which it considers against public interest<sup>49</sup>.

The July-August 1978 Session of the Rajya Sabha was dominated by a demand raised in various ways for laying on the Table of the House some correspondence alleged to have taken place between the Prime Minister and the then Home Minister regarding an inquiry into allegations of corruption against the family of the Prime Minister and the family of the then Home Minister.

On 19 July 1978, speaking in the Rajya Sabha on a Calling Attention Notice on the subject, the Prime Minister inter alia observed that it was a well-recognized principle that communications between Ministers were privileged documents. It was necessary for a free and frank exchange of views between the Ministers and had been recognized in May's Parliamentary Practice also. The Prime Minister added that he proposed to adhere to this inviolable principle in the transaction of Government business<sup>50</sup>.

Following continued demands for laying the correspondence on the Table and noisy exchanges leading to early adjournment of the House for few days, the Chairman after discussing the matter with the Prime Minister announced that he had advised the Government and the Government had accepted that it would be better if it placed the correspondence in the Chairman's Chamber for perusal by the Leader of the Opposition and Leaders of the other Parties and Groups in the House.

Later, in the Lok Sabha, the same correspondence between the Prime Minister and the Home Minister was made public by the former Home Minister in the statement on his resignation from the Government<sup>51</sup>.

When private communications or despatches or memoranda are referred to, the rule for the laying of cited documents does not apply.

A member may lay a paper on the Table of the House when he is authorised to do so by the Speaker<sup>52</sup>. If a member quotes from a paper or document, whether public or private, he may be asked to lay it on the Table<sup>53</sup>. Before laying it on the Table, the member has to submit that paper or document to the Speaker for perusal and it is treated as Paper Laid on the Table only after the Speaker has accorded the necessary permission<sup>54</sup>. But the member is not allowed to lay on the Table private correspondence of another member.

Unless a member has quoted from a document in the House, he is ordinarily not permitted to lay it on the Table<sup>55</sup>. A member is not required to lay on the Table a document if the House is satisfied with the oral statement of the member<sup>56</sup>. Where a member has only referred to a document and not actually quoted any portion therefrom, he is not required to lay it on the Table<sup>57</sup>.

Members' Right to Quote from Secret Documents

A member can ordinarily quote from a document that is treated by the Government as secret or confidential, and which the Government have not disclosed in public interest. There is a possibility for such a document to be obtained through leakage or stealth or in an irregular manner, and there is no compulsion on the member to disclose the source from which a copy thereof has been obtained by him<sup>58</sup>.

Normally, a member is not expected to spring a surprise on the Speaker, the House and the Government by quoting from a document which is not public. In fairness to all and in accordance with the parliamentary conventions, he is expected to inform the Speaker and the Government in advance so that they are in a position to deal with the matter on the floor of the House when it is raised. If this requirement is not complied with, the Speaker may stop the member from quoting from such a document and ask him to make available to the Chair a copy before he can be allowed to proceed with any quotation therefrom.

While the Government cannot be compelled to admit or deny the correctness<sup>59</sup> of copy of any alleged a document which is classified as secret or confidential, it is necessary for the member who quotes from such a document to certify that he has verified from his personal knowledge that the document is a true copy of the original which is authentic and he will do so on his own responsibility. The member is also required to give a certificate on the document in the prescribed form<sup>60</sup>. The Speaker would accordingly permit him to proceed. In case the member is not prepared to give a certificate in these terms and insists on quoting from such a document, the Speaker may stop the member from quoting from such a document.

There is an over-riding authority with the Speaker to stop a member from quoting from a document in the national interest where the security of the country is involved. He can exercise this power without assigning any reason<sup>61</sup>.

When a member reads a part of a confidential document, that portion and any other relevant portion to make it understood is laid on the Table; the entire document need not be laid<sup>62</sup>. However, if a confidential document has not been laid on the Table by the Government as its disclosure would be inconsistent with public interest and a private member seeks to lay it on the Table on the ground that the document has already leaked out, it is permitted to be laid on the Table only when the member verifies from his personal knowledge that the document sought to be laid by him is a true copy of the original which is authentic and also records a certificate thereon to that effect<sup>63</sup>.

When a member quotes from a secret document and seeks to lay it on the Table, he is required to submit the document or a copy of it to the Speaker after recording a certificate thereon<sup>64</sup>. The document is, thereafter, sent to the Government for verification of its authenticity. After considering the facts supplied by the Government, the Chair decides whether the document should be allowed to be laid on the Table or not and the Speaker's decision is final.

On 10 December 1987, while speaking<sup>65</sup> on the Motion of No-Confidence in the Council of Ministers, a member sought to lay on the Table a report of the Technical Evaluation and Negotiation Committee on the 155 MM Guns, headed by Gen. Mayadas. As the member had quoted certain portions from the report, there was a demand that the report be laid on the Table. The member, thereupon, stated that he would lay the report. The report was later handed over by the member after giving the following certificate thereon:

"I certify from my personal knowledge that this document is a true copy of the original which is authentic."

As per established procedure, a copy of the report handed over by the member was sent to the Ministry of Defence for comments, particularly about its authenticity to enable the Speaker to decide whether it could be treated as a Paper Laid on the Table. After considering all aspects of the matter, including the Ministry's reply as well as the fact that the matter was under examination by a parliamentary committee, the Speaker decided not to allow the document to be laid or deemed to have been laid on the Table.

On 27 February 1991, a member referred to and quoted from a report of the Central Bureau of Investigation (Special Investigation Group) on telephone tapping. The member sought to lay the report on the Table of the House for which prior intimation had been given by him on the same day to the Speaker. As the report was of a secret nature, it was referred to the Minister of State for Home Affairs for comments, particularly about its authenticity. The Government confirmed that the photostat copy of the report was a true copy of the CBI Report submitted to the Government as also to the Committee of Privileges.

The report was treated as a Paper Laid on the Table as it was referred to and quoted by the member and there was a demand for laying it on the Table.

A document with the Government does not ipso facto become public if a document purporting to be a copy thereof is laid on the Table by a member. The Speaker cannot compel the Government to lay the document in their possession on the Table, much less to disclose it or to communicate it to anyone else, if the Government still classifies it as confidential<sup>66</sup>.

If in answer to a question or during debate, a Minister discloses the advice or opinion given to him by any officer of the Government or by any other person or authority, the relevant document or part or parts of the document containing that opinion or advice or a summary thereof is ordinarily laid on the Table<sup>67</sup>. It is, however,

Rule 370 was incorporated in 1953. The Rules Committee were of the view that it was the Minister who was responsible to the House and not the Officers whose advice he might have taken. If on an issue a Minister relies on any advice, he must first make it his own and then express it in the House as his own view or if he discloses the source of advice, he should be prepared to place the document before the House.

The idea behind it was that the House would come to an independent decision whether the advice which had been given to the Minister was sound and in the best public interest, and if the House thought that the advice was not correct, it might give a directive to the Minister. In the other case in which the Minister expressed an opinion of his own, whether arrived at by himself or after seeking the advice of any of his advisers, officers, etc. the House could censure him if it severely disagreed with that opinion of the Minister. Min. (RC), 22-12-1953.

always open to a Minister to claim privilege that it would not be in the public interest to lay the document containing that advice or opinion on the Table, even though its source has been disclosed<sup>68</sup>.

Where a document containing such advice or opinion for which privilege was claimed in the House by the Minister leaked out subsequently, the Minister concerned had to lay a copy thereof on the Table as a copy of the document was produced by a member on the floor of the House and the Minister concerned on verification found that it was a true copy of the original<sup>69</sup>.

Speaker's Permission for Laying Papers

The approval of the Speaker is necessary before any paper can be laid on the Table. Such permission is presumed in the case of State documents and papers if they are laid on the Table in pursuance of statutory obligations, rules, practice and conventions of the House. The Speaker's specific permission is, however, necessary when a Minister wants to lay a paper on the Table at a short notice<sup>70</sup>.

Competence to Lay Papers on the Table

Normally, it is the Ministers who lay documents on the Table. Most of the documents are required to be laid under statutory or constitutional provisions or in pursuance of the Rules of Procedure and the Directions of the Speaker. In respect of other documents, the Ministers have to use their judgment whether to place a paper on the Table or not, and if so, when. Where it is decided by a Minister that a matter is such that the House should be taken into confidence, he should, as a matter of courtesy, first place the document before the House and then release it to the Press<sup>71</sup>.

It is for the Government to decide whether a report of a departmental committee or any particular report should be laid on the Table. The Speaker has declined to give any directions to the Government whenever request by members suggesting the laying of such a report has been made to him<sup>72</sup>.

The responsibility for laying on the Table correspondence between the Union and State Governments or circulating it to members rests with the Government, and the Speaker does not undertake to determine for the Government the course of action they ought to take. Normally, such correspondence is not laid on the Table<sup>73</sup>.

Reports of inquiries conducted by State Governments are not laid on the Table of the House<sup>74</sup>.

When a team of members of Parliament visits a place on the invitation of the Government and submit a report, it is not an official document to be laid on the Table because Ministers are required to lay only official documents<sup>75</sup>.

There is nothing in the Constitution or the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in the House or in the Evidence Act which prohibits the Government from laying a paper or document on the Table, including a plaint, written statement, affidavit or petition submitted before a court of law<sup>76</sup>. However, if a Minister declines to lay it on the ground that its production would be inconsistent with public interest, the Speaker cannot compel the Minister to lay it on the Table<sup>77</sup>.

A member can also lay a paper or document on the Table but only when he is authorized to do so by the Speaker<sup>78</sup>.

Some papers, viz. reports of parliamentary committees which could not be presented to the House because of its dissolution, assented copies of Bills, etc. are laid on the Table by the Secretary-General in pursuance of the directions of the Speaker. By practice, the Secretary-General also lays on the Table annually, two brochures, namely, Parliamentary Committees—A Summary of Work and Financial Committees—A Review. Apart from these, the Secretary-General has been laying on the Table of the House reports of IPU, CPC, Parliamentary Delegations, goodwill missions, etc. since 2005<sup>79</sup>.

When a new Lok Sabha meets after a General Election, the Secretary-General lays on the Table a book containing names of members returned to the House, which is presented to the Speaker by the Chief Election Commissioner.

The Secretary-General lays on the Table copies of Bills passed by Rajya Sabha and transmitted to Lok Sabha and the Bills returned by Rajya Sabha to Lok Sabha.

The Secretary-General also lays on the Table a copy of the Address by the President to both Houses of Parliament assembled together, in the Central Hall, under article 87 of the Constitution.

It has been held that in case a paper relating to administrative matters, not within the cognizance of the Speaker, is laid on the Table by a private member and is then referred to the Government for comments, the paper along with the comments should be laid on the Table by the Minister concerned, and not by the Secretary-General<sup>80</sup>.

Authentication of Papers to be Laid

A paper or a document which is laid on the Table is duly authenticated by the Minister or member concerned<sup>81</sup>. When a paper is laid on the Table by the Secretary-General, it is authenticated by him<sup>82</sup>. Thus, a person who authenticates a document is presumed to take the full responsibility for its genuineness, correctness and authenticity. This is necessary because once a document is laid on the Table, it becomes a part of the permanent record of the House and hence a public document open to inspection and use by members<sup>83</sup>.

There is a prescribed form for authentication of documents<sup>84</sup> and this form is followed by Ministers in accordance with the standing instructions issued to them by the Speaker.

In the case of a paper or document laid by a Minister, an entry is made in the List of Business. If before such an entry is made, a change in the office of the Minister takes place, another copy is required to be authenticated by the new Minister and the entry in the List of Business is made accordingly. Similarly, in the case of papers to be laid on the Table afresh after the dissolution of the Lok Sabha or in the case of papers to be re-laid and if there is a change in the office of Minister, fresh authentication becomes necessary.

A private member has no right to lay a paper on the Table unless he is permitted to do so by the Chair. Authentication is required only when he has been allowed to lay a paper.

Authenticated copies of all papers or documents to be laid on a particular day are kept ready in the Table Office before the commencement of the sitting and soon after these are laid on the Table, the same are sent to the Parliament Library.

Procedure for Laying Papers on the Table

Papers Laid by Government

Papers are required to be laid on the Table by Ministers both in English and Hindi versions. Where a paper is permitted to be laid, by the Speaker, in one version

---

Subsequently, the Speaker directed that the papers be forwarded to the State Government and their comments, if any, might also be Laid on the Table with their concurrence. On an intimation being received from the Home Ministry that the State Government had no objection to their comments being laid on the Table, it was decided that it would be more appropriate for the Minister of Home Affairs to lay them on the Table because if the Secretary-General did so, the responsibility would lie with the Speaker and that in administrative matters, which were not within the cognizance of the Speaker, it was necessary that he should keep clear of governmental responsibility.

81. Rule 369 (1).

82. There are, however, certain documents which though laid by the Secretary-General are not authenticated by him. For example, the Address delivered by the President to both the Houses of Parliament is authenticated by the President. Similarly, Bills passed by the Rajya Sabha and laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha by the Secretary-General are authenticated by the Secretary-General, Rajya Sabha.

83. Min. (RC), 17-4-1953.

84. Each document is authenticated at a suitable place, preferably on the front page.

only, the Minister has also to lay on the Table a statement giving reasons for not laying simultaneously the other version of the document.

When a Minister wants to lay on the Table any paper or document, the concerned Ministry forwards to the Secretariat forty-six copies of each Notification and twenty-six copies of any other paper of Hindi and English versions complete in all respects, including one copy each of the Hindi and English version duly authenticated by the Minister concerned, two days in advance before the date on which the Minister proposes to lay it on the Table<sup>85</sup>. In special circumstances, however, the Speaker may, on request, permit a Minister to lay a paper at a short notice<sup>86</sup>. If the Minister in whose name an item stands on the agenda is not present, the papers can be laid on the Table by another Minister but with prior intimation to the Speaker<sup>87</sup>.

If the paper is being laid under any particular Statute, the Ministry indicates the relevant provision in their communication to the Secretariat. In case the paper to be laid is an 'order'<sup>88</sup>, the period for which it is to be laid is also indicated as also the fact whether or not the 'order' is subject to modification.

Papers received from the Ministry are examined in the Secretariat to see whether they conform to the statutory requirements, if any, in regard to them<sup>89</sup>. If it is found that there has been a delay in laying a paper, the Minister concerned is required also to lay on the Table a statement explaining reasons for the delay, along with such paper or document<sup>90</sup>.

If the Minister has indicated a particular date on which he wishes to lay a paper on the Table, an entry is made in the List of Business for that date. In case no date is mentioned the entry is normally made in the List of Business for the next day allotted to the Minister for answering questions in the House. The entry is made in the name of the Minister who has authenticated the paper and he is to lay the papers unless he has authorised another Minister to do so on his behalf. However, if he is present in the House, another Minister, even if authorised, cannot lay the papers. Only the brief subject and not the purport of the paper is mentioned in the entry<sup>91</sup>. Contents of a paper to be laid on the Table are kept confidential till the paper has been so laid. It is open to a Minister to correct or alter the text of any paper before it is laid. All such corrections made in the paper are, however, authenticated by the Minister, or alternatively, an authenticated copy of the paper as to be finally laid on the Table is supplied to the Secretariat before or as soon as the paper is so laid.

89. For example, in the case of annual reports of public undertakings, the statutory requirement as laid down in the Companies Act, 1956, is that they must be accompanied by a copy of the audit report and any comments upon, or supplement to the audit report made by the Comptroller and Auditor-General; hence, if any particular annual report is received from a Ministry without the audited accounts and the comments of the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon, the fact is immediately brought to the notice of the concerned Ministry for compliance before the item is included in the List of Business. Similarly, if a paper is lacking in respect of some other requisite information, the Ministry is asked to make the paper complete in all respects for inclusion of the item in the List of Business.

90. L.S. Deb., 22-8-1962, cc. 3442-43.

In the case of 'orders', such a statement is not insisted upon and the delay as also the reasons therefor given by the Ministry, if any, are brought to the notice of the Committee on Subordinate Legislation who take cognizance of the matter.

‘Laying a paper on the Table’ does not imply that the Minister is required to hand over the paper physically at the Table. What transpires is that the authenticated copy of the paper to be laid is kept in the Table Office. It may be made available for reference, if necessary, by the members on request after the Minister, when called upon by the Speaker, formally states that he lays it on the Table. Where the document to be laid is of far-reaching importance, its contents may, with the permission of the Speaker, be read out to the House<sup>92</sup>.

No point of order about the legality or the constitutionality of a paper can be raised when it is being laid on the Table<sup>93</sup>.

It is for the Committee on Papers Laid on the Table to examine and report to the House: (i) whether there has been compliance with the provisions of the Constitution, Act, rule or regulation under which the paper has been laid; (ii) whether there has been any unreasonable delay in laying the paper; (iii) if there has been such delay, whether a statement explaining the reasons for delay has been laid on the Table of the House and whether those reasons are satisfactory; (iv) whether both the Hindi and English versions of the paper have been laid on the Table; and (v) whether a statement explaining the reasons for not laying the Hindi version has been given and whether such reasons are satisfactory.

Papers Laid by Members

A member can also lay a document or paper on the Table, but only with the prior permission of the Speaker<sup>94</sup>. The member is, therefore, required to supply a copy thereof to the Speaker in advance so as to enable him to decide whether permission should be granted or not.

The occasion for a member to lay a paper normally arises when he quotes from a document and wishes to lay it on the Table either of his own accord or in pursuance of a demand made in the House or when a question of privilege is involved and the member is required to substantiate the allegations made by him with documentary evidence. In such cases, the member is required to hand over a copy of the paper, if he has not supplied it already, to the officer at the Table. The paper is, however, deemed to have been laid when the Speaker, after examination, accords the necessary permission<sup>95</sup>.

While according permission to treat a paper furnished by the member as laid on the Table, the Speaker takes inter alia the following factors into consideration: that the member has referred to the document in the House or read extracts therefrom and there is a demand for laying it<sup>96</sup>; or that it was being laid under directions of the Chair<sup>97</sup>; that the document is important enough to be brought on record of the House<sup>98</sup>; contains nothing which is against the wider interest of the nation; or is not propagandist in nature and the House is not being made thereby a forum for expressing any views likely to lower the prestige or authority of the House; that the matter contained therein is in some way connected with the business of the House<sup>99</sup>; the document has been published by a State Government or other competent authority<sup>100</sup>; and that it is original and authentic<sup>101</sup>.

When a member seeks permission to lay a paper or document on the Table of the House, he is required to record thereon a certificate<sup>102</sup> in one of the following forms, as the case may be—

- (a) 'I certify from my personal knowledge that this is the original document which is authentic'.
- (b) 'I certify from my personal knowledge that this document is a true copy of the original which is authentic'.
- (c) 'I certify that the contents of this document are correct and based on authentic information'.

If the paper or document consists of more than one page, the member is required to put his signature with date on every page thereof<sup>103</sup>.

A paper sought to be laid by a member may be referred under directions of the Speaker to a parliamentary committee/sub-committee, if the matter referred to therein is under examination of that committee/sub-committee<sup>104</sup>.

Permission is not granted when the document is in the nature of private correspondence or when a member has cited it merely to reinforce his arguments to which the Minister has already given a reply<sup>105</sup>, or there is no demand by the House for the document being placed on the Table<sup>106</sup> or when the document does not corroborate the statement made by a member<sup>107</sup>. Likewise, permission is withheld where a document is a statement of figures prepared by a member the use of which he could have made in his own speech<sup>108</sup> or contains a member's views and the member cannot vouch for the authenticity of its contents<sup>109</sup> or where a document is not in original but is merely a copy, the authenticity of which cannot be verified<sup>110</sup> or where a document contains extracts from some documents which are not accessible and whose existence could not be verified, or conversely where a document is easily available for reference<sup>111</sup> or where a member seeks to lay a document independent of any relevant business before the House, or where a member has neither quoted from the document sought to be laid nor has he been called upon to lay it nor is there any question of privilege involved so as to require him to substantiate the allegations made by him with the documentary evidence<sup>112</sup>.

Circulation of Papers Laid

Immediately after a paper is laid on the Table by a Minister, a few copies thereof are placed in the Library for reference of the members and it is also released to the Press for general information.

Normally, papers required to be laid on the Table under a statutory obligation are not circulated in advance to members nor released to the Press, unless the Speaker permits the advance circulation<sup>113</sup> or the Statute under which the papers which are to

113. On 11 March 1959, the Speaker informed the House that he had agreed that Government companies would despatch copies of their annual reports to the members direct soon after their annual general meetings were held. He further observed that 10 copies of the reports would be sent to the Library and the reports would formally be laid on the Table as soon as possible, as required under the Companies Act, 1956—L.S. Deb., 11-3-1959, c. 5581.

On 14 August 1961, the Prime Minister laid on the Table a statement issued by the meeting of the Chief Ministers of States and Union Ministers held on 10, 11, and 12 August 1961. The statement had, however, been issued to the press earlier and published by newspapers on 13 August 1961.

Explaining reasons for this advance release of the statement to the Press, the Prime Minister stated in a letter dated 12 August 1961 to Speaker that it was difficult for him to delay the publication of that statement till 14 August 1961, the date on which it was to be laid on the Table as considerable interest had been taken in the meeting of Chief Ministers of States and Union Ministers and there was possibility of a distorted version of what the meeting decided coming out in the Press.

be laid so provides<sup>114</sup>. In the case of ad hoc reports and other papers which are not required to be laid on the Table under any particular statutory or other provision but are so laid by the Government suo motu the practice is that these are as a matter of courtesy first placed before the House if it is in session and then released to the Press<sup>115</sup>.

If the House is not in session, the paper is circulated in advance with the permission of the Speaker and laid on the Table in the next session<sup>116</sup>.

Copies of papers laid on the Table are circulated to members if the Minister so desires or if the Speaker so directs in response to a general demand in the House<sup>117</sup>. In certain cases, standing instructions in this regard have been issued to all Ministries in pursuance of the Speaker's observations in the House<sup>118</sup>. Papers on which discussion

There have been instances when papers were circulated to members before being laid on the Table. For example:

- (i) On the opening day (16 April 1962) of the 12th Session (3LS), the Prime Minister was to lay on the Table a statement on the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of June 1965, relating to the Gujarat-West Pakistan border and on the same day, to move a motion for taking into consideration the said statement. Entries to that effect were made in the revised List of Business for 16 August 1965, issued on 12 August 1965. As the statement was to be discussed the same day on which it was to be laid, copies thereof, along with the text of the Agreement, were circulated to members in advance on 15 August 1965.
- (ii) On the opening day (19 March 1971) of the 5th Session (5LS), the Minister of External Affairs was to make a statement regarding the Agreement on Bilateral Relations between India and Pakistan signed at Simla on 2 July 1972 and also to lay a copy of the Agreement. On the same day, a Government motion for taking into consideration that statement was to be taken up. Entries to that effect were made in the Revised List of Business for 31 July 1972. Copies of the Agreement were circulated to members in advance on 28 July 1972.
- (iii) On 16 December 1996 (3rd Session—11LS), the Minister of Commerce was to make a statement on 'India's stand on Singapore Declaration of World Trade Organisation'. On the same day, a short duration discussion on the subject was also to be held.

An entry to that effect was made in the List of Business for 16 December 1996 issued on 13 December 1996. Copies of the statement were circulated to members in advance in the House after the sitting commenced. The Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, on behalf of the Minister of Commerce, laid on the Table a copy of the statement before the short duration discussion was taken up at 16.00 hours on that day.

Also see, L.S. Deb., 19-3-1979, cc. 261-65; 20-3-1989, c. 273.

- 116. The Speaker agreed to the circulation of reports of the U.P.S.C. and the Vivian Bose Board of Enquiry (regarding conduct of certain officials concerned with investments of L.I.C. and Government's decisions thereon) to members during the inter-Session period and to their being laid on the Table in the next Session (August-September, 1959). Similarly, the report of the Tek Chand Committee on Prohibition, though released in May 1964, was laid on the Table on 2 June 1964.
- 117. For example, the Mahalanobis Committee Report and the Report of inquiry into events and circumstances leading to the arrangements entered into with the Fairfax Group Inc. (Thakkar-Natrajan Commission) were circulated to members under the direction of the Speaker. L.S. Deb., 29-4-1964, c. 13388; 9-12-1987, c. 333.

takes place in the House like Budget documents, UPSC Reports, Reports of the Commission for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, etc. are invariably circulated to members.

Ministries/Departments are required to furnish 900 and 500 copies in English and in Hindi versions, respectively, of the Ordinance as and when the same is promulgated by the President, to the Table Office for circulation to members twice, i.e.: (i) immediately after the copies of the ordinance are received, 450 and 250 copies in English and in Hindi versions, respectively, are circulated to members; and again (ii) the same number of copies are circulated to members one day before the commencement of the session.

Normally, papers laid on the Table by a member are merely placed in the Library for reference. In special cases, however, copies are made out by the Secretariat and supplied to members on request<sup>119</sup>.

Re-laying of Papers

Where the Constitution or a Statute provides that 'orders' issued thereunder should be laid on the Table for 'not less than so many days' or for 'at least so many days' or for 'so many clear days' such period is required to be completed in one session and if it is not so completed, the 'order' is required to be re-laid in the succeeding session or sessions until the said period is completed in one session<sup>120</sup>. In the computation of 'clear days', 'at least so many days' or 'not less than so many days', both the terminal days are excluded. In other cases, the rule is to exclude the first and to include the last day. Where the 'orders' are laid on the Table in the two Houses on different dates, the period for which they are required to be laid commences from the later date.

Where the prescribed period for laying of certain 'orders' is neither completed in the session in which they are originally laid nor in the succeeding session when they are re-laid, the 'orders' are required to be re-laid again in the next session so as to complete the prescribed period in that session<sup>121</sup>. Where the 'orders' are not re-laid on the Table in the succeeding session either because the concerned Ministry fails to send necessary intimation to the Secretariat for their inclusion in the List of Business or that the period prescribed in that behalf is not likely to be completed in that session, they are required to be so laid in the session immediately following.

Where a statute provides that the 'orders' framed thereunder should be laid on the Table for a certain period which may be comprised in one session or in two or more sessions the 'orders' after having been laid once in a session are deemed to have been laid in the succeeding sessions till the specified period is completed and thus it is not necessary for the 'orders' to be formally re-laid on the Table in the next session in order to complete the prescribed period<sup>122</sup>. But if an 'order' is required to be laid for a 'total period' of thirty days to comprise in one session or in two successive sessions, the period so stipulated has to be completed in the session in which it is so laid and the session immediately following. If the period is not so completed, such 'order' is required to be re-laid during the next session<sup>123</sup>.

Where the 'orders' are required to be re-laid on the Table, these are not so relaid in the last session of the Lok Sabha preceding its dissolution if it is known that the prescribed period will not be completed during the session. It is sufficient if the 'orders' are laid afresh in the first session of the new Lok Sabha<sup>124</sup>.

Where the 'orders' are laid on the Table for an incomplete period during a session of the Lok Sabha and thereafter the House is dissolved, they are required to be laid afresh (not re-laid) for the complete period during the first session of the new Lok Sabha<sup>125</sup>.

Notifications relating to a State under the President's Rule which should have been re-laid on the Table are not re-laid if the President in the meantime has revoked the Proclamation assuming to himself the functions of the State<sup>126</sup>.

After the prorogation of a session of Lok Sabha, the Secretariat examines the papers laid on the Table during the session to find out if the period specified, if any, in respect thereof under the respective parent Acts, has been completed. In cases where the specified period has not been so completed in accordance with the statutory provision, the concerned Ministries are asked to arrange for their re-laying in the next session. In the Bulletin, a footnote is given in regard to the paper or papers so re-laid.

The question of propriety on the part of Government issuing taxation notifications on the eve of the Budget Session has been, time and again, raised in Parliament. On 4 March 1986, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha referred the question of Government issuing notifications exempting various items from payment of customs duty just before the Budget Session, to the Committee on Public Accounts. The Committee inter alia stated that while there should be strict compliance with the principle that no proposal involving taxation should be given effect to by Government unless and until Parliament had discussed and approved it, a certain degree of flexibility must exist to enable Government to deal with an emergent situation in the light of public interest. It further stated that some notifications could have been held back until Parliament had an opportunity to consider them. The Committee recorded that post-notification approval by Parliament was no substitute for a prior debate and discussion of taxation proposals especially when they departed from the approved budget.

While referring to these observations of the PAC on 11 November 1986, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha observed that Government should take due note of this and endeavour to ensure that resort to issuing notifications having revenue implications should be minimal<sup>127</sup>.

Laying of Sensitive Notifications

Sensitive notifications are those notifications which make changes in export duties, major changes in procedures and changes in import and Central Excise Duties involving revenue of more than rupees fifty lakh per annum, except cases where an existing concession is being continued.

The following procedure is adopted in regard to laying of sensitive notifications on the Table:—

- (i) All sensitive notifications are required to be published in the Gazette Extraordinary.
- (ii) If the notification has been sent to the Press for issue before 1800 hours, it is to be laid on the Table on the same day just before the House adjourns for the day.
- (iii) If the notification is issued after 1800 hours, copies thereof are required to be sent by the Ministry to the Lok Sabha Secretariat by midnight the same day so that copies could be circulated to members. Such a notification is required to be laid on the Table of the House at the next sitting. However, in exceptional circumstances when the issue of notification cannot be anticipated, the Minister concerned is required to address a letter to the Speaker the same day enclosing a copy of the notification and informing him of his intention to lay the notification on the Table at the next sitting of the Lok Sabha.

Supplementary List of Business is issued for laying sensitive notifications so that the contents of the notifications are known to members in advance.

All notifications, including sensitive notifications issued during the inter-session period, are to be laid within seven days of the commencement of the next session<sup>128</sup>.

Correction in the Paper Laid on the Table

A paper or a document to be laid on the Table should be correct as well as complete. If, however, a mistake or an error in the paper laid subsequently intimated by the Minister concerned is more than an obvious printing or typographical error, it is considered to be a mistake of substantial nature and a formal corrigendum is required to be laid on the Table by the Minister as early as possible.

An omission to add an appendix to the main report was held to be an error of substantial nature and was required to be laid<sup>129</sup>. Similarly, a corrigendum relating to substantial points in the paper laid was required to be formally laid on the Table<sup>130</sup>.

When the mistake is considered to be of a minor or verbal nature, it is corrected in the authenticated copy of the paper and also in the copies thereof placed in the Library without requiring a formal corrigendum to be laid on the Table by the Minister.

It is open to a Minister to correct or alter the text of any paper before it is laid on the Table. All such corrections made in the paper should, however, be authenticated by the Minister or an authenticated copy of the paper as finally Laid on the Table should be supplied to the Secretariat before or as soon as the paper is laid.

All notifications issued under an Act which contain provisions for their being laid on the Table should be so laid. A notification which is proposed to be amended should not be withheld from the House merely on the ground that it is to be amended and will be laid on the Table in the amended form.

Withdrawal of Papers Laid on the Table

No formal procedure has so far been laid down for the withdrawal of a paper or document laid on the Table. When such a case arises, the Speaker will have to exercise his inherent powers and give his decision in the circumstances of each case.

Consequences of Laying Papers on the Table

When a paper is laid on the Table, it becomes public<sup>131</sup> and a part of the permanent record of the House. The paper is placed in the Library, and in the printed debates, the title of the paper and the Library index number is given to facilitate reference. It becomes privileged and accordingly no person is liable to any proceedings in any court in respect of the publication of such paper or document. Further, a paper or document laid is open to discussion in the House: a member can give notice of a motion seeking discussion thereon<sup>132</sup>.

The Speaker may authorize printing, publication, distribution or sale of any paper, document or report laid on the Table<sup>133</sup>. Generally, the papers laid on the Table are placed in the Library with an appropriate indication in the debates<sup>134</sup>. A paper is printed in the body of the debates only when it contains brief and important material which is not otherwise available in published form.

Where in regard to a document or paper, the Government feel the necessity of protection, which is accorded to a publication published under the authority of the House<sup>135</sup>, that document or paper is laid on the Table and a motion is moved in the House for having it published under the authority of the House. In the event of such a motion being moved, it is, however, open to the House to decide whether it should be published under its authority or not.

The Rural Banking Enquiry Committee, while submitting their report to the Government, entertained apprehensions that the recommendations contained therein, if published, might have far-reaching effect on the future of certain banks, creating difficulties for them apart from creating an embarrassing situation for the members of the Committee who did not enjoy any statutory immunity from the legal consequences that would follow from such publication. Accordingly, the Government proposed to have the report published under the authority of the House. The Minister of Finance, after laying a copy of the report, moved the necessary motion in the House which was adopted<sup>136</sup>. The report was, thereafter, published by the Government with the following superscription printed on the outer cover—

“Published under the authority of Parliament.”

Similarly, the Deputy Minister of Finance laid on the Table a copy of the Report of the Industrial Finance Corporation Enquiry Committee and moved a motion in the House for its publication under the authority of the House under clause (2) of article 105 of the Constitution. The motion was adopted<sup>137</sup>.

Custody of Papers

Parliamentary papers may be divided into those connected with the proceedings of the House and issued by the Secretariat and those presented from outside. The Lok Sabha is invested with the power of ordering all documents to be laid before it or presented to its Committees, which are necessary for its information. The custody of all records, documents and papers belonging to the House or any of its Committees or the Secretariat vests in the Secretary-General. No such record, document or paper can be taken out of the Parliament House without the permission of the Speaker<sup>138</sup>.

When a document is presented to the House or furnished to any of its Committees or the Secretariat, it forms part of the records of the House.

138. Rule 383.

When the Secretary, Ministry of Law, desired to have the report in original of the Select Committee on the Indian Finance Bill, 1948, together with the Bill as amended by the Committee, he was informed that a document presented to the House became part of the parliamentary papers and that such documents, under orders of the Speaker, remained in the custody of the Secretary and could be inspected in his room by appointment.

During the Fifth Session of the Second Lok Sabha, a member furnished to the Speaker certain documents in connection with his notice of a motion (under Rule 184) for raising discussion on the situation in Kerala. Subsequently, the member requested for return of these papers. Under orders of the Speaker, copies of certain papers, but not the originals, were given to the member as the original papers formed part of the records of the House.

In case any document connected with the proceedings of the House or a Committee thereof or otherwise in the custody of the Secretary-General is required to be produced in a court of law, it can be furnished only with the leave of the House<sup>139</sup>. When the House is not in session, the Speaker may, in an emergent case, permit the production of the relevant document in a court of law to prevent delay in the administration of justice, and inform the House accordingly of the fact when it reassembles or intimate to the members through the Bulletin<sup>140</sup>.

If a request for the production of a document is received at the time when the House is in session, the matter is referred by the Speaker to the Committee of Privileges, irrespective of the fact whether the document is connected with the proceedings of the House or any of its Committees, or is one which is in the custody of the Secretary-General. On a report from the Committee, a motion is moved in the House by the Chairman or a member of the Committee to the effect that the House agrees with the report. Thereafter, the pleasure of the House is ascertained and further action is taken in accordance with the decision of the House<sup>141</sup>, or the House may take a decision direct, without reference to the Committee of Privileges<sup>142</sup>.

Under section 78(2) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, the proceedings of the House can be proved by the production of the authorized parliamentary publications. As such, the Lok Sabha is troubled only when unpublished documents of its proceedings are required in evidence in a court of law. In most of the other cases only the certified copies of the documents are generally called for at any rate in the

Where information concerning a member from the records in the custody of the Secretariat is called for by the Executive authorities, e.g., the Police, the Income-tax Commissioner etc., the direct request is not complied with.

When such information is required by the Executive authorities in connection with investigation of a criminal case against a person where a member is the injured party, the papers containing that information may be furnished to them after the approval of the House is taken in accordance with the prescribed procedure.

Where, the document required to be produced in a court of law relates to an administrative matter and not connected with the proceedings of the House, e.g., the service record of an officer of the Lok Sabha Secretariat or entry in the Casual Entry Permit Register of Parliament House, the Speaker had given permission for production of relevant document in a court of law or supplying of a certified copy thereof without bringing the matter before the House.

In December 2004, during the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, the Superintendent of Police, Central Bureau of Investigation requested that the original documents containing “admitted signatures” of a former member be made available to them for investigation of a criminal case. The Speaker, on 19 July 2005, referred the matter to the Committee of Privileges. The Committee in their first report recommended that the originals of nomination form and declaration form containing ‘admitted signatures’ of the former member available with the Lok Sabha Secretariat, may, with the leave of the House, be made available to the Superintendent of Police, Central Bureau of Investigation. The Committee also recommended that Deputy Superintendent of Police, Central Bureau of Investigation concerned with the investigation of the case may personally receive those documents from the Lok Sabha Secretariat and return the same to the Lok Sabha Secretariat immediately after the necessary comparison of signatures is carried out. The Report was laid on the Table on 25 August 2005 and adopted by the House on 29 August 2005.

In yet another case of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, the Delhi Police requested for the originals of certain documents pertaining to five members of Lok Sabha in connection with the investigation of a criminal case. The Speaker, on 1 January 2008 referred the matter to the Committee of Privileges. The Committee in their Tenth Report recommended that concerned forensic and handwriting experts, as engaged by the Delhi Police, may be permitted to take photographs of the original documents (letters, application forms, permission, etc.) submitted by the concerned five members to the Lok Sabha Secretariat in respect of their foreign visits since 2000, for the purpose of investigation of FIR, filed against them under various sections of IPC and Indian Passport Act. The Committee also recommended that the photographs may be taken within the precincts of Lok Sabha Secretariat, in the presence of the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Crime and Railways, Delhi or any other designated police officers and concerned officers of Lok Sabha Secretariat. The Report was laid on the Table on 27 February 2008 and adopted by the House on 28 February 2008.

During the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, the Committee of Privileges in their Twelfth Report<sup>144</sup> decided to give a fresh look at the procedure being followed for dealing with the request from courts of law and investigating agencies for documents relating to proceedings of the House, its Committees or which are in the custody of Secretary-General, Lok Sabha for production in courts of law and for investigation purposes and recommended accordingly. The Committee also recommended that (i) the question whether a document relates to the proceedings of the House or any Committee of the House shall be decided by the Speaker and the Speaker's decision shall be final, (ii) documents relating to the proceedings of the House or any Committee of the House which are public documents should be taken judicial notice of and request for certified copies thereof may not be ordinarily made unless there are sufficient reasons for making such requests; and (iii) procedure after the Report of the Committee of Privileges has been presented and laid on the Table of the House.

During Fifteenth Lok Sabha, Delhi Police sought permission of Speaker, Lok Sabha for obtaining original documents pertaining to the report of the 'Committee to Inquire into the Complaint made by Some Members regarding Alleged Offer of Money to them in connection with Voting on the Motion of Confidence' for the purpose of filing of charge-sheet in the Court. The Speaker, in terms of the recommendations made by the Committee of Privileges, Fourteenth Lok Sabha in their Tenth and Twelfth Reports, permitted Delhi Police to have the photographs of the requisite documents in connection with the filing of the charge-sheet, without parting with the original documents.

Committee on Papers Laid on the Table

During a session, a large number of papers are laid on the Table of the House every day. In view of the volume and the variety of these papers, the House, by itself, is not in a position to give a closer scrutiny to all these papers and to become aware of their importance and significance. As there is no prior circulation of these papers, the members are also not in a position to raise objections, if any, as and when these are laid. Only in those cases where there was inordinate delay in laying the papers some objections were raised now and then on the floor of the House and the Minister concerned was asked to explain the delay. Anticipating such objections, it became the practice on the part of the concerned Minister to annex an explanatory note or memorandum to those papers where there was a delay. Later on, it was found that even the explanatory memorandum given by the Minister for delay was inadequate and often unsatisfactory. Sometimes papers laid on the Table by a Minister were objected to on the ground of unconstitutionality or impropriety also. The House, in fact, as a whole, did not have the time to go into all these matters. These considerations necessitated the constitution of the Committee on Papers Laid on the Table which came into existence on 1 June 1975. The functions of the Committee are to examine all papers laid on the Table of the House by the Minister and to report to the House: (a) whether there has been compliance with the provisions of the Constitution, Act, rule or regulation under which the paper has been laid; (b) whether there has been any unreasonable delay in laying the paper; (c) whether in case of delay, a statement explaining reasons for delay has been laid on the Table of the House and whether those reasons are satisfactory; (d) whether both the Hindi and English versions have been laid on the Table; and (e) whether a statement explaining the reasons for not laying the Hindi version has been given and whether such reasons are satisfactory.<sup>145</sup>

CHAPTER XXXVI

Languages used in the Lok Sabha

Languages used in the House

Business in the House is required to be transacted either in Hindi or in English. The Speaker may, however, permit any member who cannot adequately express himself in either of these two languages to address the House in his mother-tongue<sup>1</sup>.

In 1862, a specific provision was made in the Legislative Council to the effect that any member might speak at the request and on behalf of another member who was unable to express himself in English. In 1921, it was provided that the business of the Central Legislative Assembly was to be transacted in English, but the Speaker was authorized to permit any member unacquainted with English to address the Assembly in an Indian language.

When speeches were delivered in a language other than English, only translations of the speeches in English were printed in the debates; in some cases, where the Indian language used was other than Hindustani, only an indication was given in the debates that the member spoke in a particular language other than English and that the English version of his speech would be printed in a later issue of the debates in an appendix<sup>2</sup>.

In the case of speeches in Hindustani, however, an exception was made. English translations of such speeches were printed in the debates, while the texts in Hindustani were printed in an appendix to the debates<sup>3</sup>. In some cases, only an indication was given in the debates that the member spoke in Hindustani and that the text of his speech in Hindustani followed by its English translation would be printed in a later issue of the debates in an appendix<sup>4</sup>.

Although under the Speaker's Directions a member who addresses the House in any of the scheduled languages<sup>5</sup> other than Hindi or English is required<sup>6</sup> to furnish in advance the Hindi or English translation of his speech, the general practice followed in this regard is that even if he does not furnish the Hindi or English translation but speaks in a regional language after informing the Secretariat in advance, his speech is simultaneously interpreted in Hindi and English and the translation thereof in English and Hindi prepared by the Secretariat are printed in the debates, with a foot-note indicating the language in which the speech was originally delivered in the House<sup>7</sup>. In case there is no arrangement for the simultaneous interpretation from the language in which the member speaks and he also does not furnish the translation, the fact that the member spoke in a language other than Hindi or English is mentioned in the printed debates with the remark that the member did not furnish a translation of his speech in Hindi or English<sup>8</sup>. If the arrangement exists for simultaneous interpretation from the language in which the member speaks, then the translated version of the speech is incorporated in the proceedings.

The question of speeches in regional languages being made by members who could not adequately express themselves in English or Hindi was considered on 3 April 1967 by the Speaker at a meeting with the leaders of various Groups in the House. It was decided that members could speak in any of the scheduled languages without furnishing in advance any translation of their speeches in Hindi or in English<sup>9</sup>.

It was also decided that for the time being till arrangements were made for simultaneous interpretation in scheduled languages this facility was not to be availed of during the Question Hour because the time fixed for it was limited and quick answers to supplementary questions were required in order to elicit maximum information from the Government.

Speeches delivered in Urdu are normally printed in the Devanagari script except in the case of those members who specifically request that their speeches may be printed in the Persian script; in such cases, the speeches are printed in the Devanagari script followed by their reproduction in Persian script within brackets<sup>10</sup>.

In certain parliamentary papers printed in English, the designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries/Departments are indicated in English followed by the Hindi version in Devanagari script.

Till April 1971, in parliamentary papers printed in English, designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries/Departments were indicated in

Prior to 30 March 1967, any member who addressed the House in a language other than Hindi or English had to furnish to the Secretariat in advance a translation of his speech in Hindi or English and such translation only, duly authenticated by the member, was printed in the debates, with a foot-note indicating the language in which the speech had been originally delivered—*H.P. Prior to October 1958, speeches delivered in Hindustani were transcribed in the Devanagari script in the case of those members who had intimated in writing that the transcripts of their speeches should be in the Persian script; in such cases, the speeches were printed in the debates in the Persian script, followed immediately by their English translations—H.P. Deb. (II), 22-9-1954, cc. 2794-2800; L.S. Deb. (II), 16-5-1957, cc. 615-29.

English. In May 1971, this practice underwent a change when such designations and nomenclatures began to be indicated in Hindi in Roman alphabet. Thereafter, the style adopted in this regard was to indicate the designations and nomenclatures in English, followed by the Hindi version in Roman alphabets within brackets. Ultimately it was decided to indicate in the Lists of Questions the designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries/Departments in English followed by the Hindi version in Devanagari script. In other papers, however, designations and nomenclatures were to be indicated in English only<sup>11</sup>.

Languages used in Parliamentary Committees

Just as in the House, the business of the Parliamentary Committees is also transacted either in Hindi or in English. If any member addresses a Parliamentary Committee in a language other than Hindi or English, a translation of his speech in Hindi or English is prepared to be kept as record and utilized, if necessary, in the preparation of the report. The minutes and reports of the Parliamentary Committees are invariably prepared and presented to the House both in Hindi and in English.

Simultaneous Interpretation of Proceedings

In the Lok Sabha, members generally deliver their speeches either in Hindi or in English. But, as stated earlier, since the First Session of the Fourth Lok Sabha, members have also been allowed to address the House in any of the scheduled languages. Consequently, some arrangements were considered for the simultaneous interpretation of their speeches into Hindi and English<sup>12</sup>.

Even in the Third Lok Sabha, difficulty was being experienced by those members who were not conversant with both Hindi and English in following the proceedings

11. In May 1971, the following two documents received from the Cabinet Secretariat were circulated to members:

- (i) List of members of Council of Ministers as on 2 May 1971, showing the designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries only in Hindi in Roman alphabet; and
- (ii) Notification dated 3 May 1971, containing Government of India (Allocation of Business) 88th Amendment Rules, 1971 [These rules inter alia gave nomenclatures of Ministries and Departments only in Hindi in Roman script].

On objections being raised in the House, a discussion was held among the Speaker, the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs and members of the Business Advisory Committee. On 1 June 1971, the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs made a statement in the House that designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries, etc. may be indicated in English, followed by the Hindi equivalent in Devanagari script. On being enquired by a member, the Speaker and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs confirmed that this would be applicable to parliamentary business only. Designations of Ministers and nomenclatures of Ministries are being shown in the Lists of Questions accordingly with effect from 2 June 1971. In other papers and correspondence, however, designations and nomenclatures in English only are mentioned.—L.S. Deb., 1-6-1971, cc. 161-62.

12. At a meeting held with the leaders of the various Groups in the Lok Sabha on 3 April 1967, the Speaker apprised them of the technical difficulties involved in simultaneous translation facilities in the scheduled languages. It was decided that an attempt would be made to translate into Hindi and English the speeches delivered on the floor of the House in any of the scheduled languages.

of the House. There was, therefore, a growing feeling among members that some suitable arrangements should be made for simultaneous interpretation of the proceedings of the House from English to Hindi and vice versa so as to enable them to follow the proceedings properly. To meet this demand, a system of simultaneous interpretation of the proceedings was introduced in the House on 7 September 1964, with the commencement of the Ninth Session of the Third Lok Sabha<sup>13</sup>.

Simultaneous interpretation facility has since been extended to fourteen scheduled languages, namely, Assamese, Bengali, Kannada, Malayalam, Maithili, Manipuri, Marathi, Nepali, Odia, Punjabi, Sanskrit, Tamil, Telugu and Urdu. A member intending to make a speech in any of these languages is required to give at least half-an-hour's notice to the Officer at the Table so that the Interpreter can be in position when the member concerned makes his speech. His speech is interpreted into English and Hindi simultaneously. The speech is later translated by the Interpreter concerned in English or Hindi for incorporation in the proceedings of the day or in the supplement on the following day. This facility is also available during the Question Hour and can be availed of not only by members in whose name the question appears in the list of Starred Questions but also by any other member. A member is required to give advance notice in this regard, at least half-an-hour before the commencement of the Question Hour. The Ministers may also give reply in the language in which they intend to reply either with a notice submitted in advance or when allowed by the Chair<sup>14</sup>.

Simultaneous interpretation equipments have been installed in the Lok Sabha Chamber, Central Hall, Room Nos. 53, 62 and 63 in Parliament House, the Committee Rooms in Parliament House Annexe, Committee Room F (G074, K Block) and the Main Lecture Hall, BPST in the Parliament Library Building. If the floor language is Hindi, its interpretation in English can be heard simultaneously on the interpretation system and vice versa; if the floor language is any of the scheduled languages mentioned above, interpretation can be heard in Hindi as well as in English. Each seat is provided with a headphone and language-selector switch. Turning the language-selector knob, a member can listen to the proceedings in the language of his choice. The language-selector switch panel is also fitted with another knob to control the volume.

13. On 2 December 1963, the Speaker, after discussing the matter with the Leader of the House and leaders of various Groups, announced in the House that a system of simultaneous interpretation of speeches would soon be introduced. Necessary equipments were installed during the recess following the Eighth Session of the Third Lok Sabha and the requisite interpretation staff were also trained simultaneously.

14. The Chair allowed a member raise a supplementary question in Kannada, though the starred question was not in his name for which the Minister also replied in the same language— L.S. Deb., 29-7-2005, c.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Preparation of Official Reports of Proceedings of the House, Parliamentary Committees and Parliamentary Events

The Secretary-General causes to be prepared a full report of the proceedings of the House at each of its sittings and, as soon as practicable, gets it published in such form and manner as the Speaker may, from time to time, direct<sup>1</sup>.

Apart from causing the debates to be printed verbatim and made available about a month or two after the day's sitting, the Secretariat brings out every morning multigraphed copies of the complete proceedings of the House pertaining to the previous day for immediate reference requirements<sup>2</sup>. On a day on which the Lok Sabha sits beyond the usual hours of sitting, a supplement to the multigraphed debates covering the proceedings beyond the usual closing hour is issued the next day<sup>3</sup>. Besides, the data of proceedings of the entire day's sitting of the House is released on the official website at <http://loksabha.nic.in> or <http://parliamentofindia.nic.in> under the icon 'Debates' for the purpose of immediate general information, in the public interest, with the superscription "Uncorrected—Not for publication".

Reporting of Proceedings in the House

A verbatim record of everything said in the House is taken by the parliamentary reporters, except certain words, phrases and expressions, if any, ordered by the Speaker to be expunged from the proceedings of the House or ordered by the Speaker not to be recorded when members speak without his permission.

The mode of parliamentary reporting has undergone various changes before reaching its present verbatim form.

The proceedings relating to the 'law business' of the Council of the Governor-General of India established under the Regulating Act of 1773 and

2. The procedure of stencilling and cyclostyling of the debates was introduced in 1949. With the installation of computers in the Reporters Branch in 1993, multigraphed copies of proceedings are now issued in place of cyclostyled ones. The multigraphed debates are brought out in two parts: Part I containing particulars about members sworn in, welcome to dignitaries or delegations from abroad, obituary references and Questions and Answers, and Part II containing the rest of the proceedings. Each page of the multigraphed copy of the debates bears the superscription 'Uncorrected/Not for Publication', along with the date. As such, the multigraphed debates are only for the purpose of immediate reference.

as reconstituted under the Act of 1784 (Pitt's India Act) were recorded in the form of minutes only<sup>4</sup>. The minutes concerning legislative business are, however, traceable only from 1835<sup>5</sup>.

In 1854, strangers were admitted to the meetings of the Council of Governor-General of India for the first time, thus throwing open the proceedings to outsiders. An official reporter was appointed and the proceedings were prepared by him fairly in extenso, although in 'indirect style', giving particulars of business transacted and also salient points of speeches made by members. These were published by the authority of the Council and made available to the public<sup>6</sup>.

Under the Indian Councils Act of 1861, the printing and publishing of the proceedings in extenso was discontinued; instead, only an abstract of the proceedings was published and made available to the public. Gradually, portions of speeches began to appear in the 'direct style'<sup>7</sup> and the abstract also evolved into a fuller report of the proceedings.

In the rules of procedure framed and adopted in February 1897, a mention was made for the first time of a 'full report of the proceedings' and verbatim reports began to be issued thereafter. These were also published in the Gazette in accordance with a decision taken pursuant to a demand made by some non-official members of the Council and certain Press representatives, with the approval of the Governor-General<sup>8</sup>.

With the coming into existence of the bicameral Legislature in 1921, the verbatim proceedings of the Council of States and the Legislative Assembly began to be issued separately in a book form.

Reporters record the proceedings in relays in turns of five minutes each. This cycle continues from the commencement of the House to the adjournment of the sitting for the day. Since the floor language is normally either English or Hindi, an English and a Hindi reporter each are always on duty in the House for taking down the proceedings. They work in close coordination to ensure complete and accurate reproduction of the proceedings.

Reporting of proceedings that immediately follow the Question Hour—when notices of adjournment motions, privilege issues and urgent matters of national and international importance are referred to by the members—involves utmost caution and, therefore, the reporters, under the guidance of the concerned Director carefully cross-check these portions with the digitally recorded version before transcribing the proceedings.

8. The publication of the proceedings in the Gazette was, however, discontinued in July 1920.

A complete set of written answers to the day's Starred Questions is supplied to the reporters before the commencement of the Question Hour. When the Minister concerned rises and reads out the written answer, the reporter checks it with his copy in order to note down any last-minute change that might have been made by the Minister on the floor of the House.

Reporting of the proceedings of the Question Hour has many special features. Unlike the debates, which contain mostly speeches with a theme, the supplementary questions asked relate to a wide variety of subjects, often unconnected with one another. Supplementary questions are asked and answered in quick succession from different sides of the House. Reporters have not only to correctly identify the members asking questions but also record every word of what is said, including the often rapidly-quoted data, names, unfamiliar technical words, etc. While the supplementary questions are being asked, the Minister of State may answer a supplementary, or if the question is important, the Minister-in-charge of the Department, or even the Prime Minister, may intervene and answer that particular supplementary. Reporters have, therefore, to exercise special care to note down the identity of the Ministers giving answers to supplementary questions.

Reporters check quotations, figures or other matters of technical detail with the member concerned. When in doubt, the Reporters check their copy with the digitally recorded proceedings. But they do not add or delete any part of the speech already made on the floor of the House.

While preparing the transcripts of the proceedings, the reporters have to be mindful of the grammar, sense and form of presentation. The Director (Reporting), with the assistance of Additional Directors, carefully scrutinizes the transcripts, ensures their continuity, verifies the texts as well as the disposal procedure of motions, clauses, amendments, etc., carries out necessary editing and corrections and makes sure that every segment of the proceedings is in conformity with the prescribed forms and procedures. This elaborate exercise is aimed at making the Official Report absolutely flawless.

After all the transcripts have been examined and finally approved, they are merged and page-numbered to form an unabridged, continuous and factual chronicle of the proceedings of the day's sitting. A master copy of this compilation together with its contents pages is then dispatched to the Distribution Branch for multigraphing and distribution.

The entire proceedings of the House are also recorded digitally which helps the reporters to ensure complete accuracy in transcription. Sometimes it so happens that several members start speaking simultaneously making it difficult for reporters to take down all that is spoken. On such occasions, digital-recordings prove to be quite useful, as reporters can ascertain from these versions what was inaudible or unintelligible when actual proceedings took place<sup>9</sup>.

9. LS. Deb., 30-7-1973, cc. 217, 242-52.

The Reporters' copy is treated as the authentic record of the proceedings. If a dispute arises as to the correctness of the proceedings as recorded by the reporters, these may be cross-checked with the digitally-recorded version and correct position subsequently stated in the House for record.

Confirmation by Members

A multigraphed copy of every speech delivered, supplementary question asked or interruption made by a member on the floor of the House, on a particular day is supplied to him at his residence early next morning for verification. The member is required to return the same with corrections, if any, by 1500 hours on the second working day. If it is not returned within the specified time period, the transcript prepared by the Reporters is considered as final and authentic<sup>10</sup>.

Since the Official Report has to be a correct reproduction of the speeches actually delivered in the House, members are not permitted to improve the literary form of their speeches by additions or deletions. A paragraph is also issued, from time to time, in the Bulletin in this regard, informing the members that the speeches are sent to them only for confirmation and for the purpose of correcting inaccuracies, if any, and not for improving the literary form or altering the substance of the speeches. While grammatical corrections or correction of a word here and there or change of a clause from one place to another are permitted, any material correction which would mean a deviation from the substance of what the member actually spoke in the House is not permitted<sup>11</sup>.

A multigraphed copy of the entire proceedings of the day is kept in the Library by the next morning for reference purposes. Copies of the proceedings are also supplied to the Ministries for reference.

Proceedings of Secret Sitzings

When a sitting of the House is held in camera, i.e. a secret sitting, the Speaker may cause a report of the proceedings to be issued in such manner as he thinks fit, but no other person is permitted to keep a note or record of any proceedings or decision of a secret sitting, whether in part or in full, or issue any report of, or purport to describe, such proceedings<sup>12</sup>.

When it is considered that the necessity for maintaining secrecy in regard to the proceedings of a secret sitting has ceased to exist, a motion with the consent of the Speaker can be moved by the Leader of the House or any member authorised by him that the proceedings of the House during such sitting be no longer treated as secret. On adoption of the motion by the House, the normal rule regarding publication of the proceedings applies<sup>13</sup>.

Reporting of Proceedings of Parliamentary Committees

The proceedings of the Parliamentary Committees are recorded verbatim when witnesses are summoned to give evidence before it or when some important matters are to be noted or when individual views expressed by members have to be kept on record for reference<sup>14</sup>.

Relevant portions of the verbatim proceedings of the sitting of a committee at which evidence has been taken are forwarded by the concerned Committee Branch to the witnesses and the members concerned for verification with a request to return the same by a date fixed by the Secretariat. If corrected copies of the proceedings are not received back by the specified date, the reporters' copy is treated as authentic<sup>15</sup>.

The verbatim proceedings, if taken, are treated as confidential and are not made available to anyone without the orders of the Speaker<sup>16</sup>.

On occasions other than those when verbatim proceedings are recorded, a record of the decisions of the committee is kept in the form of minutes<sup>17</sup>.

Reporting of Proceedings of Conferences, Seminars, Workshops, Lectures, etc.

The proceedings of international as well as national Conferences, Conferences of Presiding Officers and Chairpersons of Parliamentary Committees, Seminars, Symposia, Workshops, Talks delivered under the Lecture Series or otherwise, to the members of Parliament by distinguished persons, foreign dignitaries, etc. arranged under the aegis of the Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training and the Indian Parliamentary Group are recorded verbatim. Apart from these, the meetings held under the auspices of various parliamentary forums on Water Conservation; Children; Youth; Population & Public Health; Global Warming & Climate Change; Disaster Management; Artisans and Craftspeople; and Millennium Development Goals and Parliamentary Friendship Groups are also recorded verbatim by the Reporters.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Expunction of Words from Proceedings of the House or its Committees

The Speaker is vested with the power to order expunction of words, which, in his opinion, are defamatory or indecent or unparliamentary or undignified, from the proceedings of the House<sup>1</sup>. Similarly, he may order expunction of words which are defamatory or incriminatory or allegatory against a high dignitary or authority or organisation, without complying with the rules and rulings in this behalf<sup>2</sup>.

In the Central Legislative Assembly, there was no specific rule relating to expunction. Normally, when unparliamentary or otherwise objectionable words or expressions were used, the Speaker intervened either on his own initiative or on objection raised by a member or a Minister, and called upon the offending member to make amends. This took one of the three forms: withdrawal of words or expressions<sup>3</sup>; or tendering of apology and giving an assurance<sup>4</sup> not to use the words again; or in a relatively few cases, the substitution<sup>5</sup> of new words for the objectionable words or expressions. There were also some cases in which the Speaker merely deprecated<sup>6</sup> the use of the objectionable words or expressions. The objectionable words and their subsequent withdrawal or other mode of disposal were, however, allowed to remain on record.

In exceptional cases where the above remedies were considered to be inadequate, expunction of the objectionable words or expressions was ordered<sup>7</sup>. In such cases the general practice was to obtain the formal consent of the House on a motion emanating from the Speaker or a member or a Minister<sup>8</sup>.

In practice, the scope of the rule governing expunction of words has been enlarged and in some cases, the Speaker has ordered, in his discretion, the expunction of words which he considered prejudicial<sup>9</sup> to the national interest or to the maintenance of friendly<sup>10</sup> relations with a foreign State; derogatory<sup>11</sup> to high dignitaries, including heads of friendly foreign States; likely to offend<sup>12</sup> national sentiments or affect the religious susceptibilities of a section of the community; likely to discredit<sup>13</sup> the Army; and not in good taste<sup>14</sup> or otherwise objectionable or likely to bring the House into ridicule or lower the dignity<sup>15</sup> of the Chair, the House or the members.

When a member, on being asked to withdraw objectionable remarks, held to be not relevant to the debate, refuses to do so, the Chair may order expunction thereof<sup>16</sup>. On being asked by the Chair not to quote from a document of which advance notice has not been given and which is not relevant to the debate, if the member still continues to quote therefrom, the Chair may order expunction of the quotations<sup>17</sup>. Where a member without being called upon to speak, continues speaking despite the Chair asking him to desist from it, the Chair may order expunction of the speech from the proceedings<sup>18</sup>. Likewise, if a member continues to interrupt the speech of another member or a Minister, the Speaker may direct that interruptions be not recorded<sup>19</sup>.

In one instance, the speech of a member was expunged because he had already spoken on the same motion in an earlier session<sup>20</sup>.

An expunction from the proceedings is ordered in one of the following circumstances:

The Speaker may himself hold certain words as defamatory or indecent or unparliamentary or undignified when such words are uttered in the House and order their expunction<sup>21</sup>.

A member or a Minister may invite the Speaker's attention at the time when the defamatory or indecent or unparliamentary or undignified words are uttered, or subsequently, and if the Speaker agrees, he may order their expunction.

On the attention of the Speaker being drawn to objectionable words by an officer of the Secretariat or otherwise, the Speaker may order the expunction of such words.

A motion may be moved for expunction<sup>22</sup>.

Certain words from a member's speech may be expunged where the member himself requests for such expunction. Otherwise, it has been held that when portions of a member's speech are ordered to be expunged, the member should be informed about the expunction.<sup>23</sup>

A second speech made by a member during a debate when he had no right of reply has also been expunged<sup>24</sup>.

In certain cases, suitable words may be substituted for the expunged words in order to make the meaning intended by the member clearer or to mitigate the effect of words taken exception to<sup>25</sup>.

Words or expressions used during the course of a speech in the House, though not unparliamentary, may still be objected to sometimes by other member(s) on grounds of propriety. In such cases, if the member who has used such words or expressions in his speech agrees to their deletion, the deletion is effected under orders of the Speaker. This is deemed to be an ordinary correction made by the member himself and no explanatory footnote is required to be inserted in the proceedings in such cases.

Where an observation by a Minister is objected to by a member in the House or by any person affected by it, the Speaker may allow the Minister subsequently to withdraw his remarks or to explain the matter to the House. In such cases, no alterations or deletions are made in the proceedings for the day<sup>26</sup>.

A member, while speaking, is forbidden under the rules to refer to any matter of fact on which a judicial decision is pending<sup>27</sup>. On a reference being made by a member to such a matter, the Speaker may observe that the member should not have referred to a matter which was sub judice, but the Speaker does not order expunction of such words. However, if the member persists in referring to such a matter, the Speaker may ask him to discontinue his speech forthwith<sup>28</sup>.

Aspersive remarks used by members against each other are expunged<sup>29</sup>.

An expression may be expunged even when the member who used it withdraws it<sup>30</sup>.

There were occasions when even after derogatory remarks made by a member were expunged, he was asked to apologise and on his failure to do so, he was named by the Chair<sup>31</sup>.

Normally, expunctions are not ordered if the matter is not brought to the Chair's notice on the same day on which the words taken objection to are spoken<sup>32</sup>. In rare cases, the Speaker has ordered expunction on a subsequent day either suo motu or on representation by a member<sup>33</sup> or by the person affected,<sup>34</sup> especially a high dignitary under the Constitution (in this case, any time after the debate, but before the debates were printed). Under the Rules, therefore, the Speaker has the power to expunge portions from Debates even after lapse of time<sup>35</sup>.

Ordinarily, there is no review regarding words already expunged and the requests from members for restoration of expunged words or to raise the question of expunction in the House have generally been turned down<sup>36</sup>. There have been rare cases where the Speaker on re-consideration has agreed to restore some words expunged from the proceedings of a previous day<sup>37</sup>.

The decision of the person presiding regarding expunction of any words is final and no appeal lies to the Speaker. The Speaker has ruled that he has no authority to alter or revise or review a decision once given by the Chair, whether it was Deputy Speaker or a member on the Panel of Chairpersons<sup>38</sup>. But where a decision on the question or expunction of any objectionable words, etc. is reserved by the person presiding in the Chair at the time for a decision by the Speaker, the Speaker, after going through the proceedings, may pass orders for expunction, if necessary<sup>39</sup>.

When a number of members speak simultaneously or when a member speaks without being called upon to speak or despite being asked to resume his seat continues to speak or speaks without the permission of the Chair, the Chair may, by virtue of his inherent powers, declare that the speech will not form part of the record and order its expunction from the proceedings<sup>40</sup>.

Indication in Proceedings Regarding Expunctions

The words and portions expunged on the orders of the Chair are indicated by asterisks(*) and a foot-note "Expunged as ordered by the Chair" is inserted in the proceedings. If the expunction is ordered on a subsequent day, such expunged portion as well as the portion, if any, expunged earlier are indicated by asterisks and a foot-note in the printed debates. Similarly, if the Chair directs that nothing would go on record in respect of a member's speech or interruption, a foot-note "Not recorded" is inserted in the proceedings<sup>41</sup>.

41. A publication, viz. "Unparliamentary Expression", containing the expunctions in the form of words and expressions declared unparliamentary in Lok Sabha, Rajya Sabha and State legislatures in India and in some of Commonwealth Parliaments is brought out annually by the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Intimation to the Press Regarding Expunctions

The Press is expected to take note of the orders of expunction or non-recording passed in the House. By way of abundant caution, intimation of the expunction is also given to the Press by the Secretariat. Non-receipt of such intimation by a Press correspondent does not, however, protect him from the consequences that might ensue as a result of the publication of the expunged or non-recorded words. Expunctions ordered by the Speaker outside the House, if they happen on the same day, are communicated to important news agencies as expeditiously as possible and they are requested to ensure that the expunged matter is not published.

Effect of Expunctions when Proceedings are Telecast Live

When certain words or expressions have been ordered to be expunged or not to be recorded, the Media is expected to take note of the orders of expunction or non-recording and to ensure that such portions are not telecast in the 'recorded version' by the electronic Media or reported in the Press.

In the original video tapes also, which are with the Lok Sabha TV Channel, expunged/not-recorded portions are erased, consistent with the printed version.

Effect in Law Regarding Expunction

The effect in law of an order of the Speaker expunging words, remarks or a portion of the proceedings is as if those words/remarks or that portion of the proceedings had never been spoken. Publication of the expunged words or expressions would amount to a breach of privilege<sup>42</sup>.

Expunctions in Video Recorded version of Proceedings of the House

In the video recorded version also, expunged portions are erased, although a day later, consistent with the printed version. This is being done to ensure that no expunged portion is dubbed and issued to any member who makes a request for the video version of his speech<sup>43</sup>. However, the record of the expunged portions is being maintained in the Audio Visual Unit of the Secretariat.

Expunctions from Proceedings of Parliamentary Committees

If the Chairman of a Parliamentary Committee or a sub-Committee is of the opinion that words, phrases or expressions in the proceedings of the Committee or sub-Committee, as the case may be, contain information which will not be in the public interest to publish or that these contain observations of a purely personal character, he may order such words, phrases or expressions to be expunged from the proceedings. An indication to this effect is given in the form of a foot-note in the relevant page in the copy of the proceedings.

CHAPTER XXXIX

Printing and Publication of Parliamentary Papers

All papers connected with the Lok Sabha and the Secretariat thereof are printed and published under the authority of the House<sup>1</sup>. Though the House may not spell out the orders in each case, the authority of the House is presumed to be there in all cases. In exceptional cases, orders of the Speaker are taken before a paper or document is printed.

The printing of Lok Sabha papers are mainly carried out under the orders of the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha, in the Government of India Press, Minto Road, New Delhi, with assistance, when required, from its other branches in Delhi or elsewhere. However, all jobs of secret nature, are carried out only by the Secret Section of the Government of India Press, Ring Road, New Delhi. Some publications are printed by the Secretariat under arrangements with private printers or publishers. Both the Government and private printing presses which have been assigned the task of printing of parliamentary papers, act as per instructions issued by the Secretariat.

In-house arrangements have also been made for printing/multigraphing of small jobs of urgent parliamentary nature. Broad classification of papers which are at present cyclostyled<sup>2</sup>/resographed on digital printers/photocopiers or are printed in-house are as follows:—

Papers which are resographed/photocopied in Distribution Branch for circulation to members, Ministers and various Branches of the Secretariat: Uncorrected debates for overnight circulation to members and Ministers; work connected with Parliamentary Committees such as notices, memoranda, draft reports, etc.; Background Notes, Information Bulletins, Information Digests, SG's DO Letters to the Secretaries of State Legislatures in India as issued on conclusion of each session of Lok Sabha; etc., prepared by LARRDI Service and miscellaneous Circulars/Orders relating to the Secretariat.

Papers which are printed and bound in-house in the Rota Print/Bindery Section Branch of the Secretariat: All standardized Forms, Registers, letter-heads; D.O. Stationery; Visiting cards, Complimentary cards, Invitation cards, Menu cards, File Covers, etc.; reports of the various Parliamentary Committees, if urgently required; speeches of dignitaries to be delivered in connection with parliamentary functions; programmes, work connected with incoming/outgoing parliamentary delegations; and Training Programmes organized by the Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training. In addition, execution of jobs of urgent and confidential nature are undertaken in-house.

1. Rule 382.

2. With the advent of new printing technologies, the cyclostyling machines have been replaced by the resograph/photocopying machines.

As per needs, papers, registers, books, etc. are bound in ordinary binding, full rexine/cloth binding and half cloth binding.

Papers which are printed by Government Press/Private Printers: Debates and Indexes thereto; Bills and Select or Joint Committee Reports on Bills; Bulletins; Question Lists, List of Business, List of Amendments and Cut Motions, Synopsis of Debates, Reports of Parliamentary Committees and Standing Committees, Monographs, Periodicals, Brochures and other research and reference studies for meeting the information needs of members, etc. are printed by the Government of India Press or the private printers/publishers.

Debates

The Lok Sabha Debates which are printed and published constitute the permanent official record of the proceedings of the House. The proceedings of the House are divided into two parts. Part-I contains answers to Questions – both oral and written as well as answers to the supplementary questions. Part-II consists of Papers Laid on the Table, Messages, Discussions, etc. and other business transacted by the House. The debates and proceedings are brought out in three versions — (i) Original (ii) English and (iii) Hindi.

The Original Version contains proceedings in English and Hindi as it actually takes place in the House and the English/Hindi translation of speeches made in regional languages. Till the Twelfth Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, the practice was to keep the original version of debates in cyclostyled (computer printout) form in the Parliament Library, suitably bound, for the purposes of record and reference. However, since the Thirteenth Session of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha, this is being printed and an edited version is made available on the Parliament of India website, i.e., www.parliamentofindia.nic.in or www.loksabha.nic.in.

The English version of Debates is being prepared and published from the First Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, i.e. from January 1985. This contains proceedings in English and English translation of proceedings which take place in Hindi or any other regional language.

The full verbatim Hindi Version of Debates was started in November 1978. However, prior to this (since 1952), there used to be a summarized translated version of debates. The Hindi version comprises proceedings in Hindi and Hindi translation of speeches delivered in English or any other regional language.

Both the versions of Debates (English and Hindi) include the verbatim translation in English/Hindi of all starred and unstarred Questions and Answers given thereto.

The first day debate of a Session includes an alphabetical list of members showing their names and constituencies and the list of Council of Ministers. However, in case of the first day debate of the First Session of a newly-elected Lok Sabha, list of members received from the Election Commission is included.

The names of officers of the Lok Sabha are also given at the beginning of each day's debate after the contents.

In case of speeches made in languages other than English/Hindi, viz. Assamese, Bengali, Kannada, Maithili, Malayalam, Manipuri, Marathi, Nepali, Odiya, Punjabi, Sanskrit, Tamil, Telugu and Urdu, for which interpretation arrangements already exist, the translated version of these speeches into English/Hindi as supplied by the Interpreter concerned after checking the text from the tape-recording, is included in Debates with a foot note indicating the language in which the original speech was delivered.

If a member speaks in a regional language for which simultaneous interpretation arrangement is not available, he is required to furnish in advance an authenticated copy of the translation in English/Hindi for its inclusion in Debates. If the translation is not furnished, his speech does not figure in the Debate and a foot note is given therein to this effect<sup>3</sup>.

Corrigenda to Debates, if any, is prepared by respective Debates Branches. The Corrigenda thus prepared is pasted on the inner side of the last cover page of the printed Debate.

A copy of either Original or English or Hindi Version of the Debate is supplied free of cost to all the members according to their choice and those who desire to have their copies bound, are supplied with bound volumes on payment.

Ten days' debates make one volume. The volumes and series of the published Debates run concurrently with the term of each Lok Sabha, whereas individual printed Debates are numbered serially for each session separately.

The copyright for the reproduction of any material from the Debates vests in the Secretariat under section 51 of the Copyright Act, 1957. The permission of the Speaker is required for reproduction of any material from Lok Sabha Debates. A well established procedure has been laid out for dealing with such requests and permission is granted after considering each case on its merits<sup>4</sup>. Where permission is granted to reproduce material from Debates, the party concerned is required to acknowledge the source material in the published document and also supply two copies of such a publication to the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Confirmation by members : The transcript of every speech delivered, Question asked or interruption made by a member on a particular day is supplied to him for confirmation at his residence early next morning. The member is required to return the same with corrections, if any, by 1500 hours on the following day. In case it is not so returned, the transcript prepared by the reporter is considered as final and authentic.

Since the Official Report has to be an exact reproduction of the speeches actually delivered in the House, members are not permitted to improve the literary form of their speeches by additions or deletions. A paragraph is also inserted from time to time in the Bulletin Part II to inform members that the speeches are sent to them only for confirmation and for the purpose of correcting inaccuracies, if any, and not for improving the literary form or altering the substance of the speeches. While grammatical corrections or correction of a word here and there or change of a clause from one place to another are permitted, any material correction which would mean a deviation from the substance of what the member actually spoke in the House is not permitted<sup>5</sup>.

Indexes to Debates

The English Debates are indexed under two categories, viz. Subject Index and Name Index. The Name Index includes the names of the members participating in the debates, Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries, replying on behalf of the Government, wherever necessary. However, in the case of “Questions and Answers”, no entries in respect of Ministers, etc. are included in the Indexes. Entries in the name of the Speaker, the Deputy Speaker or the Chairman are not made. The names of the members, etc. are shown, in the Indexes, in abbreviated form as indicated in the alphabetical List of Members.

With effect from the First Session of the Eighth Lok Sabha, preparation of Indexes to the Hindi Version of Debates was also started. However, in the case of the Hindi Version of Debates, only Subject Index is prepared. It is from Thirteenth Session of Fourteenth Lok Sabha that the work relating to preparation and publication of Indexes to the Original Version of Debates has also been started. The method of preparation of Index to the Original Version of Debates is the same as is followed in case of preparation of Index to English Version of Debates.

A copy of the Index to either English or Hindi or the Original Version of Debates is supplied free of cost to all members according to their choice. Those who desire to have their copies bound, are supplied with bound volumes on payment.

Synopsis of Debates

The Synopsis of Debates is a gist of important suggestions and points made during the Debates. The details of the arguments advanced, motions or amendments moved, Papers Laid on the Table and other formal items are generally not included therein. The Synopsis is prepared on the day of the Debate itself and is printed the same night with the words “NOT FOR PUBLICATION — For Members Only” superscribed on top. The printed copies either in English or in Hindi, depending on individual choice, are made available to the members the next morning along with other Parliamentary Papers. The supplement to the Synopsis for the portion not covered in the Synopsis of the day, if any, is issued on the following day. At the end of each session, the daily synopsis is bound in a volume with a Preface, classified Table of Contents, etc. Bound copies are kept in the Library for reference. The Synopsis of the proceedings of the Lok Sabha (English Version) is also made available through Internet/ Intranet.

The Debates and ancillary publications, viz. the Indexes and the Synopsis are subsidized publications and hence sold at concessional price. The budget provision for these publications is included in the annual grants for the Secretariat.

Bills

The Government Bills as well as the private members' Bills are printed at various stages, viz. to be introduced; as introduced; as reported by Select or Joint Committee in case a Bill is referred to Select or Joint Committee; as passed by the Lok Sabha; and as passed by the Houses of Parliament in case the Lok Sabha is last in possession of the Bill as also all Money Bills.

When a Bill is to be sent to the President by the Lok Sabha for his assent, it is printed in thick azurelaid paper, with a cover of the same colour<sup>6</sup>.

Both the Government Bills and the private members' Bills are allotted consecutive serial numbers in the Central Bill Register on a yearly basis. When a Bill is required to be printed or published in the Gazette, the Bill, at each stage, is printed with the number allotted to it in the Central Bill-Register (say 39) followed by distinctive letters 'A', 'B', 'C', etc., as indicated below:

Introduction – 39; Report of the Select Committee – 39A; Report of the Joint Committee – 39B; Bill passed by one House and transmitted to the other House – 39C; Bill passed by one House and reported by Select Committee of the other House – 39CA; Bill passed by one House and returned to the other House – 39D; Bill passed by one House and rejected by the other House – 39DA; Bill passed at Joint sitting of two Houses – 39E; Bill passed by the Houses of Parliament – 39F; Bill passed by the Houses of Parliament and returned by President for reconsideration, if passed again, with or without amendment; by one House and transmitted to the other House – 39FC, Bill passed again by the Houses of Parliament under the proviso to article 111 – 39FF.

Bills at all stages, except as passed by both Houses, are line-numbered, line-numbers being in multiples of five. The line-numbering is done afresh from five onwards on each page of the Bill.

As soon as a Bill is introduced in the House, a copy thereof is sent for publication in the Gazette<sup>7</sup> of the same date.

On a request made by the member in-charge of a Bill, the Speaker may permit the publication of the Bill before introduction. In such cases, the Bill is published in the Gazette along with a notification to that effect that it is being published before introduction under orders of the Speaker. While making the request, the member in-charge of the Bill has to specify the reasons for pre-publication of the Bill for consideration of the Speaker.

---

6. Earlier, in order to distinguish Bills at their various stages, the cover-pages used to be printed in distinct colours, as described below:

To be introduced/as introduced — White;

As passed by the Lok Sabha — Light Yellow;

As amended by Select/Joint Committee — No cover.

7. Bills are published in Gaz. Ex. (II-2).

It is not the practice to publish a Bill before its introduction when the House is in session although, in special cases, permission for such publication has been granted by the Speaker<sup>8</sup>. A Bill published before introduction is not published in the Gazette again after introduction<sup>9</sup>.

Reports of Select/Joint Committees

The report of a Select or Joint Committee on a Bill is presented to the House and the Bill as reported by the Committee is appended thereto. If there is not enough time for getting the report printed, it is presented to the House in a typed or cyclostyled form, but the Bill as reported is invariably printed with line-numbering before presentation to the House. As soon as such a report has been presented to the House, it is printed together with other connected papers and circulated to the members<sup>10</sup>. Evidence before a Committee is usually printed in a separate volume, if it is decided to lay the same on the Table. Every report of the Select or Joint Committee together with the Bill as reported by the Committee is also published in the Gazette of the same date on which it is presented to the House<sup>11</sup>.

Sale of Parliamentary Publications/Souvenirs

To enable the members of Parliament and the public to purchase all priced Parliamentary Publications/Souvenirs, Bills, Debates, Reports of the Committee and day-to-day proceedings of the House, a sales counter has been functioning since 14 May 1950. It operates between 1000 hours and 1500 hours [Monday to Friday] at the Reception Office, Parliament House. Parliamentary Publications/Souvenirs are also made available on sale at the venues of Conferences of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India, Inter-Parliamentary/Commonwealth Parliamentary Conferences hosted by Parliament of India and also at the time of Appreciation Courses organized by BPST for officers, Legislators and other dignitaries. The Publications are also sold through the Publications Division, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, the sale proceeds of which are directly deposited by them in the Treasury. A quarterly sales report in respect of these publications is then furnished by the Ministry to the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Besides, agents are also appointed by the Secretariat for sale of publications, which are supplied to them at a discount of 25 per cent. A monthly statement is submitted by the agent and the sale proceeds deposited in the B&P Branch. The agent's accounts are scrutinized biannually.

The Souvenir shop in Parliament Museum operates between 1100 and 1700 hours from Tuesday to Saturday. The sale proceeds of the Souvenir shop, after making entries in the relevant registers, are deposited with the cashier, B&P Branch, on the next working day.

CHAPTER XL

Secretariat and Budget of Lok Sabha

The Secretariat

The Constitution provides for a separate Secretariat for each House<sup>1</sup>. With the Constitution coming into force, the former Legislative Assembly Department, which was renamed as Parliament Secretariat, continued to be the Secretariat of the House of the People. The 'House of the People' and its Secretariat were renamed as the 'Lok Sabha' and the 'Lok Sabha Secretariat', respectively, by an announcement made by Speaker Mavalankar in the House on 13 May 1954<sup>2</sup>.

With the introduction of the Montague-Chelmsford Reforms in 1920, the Central Legislature became bicameral and consisted of the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State. The administrative and clerical work of both the Houses of the Indian Legislature was carried on by the Legislative Department. The Secretary to the Government of India (in the Legislative Department) was Secretary to both the Houses; Joint and Deputy Secretaries in the Legislative Department were Assistants to the Secretary of the Assembly and of the Council of State and the Clerks at the Table for both the Houses were supplied from among their number; the whole of the clerical establishment was provided from the ministerial staff of the Legislative Department.

In 1921, the question of having a separate establishment for the Assembly was raised in the House by some members<sup>3</sup>, and the matter featured in debates during 1922 and 1923<sup>4</sup>. In 1924, the Government stated in reply to a question that "it has been decided that for the present, in the interest, both of economy and efficiency it is desirable that the business of the Legislative Assembly should continue to be conducted by the Legislative Department of the Government of India<sup>5</sup>".

However, in August 1925, when Vithalbhai Patel was elected Speaker, he along with several other members of the House felt that the independence of the elected Speaker was prejudicially affected because the Secretary of the Assembly was the Secretary of the Legislative Department under the Government of India. Many questions were also asked in the Assembly by the members stressing upon the need for having a separate office for the Assembly Department<sup>6</sup>.

Soon after he assumed Office, Speaker Patel convened a Conference of Presiding Officers' in January 1926, which passed a resolution advocating the creation of a separate office for the Legislative Assembly, independent of and unconnected with the Government. The matter was immediately referred to the Government for consideration and action. As the Government did not take any action in the matter for more than a year, Patel, on his re-election as Speaker, presented to the Government a scheme on 17 August 1927, embodying concrete proposals for setting up a separate Department or office for the Legislative Assembly<sup>7</sup>. The Government of India forwarded the scheme to the Secretary of State for India but he did not accept the views in certain matters, which the Speaker Patel considered vital<sup>8</sup>. The Speaker, therefore, submitted his proposal for consideration direct to the House and made the emphatic declaration that "As an elected President (Speaker), I am responsible to the Assembly and to no other authority"<sup>9</sup>. On 22 September 1928, Motilal Nehru moved a resolution in the House that a separate Assembly Department be constituted and it was adopted unanimously<sup>10</sup>.

Subsequently, the Secretary of State for India accorded his approval to the scheme as embodied in the resolution, with certain modifications and accordingly, a separate self-contained Department known as the "Legislative Assembly Department" was created on 10 January 1929, in the portfolio of the Governor-General, with the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly as the de facto head<sup>11</sup>. Later on, as per the provisions of the Legislative Assembly Department (Conditions of Service) Rules, 1929, the Recruitment of the Staff for the Department started with the approval of the Speaker.

Under the provisions of the Indian Independence Act, 1947, the legislative functions of the Central Legislature were taken over by the Constituent Assembly of India. On 29 August 1947, the Constituent Assembly resolved that the business of the Assembly as a Constitution making body should be clearly distinguished from its functions as a Dominion Legislature and that a provision should be made for election of a Speaker to preside over the Assembly while functioning in the latter capacity. Thereafter in pursuance of this resolution, the functions of the Constituent Assembly were demarcated as the Constituent Assembly and the Constituent Assembly (Legislative). While the Constituent Assembly was provided with its own separate Secretariat, the Legislative Assembly Department functioned as the Secretariat of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) under the over all control of the Speaker of that body. With the coming into force of the Constitution and the creation of Provisional Parliament on 26 January 1950, the name of the Department was changed to "Parliament Secretariat".

This position continued even after the House of the People (Lok Sabha) came into existence in 1952, after the first General Election. However, the name of the Secretariat was changed in 1954 from “Parliament Secretariat” to “Lok Sabha Secretariat” but the conditions of service of the officers and staff of the Secretariat continued to be governed, till 30 September 1955 by the Legislative Assembly Department (Conditions of Service) Rules, 1929, as amended and adapted from time to time. Subsequently, on 1 October 1955, the present rules, viz., the Lok Sabha Secretariat (Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1955<sup>12</sup> were framed and promulgated by the President in consultation with the Speaker<sup>13</sup>.

The powers relating to creation of certain permanent and temporary posts, the continuance of temporary posts and their conversion into permanent ones, the appointment to various posts, the conduct, discipline and control of officers/staff and the regulation of quasi-permanent and temporary services are vested in the Speaker, subject to consultation with the Ministry of Finance as and where specified<sup>14</sup>. The Recruitment and Conditions of Service Orders regulating the method of recruitment and appointment, promotion, quasi-permanent and temporary service, conduct, etc., of officers and staff of the Secretariat are issued by the Speaker<sup>15</sup>.

The Speaker has, however, delegated certain powers to the Secretary-General in matters connected with the administration of the rules<sup>16</sup>.

The independent position of the Secretariat has been safeguarded both under the Constitution and the Lok Sabha Secretariat (Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1955.

Conditions of Service and Recruitment Rules

The independent status of the Secretariat has, since its very inception in 1929, been recognized by the Government and it has been enjoying the same status as enjoyed by a Ministry (previously Department) of the Government of India in regard to administrative as well as financial powers.

In 1948, while considering the recommendations of the Selection Board regarding appointments to secretarial and senior non-secretarial posts, Speaker Mavalankar observed:

Every officer, subordinate or otherwise, serving in the Secretariat of the Legislature must be in a position to carry out his duties without fear or favour of the Executive Government, and obviously, this cannot be done if persons in the employ of the Legislature Secretariat have to look upon such bodies as Selection Board, consisting of the officers and nominees of the Executive Government, for their chances and career in the Secretariat of the Legislature. Even in the old regime when the Executive Government was not responsible to the Legislature and the entire power vested technically in the Governor-General, it was a well-established convention that the presiding authority (the Speaker) was the sole judge and controller in respect of appointments, promotions, etc., in the Legislative Assembly Department.

On the question of furnishing information concerning the Secretariat to the Establishment Proposal Committee set up by the Government of India, Speaker Mavalankar, on 2 April 1948, observed, "it should not be open to any Department of the Executive Government to scrutinize, much less challenge, what the Head of the Legislature considers necessary and proper". The Speaker had, however, agreed to furnish the information required by the Committee on the condition that their recommendations would be forwarded to him confidentially for his consideration and would not form part of the formal report.

In 1955, during the consideration of the draft of the Recruitment and Conditions of Service Rules, the Government and the Union Public Service Commission agreed that there was no need to consult the Commission in regard to matters relating to officers of the Secretariat. A provision to this effect was accordingly made in the Union Public Service Commission (Exemption from Consultation) Regulations, 1958. The Commission is also not consulted in disciplinary matters and in claims for the award of injury pension to officers and staff serving in the Secretariat. The Administrative Tribunal Act, 1985 is also not applicable to any person appointed to the Secretariat staff of either House of Parliament.

The Secretariat thus makes its own recruitment and functions as an independent entity under the ultimate guidance and control of the Speaker<sup>17</sup>.

According to the well-established convention, the orders issued by the Government to the Ministries and Departments of the Government of India do not automatically apply to the officers and staff of the Secretariat. After the promulgation of the Lok Sabha Secretariat (Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1955, this position has been formally accepted by the Government. Every order issued by the Government in regard to conditions of service of their staff is examined by the Secretary-General and if it is decided to extend the provisions thereof in toto to the officers and staff of the Secretariat, the adaptation orders are issued in the form of Recruitment and Conditions of Service Orders without consulting the Ministry of Finance or the concerned Ministry. Where, however, as an exception, when modification or alteration, etc., is considered necessary, the adaptation order is issued after consultation with the Ministry of Finance.

In regard to the orders of financial nature also, the Government has formally recognized that such orders do not automatically apply to the Secretariat unless these are specifically extended by order of the Speaker. Where the Speaker decides to extend any such order, an adaptation order is issued.

Adaptation of Pay Commission's Recommendations

In view of the independent status of the Secretariat, the recommendations of the Pay Commissions set up by the Government of India from time to time are not

17. See Subhash C. Kashyap: Servicing Parliament—Staffing the Legislatures and Training in Parliamentary Institutions and Procedures. Lok Sabha Secretariat, New Delhi, March 1987.

automatically applicable to the officers and staff of the Secretariat. However, on the basis of the recommendations made by the First and Second Pay Commissions in 1947 and 1959, respectively, the pay scales of the officers and staff of the Secretariat are also suitably revised under orders issued by the Speaker after consulting the Ministry of Finance.

First Parliamentary Committee for Pay Revision and Reorganisation

When the Third Pay Commission set up by the Government of India submitted its Report in 1973, the Speaker of the Lok Sabha and the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha jointly appointed the First Parliamentary Committee in August 1973 to advise them on the revision of pay and other conditions of service of the parliamentary staff.

The Speaker announced the constitution of the Committee in the Lok Sabha on 16 August 1973<sup>18</sup>. The Committee was headed by the Chairman of the Estimates Committee and included, among others, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, besides the Secretaries-General of the two Houses.

In its Report submitted to the Speaker, Lok Sabha, on 20 September 1974, the Committee made a number of recommendations, chief among which was a rational reorganisation of the two Secretariats on a pattern which strove to be functional, efficient and economical.

Second Parliamentary Committee for Pay Revision consequent upon Implementation of the Recommendations of the Fourth Central Pay Commission

Under the provision of article 98 of the Constitution, the Fourth Central Pay Commission had not made any recommendations regarding the structure of pay, allowances leave and pensionary benefits for the Officers and staff of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha Secretariats. The Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha appointed a Committee of Parliament on 21 July 1986 after mutual consultations. The Committee was headed by the Chairman of the Estimates Committee and included the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, besides two members of Rajya Sabha. The Committee, while recommending pay scales for officers and staff of the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Secretariats, observed the following principles:

- (i) The number of scales of pay may be reduced to the minimum necessary;
- (ii) So far as possible, designations of various posts in the two Secretariats may be the same as in the Government of India;
- (iii) In view of the very specialized nature of job requirements in the Secretariats of Parliament and the need for the staff putting long hours of work, pay scales should be equated with the best available on the Government side for similar responsibilities; and
- (iv) Consideration should be given to what appropriate facilities, compensation, incentive or allowance can be provided to staff in the two Secretariats.

18. L.S. Deb., 16-8-1973, p. 358.

In view of the nature of duties and responsibilities performed by the officers and staff belonging to various categories of posts, changes were recommended in the designations as well as scales of pay in a number of cases. Accordingly, the designations and pay scales of posts were revised with effect from 1 January 1986.

Third Parliamentary Pay Committee for Pay Revision consequent upon Implementation of the Recommendations of the Fifth Central Pay Commission

Following the adoption and subsequent implementation of the recommendations of the Fifth Central Pay Commission's Report by the Union Government, as per practice, the Speaker, in consultation with the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, appointed a six-member Parliamentary Pay Committee with the Chairman of the Estimates Committee as its Chairman. The Chairman, Public Accounts Committee, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs were among the members of the Committee. The functions of the Committee were to advise the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha on the changes that were considered desirable in the structure of scales of pay, allowance, leave and pensionary benefits to the officers and all categories of employees of the Rajya Sabha and the Lok Sabha Secretariats in the context of the decision of the Government on the recommendations of the Fifth Pay Commission.

The Committee, in its first meeting held on 11 November 1997, recommended that the recommendations of the Fifth Pay Commission be made provisionally applicable to the officers of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha Secretariats as an interim measure with some modifications. However, following the dissolution of the Eleventh Lok Sabha on 4 December 1997, the Pay Committee ceased to exist.

Subsequently, on the constitution of the Twelfth Lok Sabha, the Speaker, in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, re-constituted the Parliamentary Pay Committee on 20 November 1998 to complete the unfinished work of the previous Committee. The Committee, in all, held six meetings and presented its First Report with regard to the scales of pay on 26 April 1999. However, before the Committee could deliberate upon and make another report on matters other than pay scales, the Twelfth Lok Sabha was dissolved. The recommendations made by the Committee were accepted by the Speaker on 30 April 1999.

On the constitution of the Thirteenth Lok Sabha, the Speaker, in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha re-constituted the Parliamentary Pay Committee on 28 July 2000 to consider the unfinished items of work left out by the earlier Committee. The Committee concluded their deliberations on allowances, amenities, facilities etc. and other issues in respect of employees of Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha Secretariats and finalized their report at their sitting held on 28 August 2001 and presented the same to the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha on 30 August 2001. The recommendations made by the Committee were accepted by the Speaker on 30 August 2001.

Fourth Parliamentary Pay Committee for Revision of Structure of Pay consequent upon implementation of the Recommendations of the Sixth Central Pay Commission

As per practice, the Speaker, Lok Sabha in consultation with the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, constituted a six-member Parliamentary Pay Committee to advise the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha on the changes considered desirable in the structure of scales of pay, allowances, leave and pensionary benefits to the officers and all categories of employees of both the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Secretariats in the context of the decision of the Government on the recommendations of the Sixth Central Pay Commission. The Chairman of the Estimates Committee was appointed its Chairman and Chairman, Public Accounts Committee, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs were among the members of the Committee. Secretaries-General of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha were also associated with the Committee.

The Committee considered the suggestions given by the Officers and Employees of Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha Secretariats and deliberated the proposals in their various sittings. The Committee concluded their deliberations and adopted the Report at their sixth sitting held on 25 February 2009.

The Report of the Committee was presented to the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha on 26 February 2009.

The Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha accorded their formal acceptance of the recommendations of the Pay Committee with some modification regarding grant of Parliamentary Allowance. The recommendations in the Report with the said modification were given effect to simultaneously in the Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha Secretariats on 20 April 2009.

Broad Division of Work on Functional Basis

The Secretariat is headed by Secretary-General—an office which is unique in many ways. As the administrative head of the entire Secretariat, he has to ensure that the secretarial work of the House and its committees is performed by qualified, competent and devoted officers and is organised and conducted properly and smoothly, under his own overall responsibility<sup>19</sup>.

On the basis of the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee for Pay Revision and Reorganisation, the Secretariat was re-organised on functional basis with effect from 1 December 1974, into the following services:

- (i) The Legislative Service for dealing with the work connected with the business of the House such as legislation, questions, preparation of List of Business, etc.;
- (ii) The Financial Committee Service for rendering secretarial assistance and attending to all work connected with the three Financial Committees and the Railway Convention Committee;

19. See Chapter VIII—‘Parliamentary Functionaries’. Also see Subhash C. Kashyap: The Office of the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha Secretariat, New Delhi, 1989.

- (iii) The Executive and Administrative Service to deal with administrative and general matters and to look after the payment of salaries, allowances and other amenities to members and staff;
- (iv) The Library and Reference, Research, Documentation and Information Service to keep the members of Parliament well-informed of the day-to-day developments in India and abroad, by maintaining an up-to-date and well-equipped library and efficient research and reference services and to provide reference material on legislative measures and other matters coming up before the two Houses—Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha—so as to enable the members to participate effectively in the debates in their respective Houses;
- (v) The Verbatim Reporting, Personal Secretaries and Stenographic Service for the reporting of parliamentary proceedings and those of the Committees and for provision of stenographic assistance to Officers;
- (vi) The Parliamentary Interpreters Service with responsibility for simultaneous interpretation of proceedings in Lok Sabha as well as its Committees;
- (vii) The Printing, Publications, Stationery, Sales, Stores, Distribution and Archives Service covering (a) Printing, rota-printing, and bindery works; (b) Stationery and Stores, Record-keeping and archives; (c) Sales; and (d) Receipt and Distribution.
- (viii) The Editorial and Translation Services for editing of debates and writing of synopsis of debates, Translation of debates, Reports and parliamentary papers;
- (ix) The Watch and Ward, Doorkeeper and Sanitation Service to look after security measures inside and outside the Parliament House and to ensure proper maintenance of the premises;
- (x) Clerks, Typists, Record Sorters and Daftries Service; and
- (xi) The Messenger Service to function as supporting staff required by all the other services.

In view of the new organisational pattern, most of the posts in the Secretariat were redesignated. Along with the functional redesignation of the posts, as recommended by the Committee, the pay scales of all posts were revised with effect from 1 December 1974 taking into consideration the nature and importance of the work, duties, responsibilities and strain involved<sup>20</sup>.

From 1 June 1981, 'The Legislative Service', 'The Financial Committee Service', 'The Executive & Administrative Service', and part of 'The Printing, Publications, Stationery, Sales, Stores, Distribution and Archives Service' in the Lok Sabha Secretariat were merged into a single unified service known as 'The Legislative, Financial Committee, Executive and Administrative Service' and the remaining part of 'The Printing, Publications, Stationery, Sales, Stores, Distribution and Archives Service' was renamed as 'The Printing and Publications Service'.

20. See S.L. Shakdher, "Parliamentary Staff in India," Journal of Parliamentary Information, Vol. XXII, No. 3, July-September 1976.

At present, there are 10 distinct Services in the Lok Sabha Secretariat which have been organized on functional basis and which cater to the specific needs of the House. The functions of each Service are complementary and supplementary to the other and their officers and staff are not freely interchangeable owing to special and distinct nature of duties of each Service. These Services are : The Legislative, Financial Committee, Executive and Administrative Service; The Library, Reference, Research, Documentation and Information Service; The Verbatim Reporting Service; The Private Secretaries and Stenographic Service; The Simultaneous Interpretation Service; The Printing and Publication Service; The Editorial and Translation Service; The Parliament Security Service<sup>21</sup>; The Clerical Service<sup>22</sup>; and The Messengers Service. In addition, Lok Sabha Satellite TV Channel Unit has been set up for dealing with various activities relating to Lok Sabha Television Channel.

Joint Recruitment in the two Secretariats

In 1974, it was decided on the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee for Pay Revision and Reorganisation to have joint recruitment to common categories of posts for which direct recruitment is provided for in the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Secretariats, by holding combined recruitment tests and interviews and drawing up panels on the basis of which appointments in any of the two Secretariats could be offered. The competent authority for assessing the number of posts in various cadres and services and revision of scales for the various categories of those scales of pay and allowances in the Secretariats was to be a Board of the two Secretaries-General of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha who could, after consultation with the Ministry of Finance, make suitable recommendations to the Chairman/Speaker, as the case may be, from time to time.

The Rajya Sabha Secretariat have since created their own Recruitment Cell and the vacancies for posts in Rajya Sabha Secretariat last notified by the Joint Recruitment Cell were in 2009.

Staff Welfare

An officer of the Secretariat looks after the welfare of the officers and staff. He assists them in overcoming the health and other problems experienced by them, either while on duty in the office or at their residences, in order to promote their efficiency and well-being.

Working of the Lok Sabha Secretariat

From the Legislative Assembly Department of 1929 to the Lok Sabha Secretariat of today, the servicing of Parliament of the largest democracy in the world has come to acquire new dimensions. The officers and staff of the present day Lok Sabha Secretariat are expected to cater to the multifarious requirements of members of Parliament with a view to rendering them timely assistance in the discharge of their parliamentary functions. They are entrusted with duties of an exacting nature insofar as they are expected to serve the House, the Speaker and the members of Parliament objectively, impartially and efficiently. Over the years, the Secretariat has performed its duties in a remarkable manner and has earned for itself an outstanding reputation for efficiency, integrity, impartiality and promptitude.<sup>23</sup>

Implementation of RTI Act

The Right to Information Act, 2005 came into force on 12 October 2005. The Act inter alia sets out the practical regime of right to information for citizens to secure access to information under the control of public authorities, in order to promote transparency and accountability in the working of every public authority.<sup>24</sup> In accordance with the provisions of the Act, information is being provided to citizens by the Lok Sabha Secretariat in respect of Lok Sabha and Lok Sabha Secretariat. Information Cell was created in the Secretariat on 14 November 2005 with a view to properly implement the Act. As per the provisions of Section 5 of the RTI Act, 2005, a Central Public Information Officer (CPIO) and a Central Assistant Public Information Officer (CAPIO) are designated in the Secretariat. These officers are assisted in their functioning by the Information Cell. An officer senior in rank to the Central Public Information Officer (CPIO) is also appointed as the Appellate Authority in accordance with Section 19 of the Act.

In order to carry out the provisions of the Act, Lok Sabha Secretariat RTI (Regulation of Fee & Cost) Rules, 2005 (as amended in 2007 have been framed and notified in the Official Gazette). Applications received from citizens are prima facie examined in the Cell in accordance with the provisions of the Act and these Rules for admissibility to provide information. The application is then forwarded to the officers (not below the rank of Director) of the concerned divisions to furnish the information to be supplied to the applicant. The information duly approved by the Joint Secretary of the concerned Division received in the Information Cell is examined with a view to see that it covers information on all the points raised by the applicant in his application. This information is required to be provided to the applicant within a period of 30 days of the receipt of the request<sup>25</sup>. The applicant is requested to make a payment of 'information fee' of Rupees two per page as prescribed vide notification on Fee and Cost Rules under RTI Act, 2005 issued by the Lok Sabha Secretariat on 27 December 2005 and Notification regarding amendment on Fee and Cost Rules issued on 12 June 2007.

If during prima facie examination of the application it is found that the subject matter of the application does not concern this Secretariat or partly concerns another Ministry/Department, the application or a photocopy of the application is forwarded to the concerned Ministry/Department of the Government of India under Section 6(3) of the RTI Act under intimation to the applicant to get in touch with the Ministry/ Department for further information.

The Information Cell also deals with the 'Appeals', which are made by the applicants under Section 19(1) of the RTI Act, 2005 to the Appellate Authority and referred by him to the CPIO. The first 'Appeal' if made by the applicant within 30 days of the decision of the CPIO as conveyed to him is dealt with by the Appellate Authority of the Secretariat. As per Section 19 (3) of the Act, a Second Appeal of the applicant is dealt with by the Central Information Commission if preferred within 90 days of the decision of the first Appellate Authority or the date of actual receipt by the applicant. In such cases also, comments of the Secretariat are forwarded to the Central Information Commission within the time specified by the CIC. Besides, officers of the Information Cell accompanied by the officers from concerned division appear before the CIC (Central Information Commission) on a date fixed for hearing.

Every year large number of applications are dealt with by Information Cell besides several appeals made to First Appellate Authority of Lok Sabha Secretariat and appeals made to CIC.

Under Section 4 of the RTI Act, 2005 and guidelines issued by the Department of Personnel & Training, Government of India (Implementation of suo motu disclosure under Section 4 of RTI Act, 2005—Issue of guidelines, dated 15.04.2013), a large number of information on various topics, subjects and issues pertaining to Lok Sabha Secretariat are also being uploaded and updated constantly on the Lok Sabha website under relevant Heads/Branches/Divisions/Links which are in public domain. This is in addition to the information that is being disseminated under other Sections of the Act.

Budget of Lok Sabha

Financial Autonomy

The expenditure incurred in respect of salaries and allowances of, and amenities to, members and officers of Parliament is met from the Consolidated Fund of India. As in the case of other Ministries of the Government of India, separate Demands for Grants in respect of Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha are also laid before both the Houses of Parliament. Parliament sanctions the expenditure through the Appropriation Act every year.

In fact, the financial autonomy is one of the important aspects of the independence of the Legislature and its Secretariat. This autonomy has been attained through a constant correspondence with the executive from time to time and Convention and Directions from the Chair.

In April 1964, during the Budget Session when some members raised the issue of expenditure of the two Houses of Parliament, the Speaker, Sardar Hukam Singh made the following observations:

"It is not possible to have the Demands of the two parliamentary departments of the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha discussed by this House. That cannot be done because there is nobody to answer that... I have decided, though this year it cannot be possible, that before they are placed before me, I will constitute a Committee – most probably of the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, the Chairman of the Estimates Committee and one other hon. member, be the Deputy Speaker or someone else, that is, of three members – to go into the accounts, look into them, scrutinize them and then they will be placed before me. After I have certified them, there ought not to be any check.”<sup>26</sup>

Accordingly, a Committee on Budget of Lok Sabha is appointed by the Speaker of Lok Sabha consisting of the Deputy Speaker as Chairperson and Chairpersons of the Estimates Committee and the Public Accounts Committee as the members. Thus, every year, the proposed Budget Estimates of Lok Sabha and its Secretariat, as approved by the Secretary-General are placed before the Committee for its scrutiny and consideration. The proposed budget estimates, as approved by the Committee, along with the minutes of the sitting are finally placed before the Speaker for his consideration and approval. Thereafter, the estimates are sent to the Ministry of Finance for inclusion in the Union Budget.

The Rajya Sabha and the Lok Sabha Secretariats are primarily responsible for the preparation of the Budget Estimates of the respective Houses and their Secretariats. These are incorporated in the Union Budget as separate Demands, viz. ‘Rajya Sabha’ and ‘Lok Sabha’.

Prior to 1929-30, the provision in respect of the Legislature, i.e., Council of State and Legislative Assembly, was made under one Demand, namely ‘Legislative Bodies’. In 1930-31, the budget estimates in respect of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly were separated and were made under two different Demands, namely ‘Council of State’ and ‘Legislative Assembly and Legislative Department’. This position continued upto the Budget for 1947-48.

After Independence when a fresh Budget was presented and the Constituent Assembly of India began to function in a dual capacity both as a Constitution-making and a legislative body, a separate provision was made therein in respect of the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative) and its Department. Similar provision was made for the years 1948-49 and 1949-50.

In 1950, after the Constitution came into force, the Provisional Parliament was formed and provision in respect thereof was made under separate Demand ‘Parliament’, for the years 1950-51 and 1951-52. General elections were held in 1952 and the First Parliament was summoned in May 1952. From 1952-53 to 1955-56, the provision in respect of the Council of States (now Rajya Sabha) and the House of the People (now Lok Sabha) was made under one Demand namely, ‘Parliament’. From 1956-57 onwards the provision in respect of the Rajya Sabha and the Lok Sabha was separated and was incorporated in Demands for Grants under two separate Demands, viz., ‘Rajya Sabha’ and ‘Lok Sabha’.

26. L.S. Deb., 4-4-1964, cc. 9184-85.

The Budget Estimates of Lok Sabha and its Secretariat are not subject to examination by any Departmental Committee of the Ministry of Finance or any other Committee of Parliament. The expenditure incurred on various units of appropriations under Lok Sabha and Lok Sabha Secretariat is met from the Consolidated Fund of India. As in the case of other Ministries of Government of India, separate Demands for Grants in respect of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha are also placed before both the Houses of Parliament. Parliament sanctions the expenditure through the Appropriation Act. No cut motions, or discussion relating to the budget of both the Houses of Parliament and its Secretariats are allowed on the floor of the House.

In case the Ministry of Finance has any suggestion to make, it is submitted to the Speaker for his consideration and, broadly speaking, a final decision acceptable to both is arrived at after discussion<sup>27</sup>. In the unlikely event of any difference of opinion<sup>28</sup> between the Speaker and the Ministry of Finance, the decision of the Speaker would normally prevail as it is for him to decide what is necessary for the Lok Sabha and its Secretariat in the efficient discharge of its responsibilities.

The Budget Estimates of the Lok Sabha are prepared under Major Head “2011” Parliament and divided into four minor heads: 101-Lok Sabha; 102-Lok Sabha Secretariat; 103-Pay and Accounts Office and 01.798-International Co-operation. The estimates are compiled by the Integrated Finance Unit (IFU) of the Secretariat, keeping in view<sup>29</sup>, the general principles and guidelines on Budget formulation and implementation.

Most of the expenditure included in the estimates is governed by various Acts and rules and orders made thereunder<sup>30</sup>. The Budget estimates in respect of various maintenance and construction related works being carried out in Parliament House Complex are compiled by Directorate General of Central Public Works Department (CPWD) and forwarded to the Ministry of Urban Development for incorporation in their demands. The provision in respect of members’ residence, i.e., their upkeep and maintenance, etc. is made directly by the Ministry of Urban Development.

The decision taken by the Ministry of Finance and the Ministry of Urban Development to transfer the capital budget provisions from the Budget Grant of Ministry of Urban Development to the Budget Grant of Lok Sabha was rejected by the Committee on Budget of Lok Sabha at its sitting held on 20 November 2013, attended by the Finance Secretary and the Secretary, (Urban Development). The Ministry of Urban Development was directed to keep the capital budget provisions of Lok Sabha in the Detailed Demand for Grant of Ministry of Urban Development as per the existing procedure and not to divert the budget provisions for various capital works in Lok Sabha without prior permission of the Committee on Budget of Lok Sabha and the Speaker. The Speaker approved the views of Committee on Budget of Lok Sabha. The Ministries of Finance and Urban Development accepted the recommendations of the Committee on Budget of Lok Sabha.

These are: the Salaries and Allowances of Officers of Parliament Act, 1953; the Salary, Allowances and Pension of Members of Parliament Act, 1954, as amended; the Members of Parliament (Allowances for Journeys Abroad) Rules, 1960; Officers of Parliament (Travelling and Daily Allowances) Rules, 1956; Lok Sabha Secretariat (Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1955; Recruitment and Conditions of Service Orders on various subjects like pay and allowances, leave, pension, etc. and Financial Orders.

The financial provision in respect of salaries, allowances and medical treatment charges of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker is made in the budget of the Lok Sabha under the Minor Head 101-Lok Sabha as a charged item<sup>31</sup>. Provision is made under separate sub-heads in the same Minor Head as voted item for the discretionary grants by the Presiding Officers; salaries, allowances, medical reimbursement, etc. to members; payment to Railways on account of free railway passes issued to members; and payment to Mahanagar Telephone Nigam Ltd. (MTNL) for telephone facilities.

Provision is also made under this Minor head (101-Lok Sabha) for the reimbursement of expenditure incurred during Study Visits of Parliamentary Committees by host organizations/Nodal Ministries, as also for meeting expenditure on Indian Parliamentary Delegations going abroad and Foreign Parliamentary Delegations visiting India under separate sub-heads namely, 'Indian Parliamentary Delegations going abroad', and 'Foreign Parliamentary Delegation visiting India'. The provision in respect of Parliament Library, printing of debates, office expenses of members, hospitality expenses to entertain the delegates from States attending various Parliamentary Conferences and meetings and foreign dignitaries, etc., visiting India in their individual capacity is also made under the Minor Head 101-Lok Sabha.

The provision for pay and allowances of the officers and staff of the Secretariat is made under the Minor Head '102-Lok Sabha Secretariat' under separate sub-heads such as 'Pay of Establishment' and Allowances, Medical Treatment, Travel expenses, Office expenses, Subsidies, etc.

The provision for compassionate fund<sup>32</sup> to give financial assistance to the family of an employee of the Secretariat who dies while in service or to an employee or a dependent member of his family who is treated under extreme emergent circumstances is also made under Minor Head '102-Lok Sabha Secretariat'.

There is a separate Accounts Office, namely, 'Pay and Accounts Office' attached to the Secretariat whose function is to conduct internal audit, to authorise payments and maintain appropriation accounts and provident fund accounts of the Secretariat. The provision for pay and allowances of the officers and staff of the Pay and Accounts Office is made under the Demand of Lok Sabha as a distinct Minor Head '103-Pay and Accounts Office, Lok Sabha'.

Prior to December, 1952, the travelling allowance and daily allowance bills of members were pre-audited by an audit party of the Office of the Accountant General, Central Revenues, which used to be stationed in the Parliament House during sessions. This system was discontinued on the abolition of the pre-audit system of payment. In order to exercise internal checks over the payments of these bills, a Pay Office was established in the Secretariat in February 1953. Later on, the payment of bills relating to pay and allowances of officers and staff as well as contingent bills of the Secretariat were included in the functions of this office.

With the introduction of the separation of accounts from audit, the 'Pay and Accounts Office, Lok Sabha' was set up in October 1955. This office conducts an internal audit and is responsible for making all payments relating to the Lok Sabha Secretariat<sup>33</sup>. It functions much in the same way as the Office of the Accountant General, Central Revenues, in accordance with the relevant rules laid down for the purpose.

The provision for payment of annual contributions to the Inter-Parliamentary Union, Geneva and the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, London, is made under the Minor Head '01.798-International Cooperation'.

Integrated Finance Unit

Monitoring of Finance

Once the Demand for Grants of Lok Sabha and its Secretariat are passed by both the Houses and placed at the disposal of the Secretariat, the expenditure incurred under each unit of appropriation is independently monitored by the Secretariat. The Executive is not supposed to interfere in the financial management of the Secretariat, nor is their concurrence sought on any expenditure within the allotted grants.

The re-appropriations out of the savings are made directly by diverting money to those units of appropriations where deficit is noticed. While principles governing permissible re-appropriations are followed scrupulously, no formal concurrence of the Ministry of Finance is required to be sought, as per well established convention. As recommended by the Public Accounts Committee, any order for re-appropriation, issued during a financial year, which has the effect of increasing the budget provision under a sub-head or standard object head by more than 25 per cent of Budget Estimates or Rs. One crore, whichever is more, is reported to the Ministry of Finance for being placed before the Parliament along with the last batch of the Supplementary Demands of the financial year. Similarly, savings, if any, exist under the Grants of Lok Sabha, are in the usual course surrendered to the Ministry of Finance in the month of March every year with the approval of the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha.

The financial rules and orders issued by the Government to the Ministries and Departments of the Government of India do not automatically apply to the Lok Sabha and its Secretariat. It is for the Speaker to make the financial adjustments as per the requirements of the House and its Secretariat.

33. Instructional Order (I.O.) No. 702, 18-11-1955.

Mode of drawal of Funds

Funds are drawn out of the allotted appropriation units by presenting Bills duly signed by the Drawing and Disbursing Officer to the Pay and Accounts Officer, Lok Sabha, who draws cheques on the accredited Bank (presently), the State Bank of India after audit. The Banker is appointed by the Ministry of Finance with the concurrence of the Reserve Bank of India.

Authentication of Orders

Various orders or financial sanctions are issued in the name of the Speaker, Lok Sabha. The financial powers of the Speaker, Lok Sabha have been delegated to the Secretary-General and Officers below him<sup>34</sup>.

Accountability and Audit

Since the funds for expenditure are drawn by the Lok Sabha Secretariat out of the Consolidated Fund of India, its accounts are also subject to audit as per the provisions of the Comptroller and Auditor General's (Duties, Powers and Conditions of Service) Act, 1971. For the convenience of both the Secretariats, the Comptroller and Auditor General of India, as a special case, has stationed permanently an audit party in Parliament House Annexe for concurrent audit of accounts of both the Secretariats. Apart from this, a special audit party from the Office of the Comptroller and Auditor General also conducts audit of accounts of the Secretariat once in every year or once in two years. As per Audit conventions, draft audit inspection reports containing objections and draft paras in respect of the Lok Sabha and its Secretariat, if any, are sent to the Lok Sabha Secretariat for obtaining its views before inclusion of the comments in his final report by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Integrated Finance Unit [IFU] and Financial Adviser

An Integrated Finance Unit (IFU), headed by the Financial Adviser, to provide assistance to the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha in financial matters has been created on 26 October 2006<sup>35</sup>. The main functions of the IFU are as follows: (i) all the work connected with the preparation of Budget Estimates of Lok Sabha and its Secretariat; (ii) to assist the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha in planning, programming, budgeting and monitoring of expenditure of the Secretariat; (iii) to assist in the formulation of schemes, projects by all branches right from the initial stages; (iv) to assist in Budget formulation, scrutiny of projects and post-budget vigilance to ensure that there are neither considerable shortfalls in expenditure nor unforeseen expenses for which provisions are not made either in the original Budget or in the Revised Estimates; (v) to monitor the progress of the schemes against the Budget and preparation of Performance Budget of the Secretariat; and (vi) to render advice on financial matters.

Computerization and Computer Management

The twentieth century has witnessed major developments in technology relating to the gathering, processing and distribution of information. Today, all these technologies together have greatly facilitated the people living in distant parts of the country, region or world to come closer to one another, think and work together to achieve common goals. By increasing both the speed and the scope of communication and computation, modern Information Technologies (IT) have radically altered basic patterns of human interaction, communications and thought. This, in turn, has fostered economic growth and development and helped in the better dissemination of information and knowledge around the globe.

Computerization in Library

The Parliament of India has taken significant steps in developing information technology to assist parliamentarians in the effective discharge of their duties. The Parliament Library made a modest beginning towards automation in December 1985 when a Computer Centre for managing the Parliament Library Information System (PARLIS) was set up with the help of the National Informatics Centre (NIC). The computerization programme has taken a quantum jump in the succeeding years and almost all the activities of the Secretariat have since been automated.

The Parliament Library Information System was designed within the Library for the benefit of Members of Parliament. Initially, it was a database of subject index references to parliamentary information. Later, all the databases were converted into full text databases in Web format and made available on the Parliament of India Home Page.

Library-related Databases

The activities of Parliament Library have been automated by using an indigenously developed software package 'LIBSYS', which is an integrated library application Web enabled software package covering almost all functions of the Library. The Library database can be accessed on Internet as well as on Intranet by members of Parliament and other users of the Library.

- (i) Library Catalogue: On-line access of catalogue provides information about documents (books/reports) added in the Parliament Library since 1992. Searches can be made by author, title, classification number, subject, keywords in title, keyword in context (KWIC) and their combination through Boolean logic.
- (ii) Serials Control: Parliament Library is using a locally developed Unix based software management module designed for journals and periodicals received in the Parliament Library since 1989. Besides the title, subject and keyword, information can be generated periodicity-wise and through the names of publisher and vendor. Information about missing journals and 'subscription-due' reports can also be generated.

- (iii) Parliamentary Documentation: This Current Awareness Service (CAS) provides indexes to select books, reports and articles from journals and newspapers of national and international organizations from January 1998 onwards. Information can be retrieved under different parameters like subject, period, author and publication. A fortnightly publication that facilitates the availability of instant and up-to-date information of indexes and texts of the important articles to Members of Parliament is also available online.
- (iv) Press Clippings Service: This Service maintains a well-classified collection of Press clippings of editorials, articles, important news-items and other information on different subjects. These clippings are taken from a representative collection of Hindi and English Newspapers published in the country. The Service has been computerized using Data Scan Software. Selected clippings on different subjects from various English and Hindi Newspapers are scanned and keywords assigned. The information can be retrieved subject-wise, date-wise and newspaper-wise. On-line retrieval of the Press Clippings is available on LAN (Local Area Network).

Websites : (i) Parliament of India (<http://parliamentofindia.nic.in>)

The Parliament of India Home Page was inaugurated by the then President, Dr. Shanker Dayal Sharma, on 15 March 1996. In a very short period, the Home Page containing information generated within the Rajya Sabha and Lok Sabha has become an important source of information and reference tool about the Constitution of India, history of Indian Parliament, its practices and procedures, biographical sketches and socio-economic background of members of Parliament and proceedings of the Constituent Assembly. At present, separate websites of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha are being maintained by the respective Secretariats and are linked on the Parliament of India Home Page.

The data released on the Lok Sabha website is organized logically through user-friendly drop down menus. Navigation of information across the pages is available to facilitate easy access. The major components of parliamentary information now available on the Lok Sabha Home Page (<http://loksabha.nic.in>) are:

- (i) Members : This window contains information with regard to the alphabetical, State-wise, party-wise lists of present members, details of women members, nominated members, vacancies, addresses and e-mail addresses. Information pertaining to consolidated list of members (First to Fifteenth Lok Sabha) indicating Lok Sabha terms; Biographical sketches of members from Tenth Lok Sabha onwards; Home Page for each member of current Lok Sabha containing biodata, participation in the parliamentary proceedings, Questions, Bills, Motions and information pertaining to development of the constituency represented and various search options in the database are also available.
- (ii) Business: Information pertaining to the Business of the House and Bulletins and Resume of Work done during each Session are available here.

- (iii) Questions: It contains Questions list, Text of Questions and Answers from May 1998 onwards, Supplementary Questions and Answers from July 2000 onwards and Indices to select Questions from 1985 to 1999.
- (iv) Debates: It contains the text of Daily Debates, Synopsis of Debates, and Debates with various search facilities from March 1998 onwards.

A database of subject index references of select parliamentary proceedings (other than questions) from 1985 to November 1993 is also available.

- (v) Legislation: The database contains the content and text of Government/ Private Members Bills introduced in the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha. Title-wise, Member/Ministry-wise, category-wise search options and list of the Bills pending with Lok Sabha and the Committees are also available. Information pertaining to Debates on Government Bills, date of assent and Gazette Notification of assented Bills is also available.
- (vi) Paper Laid on the Table of House: This database contains the titles and text of the paper laid on the Table of the House from February 2013. Subject, Ministry and Session-wise searches are available in the database.
- (vii) Committees: Here, information with regard to membership, Chairperson, subjects selected, sittings, schedule, study tours and reports of all the Financial, Department related, Standing, Ad-hoc and Inquiry Committees is available.
- (viii) Parliamentary Forums: Each Parliamentary forum has its own page which contains the information of its composition and Meetings.
- (ix) Secretariat: It contains information with regard to organization chart, Demand for Grants-Lok Sabha, Rules applicable to employees of the Secretariat, Recruitment and Conditions of Service orders, welfare and publications available on sale.
- (x) Recruitment: It contains the information with regard to advertisement(s) notifying the vacancies for various posts; notices intimating the dates of examinations, declaration of results, etc.; previous question papers; results; and other important information frequently sought by applicants appearing in the recruitment examination(s) conducted by Recruitment Cell.

In addition, general information about Parliament, Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha, Directions by the Speaker, Government of India Manual for handling Parliamentary Work in Ministries, Government Instructions on official dealings between the Administration and the M.Ps, Virtual Tour of Parliament House and Parliament Library are available on the Home Page. Besides, twenty-four hour Lok Sabha TV webcast, its schedule, important video clippings etc. are available. Lok Sabha proceedings are also webcast. Links to Legislative Bodies in India; Rajya Sabha; President of India; Prime Minister; Ministries; States and UTs; Election Commission; Indian Courts—High Courts and Supreme Court; other Parliaments; Inter- Parliamentary Union; Commonwealth Parliamentary Association have also been provided.

(ii) Lok Sabha Speaker Website (<http://speakerloksabha.nic.in>)

A separate Homepage has been developed for the Lok Sabha Speaker which inter alia contains the profile of the incumbent Speaker, political and personal achievements, role of the Speaker, events attended, speeches and Press Releases. Apart from this, profiles of all former Speakers, along with their respective terms of office, are available in this section.

(iii) Parliament Library Website (<http://164.100.47.134/plibrary/Home.htm>)

A separate website of Parliament Library has been developed which provides information relating to the Parliament Library collections, new additions to Library, e-Resources, Library Rules and various services available to members of Parliament.

(iv) Parliament Museum Website (<http://parliamentmuseum.org>)

An interactive website of the Parliament Museum was launched by the then Speaker, Lok Sabha, Somnath Chatterjee on 19 December 2007. The website tells the story of the democratic heritage of India, spanning over 2500 years, with the help of walk-through period settings with sound-light-video animation, large-screen interactive computer multi-media, animatronics, and visualization with multiscreen panoramic projection. The viewer can take part in quiz on Indian democracy, choose picture post-cards and e-mail and make suggestions or ask questions to the Museum through the website.

(v) Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training (BPST) website (<http://bpst.nic.in>)

This website contains information relating to Orientation Programmes, Lectures, Courses, Seminars, Training Programmes, Study Visit/Tours, etc. for members of Parliament, State Legislature, media persons and various stakeholders of democracy. It also provides information relating to Appreciation Courses organized for Probationers of All India Services, International Training Programmes for Parliamentary and Government Officials, etc.

Computer Facilities to Members of Parliament

Keeping in view the immediate and succinct information requirements of parliamentarians to discharge their duties in an effective manner, computer facilities are provided to them at their residences/work places. This helps the members to get instant and up-to-date information on a wide range of activities, in organizing their office work, receiving/sending electronic mail, having access to authentic data on legislative and parliamentary matters, etc. on their desk.

To advise the Speaker, Lok Sabha on matters concerning the financial entitlement of a member for purchase of computer equipment and other computer related issues, there is a ten-member Committee, namely, the Committee on Provision of Computers to Members of Lok Sabha. The Committee also considers issues relating to provision of computer equipment to the offices of Legislature Parties in Parliament Complex and officers of Lok Sabha in the rank of Joint Secretary and above.

Under the Provision of Computer Equipment (Members of Lok Sabha) Rules, 2009, the financial entitlement of a member for purchasing computer equipment and software under the Scheme during one's term as member of Lok Sabha shall be Rs. three lakhs, whether elected in General Election/by election or nominated by the President under article 331 of the Constitution<sup>36</sup>. Under the Rules, members are free to purchase computer equipment from any vendor of their choice from anywhere by satisfying themselves about the genuineness of the products, warranty cover and the quality of after sale services support and pass on the proof of payment (in original) to the Computer (Hardware & Software) Management Branch for reimbursement. On certification by the Computer (Hardware & Software) Management Branch, the Members' Salaries and Allowances Branch makes the reimbursement to the members. Alternately, a member may bring the proforma invoice for the computer equipment to be procured. On certification by the Computer (Hardware & Software) Management Branch, the Members' Salaries and Allowances Branch makes the payment directly to the vendor. On ceasing to be a member, computer equipment purchased remains with the member. However, members have to deposit the depreciated cost thereof as per prevailing Income Tax Rules.

Procurement and Maintenance of Computers

The Computer (HW&SW) Management Branch deals with the procurement of new computers/laptop, replacement of old computers and maintenance of the existing hardware. A number of computers and servers have been installed in the Lok Sabha Secretariat for efficient management of information. An Officers' Committee on Computerisation in Lok Sabha Secretariat has been constituted to discuss and recommend the computer hardware requirements of various Offices/Branches of the Secretariat. Necessary computer hardware are procured on the recommendation of the Committee. A Standing Technical Advisory Committee (STAC) comprising Officers of the Secretariat, NIC and other organizations having expertise in Information Technology has also been constituted to advice on the computer related technical issues.

The work of maintenance of the computers is carried out through a Help Desk, set up in Parliament Complex under the overall supervision of the Computer (HW&SW) Management Branch. A team of engineers has been deputed to attend to the complaints received. The Help Desk also provides telephonic support for users' assistance.

Members' Query Booth

A Members' Query Booth functions from Room No. G-127 of the Parliament Library Building where the financial entitlement scheme related assistance is provided to the members.

Training

Computer Awareness/Training programmes are organized periodically by the Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training for the benefit of the members and their personal staff, as also Officers and staff of the Secretariat, in acquiring knowledge and developing/ upgrading their skills in various usages of Information Technology for parliamentary work. These are conducted by specialized agencies like the National Informatics Centre (NIC), National Institute of Electronic and Information Technology (NIELIT) etc. of the Ministry of Communications and Information Technology. A Computer Lab with state-of-the-art facility is located in the Parliament Library Building where members of Parliament, their staff and Officers of Parliament are given hands-on training.

Intranet & E-mail Services

To facilitate sharing of data and access Internet, a high speed Local Area Network (LAN) has been laid. The independent (LAN) of the three buildings in Parliament Complex and their Reception Offices is connected with one another through Optical Fibre Cables for providing high speed connectivity. The computer connectivity to outside world, including Internet, is being provided through the National Informatics Centre Network known as NICNET. The Parliament of India is connected to NICNET at NIC (HQ), CGO Complex, through two lines, each of 1 GBPS optical fibre link. The NICNET connects all the Central Ministries/Departments, State capitals, important institutions and all the District Headquarters of the country. There are about 3000 LAN nodes in the Parliament complex. All the Users have been provided access to Internet. Also a dedicated E-mail Messaging Service with the domain name (sansad.nic.in) is available to all the Members of Parliament and Users/Sections of the Parliament Secretariat.

CHAPTER XLI

The Parliament Estate

The Parliament House Estate comprises the Sansad Bhawan (Parliament House), Reception Office Building, Sansadiya Gyanpeeth (Parliament Library Building), Sansadiya Soudha (Parliament House Annexe) and the extensive lawns around it, where ponds with fountains have been provided. The entire Parliament House Estate is enclosed by an ornamental red sandstone wall or iron grills with iron gates.

Sansad Bhawan (Parliament House)

The Parliament House, one of the most magnificent buildings in New Delhi, is a massive circular edifice, 560 feet (about 171 metres) in diameter or one-third of a mile (0.54 kilometre) in circumference<sup>1</sup>. The area enclosed by the building is nearly six acres (24281.16 square metres). The building has twelve gates among which Gate no. 1 on the Sansad Marg (Parliament Street) is the main gate. The open verandah on the first floor is fringed with a colonnade of 144 cream-coloured sandstone columns, each 27 feet (8.2 metres) high.

The foundation stone of the Parliament House (or the Council House, as it was originally known) was laid on 12 February 1921, by the Duke of Connaught (1850-1942). The opening ceremony of the Parliament House was performed on 18 January 1927 by the then Governor-General of India, Lord Irwin (1881-1959)<sup>2</sup>. The Third Session of the Central Legislative Assembly was held in the Parliament House on 19 January 1927 when elected members were sworn in<sup>3</sup>. The election of the Speaker took place on 20 January 1927<sup>4</sup> and the Governor-General delivered his Address to the Legislature on 24 January 1927<sup>5</sup>.

1. The construction of the building was done under the supervision of two famous architects— Sir Edwin Lutyens (1869-1944) and Sir Herbert Baker (1842-1946).

The construction of the building took six years at a cost of Rs. 83 Lakhs (8.3 million).

2. At the opening ceremony, the Governor-General read out a message from the King which, inter alia, said:

The circle (referring to the circular edifice) stands for something more than unity. From the earliest times it has been also an emblem of permanence, and the poet has seen in the ring of light a true symbol of eternity. May therefore, we and those who follow us witness, so far as we may, the fruition of these twin conceptions. As our eyes or thoughts rest upon this place, let us pray that this Council House may endure through the centuries down, which time travels towards eternity and that, through all the differences of passing days, men of every race and class and creed may here unite in a single high resolve to guide India to fashion her future well.

3. Prior to this, the Central Assembly and the Legislative Council (predecessor of the Central Assembly) met in the Chamber located in the Secretariat, Old Delhi. The first sitting of the Legislative Council in Delhi was held in that Chamber on 27 January 1913. Before that date, the Legislative Council used to meet at Government House, Calcutta (now Kolkata) as it served as the capital of India till 1911.

4. On this date, Vithalbhai J. Patel was re-elected as Speaker. He was the first Indian to be elected as Speaker on 24 August, 1925. The election took place in the Chamber located in the Secretariat, Old Delhi. For details of election, see Chapter VII— 'Presiding Officers of Lok Sabha,' supra.

5. Addressing the members of the Legislative Assembly in the new Assembly Chamber on 24 January 1927, the Governor-General said:

The centre and focus of the building is the big circular edifice of the Central Hall. On the three axes, radiating from this centre are placed the two Chambers for the Lok Sabha (House of the People) and the Rajya Sabha (Council of States) and the Library Hall (formerly, the Princes Chamber). In between are open garden courts. Surrounding these Chambers is a three-storeyed circular structure providing accommodation for the offices of Chairman and Deputy Chairman, Rajya Sabha, Speaker and Deputy Speaker, Lok Sabha, Ministers, Chairmen of Parliamentary Committees, and Political Parties/Groups recognised by the Speaker for the purpose, Branches of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Secretariats connected with the work of the respective Houses and also the offices of the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs. Besides, three Committee Rooms on the first floor are used for meetings of Parliamentary Committees. Three other rooms on the same floor are used by Press Correspondents who come to the Press Galleries of both the Houses.

The architecture of the building bears a close imprint of the Indian tradition<sup>6</sup>, which is reflected in the layout of fountains, both inside and outside the building, the use of Indian symbols, the chhajjas (projections), which shade the walls and the windows and the varied forms of jali work both in stone and marble.

The outer wall of the corridor on the ground floor of the building is decorated with murals depicting episodes from Indian history from the earliest times and India's cultural contacts with her neighbours. All around the Parliament House there are extensive lawns with flowers, ponds and fountains, enclosed by an ornamental stone wall with iron gates.

Statues and busts of national leaders<sup>7</sup> have been installed in various places, such as Lawns, Courtyards and Entrance Halls of the Lobbies of the Lok Sabha Chamber.

"Today, you meet for the first time in your new and permanent home in Delhi. In this Chamber, the Assembly has been provided with a setting worthy of its dignity and importance, and I can pay its designer no higher compliment than by expressing the wish that the temper, in which the public affairs of India will be here conducted, may reflect the harmony of its conception"—L.A. Deb., 24-1-1927, p. 43.

6. The building was built by Indian labour with indigenous material—the black marble used in the columns came from Gaya, the white and the lined marble, lining the walls of the Library Hall, was procured from Makrana, the timber (teak and other varieties) used for doors from Assam and Burma, and the black wood (Sheesham) from South India.
7. Pandit Motilal Nehru, Gopal Krishna Gokhale, Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, Mahatma Gandhi, Y.B. Chavan, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Bust and Statue), Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, Babu Jagjivan Ram, Pandit Ravi Shankar Shukla, Indira Gandhi, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose, K. Kamaraj, Prof. N.G. Ranga, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Birsu Munda, Andhra Kesari Tanguturi Prakasam, Loknayak Jayaprakash Narayan, S. Saryamurti, C.N. Annadurai, Lokapriya Gopinath Bordoloi, P. Muthuramalinga Thevar, Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj, Mahatma Basaveshwara, Maharaja Ranjit Singh, Shaheed Hemu Kalani, Ch. Devi Lal, Mahatma Jyotirao Phule, S.A. Dange, A.K. Gopalan, Acharya Narendra Deva, Shaheed Durga Malla, Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, Sri Aurobindo, Swami Vivekananda, Devi Ahilyabai Holkar, Indrajit Gupta, Vithalbhai Patel, Bhupesh Gupta, M.G. Ramachandran, Mursoli Maran, Maharana Pratap, Kittur Rani Chennamma, Shaheed Bhagat Singh, Rajarshi Chhatrapati Shahu Maharaj. Also installed in the courtyard opposite Gate No. 5 of Parliament House, on a red sandstone pedestal, is a symbolic bronze statue of Chandragupta Maurya.

The Parliament House Estate is guarded round the clock. Entry is regulated by sentries posted at the iron gates on the six approaches to the Parliament House and is restricted to pass-holders. For unhindered approach to the Parliament House, members and other authorized persons who use cars are issued car labels.

Central Hall

The Central Hall, as the name indicates, is in the centre of the building. Short passages radiating from the equidistant points on the circumference of the Hall connect it with the Lok Sabha Chamber, the Rajya Sabha Chamber and the Library Hall.

This spacious Hall is circular in shape and its dome which is 98 feet (29.9 metres) in diameter and 118 feet (36 metres) high is said to be one of the most magnificent domes in the world. Inside the Hall, in line with the passage connecting it with the Rajya Sabha Chamber, is a dais which is a permanent part of the Hall. The Central Hall is fed by evaporative type of cooling system.

In the arch overlooking the dais hangs a portrait of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation<sup>8</sup>. There are twenty-three gilt-edged rectangular picture frames provided in the wooden panelling of the Hall, containing portraits of national leaders<sup>9</sup>. In the arches on the right and left side of the dais, portraits of C. Rajagopalachari and Subhas Chandra Bose adorn the gallery of national leaders in the Central Hall. There are also twelve gilded emblems on the wall of the Hall, representing the twelve Provinces of undivided India.

The Central Hall is a place of historical interest. The Constitution was framed in this Hall and the transfer of power, on the midnight of 14 August 1947, from Britain to India also took place here.

Originally used as the reading room of the Library of the Central Legislature, the Hall was remodelled in 1946 and seating arrangements were made for the meetings of the Constituent Assembly<sup>10</sup> by providing 396 seats on cushioned benches with folding flaps attached to the desks in front. These are still intact.

At present, the Central Hall is utilized for the President's Address to both the Houses of Parliament assembled together, and for holding Joint Sittings of the two Houses. Further, it is in the Central Hall that the President-elect takes his oath of Office. Addresses by foreign dignitaries to members and other important parliamentary functions are also arranged in this Hall. When the Parliament is in session, the Central Hall is used by members of both the Houses as a meeting place for informal conversations.

8. The portrait was painted by Sir Oswald Birley and donated to the nation by A.P. Pattani, a member of the Constituent Assembly of India.

9. The gilded panels display the portraits of Lokmanya Bal Gangadhar Tilak, Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das, Dadabhai Naoroji, Indira Gandhi, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Lala Lajpat Rai, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, Pandit Motilal Nehru, Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, Sarojini Naidu, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee, Dr. Rammanohar Lohia, Morarji Desai, Rajiv Gandhi, Chaudhary Charan Singh, Lal Bahadur Shastri and Swatantrayaveer Vinayak Damodar Savarkar.

10. The Constituent Assembly met here from 9 December 1946 to 24 January 1950.

The Central Hall cannot be used for any purpose or function which is not arranged by or on behalf of members of Parliament officially.

The corridors skirting the Central Hall have been enclosed to provide six lobbies, suitably covered and furnished. These are used for various purposes, viz. one for the general use of the members of Parliament, another for the exclusive use of lady members and yet another for the use of Panel of Chairmen. In another Lobby, a first-aid post for the benefit of members is located.

On the first floor, there are six galleries. At the time of the Joint Sitzings of the two Houses, two galleries to the right of the dais are occupied by press correspondents; the one facing the dais is set apart for distinguished visitors, and in the other three are accommodated the guests of the members of the two Houses<sup>11</sup>. Split air conditioners are fixed in galleries.

During the sittings of the Houses, admission to the Central Hall is restricted to members of Parliament and some specified press correspondents. On special requests, former members of Parliament, Ministers, Governors and members of State Legislatures may be permitted inside the Central Hall to meet members.

Lok Sabha Chamber

The Chamber of the Lok Sabha is of a horse-shoe shape with a floor area of about 446 square metres. The Chair of the Speaker with a canopy overhead<sup>12</sup> is placed on a dais in the centre of the straight line connecting the two ends of the horse-shoe. On the wooden panel just above the Speaker's Chair is installed a motto in Sanskrit—Dharma Chakra Pravartnaya—lit in neon light. Rendered in English, the motto means 'for the rotation of the wheel of righteousness'—which appropriately expresses the ideal of a Legislature.

In the pit of the Chamber just below the Speaker's chair is the seat of the Secretary-General. There is a separate chair and table for him placed in such a way that he can have full view of the House. In front of him is placed a large table, which is the Table of the House, on which papers are formally laid by Ministers and the Officers of the House. Here the other officers of the Secretariat, who assist the Secretary-General in his work and the official reporters also sit.

With a floor area of about 4,800 sq. feet (about 466 sq. metres), the Chamber has a seating capacity of 550. Each member has been assigned a fixed seat which he is to occupy at each sitting of the House.

Originally designed with a floor area of 3,688 sq. feet (about 342.63 sq. metres) and seating arrangements for 148 members, the Chamber was remodelled in 1947 to accommodate a much larger number of members when the Constituent Assembly took over the functions of the Central Legislature. The seating capacity was increased further to meet the requirements of the Provisional Parliament and of the new House which came into being after the first general election under the Constitution. In 1955, the total number of seats which by then had gone up to 461 was further raised to 499.

The Constitution (Seventh Amendment) Act, 1956, provided for increase in the membership of the House to 522. At the same time, an Automatic Vote Recording System was also proposed to be installed in the Chamber which envisaged the reservation of a seat for each member. In order to provide a separate seat for each member and to make adequate provision for any future expansion of the House, the seats in the Chamber were increased to 530 fixed seats.

In 1973, the maximum membership of the House was further increased to 547 under the Constitution (Thirty-first Amendment) Act, 1973. Accordingly, the seats in the Chamber were increased to 550.

Presently, the seats in the Chamber are divided into six blocks, each with eleven rows. Block 1 on the right-hand side of the Speaker's Chair and Block No. 6 on the left-hand side have 97 seats each. The remaining four Blocks have 89 seats each. A seat is allotted to each member. Seats to the right of the Speaker are occupied by the members of the Ruling Party and to his left by the members of the Opposition and Unattached members. The Party/Group having the largest membership is allotted seats to the extreme left and the Party/Group having the next largest membership to its left and so on<sup>13</sup>.

Overlooking the Chamber and fixed on the wood-work opposite to the Speaker's Chair is the solitary portrait of Vithalbhai J. Patel, the first elected Speaker of the Central Legislative Assembly, who fought fearlessly to establish high parliamentary traditions and to assert the complete independence of the Chair<sup>14</sup>. In the wood-work around the Chambers, there are thirty-five gilded designs representing the various Provinces of undivided India, the Dominion and certain other settlements.

The Chamber is fully air-conditioned<sup>15</sup> and is equipped with a modern acoustic System<sup>16</sup>.

13. Till the Fifth Lok Sabha (1971-76), the first three blocks and a portion of the fourth block beginning from the right of the Speaker's Chair were occupied by the members of the Ruling Party. The fifth and sixth blocks to his left and the remaining portion of the fourth block were occupied by members of the Opposition and by Unattached members.
14. As a rule, no portraits are permitted to be hung in the Chamber, but a notable exception was made in the case of Speaker Patel and his portrait was unveiled in the Chamber on 8 March 1948—C.A. (Leg.) Deb., 8-3-1948, cc. 1740-43.
15. When the Parliament House was built, the Government of India used to move to Shimla during summer months, and as such no provision was made for cooling arrangements in the Chamber. In 1941, an evaporative type of Cooling Plant was installed for the Chamber and in 1952 it was replaced by a Refrigeration Type of Air Conditioning Plant with cooling arrangements in summer and heating arrangements in winter. As the refrigeration type of air conditioning plant was not giving satisfactory performance, the Central A.C. Plant was installed at Plot No. 118 in 1987 at an estimated cost of Rs. 2,82,71,886/- to feed important places like the Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha Chambers, Lobbies, Library Hall and other important places. The Central A.C. Plant equipment was replaced in 2002-03 at a cost of Rs. 285 lakhs.
16. The present acoustic system was installed in 1994. Originally, there were no loudspeakers in the Chamber and complaints about the bad acoustic were made by members as early as 1929, but it was only in 1943 that a microphone for the Chair connected with two loudspeakers was installed

The Lok Sabha Chamber is provided with a modern Automatic Vote Recording and sound amplifying system. Powerful microphones are also placed in selected positions on pedestals as back up. Each seat is provided with a sensitive microphone on a flexible stand with the loudspeaker concealed at the back of the bench. Small loudspeakers are also provided in the Galleries.

Telecasting/Broadcasting of the Proceedings

For details see Chapter XLVI—Telecasting and Broadcasting of Parliamentary Proceedings, infra.

Restrictions on use of the Chamber

The Chamber is not allowed to be used for any purpose other than the sittings of the House<sup>17</sup>. Though televising of the parliamentary proceedings is nowadays taking place, it is not permissible to film or photograph or sketch the Chamber while the House is in session. Permission to photograph parts of the vacant Chamber has, however, been granted under certain conditions<sup>18</sup>.

in the Chamber. By 1951 there were 35 microphones spread over the Chamber, but members had to move up to the nearest microphone, and attendants had to move about in the Chamber in order to adjust the height of the microphones. The system was also defective in another way: the voice of a member speaking was not clearly audible in all parts of the Chamber. This old system was, therefore, replaced in 1951.

On the recommendations of the high powered Committee constituted by the Ministry of Works & Housing, the acoustic system, including an integrated system on Microphone Management, simultaneous interpretation and Automatic Vote Recording System has now been installed in the Lok Sabha Chamber.

17. Rule 384—This has been an unbroken convention since the inception of the Central Legislative Assembly in 1921. Sir Frederick Whyte, the first Speaker, observed that the Chamber was sacrosanct—L.A. Deb., 23-9-1921, p. 975; P. Deb., (II), 24-5-1951, c. 9305.
18. In September 1953, when a film company sought permission to take a few snapshots of the vacant Chamber in connection with the production of a film, Speaker Mavalankar directed that the producers could have photographs of the relevant portions of the vacant Chamber but they should not photograph various parts so extensively as to make up the picture of the entire House, showing different passages leading to the Chamber nor should they construct an exact replica of the Chamber with all its doors and passages leading to it and show it on the screen.

In August 1954, the Films Division of the Government of India sought permission of the Speaker to take photographs of the Press Gallery with a number of reporters taking notes when the House was not in session. Permission was accorded to them to photograph the vacant Press Gallery only when the House was not in session, but permission to the photographing of the Press Gallery with reporters appearing to take notes or the approaches to the Chamber or its view from the Press Gallery was refused.

Filming of the Lok Sabha Chamber (empty) had been permitted to the Government Publicity Media on a number of occasions on the condition that it was meant for: (a) educational purposes and not meant for commercial exploitation; (b) the shots were to synchronize with the script of the film; and (c) the shots were taken without the appearance of any individual unit.

In pursuance of this, the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting took filming of the Lok Sabha Chamber (empty) for a documentary film on Parliament of India in 1976 and a film on 'Framing of the Constitution'. Subsequently, permission was accorded to take shots of empty Lok Sabha Chamber in the case of: (i) a documentary film on Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in 1987; (ii) a T.V. film on Govind Ballabh Pant in April 1988; (iii) a documentary film titled 'Marching Towards the

No paper, document, etc., not strictly and officially connected with the business of the House can be circulated in the Chamber without the orders of the Speaker<sup>19</sup>.

Except for the armed police who take possession of the Chamber, no one is permitted to remain within the Chamber (including the Inner Lobby) after the House rises<sup>20</sup>.

Members' Lobbies

Outside the Chamber are two semi-circular corridors, co-terminous with the Chamber wall. The inner corridor is called the Inner Lobby and the outer one is called the Outer Lobby. The Inner Lobby is for members but press correspondents with Lobby passes can gain admission.

With the coming into being of the First Lok Sabha, the space in the Inner Lobby was found to be insufficient for the increased membership of the new House. Accordingly, the open verandah just outside the Lobby was enclosed in 1955 with glazed jali work and suitably furnished as an extension of the Lobby. It came to be known as the Outer Lobby, as distinguished from the Inner Lobby.

On the walls of the Inner Lobby are hung the portraits of the former Speakers and group photographs of members of the House from the year 1927 onwards. It has not been the practice to put up any other photograph in the Lobby<sup>21</sup>.

A wooden rack has been kept in the Inner Lobby for keeping copies of Bills, Parliamentary papers and forms for giving various notices, etc., by the members.

In the Outer Lobby, there are wooden lockers for members to keep their parliamentary papers.

Lobbies or any part of Parliament House Estate cannot be used by members for any demonstrations, strikes, fasts or religious ceremonies<sup>22</sup>. A member can remain in the precincts of the House when the House is sitting and for a reasonable time before or after that. If a member wants to remain there beyond that period, he has to seek the Speaker's specific permission. Permission given to a member to remain within the Parliament House may be withdrawn at any time. A member permitted to remain in the Parliament House Estate should not utilise the concession given to him to make a demonstration by putting up a charpoy, table or chair on the lawns and collecting people there. A member was prohibited from performing a havan in the Central Hall or within Parliament House. A member continuing to sit in dharna in the precincts

Galleries

On the ground floor to the right of the Speakers’s Chair is the Official Gallery. In a similar position on the other side is the Special Box. Looking down on the Chamber are the other Galleries on the first floor. The Press Gallery runs above the Speaker’s Chair and faces the House<sup>24</sup>. Above the Government back-benches are the Diplomatic and Distinguished Visitors’ Galleries and opposite to them are the Speaker’s Gallery (meant for the guests of the Speaker), the Rajya Sabha Gallery (meant for Rajya Sabha members) and the Special Gallery. In the rest of the semi-circle is the Public Gallery<sup>25</sup>.

Rajya Sabha Chamber

The Rajya Sabha Chamber is also of a horse-shoe shape and its pattern is similar to that of the Lok Sabha Chamber. It is, however, smaller in size and has a seating capacity for 250 members. It is fully air-conditioned and has a modern acoustic system including Automatic Vote Recording and simultaneous Interpretation systems.

Originally, the Rajya Sabha Chamber had seating capacity for 82 members only. The Chamber was remodelled to accommodate 216 members under the new

23. Ibid., 29-8-1972, cc. 233-37.

On 19 December 1978, eight members of the Opposition (Congress Party), however, remained on hunger strike in the Lobby consequent upon the adoption of a motion committing Indira Gandhi to jail till prorogation of the House and expelling her from the membership of the House.

On 20 December 1978, they were joined by five more members. On that, some members of the Rajya Sabha also went on hunger strike and dharna in the Lobby of the Rajya Sabha. Fasting members of the Lok Sabha were provided the same facilities as had been extended to fasting members of the Rajya Sabha.

24. The Press Gallery has 98 seats in five rows, the first two being provided with folding flaps have 30 seats each, whereas third row 18 seats and forth and fifth rows 10 seats, respectively. When the Parliament House was constructed, there were only 45 seats in the Press Gallery. By 1952, the number of seats was increased to 73 but even this seating capacity was found to be inadequate to meet the growing requirements of the press correspondents. The Gallery was, therefore, remodelled again in 1953 to accommodate more press representatives.

25. With the coming into being of the First Lok Sabha and increase in the number of visitors, it became necessary to increase the searing accommodation for them. Accordingly, the various Galleries were remodelled and these at present provide seating accommodation for 580 visitors as under:

Constitution. In 1957, when the Automatic Vote Recording Equipment was installed there, the number of seats was increased to 250 keeping in view any possible expansion of the House in the future.

Like the Speaker's Chair, the Chair of the Chairman of Rajya Sabha stands on a raised platform in the centre of the straight line connecting the two ends of the horse-shoe. In the location of the Official Gallery and the Special Box as well as in other respects the two Chambers are alike.

Above the Chair are two Galleries which are used only when there is great rush of visitors in the other Galleries. Starting from the left of the Chair are situated the Public Gallery, the Chairman's Gallery, the Diplomatic and the Distinguished Visitors Galleries, the Press Gallery and the Lok Sabha Gallery<sup>26</sup>.

Library Hall

The Library Hall, like the two Chambers, is also of a horse-shoe shape. Originally constructed as a Conference Hall for the rulers of the various States of undivided India, it used to be known as the 'Princes Chamber'. After Independence it was used as a court room for the Supreme Court of India till August 1958. Thereafter, the design of the Chamber was slightly altered and its flooring was raised so as to be in level with the corridor. Thus the Chamber with the rooms skirting its corridor was remodelled to serve the purpose of a spacious reading room as part of the Library and, therefore, came to be known as the Library Hall. A large number of journals and newspapers are displayed here on reading tables for the facility of members.

In the wooden panelling of the Hall there are 102 gilded designs, which represent the emblems of the old Princely States.

Committee Rooms

On the first floor of the Parliament House there are four spacious Committee Rooms, air-conditioned and adequately furnished<sup>27</sup>. As the name signifies, these rooms are primarily meant for holding sittings of the parliamentary committees and for that purpose a public address system is installed in each room. However, a Committee Room, when it is not required for parliamentary work, may be allotted for a press conference by the Prime Minister organised by the Press Information Bureau or for holding meetings of any of the various Consultative Committees which consist of members drawn from both the Houses.

26. There are 386 fixed seats in the various Galleries of the Rajya Sabha as under:

Public Gallery	—	155
Chairman's Gallery
Diplomatic Gallery	—	78
Distinguished Visitors' Gallery
Press Gallery	—	76
Lok Sabha Gallery	—	77

27. One of the four rooms falls in the Rajya Sabha sector and is under the control of that Secretariat.

On written requests from parliamentary Parties or Groups, the Central Hall or a Committee Room is made available to them for holding party meetings connected with parliamentary work<sup>28</sup>.

Ministers' Rooms

When Parliament is in session, it becomes necessary for the Ministers to be present in the Parliament House for the major part of the day. In order to provide office accommodation to them a number of rooms in the Parliament House have been placed at the disposal of the Leader of the House during session periods for allotment to Ministers. Office accommodation in Parliament House is also provided for Chairmen of parliamentary committees.

Cabinet Room

For the convenience of Ministers, a spacious and well-furnished room has been provided on the ground floor in the Parliament House for holding Cabinet meetings, when Parliament is in session. The room has been placed at the disposal of the Cabinet Secretariat.

Party Office Rooms

The Ruling Party and the Opposition Party/Groups<sup>29</sup> have been provided with office accommodation on the ground and third floors of the Parliament House.

Sansadiya Soudha (Parliament House Annexe)

In order to meet the essential requirements of members and to extend some of the facilities provided to them, Sansadiya Soudha, the Parliament House Annexe<sup>30</sup>, was built north of Parliament House. The foundation stone was laid by President V.V. Giri on 3 August 1970, and the building was completed in October 1975. It was inaugurated on 24 October 1975 by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The design of the building is functional and modern. The structure is Reinforced Cement Concrete (R.C.C.) framed with waffle-slab construction. The form and character of the building radiates a new sense of aesthetics and message of peace through the beautiful facade of four "Buddhist Chaitya Arches" in mosaic jali. Slender, double-height, free-standing R.C.C. columns in front of the mosaic jali support the projected roof above the podium, thus creating a pleasing facade.

The three-storeyed front block serves as the main entrance to the seven-storeyed building and common facilities like members' lounges, Enquiry, a multi-purpose Hall

29. Ibid.

30. The building was built on 9.8 acres (3.85 hectares) of land. The total floor area of the building is about 35,400 sq. metres and the total cost of the project, including air-conditioning, simultaneous interpretation system and furniture and furnishing was of the order of Rs. 3.70 crore (37 million). The building was designed by J. M. Benjamin, Chief Architect, Central Public Works Department (CPWD).

with auditorium, two well-equipped rooms for Committee meetings, Bank, Post Office and Medical Centre have been provided in the main con-course Hall. A hanging staircase, over a pond at basement level, connects the three floors of the front block and glass pyramids over the central areas provide diffused natural light.

The seven-storeyed central block accommodates, at the basement level, a fully equipped Medical Centre, Telephone Exchange & Telecom Burve and at the ground level, Banquet Hall, Private Dining Room, Refreshment Rooms and above floors, the Offices of the Secretariats of the two Houses of Parliament.

The three-storeyed rear block has five spacious air-conditioned Committee rooms around a square sunken court with an octagonal water pool in the centre. All the Committee rooms are accoustically treated with timber wall-panelling and are equipped with sound and simultaneous interpretation systems. The central court with mosaic jali screen above has been tastefully landscaped and paved with Makrana stone and river pebbles. Diffused light from glass pyramids and mosaic jali on the four sides gives a pleasing environment.

Sansadiya Gyanpeeth (Parliament Library Building)

Till, May 2002, the Parliament Library was functioning from the Parliament House. With time, the Library service has gradually developed into what is now familiarly known as the Library and Reference, Research, Documentation and Information Service (LARRDIS). The accommodation available in the Parliament Library and its allied services in the Parliament building was too limited to cope with the volume of literature being acquired by it. Besides, there had been a growing demand for making available to the members of Parliament a more effective, efficient and modern Research, Reference and Information Service. In order to satisfy this requirement the new Parliament Library Building was constructed.

In 1984, the General Purposes Committee of the Lok Sabha approved the proposal for construction of the Parliament Library Building. The foundation stone was laid by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on 15 August 1987 and the design of the building was approved on 15 November 1991. The construction of a new Parliament Library Building was undertaken in April 1994 on a site between Parliament House and Parliament House Annexe<sup>31</sup>.

Sansadiya Gyanpeeth has total plot area of about 40,000 Sq.m. and total built up area of about 55,000 Sq.m. including about 8,000 Sq.m. for parking. It has 12 domes of various diameters, one fully glazed and the other partly glazed or opaque. Terrace garden of Sansadiya Gyanpeeth is visible from the outer corridor of Parliament House.

Externally, the building is related to the Parliament House and uses similar materials of red and beige sandstone<sup>32</sup>. The general height is restricted to the podium of the Parliament Building, below the circular colonnade. The roof of the Library building has a series of low-profile bubble domes sitting on a steel structure to complement the existing surrounding domes of masonry on the Rashtrapati Bhawan. The building is also designed to compliment the Parliament House building with smaller circles strewn together in the form of a mandala or cosmograph. Internally, it is imbued with a different spirit signifying sagacity and knowledge.

The basic structure for the building is conceived as an R.C.C. framed structure with column spacings generally of 5 metre. The intermediate floors are of coffer unit construction while the roof is partly of coffer units and partly of steel-and-concrete domes.

The design and construction of the domes has been the first of its kind in the country. Some of the novel features involved in the construction of the Domes are:

- Use of stainless steel of grade AISI 304 L in two of the 12 domes. The steel is finished to a satin finish. All other domes are in Carbon Steel finished with epoxy paint.
- All joints in the framework were precast in foundries and connected to the tubes by a combination of HSFG bolts and welding under controlled conditions. Consequently the joints appear sleek even where 12 members meet at one joint.
- Geometric precision was achieved in the manufacture and assembling of the various elements of the Dome., viz, the cast joints, the curved tubes and the precast concrete bubbles seated over the steel framework.
- An all-stainless steel, fully glazed 'focal dome' spanning over 25 meter connects the interior of the building to the open sky at the same time cutting off excessive glare and heat. High quality TIG welding has been used for welding the stainless tubes to each other, ensuring a flawless and strong weld.
- The bubbles seated over the domes are not connected to each other structurally. To account for temperature movements of the bubble the water-proofing was done using a urethane polyurea membrane, capable of taking ultimate elongations up to 500%.

A large amount of glazing has been used throughout the building. The composition of the glazing units are so chosen as to limit the transmission of heat and light energy to the desired level so that the air-conditioning load does not become excessive and a comfortable level of lighting for purposes of reading is available.

Insulated, dessicant-filled, double-glazed vertical units (2.600 sq.m.) heat strengthened, laminated, insulated and heat-reflective horizontal units (220 sq.m.) and glass blocks for both vertical and horizontal applications (16.50 sq.m.) have been used. All the fabrication required for the glass, viz, heat strengthening, laminating and insulating, have been got done through workshops having computer-controlled processing machines.

About 45,000 sq.m. of the building has been air conditioned (parking and plant room excluded) with a total heat load of 2040 TR. Five energy efficient centrifugal chilling machines of 550 TR each working on R-123 gas (refrigerant) have been installed in the basement. Earlier these machines were functional with R-11 gas. But R-11 has now been phased out under the Montreal Protocol on Environmental Protection. Winter heating and dehumidification are provided with the help of  $2 \times 1000$  KW hot water generators and heating coils in AHU. Double skin air handling units with environment-friendly carbon and micro filters have been provided in the system. Air distribution has been designed compatible with the fire compartmentation of building through 66 AHUs.

Automatic, intelligent fire-alarm system, duly interlocked with fire check doors for co-ordinated functioning in case of fire, has been provided with a combination of smoke, heat, optical and beam detectors.

Non-wet fire fighting system with NAFS-III gas has been provided for the computer center and micro-filming store. Efficient fire extraction system either through AHUS (in all the areas) and as an independent system (in the focal dome area) duly integrated with fire-alarm system is also in place.

The Parliament Library Building has also the following facilities viz., energy-efficient lighting system throughout the building; CCTV for surveillance; library operations and for telecast of live proceedings of the Parliament; Door frame metal detectors and baggage scanners for security checking; Four hydraulic lifts (13 passengers each), one glazed lift (10 passengers), four goods lifts, ten dumb waiters and one VIP lift of four passenger capacity; PA system for announcements, car hailing, playing pre-recorded messages and bell repeater system; Digital conferencing system in all Committee rooms and simultaneous interpretation system in three selected Committee rooms; Car control system for parking area; and Exit light system working on power through UPS.

Open spaces within the library building complement similar spaces within the Parliament building, but are more subtle and complex. These are located between the inner core of building activities and external peripheral functions. They help in reducing the temperature during summer months. Courtyards provide outdoor movement areas in a meandering form around the core of the central public areas.

There are three courtyards placed around the central built form supporting the distinct functions to be performed within the adjoining area of the building. The first courtyard is built adjoining the M.P.'s reading room and BPST lecture room and has an atmosphere of tranquility around a sunken amphitheatre which is symbolic of LIBERTY. The second courtyard is dominated by a big tree symbolizing JUSTICE. The third courtyard is surrounded by the Museum and Auditorium and its space can be utilized for out-door exhibitions around the water pool which represents EQUALITY.

The main entrance of the library is directly to one of the gates of the Parliament. It leads to an atrium covered with a circular room, allowing muted light, lightly placed above a stainless steel ring.

The focal center of the building is built with sun reflecting, state-of-the-art, structural glass and stainless steel. It is composed of four petals. These petals are tied together with delicate tension rods. The upper part of the glass dome has a symbol of circle representing the Ashok Chakra.

Reading Halls for Members of Parliament

The room located at 'H' Block is in the central core of the library complex and faces an internal courtyard. It is a two-storey high space with an internal atrium, covered with a circular dome supported on four columns. The primary structure of white painted steel is raised above the roof level and admits translucent light through glass blocks creating a serene ambience within a hall of noble proportions.

The Library

The large hall of the main library and the audio-visual museum at the two ends of a cross axis have a similar configuration. They have a large span of 35 meters. This is lit from the top with glass blocks inserted within the concrete bubbles. The primary steel structure is kept low and illuminated with natural light on the periphery. The Library has a stack area for housing three million volumes.

G.M.C. Balayogi Auditorium

An auditorium, with a seating capacity of about 1067 persons, equipped with the state-of-the-art digital Dolby surround-sound system for 35 mm film projection; a wireless simultaneous interpretation system for ground plus four language interpretation; video projection; system with high-power Xenon illumination system with an output of 10,000 ANSI lumens; and stage light system with scanner-controlled FOH lights is also located in this Building<sup>33</sup>.

Other Facilities Provided

Apart from these, the building also houses Research and Reference Division, Computer Centre, a Media Centre equipped with the latest telecommunication facilities as part of the Press and Public Relations Service, Press Briefing Room, Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training, Parliamentary Museum and Archives, an Audio-Visual Unit, a Microfilm Reader Room, a small auditorium with facilities for multimedia presentations, Library Committee Rooms and Conference Rooms. The building also has a Conservation Laboratory, a Binding Unit and an Archival Room with temperature below freezing point to preserve audio-video materials and microfilm rolls. Besides, the Lok Sabha Television Channel Unit with independent broadcasting facilities round the clock also functions from this building.

33. The auditorium is named after the Speaker G.M.C. Balayogi who died while in office in an air crash on 3 March 2002.

Reception Office

On the eastern side in front of the main Parliament House is the air-conditioned Reception Office, blending harmoniously with the surroundings of the Parliament House complex. The circular building<sup>34</sup> 29.26 metres in diameter, having conical shell roof, combines the values of the old and new forms of architecture. The outer portion of the building is finished in red sandstone and the wooden lining in the interior radiates a feeling of warmth and welcome. The central 14.02 metres portion is an inverted cone on a single tapering column like a fountain and the remaining portion is an independent conical shell supported on a right beam held by twelve columns. A split-level system provides for a cafeteria on a raised level and a lounge below for members of Parliament to receive visitors. The service counter and kitchen for cafeteria have been so planned as to combine functional efficiency with hygienic conditions.

Electric Sub-station

Close to the Reception Office building is the Electric Sub-station<sup>35</sup>, the exterior of which has identical design with the Reception Office. To provide steady electric supply to Parliament House, high tension electrical supply from three independent sources has been obtained through three transformers, each having a capacity of 1600 KVA. A standby diesel-operated generator has also been installed to feed all places in Parliament House in the event of failure of normal electric supply.

Arrangements for Members to meet Visitors

Arrangements have been provided for members to meet their guests and others also at the Members' Waiting Hall (near the entrance to the Lobby of the Chamber). When a person comes to the Reception Office and expresses a desire to meet a member, an interview slip is sent to the members concerned. On the member indicating the time and the place where he would like to meet the person, arrangements are made to admit the visitor up to the place indicated by the member.

Special Amenities to Members in the Parliament House

For the convenience of members certain amenities are provided in the Parliament House<sup>36</sup>. Telephones have been installed for the exclusive use of members in the Inner and Outer Lobbies and in the lounges adjoining the Central Hall.

Catering arrangements have also been made in the Parliament House. The refreshment rooms are primarily meant for the use of members. On a specific request, 35. The plinth area of the Electric Sub-station is 2555 sq. metres. The total cost of the building was 17.0 lakh (1.7 million) i.e. Rs. 6.4 lakh (.64 million) being the cost of the building and Rs. 11.5 lakh (1.15 million) being the cost of Electric Sub-station, equipment and Generating Sets. The Sub-station equipment has been replaced in 2004-05 at a cost of Rs. 598 lakhs.

permission is also accorded to members to hold parties in the refreshment rooms. No party can, however, be held there unless members are associated with it<sup>37</sup>.

The dispensary located in the Parliament House is directly connected telephonically with a Government hospital to enable the doctor in-charge of the dispensary to call in the medical expert or to make arrangements for the hospitalization of a member, if required, in any serious case<sup>38</sup>.

CHAPTER XLII

Parliament and the States

The Constitution of India has been described as quasi-federal with a strong unitary or pro-centre bias. The founding fathers of the Constitution declared their intention at the very outset that “the Constitution would be federal with a strong centre”<sup>1</sup>. As Dr. B.R. Ambedkar observed that the Indian system was unique in the sense that it created a dual polity with a single Indian citizenship. This system could be both unitary and federal according to requirements of time and circumstances<sup>2</sup>. The scheme of distribution of powers, legislative, administrative and financial has been such that it is tilted in favour of the Centre. The exercise of powers by the States even in the allotted fields is hedged in by certain restrictions with the result that the powers of the States are not coordinated with those of the Union.

In so far as the distribution of legislative powers between the Union and the States is concerned, not only more weightage has been given to the former but in cases of conflict between the Union and State laws, the principle of Union supremacy is expressly recognised<sup>3</sup>. That apart, the Constitution seeks to ensure the predominance of Parliament in various other ways. For example, certain heads of legislation which in the first instance belong specifically to the States may become the subject of exclusive concern of Parliament if the Rajya Sabha has declared by resolution supported by not less than two-thirds of the members present and voting that it is necessary or expedient in the national interest that Parliament should make laws with respect to any matter enumerated in the State List while the resolution remains in force<sup>4</sup>.

In the executive sphere, the executive power of the State, subject to the provisions of the Constitution, extends to matters with respect to which the Legislature of the State has power to make laws, provided that in any matter with respect to which the Legislature of a State and Parliament have power to make laws, the executive power of the State shall be subject to, and limited by, the executive power expressly conferred by the Constitution or by any law made by Parliament upon the Union or authorities thereof<sup>5</sup>. Any law enacted by Parliament has the force of law in every State, unless contrary is expressed in the enactment. It is the constitutional duty of every State to enforce Union’s laws as are applicable to the State. To that end, the executive power of a State has to be so exercised as to ensure compliance with the laws made by Parliament and the Union Executive has the power to give directions to the State Government to ensure due compliance with this duty<sup>6</sup>. Not only that, the executive power of the State even within its own sphere must be so exercised as not to impede or prejudice the exercise of the executive power of the Union, and the executive power of the Union extends to the giving of such directions to a State as may appear to the Government of India to be necessary for the purpose<sup>7</sup>. In case a State fails to comply with or give effect to, any directions given in the exercise of the executive power of the Union, the President is authorised to hold that a situation has arisen in which the Government of the State cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution<sup>8</sup>.

  4. Art. 249. The Rajya Sabha passed resolution under this article on 12-13 August 1986 authorising the Parliament to legislate on certain matters covered by entries 2, 4, 64, 65 and 66 made under List II—State List in the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution.
  5. Art. 162.

The Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976 empowered the Union to send any armed force or other force of the Union for dealing with any grave situation of law and order in any State. Such force was to act in accordance with the directions of the Union Government and was not subject to the control of the State Government. The Parliament could also specify, by law, the powers, functions and liabilities of the members of any such force deployed in a State. This provision was subsequently omitted with the repeal of article 257A vide the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Act, 1978.

In times of national, political or financial emergency, the States may exercise only such powers, legislative and executive, as the Union permits. When a State of emergency is declared, Parliament has the power to make laws for the whole or any part of the territory of India with respect to any matter in the State List, and the laws made by Parliament prevail over the State laws in the event of any repugnancy between the Union law and State law. If as a result of war, external aggression or armed rebellion, the security of India or any territory thereof is threatened, the President may declare a state of emergency, and the executive power of the Union will thereupon extend to giving directions to the States as to the manner in which the executive power of the States is to be exercised, and the power of Parliament to make laws will extend to making laws conferring or authorising conferment of powers and imposition of duties upon the Union or its officers and authorities as respects any matter, even if such matter is not enumerated in the Union List<sup>9</sup>. The President may also, during emergency, suspend the operation of the constitutional provisions relating to the distribution of revenues between the Union and the States and, during financial emergency, require that all money Bills shall be submitted to the President for his consideration, after they are passed by the State Legislatures.

It has been held by the Courts that the States are not 'sovereign' under the Constitution<sup>10</sup>. What appears to militate against the theory of the sovereignty of the States, the Supreme Court has observed, is the wide power which is vested in Parliament to alter the boundaries of States, and even to extinguish the existence of a State<sup>11</sup>.

However, the States cannot be said to be dependent on the Union for the exercise of their legislative and executive authority insofar as it concerns the sphere allotted to the States and does not impinge on the sphere of authority of the Union. The Council of Ministers in a State exercises its functions in complete autonomy in relation to administration of the State<sup>12</sup>. The restrictions on the States' authority, in normal times, are more in the nature of safeguards to be brought into operation for wider national interest. It is only when the existence of a grave emergency or financial emergency is declared by the President that the autonomy of a State may be interfered with.

The Governor

The executive power of the State is vested in the Governor and is exercisable by him directly or through officers subordinate to him in accordance with the Constitution<sup>13</sup>. The Governor is appointed by the President by warrant under his hand and seal and as an extra-constitutional convention, the Chief Minister of the State concerned is informally consulted before making the appointment<sup>14</sup>. The Governor holds office during the pleasure of the President<sup>15</sup>, the normal term of office, being five years. In practice, some Governors have been permitted to continue in office beyond the normal term. Sometimes, during the term of office a Governor has been transferred from one State to another by an order of the President. The oath of Office of the Governor requires him to "preserve, protect and defend" the Constitution and the law<sup>16</sup>.

The functions of the Governor are laid down in the Constitution. They may, broadly speaking, be divided into three categories as Head of the State; as a link with the Union; and as chief executive during the President's rule acting for the President.

Some of the important functions of the Governor of a State are: the appointment of a Chief Minister and other members of the Council of Ministers<sup>17</sup>; the summoning, prorogation and dissolution of the State Legislative Assembly<sup>18</sup>; assenting to or reserving a Bill for President's consideration<sup>19</sup>; and reporting to the President on the failure of constitutional machinery in the State<sup>20</sup>.

18. Arts. 172 and 174.

19. Art. 200.

20. Art. 356.

As Head of the State, the Governor has a duty to see that the administration of the State does not break down due to political instability and he has equally to take care that responsible government in the State is not disturbed or superseded<sup>21</sup>.

The Constitution does not specify as to how these functions would be exercised by the Governor nor does it conceive the vesting of power in any authority to issue any directions to the Governor or lay down any code or rules for his guidance. However, it is open to the President to make such provision as he thinks fit for the discharge of the functions of a Governor of a State in any contingency not provided for in Chapter II of Part VI of the Constitution<sup>22</sup>.

The question whether an Instrument of Instructions should be issued to the Governor was considered by the Constituent Assembly; but the proposal was subsequently given up. The main reason for giving up the proposal was that, unlike the position previously obtaining, the Governor under the Constitution would be functioning as Head of the State and would not be subject to control by anyone. Dr. Ambedkar explained the position in the following words:

..... The purpose of the Instrument of Instructions as was originally devised in the British Constitution for the Government of the colonies was to give certain directions to the head of the States as to how they should exercise their discretionary powers that were vested in them. Now the Instrument of Instructions was effective insofar as the particular Governor or Viceroy to whom these instructions were given was subject to the authority of the Secretary of State. If in any particular matter which was of a serious character, the Governor, for instance persistently refused to carry out the Instrument of Instructions issued to him, it was open to the Secretary of State to remove him, and appoint another and thereby secure the effective carrying out of the Instrument of Instructions. So far as our Constitution is concerned, there is no functionary created by it who can see that the Instrument of Instructions is carried out faithfully by the Governor<sup>23</sup>.

The Governor functions, for most purposes, as a part of the State apparatus; but he has, at the same time, a duty to report to the Union. This responsibility to the Union flows from the Constitution, mainly because of the provision that he is appointed by, and holds office during the pleasure of the President<sup>24</sup>. In his role as a link with the Union, the Governor keeps the President informed, periodically and regularly, on matters connected with the affairs of the State. There may be occasions for the Governor, in addition to his periodic reports, to inform the President particularly of any serious internal disturbance, and more especially in certain States, of the existence or otherwise of a possible danger of external aggression in the context of all India<sup>25</sup>.

25. Report of the Committee of Governors, 1971, op. cit., pp. 22-23.

As regards the Governor's duty of reporting to the President, it has been observed:

The duty to report flows from article 355 and is specifically mentioned in article 356. The Union Government has the duty to ensure that the Government of every State is carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution. It has no agency in a State, other than the Governor, to keep it informed of happenings there and whether the State Government is being carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution. In the event of a constitutional break-down, the Governor is expected to make a report to the President and can advise him to assume the functions of the Government of a State<sup>26</sup>.

As stated earlier, it is the constitutional duty of a State to so exercise its executive power as to ensure compliance with the laws made by Parliament and, secondly, as not to impede or prejudice the exercise of the executive power of the Union. In this connection, the Union Government is competent to give such directions to a State Government as might be necessary for the purpose. The Governor is the medium through which the Union is broadly informed as to whether a State is complying with such directions.

In certain cases, the Governor may, under the Constitution, function independently of his Council of Ministers. Such cases may, for example, arise in connection with the appointment of a Chief Minister when no party in the Assembly commands absolute majority, dissolution of the Assembly when the Chief Minister has lost majority, reserving a Bill for the President's consideration, making a report to the President in case of failure of the constitutional machinery in the State, or where a Governor is required—under the Constitution, law or practice—to come to a decision independently of the advice of his Council of Ministers.

The Governor has a duty to make a report to the President if in his view a situation has arisen in which the Government of the State cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution thereby inviting the President to assume to himself the functions of the Government of the State. The President may also otherwise come to the conclusion that such a situation has arisen<sup>27</sup>. Following elections to the Sixth Lok Sabha when the Janata Party took office at the Union, they requested the Chief Ministers of nine States to advise their Governors to dissolve their Assemblies and to seek fresh elections on the ground that the seven States had completed the term of five years originally laid down in the Constitution (term was extended to six years during the Emergency vide the 42nd Constitution Amendment Act, 1976) and also the fact that Congress Party (ruling in the nine States) had returned only two members to the Lok Sabha during the elections in March 1977 and hence had lost mandate to govern the States. The Chief Ministers refused. The President on the advice of the Council of Ministers at the Union issued a Proclamation under article 356 dissolving the Legislatures in the nine States and ordered elections to the Legislative Assemblies of these States.

27. See President's Rule in the States and Union Territories, Lok Sabha Secretariat, 2010 for details pertaining to Presidential Proclamations issued under article 356 of the Constitution and section 51 of the Government of Union Territories Act, 1963.

Following the mid-term Lok Sabha elections of January 1980, Proclamations under article 356 were issued in respect of nine States on 17 February 1980 and the Legislative Assemblies of these States dissolved simultaneously as the Government at the Union felt that having suffered an overwhelming defeat in Lok Sabha elections, the ruling party in these States no longer represented the people.

The President's rule was imposed under article 356 in the State of Nagaland on 7 August 1988 on the basis of the Governor's report. The validity of the imposition of the President's rule in the State was questioned in the Gauhati High Court<sup>28</sup>. The State of Karnataka was brought under the President's rule on 21 April 1989 on the basis of the Governor's report. The imposition of the President's rule was challenged in the Karnataka High Court<sup>29</sup>. Appeals against the judgments of the Gauhati and the Karnataka High Courts were filed in the Supreme Court. These cases were decided by the Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court in the landmark case of S.R. Bommai v. Union of India. The Supreme Court held that imposition of President's Rule in Nagaland in 1988 and Karnataka in 1989 was unconstitutional and, therefore, liable to be struck down. In these States, however, no action could be taken as elections had subsequently taken place and new Governments installed and it was not possible to revive old State Assemblies.

After the demolition of the Babri Mosque at Ayodhya, President's rule under article 356 was imposed in December 1992 in the States of Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Himachal Pradesh where the ruling party was the Bharatiya Janata Party. The validity of the President's action was questioned in the High Courts of three States, viz., Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan and Himachal Pradesh. The High Court of Madhya Pradesh held that imposition of the President's rule in Madhya Pradesh was unconstitutional and there was no relevant material to justify the act<sup>30</sup>. An appeal was filed by the Union of India in the Supreme Court against the judgment. A nine-Judge Bench of the Supreme Court heard together the appeals against the judgments of the Gauhati, Karnataka and Madhya Pradesh High Courts and the petitions filed in the Rajasthan and Himachal Pradesh High Courts, which were transferred to the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court in its majority judgment inter alia held that the power conferred by article 356 upon the President is a conditional power. It is not an absolute power. The existence of material—which may comprise or include the report(s) of the Governor—is a pre-condition. The President's satisfaction must be found on relevant material. It further said that article 74(2) did not bar the Court from calling upon the Union Council of Ministers (Union of India) to disclose to the Court the material upon which the President had formed the requisite satisfaction. The administrative decision taken by the Council of Ministers is entirely different from the advice tendered to the President, and the latter cannot be equated with the grounds or the reasons for Presidential Proclamation. The former are not part of the advice tendered to the President by the Council of Ministers. The Proclamation under article 356(1) is not immune from judicial review. The Supreme Court or the High Court can strike down the Proclamation if it is found to be mala fide or based on wholly irrelevant or extraneous grounds. When called upon, the Union of India has to produce the material on the basis of which action was taken. It cannot refuse to do so, if it seeks to defend the action. The Court will not go into the correctness of the material or its adequacy. Its enquiry is limited to see whether the material was relevant to the action. Even if part of the material is irrelevant, the Court cannot interfere so long as there is some material which is relevant to the action taken. If the Court strikes down the Proclamation, it has the power to restore the dismissed Government to office and revive and re-activate the Legislative Assembly wherever it may have been dissolved or kept under suspension. The power of dissolving the Legislative Assembly shall only be exercised after the Proclamation is approved by both the Houses of Parliament and not before<sup>31</sup>.

In another similar instance, the elections for the Thirteenth Bihar Legislative Assembly were held in three phases in the month of February 2005. On 4 March 2005, the Notification was issued by the Election Commission of India regarding the due constitution of the Legislative Assembly of Bihar in pursuance of section 73 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951. For the 243 seats of the Assembly, none of the parties/pre-poll combinations could gather simple majority. In the circumstances, the Governor of Bihar in his Report dated 6 March 2005 recommended to the President that the newly constituted Assembly be kept in suspended animation. Since no political party was in a position to form a Government, a notification was issued on 7 March 2005 under article 356 of the Constitution imposing President's Rule over the State of Bihar and the Assembly was kept in suspended animation. However, since no stable combination could be formed, the Governor of Bihar sent another report on 21 May 2005 to the President of India. It was mentioned in the Governor's report that in his view, a situation had arisen in the State wherein it would be desirable in the interest of the State that the Assembly which has been kept in suspended animation be dissolved so that the people/electorate could be provided with one more opportunity to seek the mandate of the people. The Union Cabinet decided to accept the report and recommended to the President the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly of Bihar. The President was pleased to approve the recommendation. After due process, the notification for the dissolution of the Assembly was issued on 23 May 2005. Thus the Bihar Assembly, after its constitution, was dissolved even without holding a single sitting. However, the action was challenged before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court by majority judgment held that the Bihar Assembly was for all intents and purposes, deemed to be duly constituted on issue of notification under section 73 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 and the duration thereof is distinct from its due constitution. The Court further held that the proclamation dissolving the Legislative Assembly of Bihar was unconstitutional but observed that even if the dissolution notifications were unconstitutional, the natural consequence is not restoration of status quo ante. In declaring the dissolution notifications to be invalid, the Court can also assess the ground realities and the relevant factors and it can mould the reliefs as the circumstances warrant. The Court felt that restoration of the status quo ante would not be a proper relief even if the notifications were declared invalid.<sup>32</sup>

When the President issues a Proclamation as to the failure of the constitutional machinery in a State, he usually appoints the Governor as the chief executive of the State to carry out the functions which have been assumed by the President under the Proclamation<sup>33</sup>.

It has been suggested, both within and outside Parliament, that guidelines should be formulated on the manner in which discretionary powers should be exercised by the Governors. There was scope, the Union Home Minister said, for giving certain guidelines to the Governors, particularly during the transitional period, but those guidelines would have to be based on an agreement of all political parties so that it might have the force of convention. No guidelines were, however, issued as no response to certain suggestions made to the leaders of the parties was forthcoming<sup>34</sup>.

The Committee of Governors, which was constituted at the instance of the President, expressed itself against the laying down of any rigid guidelines for the Governors as it “would be unrealistic and unwise to do so, quite apart from the fact that the Constitution itself does not make any provision for such guidelines”<sup>35</sup>. The Committee, however, came to the following conclusions in respect of the references made to it<sup>36</sup>.

Choice of Chief Minister

Where no single party has a majority of seats in the Legislative Assembly, the Governor has to essentially satisfy himself in the first instance that the person whom he invites to form the Government commands majority support in the Legislature, and nothing prevents him from consulting the leaders of different Parties or Groups; in fact, in most circumstances, it may be necessary for him to do so.

If prior to a general election some parties combine on an agreed programme or an electoral understanding that if such a combination gets a majority they will form the Government, and if such combination gets a majority, the Governor is bound to call upon the commonly chosen leader of the combination to form the Government.

Where some parties or groups combine, after the election, for the purpose of forming a Government, it would facilitate the task of the Governor in making his choice of a Chief Minister if the Parties or Groups forming the combination elect their leader.

Inviting a person, who is not a member of the Legislature, or a nominated member, to form a Government, is open to criticism of being against the spirit of the parliamentary system.

Council of Ministers to hold Office during Governor's Pleasure

In a coalition, where there is an open split among the partners and one or more of them withdraw support from the Ministry, the Chief Minister, instead of demanding the resignation of his colleagues with whom he is no longer in accord, should submit his own resignation which implies the resignation also of his Council of Ministers. In such an event, he may, if he so chooses, stake a fresh claim to form a new Ministry with majority support, and the Governor may, if he is satisfied that such support exists, allow him to form the Government. However, if the Chief Minister fails to resign in such circumstances, the Governor should forthwith initiate steps for exploring the possibilities of forming an alternative Government. Only when he finds that there is no such possibility, he must report to the President in terms of article 356.

If some Ministers in a coalition belonging to a particular Party or Group themselves resign due to disagreement with the Chief Minister or any other reason, the Chief Minister may not necessarily resign. If, however, his majority in the Assembly is threatened by the resignations, it would be expected of him to demonstrate his continuing strength in the Assembly by advising the Governor that the Assembly be summoned within the shortest possible time and obtaining its verdict in his favour. If the Chief Minister does not follow this procedure, the Governor should start consultations with the leaders of other parties with a view to forming another Government. If the Governor is satisfied that there is another leader who can form a Government with majority support, he should invite him to form the Ministry. The Governor would then be justified in withdrawing his "pleasure" from the existing Chief Minister and his Council of Ministers. On the other hand, if the Governor is satisfied that there is no one who is in a position to command a majority in the Legislature, he must make a report to the President in terms of article 356 of the Constitution and also recommend dissolution. Dissolution in the case would be the proper course to adopt because the electorate would then have the chance of voting to power a stable Government.

Summoning of the Assembly

In the summoning of the Legislature, the Governor has to act on the advice of his Council of Ministers, as it is the Council of Ministers which provides business for a session of the Legislature.

Prorogation of the Assembly

As regards prorogation, the Governor should normally act on the advice of his Council of Ministers. Where a notice of no-confidence against his Ministry is pending in the Assembly, the Governor should first satisfy himself that the notice is not frivolous and is a genuine exercise of the parliamentary right of the Opposition to challenge the Government's majority. If so satisfied, the Governor should ask the Chief Minister to face the Assembly and allow the motion to be debated and voted upon. To prorogue the Assembly otherwise would amount to avoidance of responsibility of the Council of Ministers to the Assembly.

If an Assembly of Legislature has been prorogued in a State, the matter may be raised in the Lok Sabha and the Speaker may, in certain circumstances, allow a discussion thereon<sup>37</sup>.

Dissolution of the Assembly

Normally, a Governor should exercise the power of dissolution on the advice of the Council of Ministers. If a Chief Minister who enjoys majority support advises dissolution, the Governor must accept the advice, but if he advises dissolution after losing his majority, the Governor need to accept his advice only if the Ministry suffers a defeat on a question of major policy and the Chief Minister wishes to appeal to the electorate for a mandate on that policy. If there is a no-confidence motion against a Ministry and the Chief Minister, instead of facing the Assembly, advises the Governor to dissolve the Assembly, the Governor need not accept such advice, but should ask the Chief Minister to get the verdict of the Assembly on the no-confidence motion. A motion for adjournment on the dissolution of the Jammu and Kashmir Legislative Assembly was taken up by the Lok Sabha on 29 March 1977. The Motion was, by leave, withdrawn after discussion<sup>38</sup>. On 27 November 1996, notices of adjournment motion were given by Atal Bihari Vajpayee, Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi, Jaswant Singh, Pramod Mahajan, S. Bangarappa and Ram Naik regarding (i) alleged unconstitutional action of the Governor of Uttar Pradesh and continuation of the President's Rule in that State; (ii) Political and constitutional statement in Uttar Pradesh; and (iii) failure of the Government to formulate guidelines for the conduct of Governors in regard to formation of Governments in the States. The Speaker, after hearing the members and the Minister concerned, withheld his consent to the notices as the matter was sub judice<sup>39</sup>. Yet in another instance, the Speaker had withheld his consent to a notice for moving an adjournment motion given by L.K. Advani regarding the dismissal of the duly elected Government in Goa as the matter being sub judice<sup>40</sup>.

In a case where the Chief Minister recommends dissolution of the Assembly when the Budget has not been voted and the Ministry claims majority support, the Ministry in such a situation should face the Assembly and get the Budget passed before seeking dissolution for whatever reason. If, on the other hand, there is reason to believe that the Chief Minister no longer commands majority support, it is clearly open to the Governor to take steps to ascertain if it is possible to instal another Ministry which is able to command majority support and get the Budget passed. Failing both, the Governor has no alternative except to make a report to the President under article 356 because Parliament alone could then sanction appropriation for carrying on the administration of the State.

A Governor is not bound to accept the advice of a Chief Minister to dissolve the Assembly if the Chief Minister has lost the majority support.

Parliament and State Matters

The Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha preclude the discussion of State matters which can appropriately be discussed in the concerned State Legislature<sup>41</sup>. However, there are mixed questions, where both State and Union responsibility is involved, e.g., though law and order is a State responsibility, the use of police force in suppressing Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes or in dealing with violent disturbances in an Undertaking under the control of the Union Government or for putting down the demands of the industrial labour, etc. questions which attract Union responsibility—can be raised in Parliament. Thus, an adjournment motion on a matter concerning a State Government is not in order<sup>42</sup>, unless the notice is accompanied by a statement showing how the responsibility of the Union has not been discharged<sup>43</sup>. Similarly, resolutions or motions on matters which are primarily the concern of the State Governments and are tantamount to an interference with their autonomy are inadmissible.

Normally, notices for calling attention on matters which are not primarily the concern of the Government of India are not admitted. Thus, arrests of individuals in a State cannot become the subject matter of a calling attention notice, unless it is shown that the arrests were made on the advice of the Union Government<sup>44</sup>. In a few cases, such notices have been admitted in view of their special significance and public interest, e.g., alleged harassment of a marriage party of Scheduled Castes<sup>45</sup>, or violation of the sanctity of the premises of a State Legislature<sup>46</sup>. Calling attention notice on a particular aspect of a State matter has been admitted if it attracts Union responsibility<sup>47</sup> e.g. situation arising out of inaction on the part of Government to solve the problems being faced by the residents of Delhi due to massive demolition drive being undertaken in NCT Delhi<sup>48</sup>, situation arising out of alleged brutal attack on and killing of Adivasis by Police in Kalinganagar in Orissa<sup>49</sup> and situation arising out of violence during and after the demonstration by All Adivasi Students Association of Assam (AASAA) on 24 November 2007 at Guwahati and steps taken by the Government in this regard<sup>50</sup>. More recently, calling attention notices regarding situation arising out of spread of Dengue and Chikungunya in different parts of the country and the plight of coconut growers of Tamil Nadu leading to starvation deaths were also admitted and discussed<sup>51</sup>.

Also, in view of the constitutional duty of the Union to ensure that the Government of every State is carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution<sup>52</sup>, calling attention notices pertaining to constitutional crisis in Punjab Legislative Assembly and in Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly have been admitted and discussed<sup>53</sup>.

In another case, calling attention notice relating to a matter of law and order in a State having been disallowed, the Minister was asked to make a factual statement after calling for the information from the State Government, on the understanding that members who have tabled the notice would not be allowed to ask questions on the statement<sup>54</sup>.

No question is admissible on a matter which is wholly within the State autonomy or in respect to which State Governments have no concern with the Union Government and are not responsible to it in law or fact. Questions which simply elicit information of statistical nature on a matter of all-India character without touching the policy or administration of a State may be admitted. However, in certain cases, questions touching the policies of the State administration may be allowed where: (i) action is required to be taken on an all-India basis though separately by each State administration; (ii) the matter is of all-India importance or interest; (iii) policies or matters are involved in which the Government of India give grants, loans or advice; (iv) the State Governments act as agents of the Government of India, though details are left to be worked out by the State Government as such agents; (v) the matter is of atrocities on Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, minorities or communal disturbances; (vi) the matter is of safety in Railway travels; and (vii) the question relates to enforcement of a Central Act or implementation of Centrally sponsored schemes.

Where representations or allegations against a Chief Minister of a State are made to the President or the Prime Minister, a question may be asked as to the action taken on them. Questions relating to charges against Chief Ministers, Ministers of State Governments and corruption charges against ex-Chief Minister of a State could also be asked, if the matter had been investigated by the Union Government.

On matters which are or have been the subject of correspondence between the Government of India and the Government of a State, no question can be asked except as to a matter of fact, and the answer is also confined to a statement of fact. A member might ask a question seeking information on a matter of fact, for instance, as to whether the Union Government was consulted by a State Government with respect to a certain important matter<sup>55</sup>. It is left to the Minister concerned to determine what particular information regarding any correspondence between the Union and State Governments might be given to the House<sup>56</sup>. Questions which ask for a statement of views expressed by State Governments on a particular reference made by the Government of India are not usually admitted.

Law and order is a State subject, but discussion on the law and order situation in a State may be allowed if national security is involved and the responsibility of the Government of India in some form or the other is made out<sup>57</sup>. For instance, discussion was allowed on the incident of gang rape in South-Delhi on 16 December 2012<sup>58</sup>.

Parliament has recognised the sovereignty of State Legislatures concerning their procedure and conduct of business inside the House, and the Speaker has not permitted discussion relating to any matters connected therewith<sup>59</sup>. There have, however, been a few exceptions, and in these cases discussion has been permitted because of the special significance attached to such incidents. A calling-attention notice was admitted as the subject matter dealt with the violation of the sanctity of the premises of a State Legislature<sup>60</sup>. A similar notice was admitted on the "reported refusal to administer the oath/affirmation to some members" of a State Legislative Assembly in the Urdu language, on the ground that it was a constitutional issue whether an elected member belonging to a minority language group could be deprived of his right to take the oath in his own language<sup>61</sup>, and the aggrieved party could go for redressal to a court of law. In yet another instance, notice of an adjournment motion was tabled by some members in the Lok Sabha, about developments in a State wherein the State Legislative Assembly was prorogued when the motion of no-confidence in the Council of Ministers was pending before that House. The Speaker, while disallowing the adjournment motion held that the Lok Sabha was not competent to question the procedure adopted in the State Legislative Assembly. The Speaker, however, permitted the House to consider the constitutional aspect of the question and observed during the discussion that members should avoid making any reference to the competence of the Assembly to take a particular decision as also to the ruling of the Speaker of the State Legislative Assembly<sup>62</sup>.

When a Governor performs the duties of a constitutional Head of State, his actions do not become the subject matter of questions or debate in Parliament. But, where he takes a decision independently of his Council of Ministers or where he acts as the chief executive of the State under President's rule, his actions are subject to scrutiny by Parliament.

As a result of the fourth general elections, the Governors of many States had to face difficult and delicate situations. The emergence of Coalition Ministries in several States comprising various political parties with different political ideologies, policies and programmes, and shifting loyalties of legislators resulted in great political instability and consequently, created many problems for the Governors, which were perhaps not fully envisaged by the framers of the Constitution. Many a decision taken by them, though inherent in their constitutional position, raised controversy both inside and outside Parliament.

The actions taken by the State Governors have, therefore, been the subject-matter of discussion in Parliament from time to time. On an objection raised, it has been held by the Speaker that while Parliament could not discuss the conduct of a Governor, his official actions could legitimately be discussed<sup>63</sup>. The action of the Governor in dismissing the Ministry<sup>64</sup>, or the manner and procedure adopted by him in appointing a Chief Minister<sup>65</sup>, or in the formation of Ministry<sup>66</sup> has been discussed in the House. The question of the recall of the Governor of a State as demanded by the State Government concerned was raised in Parliament through a calling attention notice<sup>67</sup>. In another case, a motion was moved in Parliament recording 'its disapproval of the conduct of the Governor of... in handling the recent constitutional crisis in that State' and recommending that 'the Governor be recalled'. The motion was, however, negatived<sup>68</sup>.

The questions pertaining to the abrupt summoning, adjournment, prorogation and dissolution of the Legislative Assemblies in Madhya Pradesh, Haryana, Jammu & Kashmir, Punjab and West Bengal by the respective State Governors have been discussed in Parliament<sup>69</sup>. Various issues which arose in some State Legislatures concerning these matters have also been discussed earlier<sup>70</sup>.

Parliament may also discuss the failure of the Union Government to give directions to a State on any matter under article 365. Similarly, where a Governor fails in his duty to report to the President or to reserve a Bill for the President's assent, Parliament may discuss or call for a statement from the Union Government either in response to a Question or a Call Attention Notice. To avoid the transgression into State autonomy, Parliament may discuss the matter on a motion for the dismissal or recall of a Governor or withdrawing of the pleasure of the President.

When a State is under the President's rule, questions can be asked on all aspects of the State administration, including matters which have been previously the concern of the State Government and the State Legislature. But when the Proclamation is revoked and the President's rule is terminated, Parliament has no power to entertain questions or raise debates even though they relate to a period when the State was under the President's rule. Even if such questions or discussions have been previously fixed and are included in Question List or List of Business, they are either deleted or not proceeded with as soon as the Proclamation is revoked. The test is as to which authority—the State or the Union Government—is administering the State under responsibility to the State Legislature or Parliament, as the case may be, when the matter for a question or discussion arises.

While Proclamation under article 356 is in operation, Parliament becomes competent to discuss all the subjects in the State List which, but for the Proclamation the Legislature of that State alone could discuss; and the Union Ministers become answerable to Parliament for the affairs of the State. Admissibility of the various items of business is governed by the Rules of Procedure of Lok Sabha and not those of the defunct Assembly<sup>71</sup>. The Budget of a State under the President's rule is presented to the Lok Sabha, and the Lok Sabha votes/grants and Parliament passes Appropriation Bill for the withdrawal of moneys from the Consolidated Fund of the State concerned.

Parliamentary Committees of the Lok Sabha assume the functions of the State Committees and are empowered to deal with any State matter during the period of Proclamation. However, Parliamentary Committees may not take up a matter; for instance, the Committees on Subordinate Legislation did not consider it advisable to scrutinise the State rules or "orders" as they thought that the State Committee could do so later when the normal State Administration under the control of the State Legislature was restored.

President's Acts relating to a State under President's rule are made after consultation with a Parliamentary Committee constituted under the appropriate Act of Parliament. The reports and papers which are required to be laid before the State Legislature are placed on the Table of Lok Sabha during the President's rule.

CHAPTER XLIII

Parliament and Judiciary<sup>1</sup>

The Parliament, the Executive and the Judiciary are the three main pillars of our democratic edifice. The Constitution of India defines powers, delimits jurisdictions and demarcates responsibilities of each organ. As regards the relationship between the Parliament and the Judiciary, both are under constitutional obligation not to encroach upon each other's jurisdiction. In this respect, article 121 provides that the conduct of a Judge of the Supreme Court or High Court cannot be discussed in Parliament except upon a motion, for presenting to the President, praying for the removal of such Judge. Also, the matters which are sub judice cannot be discussed in Parliament. Article 122 provides that the Judiciary too cannot question the validity of any proceedings of Parliament on the ground of any alleged irregularity of procedure.

Under the scheme of our Constitution, Parliament being the supreme legislative body has been accorded the pre-eminent position in our polity. Several constitutional provisions amply demonstrate this. Reflecting the hopes and aspirations of the people, the Parliament, over the years, has truly become a people's institution par excellence. As the supreme law-making body in the country, the Parliament discusses, scrutinizes and amends the drafts of various legislations if necessary, and thereafter, puts the seal of approval, thereby legitimizing the legislative proposals formulated by the Executive.

The Constitution also accords an important place to the Judiciary, with the Supreme Court at the apex of the judicial system. The Supreme Court, in addition to being the final court of appeals—civil and criminal—has exclusive original jurisdiction in disputes between the Union and the States and between two or more States inter se<sup>2</sup>; and is the ultimate arbiter in all matters involving the interpretation of the Constitution. It has also extensive writ jurisdiction for the enforcement of fundamental rights<sup>3</sup>, and an advisory jurisdiction on a question of law or fact referred to it by the President<sup>4</sup>. The power of judicial review conferred upon the Supreme Court and the High Courts ensures that both Legislature and Executive act in their respective spheres of jurisdiction and also they do not act in defiance of the Constitution. It also guards, protects and enforces the fundamental rights guaranteed to the citizens by the Constitution. The Supreme Court has indeed declared judicial review to be one of the basic structures of the Constitution which is to be regarded as sacrosanct.

Thus, as per the Constitutional scheme, both Parliament and Judiciary are supreme in their respective spheres. Various constitutional provisions do not leave any scope for confrontation between these two important organs of State. Indeed, the harmonization of the principles of Parliamentary Sovereignty and Judicial Review is a unique feature of India's Constitution.

Appointment of Judges

Judges of the Supreme Court are appointed by the President after consultation with such of the Judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Courts in the States as the President may deem necessary for the purpose<sup>5</sup>. In the case of appointment of a Judge of the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice of India is invariably consulted<sup>6</sup>. It is the Union of India which is the ultimate authority to approve the recommendation for appointment as a Judge<sup>7</sup>. Thus, the Judges of the Supreme Court are appointed under clause (2) of article 124 of the Constitution, while the Judges of the High Courts are appointed by the President under clause (1) of article 217 of the Constitution<sup>8</sup>. Though the number of Judges of the Supreme Court, other than the

The question whether the opinion of the Chief Justice of India in the matter of appointment of Judges under article 124(2) of the Constitution should enjoy primacy was considered by the Supreme Court in the S.P. Gupta v. President of India (ACR 1982 SC 149). The majority opinion in that case was against any such primacy being given to the Chief Justice of India. However, in the Supreme Court Advocates – on-Record Association v. Union of India (A.I.R. 1994 SC 268), the majority of the nine-Judge Bench held:

“Opinion of the Chief Justice of India which has primacy in the matter of appointment of superior Judiciary means the opinion formed by the CJI collectively, i.e. after taking into account views of his senior colleagues. In other words, the view of the Chief Justice of India is to be expressed in the consultative process as truly reflective of the opinion of the Judiciary, which means that it must necessarily have the element of plurality in its formation. In actual practice, this is how the Chief Justice of India does, and is expected to function, so that the final opinion expressed by him is not merely his individual opinion, but the collective opinion formed after taking into account the views of some other Judges who are traditionally associated with this function.”

The President of India made a reference to the Supreme Court on 23 July 1998 under article 143(1) of the Constitution regarding the consultation process to be adopted by the Chief Justice of India for appointment of Judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts. In a unanimous pronouncement, a nine-member Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court held that recommendations of the Chief Justice of India on appointment of Judges to the Apex Court and High Courts without following the consultation process are not binding on the Government. The consultation process to be adopted by the Chief Justice of India required consultation of plurality of Judges. The Bench was of the view that the sole individual opinion of the Chief Justice of India does not constitute consultation within the meaning of article 124(2). [A.I.R. January 1999, S.C. Vol. 86].

8. After reviewing the pronouncements of the Supreme Court and the relevant constitutional provisions relating to appointment of Judges, the Government introduced the Constitution (One-Hundred and Twentieth Amendment) Bill, 2013 and the Judicial Appointments Commission Bill, 2013 in the Rajya Sabha on 29 August 2013. The Constitution (One Hundred and Twentieth Amendment) Bill 2013 sought to introduce a new article 124A to constitute a Judicial Appointments Commission for making recommendations with respect to the appointment of Judges in Higher Judiciary. The proposed Commission, it was felt, would provide a meaningful role to the Executive and Judiciary to present their viewpoints and make the participants accountable while introducing transparency

Chief Justice has been limited under the Constitution to ‘not more than seven’, power has been given to Parliament to prescribe a larger number. At present, the number of Judges so prescribed is thirty<sup>9</sup>.

A person to be eligible for appointment as a Judge of the Supreme Court or of a High Court must be a citizen of India. While appointing a Judge of the Supreme Court, the choice of the President is limited to Judges of High Courts who have held that office for at least five years, or advocates of a High Court with at least ten years’ standing or who in the President’s opinion are distinguished jurists<sup>10</sup>.

Every Judge of a High Court is also appointed by the President after consultation with the Chief Justice of India, the Governor of the State concerned, and, in the case of appointment of a Judge other than the Chief Justice, the Chief Justice of that High Court<sup>11</sup>. No statutory limit is prescribed on the number of Judges in a High Court. For in the selection process. The Constitution (One Hundred and Twentieth) Amendment Bill was passed by the Rajya Sabha on 5 September 2013. The Bill, as passed by Rajya Sabha, was laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha on 6 September 2013.

The Judicial Appointments Commission Bill, 2013 provided for the composition of the Judicial Appointments Commission for the purpose of recommending persons for appointment as Chief Justice of India and other Judges of the Supreme Court, Chief Justices and other Judges of High Courts, its functions, procedure to be followed by it and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. The Chairman, Rajya Sabha referred the Judicial Appointments Commission Bill, 2013 to the Departmentally Related Parliamentary Standing Committee on Personnel, Public Grievances, Law and Justice on 9 September 2013 for examination and Report. The Committee presented its Report (Sixty-fourth Report) to the Rajya Sabha on 9 December 2013 and laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha on 9 December 2013. The Committee made certain recommendations / observations. The Committee, while appreciating the attempt of the Government to set up Judicial Appointments Commission in place of present collegium, felt that the proposed Commission would ensure equal and active participation of both the Executive and the Judiciary in collaborative and participative manner, thereby maintaining a balance between the Executive and the Judiciary in regard to Judicial appointments. The Committee, inter alia recommended that the structure and functions of the Commission should be mentioned in the Constitution itself. The Committee also suggested that there should be three eminent persons in the Commission instead of two as provided for in the Bill and at least one out of the three Members should be from Scheduled Castes(SCs)/ Scheduled Tribes(STs)/Other Backward Classes(OBCs)/Women/Minority; preferably by rotation. The Government accepted some of the recommendations of the DRSC and has given notices for bringing the official amendments in this regard in both the Bills, i.e., the Constitution (One Hundred and Twentieth Amendment Bill) and the Judicial Appointments Commission Bill, 2013. However, the Bills could not be taken up for consideration till the dissolution of the Fifteenth Lok Sabha.

9. Art. 124(1). The Constitution vide article 124(1) initially provided for 7 Judges excluding the Chief Justice of India which was increased to seventeen vide the Supreme Court (Number of Judges) Act, 1956. This number was further raised to 25 vide the Supreme Court (Number of Judges) Amendment Act, 1986. The number of judges was increased again from 25 to 30 vide the Supreme Court (Number of Judges) Amendment Act, 2008 (Act No. 11 of 2009).
10. Art. 124(3).
The practice generally has been to make new appointments as Judges of the Supreme Court from amongst the Judges or retired Judges of the High Courts or from amongst the advocates of High Courts of requisite standing. No Judge has so far been appointed from the category of distinguished jurists.
11. Art. 217(1).

appointment as a Judge of a High Court, a person should either have held a judicial office in India for at least ten years or should have been an advocate of a High Court for at least the same period<sup>12</sup>.

Conditions of Service of Judges

A Judge of the Supreme Court holds office until he attains the age of sixty-five years<sup>13</sup>, and a Judge of a High Court till the age of sixty-two years<sup>14</sup>. A Judge of the Supreme Court, after ceasing to hold that office, is debarred from practising throughout India<sup>15</sup>. No person, who, after the commencement of the Constitution, has held office as a permanent Judge of a High Court can plead or act within the jurisdiction of the High Court of which he was a Judge. He may, however, plead or act in the Supreme Court and other High Courts<sup>16</sup>.

The salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Courts were originally fixed by the Constitution and thereafter revised in 1986 by the Constitution (Fifty-fourth) Amendment Act, 1986, by amending Part D of the Second Schedule. The Constitution Amendment Act also amended articles 125(1) and 221(1) to provide that the Judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Courts shall be paid such salaries as may be determined by Parliament by law and, until provision in that behalf is so made, they shall be paid such salaries as are specified in the Second Schedule. In view of the power conferred on it, the Parliament passed the High Court and Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Amendment Act, 2009 which amended the High Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1954 and the Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1958 inter alia to increase the salaries of the Chief Justice and Judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Courts with retrospective effect from 1 January 2006<sup>17</sup>.

14. Art. 217(1).

15. Art. 124(7).

16. Art. 220.

17. Arts. 125(1) and 221(1).

The Constitution of India vide Part D of Second Schedule originally prescribed Rs. 5,000 for the Chief Justice of India and Rs. 4,000 for any other Judge of the Supreme Court and Chief Justice of the High Court and Rs. 3,500 for any other Judge of the High Court. Subsequently, the Parliament enacted the High Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1954 and the Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1958 which provides and deals with the salary and other conditions of service of the Judges of High Courts and the Supreme Court.

The Act has been amended from time to time to enhance the salary etc. of the Judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts. As per the High Court and Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Amendment Act, 2009, which sought to amend the High Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1954, the Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1958, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court receives a monthly salary of Rs. 1,00,000. Judges of the Supreme Court receive a monthly salary of Rs. 90,000 which is equal to the monthly salary of the Chief Justice of the High Court. Judges of a High Court draw a salary of Rs. 80,000 per month.

A Judge of the Supreme Court is also entitled to a rent-free residence<sup>18</sup>. The salaries and allowances of the Judges cannot be varied: it is only during the period of a Proclamation of Financial Emergency that the President may effect reduction therein<sup>19</sup>.

Parliament is empowered to regulate by law the conditions of service relating to leave, pension and other privileges and allowances of the Judges of the Supreme Court and the High Courts, but these cannot be varied to the disadvantage of a Judge after his appointment<sup>20</sup>.

There is no ban on the re-employment of retired Judges of the Supreme Court or a High Court<sup>21</sup>.

Resignation and Removal of Judges from Office

A Judge of the Supreme Court or of a High Court may, by writing under his hand addressed to the President, resign his office<sup>22</sup>, but he cannot be removed from his office except by an order of the President passed after an address by each House of Parliament in the prescribed manner<sup>23</sup>.

The address for the removal of a Judge, whether of the Supreme Court or a High Court, can be presented to the President only on the ground of 'proved misbehaviour' or 'incapacity'. Such an address has to be presented to the President in the same session in which it is passed by each House of Parliament supported by a majority of the total membership of each House and also by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members of each House present and voting<sup>24</sup>. If the address of both the Houses is in conformity with the aforesaid provision of the Constitution, the President issues an order for the removal of the Judge from office.

20. Arts. 125(2) and 22 1(2). By virtue of the power conferred under the Constitution, Parliament has enacted the Supreme Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1958, and the High Court Judges (Salaries and Conditions of Service) Act, 1954, laying down the conditions relating to leave, pension and other privileges and allowances of the Supreme Court and High Court Judges, respectively. The two Acts were amended in 1971, vide Acts 77 and 78 of 1971; in 1976 vide Acts 35 and 36 of 1976; and in 1980, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1993, 1994, 1996, 1998 and 1999 vide Acts 57 of 1980, 36 of 1985, 38 of 1986, 48 of 1987, 20 of 1988, 32 of 1989, 72 of 1993, 2 of 1994, 20 of 1996, 18 of 1998 and 7 of 1999, respectively; in 2003 vide Acts 7 and 8 of 2003; in 2005 vide Act 46 of 2005; and vide Act 23 of 2009.

Even if a Judge is said to have committed gross errors in judgement, that does not amount to misbehaviour—C.K. Daphtary Vs. O.P. Gupta, A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1132.

The procedure for the investigation and proof of the misbehaviour or incapacity of a Judge and for the presentation of an address to the President has been prescribed by the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968<sup>25</sup>.

Under the procedure laid down by the Act, a notice of a motion for presenting an address to the President for the removal of a Judge, if given in Lok Sabha, is to be signed by not less than one hundred members of the House and if given in Rajya Sabha, by not less than fifty members of that House. The Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, after due consideration and consultation, may admit or refuse to admit the motion<sup>26</sup>. So far two such notices have been admitted, one by the Speaker, Lok Sabha in 1991 and another by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha in 2009<sup>27</sup>.

Consequent on the admittance of the motion, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, constitutes a Committee of three members, one each from among the following: (i) the Chief Justice and other Judges of the Supreme Court; (ii) Chief Justices of the High Courts; and (iii) distinguished jurists<sup>28</sup>. 25. A Bill namely, the Judges (Inquiry) Bill, 2006 seeking to replace the Judges (Inquiry) Act 1968, introduced in Lok Sabha on 19 December 2006 provided, inter alia for setting up of a National Judicial Council for examining any allegation of misbehaviour or incapacity against a Judge of the Supreme Court or High Court. The Bill was referred to the Departmentally Related Standing Committee on Personnel, Public Grievances, Law and Justice for examination and report. The Report was laid on the Table of the House on 17 August 2007. The Bill lapsed following the dissolution of the Fourteenth Lok Sabha on 18 May 2009. Another Bill, namely, the Judicial Standards and Accountability Bill, 2010 was introduced in Lok Sabha on 1 December 2010 (Sixth Session, Fifteenth LS). The Bill sought to lay down judicial standards and provide for accountability of Judges, and, establish credible and expedient mechanism for investigating into individual complaints for misbehaviour or incapacity of a Judge of Supreme Court or of a High Court and to regulate the procedure for such investigation; and for the presentation of an address by Parliament to the President in relation to proceeding for removal of a Judge. The Bill also sought to repeal the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968.

The Bill was passed by the Lok Sabha on 29 March 2012 and laid on the Table of Rajya Sabha on 30 March 2012. The Bill could not be taken up for consideration till the dissolution of the fifteenth Lok Sabha.

26. After the passing of the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968, a notice of a motion for presenting an address to the President for the removal of a Judge of the Supreme Court was given in Lok Sabha by S.M. Joshi and 198 other members on 15 May 1970 (10th Session, 4 LS). The Speaker (Dr. G.S. Dhillon) did not consider it to be a fit case for action under the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968 and did not admit the notice.

27. During the Ninth Lok Sabha, on 28 February 1991, the Speaker (Rabi Ray) received a notice of motion dated 27 February 1991 signed by Prof. Madhu Dandavate and 107 other members for presenting an address to the President of India for the removal of Justice V. Ramaswami, Judge of the Supreme Court of India. On finding the notice of motion in order, the Speaker admitted it on 12 March 1991.

On 20 February 2009, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha (M. Hamid Ansari) received a notice of motion dated 20 February 2009 signed by Sitaram Yechury and 56 other members of Rajya Sabha for presenting an address to the President of India for removal of Justice Soumitra Sen, Judge, Calcutta High Court. On finding the notice of motion in order, the Chairman admitted it on 27 February 2009.

28. The Speaker, in pursuance of Section 3(2) of the Judges (Inquiry) Act, 1968, constituted a Committee consisting of Justice P.B. Sawant, Judge of the Supreme Court of India (Chairman), Justice P.D. Desai, Chief Justice of the High Court at Bombay and Justice O. Chinnappa Reddy, former Judge of the Supreme Court of India (Members), for making an investigation into the motion are given on the same day in both the Houses, the Committee will be constituted only if the motion has been admitted in both Houses and thereupon jointly by the Speaker and the Chairman. In case notices of motion are given in both the Houses on different dates, the notice which is given later shall stand rejected.

The Committee will frame definite charges against the Judge on the basis of which investigation is proposed to be held and will have the powers of a civil court in respect of summoning persons for examination on oath, production of documents, etc. The charges together with a statement of the grounds on which each such charge is based, shall be communicated to the Judge and he shall be given a reasonable opportunity of presenting a written statement of defence within such time as may be specified. In a case of alleged physical or mental incapacity and where such an allegation is denied, a Medical Board will be appointed for the medical examination of the Judge by the Speaker or, as the case may be, the Chairman or, where the Committee has been constituted jointly, by both of them.

At the conclusion of the investigation, the Committee will submit its report to the Speaker<sup>29</sup> or, as the case may be, to the Chairman, or where the Committee has been constituted jointly, to both of them, stating therein its findings on each of the charges separately with such observations on the whole case as it thinks fit. The report will thereafter be laid before the respective House, or the Houses where the Committee has been appointed jointly by the Speaker and the Chairman.

grounds on which the removal of Justice V. Ramaswami was prayed for. (L.S. Deb., 12 March 1991 cc. 115-18).

In the matter of Justice Soumitra Sen, the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, constituted a Committee consisting of Justice D.K. Jain, Judge of the Supreme Court of India (Chairman), Justice T.S. Thakur, Chief Justice of the Punjab and Haryana High Court and Fali S. Nariman, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India for making an investigation into the grounds on which the removal of Justice Soumitra Sen was prayed for.

The Chairman reconstituted the Committee on 25 June 2009, consisting of Justice B. Sudershan Reddy, Judge of the Supreme Court of India, Justice T.S. Thakur, Chief Justice of the Punjab and Haryana High Court, and Fali S. Nariman, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India.

The Chairman again reconstituted the Committee on 16 December 2009 consisting of three members viz. Justice B. Sudershan Reddy, Judge of the Supreme Court of India, Justice Mukul Mudgal, Chief Justice of the Punjab and Haryana High Court and Shri Fali S. Nariman, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India.

29. In the case of Justice V. Ramaswami, before the Committee could submit its report, the Ninth Lok Sabha was dissolved by the President on 13 March 1991. The question whether the motion lapsed or remained alive on the dissolution of the Lok Sabha was raised in a petition filed before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held—

“It is true that Purushothaman Nambudiri case (A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 694) dealt with a legislative measure and not a pending business in the nature of motion. But, we are persuaded to the view that neither the doctrine that dissolution of a House “passes a sponge over parliamentary slate” nor the specific provisions contained in any rule or rules framed under article 118 of the Constitution determine the effect of dissolution on the motion for removal of a Judge under article 124. The reason is that article 124(5) and the law made thereunder exclude the operation of article 118 in this area” (Sub-Committee of Judicial Accountability v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1992, S.C. 320, p. 344). Accordingly, the notice of motion remained alive. The Tenth Lok Sabha was constituted on 20 June 1991. The Justice Sawant Committee submitted its report to the Speaker (Shivraj V. Patil) of the Tenth Lok Sabha in July 1992.

If the Committee absolves the Judge of any misbehaviour or incapacity, the motion pending in the respective House or Houses, as the case may be, will not be proceeded with. If the report of the Committee contains a finding that the Judge is guilty of any misbehaviour<sup>30</sup> or suffers from any incapacity, the motion will, together with the report of the Committee, be taken up for consideration by the House or the Houses in which it is pending<sup>31</sup>.

30. The Justice Sawant Committee in its report found that Justice V. Ramaswami was guilty of misbehaviour and the Report was laid on the Table of the House on 17 December 1992 by the Secretary-General of Lok Sabha.

In the case of Justice Soumitra Sen, the Committee, under the Chairmanship of Justice B. Sudershan Reddy, in its Report found that Justice Soumitra Sen was guilty of misappropriation of large sums of money, which he received in his capacity as receiver, appointed by the High Court of Calcutta and misrepresentation of facts with regard to the misappropriation of money before the High Court of Calcutta. The Report was simultaneously laid on the Table of both the Houses on 10 November 2010, by the respective Secretaries-General.

31. In Justice V. Ramaswami's case after the Inquiry Committee Report was laid on the Table of the House, notices were received from several members for consideration of the motion for presentation of an address to the President under article 124(4) and the Report of the Committee. As this was the first case of its kind, the Speaker in consultation with the Leaders of Parties and Groups in the House, formulated the following procedure and the House agreed to it:

- (i) Notices of only those members would be taken into account who were signatory to the notice of motion which was given during the Ninth Lok Sabha; and
- (ii) The provisions governing discussion on motions under Rule 184 of the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business be broadly followed, as far as possible.

The following two motions were included in the names of five members in order of priority in the List of Business for 10 May 1993:

- (i) Motion for presenting an address to the President of India under clause (4) of article 124 of the Constitution; and
- (ii) Motion for considering the Report of the Inquiry Committee constituted to investigate into the grounds on which the removal of Justice V. Ramaswami, Judge of the Supreme Court of India, was prayed for.

Before the motions were taken up for consideration, the Speaker made the following announcement in the House:

The matter may be dealt with in a very careful and sound manner to be very precise, correct and just and not to repeat the points, not to bring in extraneous points and not to complicate the issue to arrive at correct conclusions very neatly. Only a few members may speak. The Report given by the Judges Committee and the defence of the Judge have been made available to the members well in time. The debate on the motion may be concluded today itself; if need be, it may continue even beyond 6 p.m. About this, I leave it to the judgment of the House. The mover of this motion may move the motion and then speak. The Judge or the lawyer of the Judge may be allowed to make submission to the House in this matter and then withdraw. The mover of the motion may reply to the debate; then the motion and address to be presented to the President of India may be put to vote. The motion and the address to be passed need the support of majority of the total membership of the House and also the majority of not less than two-third members of the House present and voting. [L.S. Deb., 10-5-1993, cc. 486-87].

The House agreed to the above procedure.

Somnath Chatterjee, who was first in priority, moved both the motions (which were discussed together) and also spoke. Thereafter, Kapil Sibal, the Counsel for Justice V. Ramaswami, made submissions from the Bar of the House on behalf of Justice V. Ramaswami. After making his submissions, the Counsel withdrew. Other members were allowed to speak. The discussion on the motions continued on next day as well i.e. 11 May 1993. After the members had spoken, the mover of the motions replied to the debate.

In the event of the adoption of the motion in accordance with the constitutional provisions, the misbehaviour or incapacity of the Judge will be deemed to have been proved and an address praying for the removal of the Judge will be presented in the prescribed manner by each House of Parliament in the same session in which the motion has been adopted<sup>32</sup>.

Before the procedure was laid down by law, notices of motions for the removal of a Judge on the ground of misbehaviour or incapacity were on occasions tabled by members. Whenever a notice was received from a member of his intention to move such a motion, the Speaker discussed the matter with the member and examined the material on which the allegation was based to ensure that there was a prima facie case to proceed in the matter. He asked the member not to make the contents of his motion public: in fact, a strict secrecy about the matter was ensured. After the Speaker had satisfied himself that there was a prima facie case, he sent a copy of the complaint to the Chief Justice of the concerned High Court and to the Chief Justice of India to look into the matter. A copy was also sent to the Minister of Home Affairs for his comments. The Speaker adopted this procedure in order to resolve the matter without its being raised on the floor of the House.

As a result of the adoption of this procedure in such cases, either the Judge concerned retired voluntarily or the defect was soon rectified and thus unpleasant controversy which might have lowered the prestige of Judiciary was avoided on the floor of the House, and the cases complained of were resolved before the matter could be raised in the House<sup>33</sup>.

As a result of the division (Ayes: 196 and Noes : Nil), the motion and the address were declared as not carried by the requisite majority in accordance with clause (4) of article 124 of the Constitution. In case of Justice Soumitra Sen, the motion and the address were put to the vote of the Rajya Sabha on 18 August 2011. As a result of the division (Ayes: 189 and Noes: 19), the motion and the address were carried by the requisite majority in accordance with clause (4) of article 124 read with art. 217(1)(b) of the Constitution. Message was transmitted to the Lok Sabha Secretariat on the same day and was reported in the Lok Sabha on 19 August 2011. The address passed by the Rajya Sabha for presenting to the President was also laid on the Table of Lok Sabha.

The motion to consider and support the motion and the address supported by the Rajya Sabha and an address by the Lok Sabha for presenting to the President, praying for removal of Justice Soumitra Sen from office were included in the List of Business for 5 September 2011 for being taken up at 14.00 hrs. When House met at 14.00 hrs. the Minister of Law and Justice informed the House about the resignation of Soumitra Sen. Thereupon, the Speaker after taking sense of the House decided not to proceed with the items regarding removal of Justice Soumitra Sen. Accordingly, the items were not taken up. [*L.S. the Judiciary and the Executive have been sufficiently demarcated. As observed by Raghava Rao J.:

The powers of each one of the three organs have to be exercised as fundamentally subject to the provisions of the Constitution relating to that organ individually as well as to the provisions relating to other organs...It is the respect that is accorded by one organ of the State to the others that ensures that healthy working of the Constitution which is the acid test of its merits whatever the paper value of its provisions<sup>34</sup>.

Both Parliament and State Legislatures are sovereign within the limits assigned to them by the Constitution. The supremacy of the Legislature under a written Constitution, as observed by the Supreme Court, is only within what is in its power but what is within its power and what is not, when any specific Act is challenged, it is for the Courts to say<sup>35</sup>.

All legislations, whether Union, State or delegated, are subject to the doctrine of ultra vires and liable to judicial review<sup>36</sup>. The scope of review is limited to see whether the legislation impugned falls within the periphery of the power conferred and whether it is in contravention of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by the Constitution or of any other mandatory provision of the Constitution. The Courts are concerned only with interpreting the law and are not to enter upon a discussion as to what the law should be<sup>37</sup>. The Legislature can amend laws to meet the lacunae or defects pointed out therein by the Courts, or legislate afresh to give effect to their original intentions and such amendments are accepted by the Court as valid law.

Further, under article 368 of the Constitution, Parliament has been empowered to amend the Constitution by way of addition, variation or repeal of any provision according to the procedure laid down therein. But this constituent power is subject to the 'doctrine of basic structure of the Constitution' as propounded by the Supreme Court vide its judgement in His Holiness Kesavananda Bharati Sripadagalvaru v. State of Kerala case<sup>38</sup> and reiterated in number of subsequent cases. Accordingly, the position at present is that every provision of the Constitution can be amended provided

Prior to 1976, the constitutional validity of a Union law could be questioned before either the Supreme Court or a High Court. After the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976, only the Supreme Court had exclusive jurisdiction as regards determination of the constitutional validity of Union laws and the High Courts were debarred from considering the validity of a Union law.

Similarly, the High Courts were conferred with exclusive original jurisdiction in the matter of validity of State laws. However, the Supreme Court continued to have authority to decide upon the validity of State laws in its appellate jurisdiction; where a case involved constitutional validity of both a Union law and a State law, the Supreme Court alone had the jurisdiction to determine the constitutional validity of such laws. But, with the enforcement of the Constitution (Forty-third Amendment) Act, 1977 the position prevailing prior to 1976 with regard to the constitutional validity of a Union or State law stands restored.

that the basic foundation and structure of the Constitution remains the same. The basic features of the Constitution are not finite. In the Indira Nehru Gandhi v. Raj Narain case<sup>39</sup> and also in the Minerva Mills Ltd. v. Union of India case<sup>40</sup>, it has been observed by the Supreme Court that the claim of any particular feature of the Constitution to be a 'basic feature' would be determined by the Court in each case that comes before it. The Supreme Court besides being the highest court of appeal in the country is also the guardian of the Constitution. Thus the final say as to what the Constitutional provisions mean rests with the Supreme Court.

Courts not to inquire into Proceedings of Parliament

Subject to the provisions of the Constitution, Parliament and the State Legislatures can regulate their own procedure. The validity of any proceedings in either House of Parliament or a State Legislature cannot be questioned before a court of law on the ground of any alleged irregularity of procedure<sup>41</sup>. In its judgment in Raja Ram Pal v. The Hon 'ble Speaker, Lok Sabha and Ors. Case<sup>42</sup>, it has been held by the Supreme Court that in the context of article 122(1), mere irregularity of the procedure cannot be a ground of challenge to the proceedings in Parliament or effect thereof, and while the same view can be adopted as to the element of "irrationality", but in the constitutional scheme, illegality or unconstitutionality will not save the Parliamentary proceedings. Apart from Parliament or the State Legislatures, the Presiding Officer of each House or any other officer or member of Parliament or State Legislature who is for the time being vested with the powers to regulate procedure or the conduct of business or to maintain order in, or to enforce or carry out the decision of, either House of Parliament or the State Legislature, as the case may be, is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts in exercise of those powers<sup>43</sup>.

The Supreme Court also upheld the power of Parliament to expel its members from the House<sup>44</sup>.

The Courts have no jurisdiction to issue a writ, direction or order relating to a matter in respect of what is done in the House or which affects the internal affairs of the House<sup>45</sup>. Similarly, the Presiding Officer is also not subject to the jurisdiction of any court for failure to exercise his power to regulate the proceedings of the House<sup>46</sup>.

The Constitution guarantees immunity from proceedings in any Court in respect of “anything” said in the House or any committee thereof, and “anything” has been held to be equivalent to “everything”<sup>47</sup>.

Restrictions on Questions and Discussion on Conduct of Judges in Parliament

In order to secure the independence of the Judges, both from the Executive as also from the Legislature, specific provisions have been made in the Constitution to provide that the conduct of a Judge of the Supreme Court or a High Court ‘in the discharge of his duties’ cannot be discussed in Parliament except upon a substantive motion for presenting an address to the President for removal of a Judge<sup>48</sup>.

Thus, judicial conduct of a Judge of the Supreme Court or of a High Court cannot be discussed on the floor of the House in any debate<sup>49</sup> or commented upon collaterally, by way of a motion for adjournment<sup>50</sup> or question, etc<sup>51</sup>. The only mode of discussing the conduct of a Judge in the discharge of his duties is upon a motion for his removal and that too when the motion is tabled under the specified provisions and the procedure prescribed therein is followed. If in the discharge of his judicial functions, a Judge comes to an erroneous finding or makes adverse comments upon any person, the only course open is to appeal against that decision, if an appeal, review or revision lies. The protection of the Judge in this regard is restricted only in respect of his judicial duties and does not apply to his private conduct<sup>52</sup>.

The State Legislatures are also prohibited from discussing the conduct of a Judge of the Supreme Court or of High Court in the discharge of his duties<sup>53</sup>.

Matters relating to appointment of Chief Justice of India and promotion and supersession of Judges of Supreme Court, etc. have, however, been discussed in the Lok Sabha<sup>54</sup>.

Normally, matters relating to judicial functions of the Courts are not permitted to be raised in the House but questions asking for factual information about High Courts or the extent of arrears pending in the High Courts have been admitted and answered in the Lok Sabha<sup>55</sup>. Similarly, private members' resolutions regarding use of Hindi in Supreme Court and High Courts, the arrears of work in the High Courts, vacations in High Courts or the general question of transfer of Judges among different High Courts have also been admitted<sup>56</sup>. Judgments given by Courts can be referred to in the course of speeches by members to explain a point of view, to suggest whether the laws need be changed and, if so, in what manner, or to pinpoint criticism against the Government or individuals referred to in the judgment. Members may also observe that a particular conclusion was erroneous on the facts, or the facts were not properly placed before the Judge<sup>57</sup>.

Discussion on sub judice Matters

It is the absolute privilege of the Legislatures and members thereof to discuss and deliberate upon all matters pertaining to the governance of the country and its people. Freedom of speech on the floor of the House is the essence of parliamentary democracy. Certain restrictions on this freedom have, to a limited degree, been self-imposed. One such restriction is that the discussion on matters pending adjudication before courts of law should be avoided on the floor of the House, so that the courts function uninfluenced by anything said outside the ambit of trial in dealing with such matters.

- (iii) A private member's resolution by Ch. Lachchi Ram regarding use of Hindi in the Supreme Court and High Courts was admitted and included in the List of Business of Private Members' Resolution for 12 April 1989.

While applying the restrictions regarding the rule of sub judice, it has to be ensured that the primary right of freedom of speech is not unduly impaired to the prejudice of the Legislatures. In this context, the Speaker ruled:

The rule whether a motion which relates to a matter which is under adjudication by a court of law should be admitted or discussed in the House has to be interpreted strictly. While on the one hand the Chair has to ensure that no discussion in the House should prejudice the course of justice, the Chair has also to see that the House is not debarred from discussing an urgent matter of public importance on the ground that a similar, allied or linked matter is before a court of law. The test of sub judice in my opinion should be that the matter sought to be raised in the House is substantially identical with the one on which a court of law has to adjudicate. Further, in case the Chair holds that a matter is sub judice, the effect of this ruling is that the discussion on the matter is postponed till judgment of the court is delivered. The bar of sub judice will not apply thereafter, unless the matter becomes sub judice again on an appeal to the higher court<sup>58</sup>.

It is a well-established rule that discussion on a matter which is sub judice is out of order<sup>59</sup>, and it has been held that a matter is not sub judice until legal proceedings have actually started<sup>60</sup>. However, having regard to the public importance of the issue and in view of consistent demands by members of various political parties/groups, the Speaker may permit a discussion on a sub judice matter. Where a discussion on a sub judice matter is permitted, the Speaker always cautions the members not to say anything which may prejudice the course of action of the matter before the Court in any manner<sup>61</sup>. The question whether a particular matter is sub judice is decided by the Speaker on the merits of each case.

A matter does not become sub judice if a writ petition for admission is pending before a court<sup>62</sup>.

(i) Statement made by the Minister of Home Affairs on 4 December 1981 re: tragic death of 45 persons and injuries to several others at Qutab Minar, Delhi on 4 December 1981 (Under Rule 193 on 7 December 1981);

(ii) Motion calling upon the Prime Minister to drop three Ministers from his Government namely Lal Krishna Advani, Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi and Uma Bharti against whom prima-facie charges were found to exist for their involvement in the demolition of the Babri Masjid on 6 December 1992 (Under Rule 184 on 13 December 2000 and 14 December 2000);

(iii) Ayodhya issue (Under Rule 193 on 3 December 2001);

(iv) Situation arising out of the ongoing sealing drive in Delhi (Under Rule 193 on 27 November 2006).

62. L.S. Deb., 6-9-1966, c. 9476.—It was also held that the writ petition could not stand in the way of legislation.

Under the Rules of Lok Sabha, any matter which is under adjudication by a court of law having jurisdiction in any part of India cannot be raised in the House in any form such as questions<sup>63</sup>, adjournment motions<sup>64</sup>, motions<sup>65</sup>, resolutions<sup>66</sup> and cut motions<sup>67</sup>. An adjournment motion, though admitted, cannot be proceeded with at the appointed hour if by that time the subject matter thereof has become sub judice<sup>68</sup>. If the subject matter of an adjournment motion consists of two parts and one part becomes sub judice after leave of the House to the moving of the motion has been granted, discussion on the motion is restricted to the other part which is not sub judice<sup>69</sup>. A resolution was also not allowed to be moved as the matter had since become sub judice<sup>70</sup>.

The rule has been extended to matters pending before a parliamentary committee, any statutory tribunal or statutory authority performing any judicial or quasi-judicial functions or any commission or court of inquiry appointed to inquire into, or investigate any matter. Such matters are not ordinarily raised by way of a question, an adjournment motion, a resolution, motion or cut motion. However, there is a provision that those aspects whose discussion might not prejudice the inquiry can be allowed by the Speaker. Discussion on a matter of public importance, or of great importance may be allowed but one shall have to confine oneself within limits.<sup>71</sup> The Speaker may, admit a question in case it refers to matters concerned with procedure or subject or stage of inquiry if it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of the matter by the tribunal or commission or court of inquiry<sup>72</sup>. Likewise, the Speaker may, in his discretion, allow any such matter being raised in the House, on an adjournment motion, resolution, motion or cut motion as is concerned with procedure or subject or stage of inquiry if he is satisfied that it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of such matter by the statutory tribunal, statutory authority performing any judicial or quasi-judicial functions, or commission or court of inquiry<sup>73</sup>.

A question on a subject under police investigation is not disallowed on the ground that the matter is sub judice. However, questions regarding matters under police investigation have been discouraged; members in possession of any particular and reliable information about a matter under police investigation have been advised to pass on that information to the Minister concerned<sup>74</sup>.

A member, during the course of his speech, is required not to refer to any matter of fact on which a judicial decision is pending<sup>75</sup>. Discussion on a matter which is sub judice is out of order<sup>76</sup>. On an objection being raised that a member should not be allowed to quote from a document as it would prejudice a case pending judicial decision, the Speaker permitted the member to quote only that portion which was relevant to contradict points raised by the Minister in his statement laid on the Table<sup>77</sup>. The Speaker has, however, ruled that the members are free to make their observations by way of advancing arguments on a matter which is sub judice and the rule will not come in their way<sup>78</sup>.

So far as privilege matters are concerned, a Legislature is the sole judge of its privileges. The rule of sub judice does not apply to matters of privilege or in matters where disciplinary jurisdiction of the House with respect to its own members is concerned<sup>79</sup>.

The rule of sub judice cannot stand in the way of legislation. Where a legislation has to be brought, the law-making has to be done, the rule of sub judice does not apply<sup>80</sup>. If the rule of sub judice were to be made applicable to legislation, it would not only make Legislatures subordinate to the courts in that matter but would make enactments impossible because numerous cases concerning a large number of statutes await adjudication at all times in one court or the other. Parliament's main function to make laws will thus come to a standstill. This is neither sanctioned by the Constitution nor justified on merits. Legislatures are supreme and sovereign in the matter of making laws and there is no bar on their work in the field of legislation. The law-making power of Parliament is unfettered with regard to legislation even when the subject matter of the legislation is sub judice. Whatever be the case and the merits of the case, Parliament can make any law<sup>81</sup>. The members should, however, refrain from referring to the facts of a case pending before a court when a Bill is under discussion in the House.

The Speaker has held that discussion on a Bill, the subject matter of which is sub judice by virtue of an appeal pending in the Supreme Court, is also in order, provided members refrain from referring to the facts of the particular case under appeal, as thereby the debate in the House is not likely to prejudice the hearing of the appeal by the Supreme Court<sup>82</sup>.

A Bill seeking to replace an Ordinance can be discussed in the House notwithstanding the fact that the Ordinance has been challenged in a court of law and the court has issued rule nisi to the Government<sup>83</sup>.

A point of order was raised in the House that the Resolution which had been moved disapproving of the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1968, could not be discussed as the Ordinance was pending adjudication before courts of law. The point of order was ruled out on the ground that “the rule of sub judice does not apply to legislation and the Resolution to disapprove the Ordinance is in the nature of legislation because all it seeks to do is to disapprove the Ordinance, i.e., to repeal the legislation which is in force, and that an Ordinance has the same force as a law of Parliament.” It was held that “Parliament is supreme and sovereign in the exercise of its legislative powers and cannot be paralysed by reason only of the fact that a writ petition against the constitutionality of the existing legislation is pending in a court of law”<sup>84</sup>.

As regards a matter which is sub judice and which has been referred to in a speech or debate or in any statement in the House, the Speaker has no power to order expunction of any words or phrases merely on the ground that they relate to a matter which is pending for a judicial decision in a court of law. Where a member insists on referring to a matter which is sub judice in spite of the Chair asking him not to do so, the Chair may ask him to discontinue his speech forthwith. The Speaker may also observe that the member should not have referred to a matter which was sub judice. Both the statements would then be on record, but the Speaker cannot and should not order expunction of such words.

In pursuance of the decision taken at the Conference of Presiding Officers held in New Delhi in October 1967, a Committee of Presiding Officers was constituted by the Chairman in November 1967 to examine inter alia as to the exact scope of the rule of sub judice namely, whether a matter whilst under adjudication by a court of law, should not be brought before the House by a motion or otherwise (except by means of a Bill) in relation to Parliamentary proceedings. The Committee examined the issue of sub judice and finalized the matter under the Chairmanship of V.S. Page, Chairman, Maharashtra Legislative Council. The Committee felt that it would be useful to the Presiding Officers if some guidelines were framed. The Committee accordingly, gave the following guidelines<sup>85</sup>.

1. Freedom of speech is a primary right whereas the rule of sub judice is a self-imposed restriction. So where need be, the latter must give way to the former.
2. Rule of sub judice has no application in privilege matters.
3. Rule of sub judice does not ordinarily apply to legislation.
4. Rule of sub judice should apply in regard to proceedings before civil and criminal courts and courts martial in any part of India and not ordinarily to other judicial or quasi-judicial bodies such as tribunals, etc., which are generally fact-finding bodies<sup>86</sup>.

86. According to Rule 188, no motion which seeks to raise discussion on a matter pending before any statutory tribunal or statutory authority performing any judicial or quasi-judicial functions or any

5. Rule of sub judice applies to questions, statements, motions (excluding motions in respect of leave to introduce a Bill, take a Bill into consideration, refer a Bill to a Select/Joint Committee, circulate a Bill for eliciting opinion thereon, pass a Bill), resolutions, and other debates.
6. Rule of sub judice applies only in regard to the specific issues before a court. The entire gamut of the matter is not precluded.
7. In case of linked matters, parts of which are sub judice and parts not sub judice, debate can be allowed on the matters which are not sub judice.
8. Rule of sub judice has application only during the period when the matter is under active consideration of a court of law or courts martial. That would mean as under—
  - (a) In criminal cases — From the time charge-sheet is filed till judgment is delivered.
  - (b) In courts martial — From the time charges are preferred till the charges are confirmed.
  - (c) In civil suits — From the time issues are framed till judgment is delivered.
  - (d) In writ petitions — From the time they are admitted till orders are passed.
  - (e) Injunction petitions — From the time they are admitted till orders are passed.
  - (f) Appeals — From the time the appeal is admitted till judgment is delivered.

Committee of Presiding Officers on Measures to Promote Harmonious Relations between the Legislature and the Judiciary

A Committee of Presiding Officers on Measures to Promote Harmonious Relations between the Legislature and the Judiciary was constituted by the Speaker, Lok Sabha and Chairman of the Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India in pursuance of a decision taken at the Presiding Officers' Conference held in Madras (now known as Chennai) on 25 and 26 June 1993. The Committee unanimously adopted the Report on 22 January 1994. The terms of reference of the Committee were:

- (i) To suggest measures to promote harmonious relations between the Legislature and the Judiciary; and
- (ii) To make any other recommendations on matters incidental to point (i) above.

commission or court of enquiry appointed to enquire into or investigate any matter, shall ordinarily be permitted to be moved:

Provided that the Speaker may, in his discretion, allow such matter being raised in the House as it is concerned with the procedure or subject or stage of enquiry if the Speaker is satisfied that it is not likely to prejudice the consideration of such matter by the statutory tribunal, statutory authority, commission or court of enquiry.

The Committee identified the following four main zones of conflict between the Legislature and the Judiciary:

- (i) Existence, extent and scope of parliamentary privileges and power of Legislatures to punish for contempt;
- (ii) Interference in the proceedings of Parliament/Legislatures;
- (iii) Decisions given by the Presiding Officers of Legislatures under the Anti-Defection Law; and
- (iv) Decisions given by the Presiding Officers of Legislatures in Administration of their Secretariats.

Each of these zones of conflict was dealt separately by the Committee which made the following observations/conclusions/recommendations in that regard<sup>87</sup>:

- (1) Existence, Extent and Scope of Parliamentary Privileges and Powers of Legislatures to punish for contempt

The power of the Parliament/Legislature to determine the existence, extent and scope of its privileges, to safeguard them against any infringement and to award punishment in case of any possible breach or contempt of the House is an essential right of the House. In fact, without the inherent right to protect its privileges and immunities and the power to punish breaches and contempt, all other privileges of the House have little meaning.

The Committee, however, observed that the intention of the founding fathers of the Constitution was very clear when they provided for express constitutional provision under article 105/194 in respect of the privileges of the House, its members and Committees and reiterate that the jurisdiction of the House to decide these matters is exclusive.

The Committee examined whether codification of privileges would help in bringing about greater clarity on the subject and thereby reduce the areas of conflict between the Legislature and the Judiciary. The Committee, however, opine that codification will not ipso facto ensure greater harmony between the Legislature and the Judiciary. It may, on the other hand, create other unforeseen problems.

The Committee observe that the Constitution has allotted specific duties and responsibilities to the Legislature and the Judiciary and their roles are intended to be complementary to each other. It would, therefore, be in the best interests of democracy in the country if both function with mutual trust and respect, each recognising the independence, dignity and jurisdiction of the other.

87. Report of the Committee of Presiding Officers on Measures to Promote Harmonious Relations between the Legislature and the Judiciary (Lok Sabha Secretariat, January 1994).

(2) Interference in the Proceedings of the Parliament/Legislatures

The Committee observe that under article 118/208 of the Constitution of India, each House of Parliament/State Legislatures has the right to frame rules for regulating, subject to the provisions of the Constitution, its procedure and conduct of its business. Judicial interference in the procedure of the Legislatures has thus added a conflicting dimension to the mutual relationship of the Legislature and the Judiciary.

While making the above observation, the Committee do not intend to take recourse to a blanket opinion that courts in India should not go into the proceedings of Legislatures. The Committee observe that in India, the Legislature is as much bound by the provisions of the Constitution as the Judiciary is. As per the system, it is the Legislature that makes the laws while the Judiciary interprets them and can also see if the laws are within the ambit of constitutional provisions or not.

In the opinion of the Committee, the question of proceedings of Legislatures in a parliamentary democracy essentially presupposes supremacy of Legislatures in their own sphere. Hence Legislatures need to have their essential freedom to conduct their own business with the due dignity, decorum and independence. The Committee, therefore, recommend that subject to the limits stipulated by the Constitution, the Legislatures should have complete freedom in matters of procedure and the conduct of business of their respective Houses.

In this regard, the Committee also took note of article 121/211 of the Constitution that imposes restriction on discussion in Parliament/State Legislatures with respect to the conduct of any Judge of the Supreme Court or of a High Court in the discharge of his duties. The Committee feel that a reciprocal provision with respect to the Presiding Officers may help in further safeguarding the independence and dignity of the Presiding Officers as also of their respective Houses. The Committee, therefore, recommend suitable amendment to the Constitution to that effect.

(3) Decisions given by the Presiding Officers of Legislatures under the Anti-Defection Law

The operation of the Anti-Defection Law has revealed several lacunae and deficiencies. As a result, while deciding the cases under the law, the Presiding Officers have given varied interpretations to its provisions. This has created considerable uncertainty in the area of its operation and has become a source of tension in the Legislature-Judiciary relationship. The power of the Presiding officers to decide the defection cases and the resultant disqualification of the members has been questioned on the ground of infringement of Fundamental Rights in the Supreme Court of India and various High Courts.

The Committee explored the possibility of entrusting the power to decide cases under the law to a judicial body without involving the Chairman/ Speaker of the House and opine that although such an arrangement may have several obvious advantages, it may create new areas of conflict.

The Committee examined the issue and opine that one of the following options can be followed in dealing with cases under the Anti-Defection Law:

- (a) The concerned Chairman/Speaker may decide the case and an appeal against such decision may lie in the Supreme Court of India if the case relates to the either House of the Parliament, or the concerned High Court if the case relates to a State Legislative Council/Assembly.

In such a case, the Chairman/Speaker, who acts as a judicial authority while deciding a case under the Anti-Defection Law, should not be a necessary party to such proceedings and appropriate laws should be drafted/ amended to provide for appeals to be filed against such decisions in the nature of an appeal from a Judgment by a Court of Law.

- (b) The concerned Chairman/Speaker may decide the case and an appeal against such decision may lie jointly with the President and Vice-President of India if the case relates to the Rajya Sabha; or the President of India, the Vice-President of India and the Speaker, Lok Sabha, if the case relates to the Lok Sabha; or the Governor of the State and the Chairman of the Legislative Council, if the case relates to the Legislative Council of a State; or the Governor of the State, the Chairman of the Legislative Council, if any, and the Speaker of the Assembly, if the case relates to the Legislative Assembly of a State.
- (c) The case may be decided by a Committee of senior members of the House and an appeal against the decision may lie with the concerned Chairman/Speaker of the House.
- (d) Any other procedure which may be agreed upon by the three organs of the State, namely, the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary.

The Committee recommend that the Speaker, Lok Sabha, may be authorised to take up the matter, if necessary, with the President, the Vice-President of India and any other authority to decide the proper procedure that may be adopted for such cases.

(4) Decisions given by the Presiding Officers of Legislatures in Administration of their Secretariats

The Committee observe that administrative matters of the Legislature Secretariats very often involve the Fundamental Rights of the individual employees as guaranteed in the Constitution of India. Such employees should, therefore, have the right to move the court as a means of redressal of their grievances under articles 32 and 226 of the Constitution.

On the question of the personal appearance of Presiding Officers before the court of law in matters relating to the administration of their Legislature Secretariats, the Committee took note of the fact that although the administrative decisions of the Chief Justice of India and the Chief Justices of various High Courts in relation to their respective Secretariats are also liable to be challenged in a court of law, they do not make personal appearance before the court in such matters. The Committee are of the opinion that on the same analogy, immunity should be provided to Presiding Officers also from personal appearance before the court in such matters.

The Committee also took note of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure in India which provide that in case of a suit against the Central/ State Government, the notice is served on the Secretary to that Government who in turn pursues the case in the court of law.

The Committee emphasise that in view of their unique position, important functions and the delicate role that Presiding Officers are called upon to perform in a parliamentary democracy, it is essential that their status, dignity and independence are safeguarded both by law and conventions. In this context, the Committee are of the opinion that personal appearance by a Presiding Officer in a court of law is uncalled for and must be avoided.

The Committee, therefore, recommend that Presiding Officers should not be made a party personally in a suit pertaining to the administrative matters of their Legislature Secretariats. The suit, in turn, could be filed against the concerned Legislature through the Secretary of the Legislature who can represent the Legislature in the court and if necessary appear personally in the case. The Committee recommend suitable amendment in the Code of Civil Procedure to provide for exemption to Presiding Officers of the two Houses of Parliament and State Legislatures in India from personal appearance in a court of law in a suit pertaining to the administrative matters of their Secretariats.

Resolutions Adopted at the Presiding Officers Conference

In December 2005, ten members were expelled from the membership of Lok Sabha due to acts of improper conduct of accepting money for asking questions in the House. Taking cognizance of the expelled members' plea, the Delhi High Court and the Hon'ble Supreme Court had issued notices inter alia against the Speaker of Lok Sabha and the Lok Sabha Secretariat. In the wake of the developments, Hon'ble Speaker convened All-Party Meeting on 20 January 2006 wherein it was unanimously decided that the Speaker should neither accept any such notice nor respond to the same. Meanwhile an Emergency Conference of Presiding Officers was called on 4 February 2006 at New Delhi to deliberate on the issue. The Conference at the end of the deliberations adopted the following Resolution:

The Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India, having assembled in their Emergency Conference in New Delhi on 4 February 2006 and having deliberated on the issue arising out of and related to proceedings initiated in Courts of Law challenging the expulsion of members of Parliament, unanimously endorse the decision taken by the Chairman, Rajya Sabha and the Speaker, Lok Sabha not to accept or respond to the notices issued by Courts of Law in the matter of expulsion of the members of the two Houses.

The Seventy-Second Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India held in Thiruvananthapuram, unanimously adopted on 26 May 2007 the following Resolution, 'Re. Relationship between Legislature and Judiciary'.

The Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India, assembled in their 72nd Conference in Thiruvananthapuram on 26 May 2007 notes with concern the trend of interference in the functioning of the Legislature leading to avoidable tension in the relationship between the Legislature and the Judiciary.

The Conference observes that according to the scheme of our Constitution, the three main organs of the State, that is, the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary function independently within their own spheres free from interference by the other two and that the Constitution clearly defines their powers and jurisdictions; demarcates their responsibilities; and regulates their relationship with one another.

The Conference reiterates that the powers, privileges and immunities of the Legislature are the Constitutional underpinning of the system of responsible Government for they ensure that the Constitutional functions performed by this organ is immune from the interference by either the Executive or the Judiciary.

The Conference, accordingly, resolves that as the Constitution does not contemplate any super organ having overriding authority over the other, the Legislature, as the supreme legislative and representative body which gives voice to the hopes and aspirations of the teeming millions of this country, is entitled to function without any interference from any other authority which is not accountable to the people and that all organs of the State strictly adhere to the functions and jurisdictions assigned to them by the Constitution so as to ensure the harmonious working of the democratic system in the country.

CHAPTER XLIV

Parliament and Civil Service

The term 'Civil Service' has been explained in a number of ways but no precise definition has been given to suit all circumstances. The most appropriate definition probably is that a civil servant is a civilian career public sector employee working for a government department or agency and this excludes the armed forces. The precise classes of personnel included therein vary from country to country. It may be incidentally mentioned that the term itself originated in relation to India; it first occurs in contradistinction to armed forces<sup>1</sup>.

The professional, scientific and technical classes represent a relatively new addition to the civil service. By accepted usage in India, the term 'Civil Service' is limited to the administrative class of public service though in the wider sense it may refer to millions of civil servants employed by Government whether in general or specialised fields. The term 'Civil Service' has, however, been used in this Chapter to mean and include the top civil officers who stand close to Ministers, give them advice and receive instructions from them and are responsible to them for the detailed working of the administrative machine. They form an elite corps of the civil service.

The essence of parliamentary government, especially where the franchise is democratic, is the appointment of Ministers, who may or may not be well versed in the art of administration though in positions of considerable administrative power. In the nature of things, before a Minister has had time to learn all the intricacies of his office he may be swept off to some new Department. In order to discharge his responsibilities satisfactorily a Minister requires constant assistance by the officers of his Ministry. The Minister has, by and large, to work with and through them.

Civil servants are permanent officers of Government and do not vacate office with the change in the Government; they continue to function whatever be the party in power. While Ministers are more interested, and rightly so, in issues of policy, the civil servants are concerned with the execution of that policy although the role of the civil servants in the framing of the policy is no less significant. The civil servants enjoy full freedom to express themselves frankly in giving advice to the Ministers. In fact, it is the duty of the civil servant to advise the Minister against the pitfalls of a particular policy. But once a final decision is taken by the Minister, the civil servant has to implement it strictly, even if the decision taken is contrary to the advice given by him.

1. The term 'Civil Service' was first used by the East India Company as a name for its establishment of non-military or 'civilian' employees in India to distinguish it from its military, maritime and ecclesiastical establishments. These civilian employees were originally traders; with the gradual transformation of the Company from a commercial corporation into a government, its 'civil servants' became administrators. Thus, the term 'Civil Service' acquired its present restricted meaning of the non-combatant branches of the administrative service of State.-E. Blunt, The I.C.S., The Indian Civil Service, 1937, p. 1.

An essential feature of the civil service is its non-political character. A civil servant is expected to be impartial. Though he can have his personal political viewpoints, he is not to express them in public or media. He should be a trustworthy advisor and his role is to formulate and implement the policy initiatives of the Government sincerely and honestly regardless of whoever is in power.

The civil servants should have a dedicated application to work. They have to develop a sense of deep involvement in the nation-building task without identifying themselves too closely with the political philosophy behind it.

Fundamentally, the relationship between the Civil Service and the Parliament is through the agency of the Minister. The civil servants have very little contact with the members as such. So far as the direct parliamentary control over the civil servants is concerned, there cannot be any; it is only through the Minister, who acts as a buffer between them. Parliament does not interfere with the Executive in day-to-day matters. But, the omissions or commissions of civil servants have to be justified before the Parliament. Therefore, a great responsibility lies on the administration to always give a correct position of all its activities to the Parliament.

Being the advisor, a civil servant has to be very careful about how he briefs his Minister keeping in view the fact that members are conscious of even small matters and that they have their own sources of information too. A civil servant should never mislead the Parliament, as it may excuse bad action but would never accept a deliberate misinformation. No information should be kept back from Parliament nor should it be delayed. Also information given to Parliament must be relevant and to the point; additional or unnecessary information should not be given.

Parliament, which is concerned with the welfare and well being of the people, also takes interest in the welfare of the civil servants as a whole. The various terms and conditions governing the method of recruitment and tenure of office<sup>2</sup> in regard to civil servants have to be approved by Parliament. Though individual cases are not brought before the House, Parliament concerns itself with the legitimate grievances of general character affecting the various categories of Civil Service. Such matters are raised by means of questions, discussions on specific motions, etc.<sup>3</sup>.

Parliament can create All-India Services (including an All-India Judicial Service)<sup>4</sup> common to the Union and the States and can regulate their recruitment and conditions of service<sup>5</sup>.

2. Arts. 309 and 310.

3. Similarly, there is no direct control of Parliament over the armed forces but it keeps itself well informed about their welfare, etc. through the Minister of Defence. Parliament does not normally discuss military operations or matters relating to discipline in the armed forces. It has, however, always found ample time to discuss policy matters concerning the armed forces and their general conditions of service.

4. Art. 312(3)—Any post inferior to that of a District Judge is not to be included in the All-India Judicial Service; also see art. 236.

5. Art. 312. Parliament has enacted the All India Services Act, 1951 which empowers the Union Government, after consultation with the States, to make rules regarding recruitment and conditions of service of persons appointed to an All-India Service, which have to be laid before Parliament and are subject to amendment by it. Rules have been framed by the Union Government in exercise of this power.

Parliament can by law provide for the setting up of Administrative Tribunals for resolving disputes relating to the recruitment and conditions of service of Union Government servants and servants of the States, including the employees of any local or other authority under the control of the Government of India or of a Corporation owned or controlled by the Government. Separate tribunals for the Union and for each State or for two or more States can be constituted. The jurisdiction and powers of such tribunals can also be defined by such a Parliamentary law<sup>6</sup>.

Role of Ministers vis-a-vis Civil Servants

Suggestions have been made from time to time about the role of Ministers in the democratic government, particularly with reference to their relationship with the civil servants. Since Independence, certain principles have been evolved for maintaining proper relations between a Minister and his Ministry.

Ministers have rather two different roles. In one of these, as members of the Cabinet, they rather share in the formulation of general government policy. For this purpose, apart from their general experience in life, their party activities and their membership in Parliament, the contribution that they can make, must derive from their second role as heads of particular Ministries. It is because, they have an opportunity to see the programmes actually conceive and develop. That they are aware of various administrative problems within their own Ministries.

Out of the All-India Services that have been constituted, the Indian Administrative Service and the Indian Police Service, in existence at the commencement of the Constitution, are deemed to have been created by Parliament under art. 312. In pursuance of a Resolution adopted by the Rajya Sabha, the All-India Services (Amendment) Act, 1963, was passed providing for the creation of three other All-India Services, namely, the Indian Service of Engineers, the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Medical and Health Service. The Indian Forest Service was constituted with effect from 1 July 1966. A Resolution for the creation of two more All-India Services — the Indian Agricultural Service and the Indian Educational Service — was adopted by the Rajya Sabha on 30 March 1965. Since many States decided not to opt for these two services, the centre did not proceed further in the matter.

In September 1946, the Indian Foreign Service (IFS) was established for India's diplomatic, consular and commercial representation overseas. In 1948, the first group of IFS officers was recruited under the combined Civil Services Examination administered by the Union Public Service Commission. Apart from this, the All-India Judicial Service was brought in along with clauses (3) and (4) of article 312 vide the Constitution (Forty-second Amendment) Act, 1976.

Besides the All-India Services, there are in existence a large number of Central Services of various descriptions and grades under the Union Government.

6. Art. 323A. The Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985 empowers the Union Government to establish Central Administrative Tribunals and State Administrative Tribunals to adjudicate disputes and complaints relating to service matters of Union Government employees and concerned State Government employees, respectively.

The Central Administrative Tribunal, which was set up on 1 November 1985 as a measure to provide speedy and inexpensive relief to Government employees, has started functioning in full swing with the setting up of six more Benches in June 1986. There are at present a total of 21 Benches of the Tribunal, namely, New Delhi, Ahmedabad, Allahabad, Bangaluru, Lucknow, Mumbai, Kolkata, Chandigarh, Cuttack, Ernakulam, Guwahati, Hyderabad, Jabalpur, Jodhpur, Jaipur, Chennai, Patna, Nagpur, Gwalior, Indore and Ranchi.

An effective Minister is the one, who appreciates, utilizes well, develops and gives general guidance to the operating agency which he heads. A good head of any organisation will expend a considerable part of his energies in upholding his subordinates, defending them from unwarranted and ignorant criticism, and thus encouraging them to make their best efforts.

If the Minister tries to make too many decisions himself, he might make many unwise decisions and also deprive himself of the aid and the abilities readily available to him in his own organisation. He should confine himself to relatively general decisions, and to relatively rare decisions that cannot satisfactorily be taken below his level. By and large, the successful Minister is he, who delegates adequately and gives general guidance to the systematic process by which decisions are reached below him. His fundamental responsibility, indeed, is for the method by which decisions are reached and for the deployment of personnel for the most satisfactory utilisation of their abilities<sup>7</sup>.

Doctrine of Ministerial Responsibility

The head of every Government Department is a Minister, and Parliament exercises control over the Department through the Minister. A Ministry has practically an autonomous existence of its own and conducts its business in pursuance of statutory provisions, rules and regulations or according to a long-standing practice. The parliamentary control over the Ministry rests in the fact that any action of the Ministry can be called in question by any member and the Minister responsible for the administration of that Ministry has to defend the acts of his officers, for it is a well-established constitutional principle that a Minister is responsible to Parliament for all the acts of his Ministry and it is he who takes the blame should Parliament disapprove of any administrative act. There can, however, be a case where a civil servant acts, either intentionally or irrationally, outside the policy of his Minister or contrary to that policy. By doing so, he relieves the Minister of the responsibility of protecting him. But the constitutional responsibility of the Minister to Parliament remains and he has to satisfy the Parliament that he is dealing with the matter adequately.

Parliament does not specify which civil servant should be punished nor how he should be punished. This is left to the discretion of the Government though Parliament may express its feelings. As to whether a civil servant should be punished for an act which Parliament has criticised or disapproved is also left to the Government to deal with<sup>8</sup>.

7. Paul H. Appleby, "Concerning Ministers", Indian Journal of Public Administration. April-June, 1955. Vol. I, No. 2, pp. 89-91.

8. The Government has internal procedures whereby indisciplined or erring civil servants are suitably punished. While arriving at decisions, the Government takes note of parliamentary criticism in the House in respect of individual officers, but it is entirely within its discretion to decide whether an officer should be punished and if so, what the nature of punishment should be. Parliament has, however, the right to be informed in such cases and it may comment on non-punishment or inadequacy of punishment. Such comments are generally offered by individual members but there is no formal motion before the House nor is any vote taken to determine the issue.

It is the Minister's duty to defend his subordinates, howsoever lowly, against unmerited or unfair criticism, especially when the civil servant is debarred from replying to criticism in his personal capacity. By doing so, the Minister engenders in the civil servants the confidence that they will receive a fair deal and due protection. The principle that persons who are not in a position to defend themselves should not be subjected to attack has been laid down repeatedly in the Lok Sabha with reference to officers of the Government as well as others. The Speaker has observed<sup>9</sup>:

I have said many times that it is wrong and it is not fair that any member of this House should refer to names of individuals who are not present in the House and who have no opportunity, therefore, of either explaining the facts to the House or replying to the charge made. Whatever defects were found or were believed to exist by the member who spoke, he could criticise the Minister without mentioning the names. It is the Minister who is responsible to this House and the officers who are acting under him must not come into the purview of the discussion in the House.

There is also a rule<sup>10</sup> on this question. Sometimes in the heat of debate allegations are made. I would like to appeal to members not to refer to any names—he who violates it will not be able to catch the Speaker's eye....

A member while criticising the policy of the Government is entitled to give out his views and make the allegations he thinks are well-founded. The mistake lies in mentioning names of particular officers and associating them with the allegations. That should not be done.

To a query of a member, whether in criticizing a Minister, members would be precluded from saying that the Minister had appointed such person because he was related to him, thereby avoiding making any charge against the person but making the charge against the Minister, the Speaker replied:

The member must first come to the Speaker if he wants to make a charge like that. The Speaker must be satisfied about the facts and then the allegation can be made. I am not going to permit mere relationship as a charge or a matter of insinuation that mere relationship gives a ground for believing that there has been nepotism. It should be the unanimous effort of the members of this House to see that the prestige of the administration by giving names like that is not lowered and the level of the debate does not go down. That is the whole point<sup>11</sup>.

However, there may be cases where in order to bring home certain defects in the administration, it may be necessary to refer to the official misconduct of any particular officer. In such a case, the procedure evolved is that if the member has sufficient material either from personal experience or on reliable evidence that an officer has been guilty of misconduct in his official duties, it is necessary that before raising the issue on the floor of the House he should, in the first instance, give intimation to the Minister concerned so that the Minister in turn may call for records and find out what answer he should give when the matter is taken up. He may have material to refute the allegations or he may be convinced that there is sufficient basis for the allegations in which case he may order an inquiry or take departmental action. This procedure, while achieving the purpose which a member has or should have in raising the matter, also safeguards the interests of officers who are not in a position to defend themselves in the House.

9. H.P. Deb., (II), 8-4-1954, cc. 4361-62.

10. Rule 353.

11. H.P. Deb., (II), 8-4-1954, c. 4363.

When serious charges were made on the floor of the House against certain officers, the Deputy Speaker observed:

With respect to these matters, I always expect of every hon. member here that before he or she wants to make such allegations, the hon. Minister should be informed of them, not with respect to the general points, but with respect to charges against individuals or with respect to the manner in which officers have conducted themselves. I always expect that the Minister should be given notice regarding such points, so that he may be able to find out and say whether the information is right or wrong, and we need not have in the proceedings information which is exaggerated or wrong.

Later on the same day, when the Deputy Speaker was asked to give a ruling as to whether it was in order to attack officers by name, he observed that because a member could attack a Minister it was neither fair nor proper nor consistent with the dignity of the House that officers should be singled out and their names mentioned and all sorts of baseless charges made against them, and reiterated his earlier observations<sup>12</sup>.

For all the active role that they are called upon to play, the civil servants have to avoid publicity and lime-light for themselves. According to the well-established convention, Ministers do not praise or abuse any officer on the floor of the House. In case the Minister names any officer for any good or bad action, the House becomes entitled to make comments in regard to that officer.

Functions of Civil Service vis-a-vis Parliament

In a democratic and welfare state, the members of the Civil Service work closely with the political executive. Remaining behind the scenes, they make policies, draw up and execute plans and schemes, formulate legislations and handle issues raised in the Parliament. The Officers' Gallery in the Lok Sabha, just behind the right side of the Speaker's Chair, is often occupied to capacity by civil servants. Though they are not actual participants in the business of the House, they help Ministers in the performance of their duties. From time to time, the Minister may rise from his seat to seek information on a particular point raised by a member or he may send one of his Deputy Ministers to get a few facts on a particular subject. Serving as a handy source of information and advice, the civil servants supply the necessary brief to enable the Government to reply to the House. The activities of the top civil servants are concerned mostly with the current parliamentary business when Parliament is sitting. Parliamentary business keeps the civil service busy with much of its work such as preparation of Bills, replies to questions in the House and to informal letters addressed to Ministers by members, compilation of notes for the use of Ministers during debate, briefs for their speeches in the House, etc.

12. H.P. Deb., 30-3-1953, cc. 3252-54.

It is the job of the civil servant to give right advice to the Minister. It is for the latter to accept that advice or not. Once he accepts the advice, it becomes his decision. The civil servant's responsibility comes in only in the matter of implementation.

The Civil Service is responsible for preparation of Budget and for spending moneys according to law and rules. The annual accounts prepared by the administration are examined thoroughly by the Comptroller and Auditor-General who makes reports on them which include comments not only on defective budgeting and financial irregularities but also on wasteful and nugatory expenditure and inefficiency. Ultimately, it is the Parliament and its committees which scrutinise these accounts in order to satisfy themselves that the sums of money have been directed to the purpose intended and the administration has spent them prudently and economically.

The top civil servants appear before the parliamentary committees like the Estimates Committee, Public Accounts Committee, Committee on Public Undertakings, Committee on Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, Departmentally Related Standing Committees, etc., almost on all matters on which reports are presented by these Committees. They are called upon to explain the working and performance of their Ministries, Departments and Public Undertakings, use of money consistent with efficiency, and how irregularities in accounts, if any, have taken place and the measures adopted to prevent them in future, or about the representation of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes in services, banks, public undertakings, etc. It is through Committees that top civil servants<sup>13</sup> come into close contact with members of Parliament and it is in these Committees that their mettle is tested. Officers of Government Departments or of Public Sector Undertakings also come in contact with members of Parliament when Parliamentary Committees undertake on-the-spot tours although during such tours the discussions are informal and no official evidence is taken.

In every Department, the administrative head of the Department is the custodian of the money. The administrative head, the Secretary to the Government of India in the Ministry, or other designated officers of a subordinate or attached office is the custodian of all money. So, it is under his signature that all accounts are compiled, money is spent and policies are implemented. Therefore, it is he who is responsible for the implementation of the policies. If something has gone wrong, he has to explain how it has gone wrong. That is why in a Parliamentary Committee, also it is only the officers, the secretaries and their subordinates, who appear and they have to explain why irregularities, if any, have taken place and why a particular policy should be followed or should not be followed.

As a rule, the various committees of the Lok Sabha do not mention names of officers in their reports. Wherever necessary, such officers are mentioned only by their designations and the committees recommend to Ministries concerned to take appropriate action against them. The committees do not concern themselves with individual appointments, promotions, transfers; they do not ask for names, except in rare cases, of officers who are at fault; they do not make investigations themselves nor do they come to any judgment as to the punishment that should be meted out to any recalcitrant officer. The committees adopt an impersonal attitude towards defaulting officers because committees are concerned with the system of administration and not with the individuals.

Due to the heavy pressure of business and limitations arising from the composition of Parliament a law-making body being non-technical in nature, it has to confine itself to broad objectives and policies; it is for the civil service to work out details within this framework. Under the compulsions of Parliamentary democracy and the dynamics of a 'welfare state', Parliament has to include in most of the statutes, special provisions empowering the Civil Service to make rules and regulations in respect of specified matters.

The delegation of this power of rule-making to the Civil Service brings it indirectly in contact with Parliament, through the Committee on Subordinate Legislation, the working of which has already been explained earlier<sup>14</sup>. The civil servants who make rules, regulations, orders, etc. know that they will have to justify them before this Committee and this constitutes a check, in addition to scrutiny by Parliament, upon any tendency on the part of the civil servants to try to exceed their statutory powers.

The civil servants are also called upon to explain before the Committee on Petitions why the grievances of individuals have not been remedied, and they may be directed by the Committee to look into them and furnish a satisfactory answer. Similarly, civil servants have to respond to any calls made on them or to produce documents and papers before any committee of Parliament.

Members of Parliament and Civil Servants

The relationship between members of Parliament and civil servants is largely governed by certain well-recognised principles and conventions developed over the years. Civil servants are enjoined to accord due courtesy and regard to the representatives of the people, and to help them to the extent possible in the discharge of important functions which they have to perform. In case, however, officers are unable to accede to the request or suggestions of members, the reasons for their inability are politely explained to them<sup>15</sup>.

In their official dealing with the members of Parliament, civil servants are required to adhere to the protocol norms laid down from time to time. To ensure that there is no violation of such norms and all government officers show due courtesy in their official dealings with the members of Lok Sabha, a Committee on Violation of Protocol Norms and Contemptuous Behaviour of Government Officers with Members of Lok Sabha was constituted with effect from 2 August 2012. The Committee has the mandate to examine every complaint referred to it by the Speaker relating to – (i) violation of protocol norms laid down from time to time regarding official dealings with members of Parliament; (ii) violation of instructions or guidelines issued by the Government regarding official dealings between Administration and members of Parliament; and (iii) discourteous behavior by government servants with a member during official dealings<sup>16</sup>.

Generally, there is no direct contact between the members of Parliament and the civil servants. However, in all matters of a routine character, members have been advised to address invariably their communications to the Secretary of the Ministry concerned, irrespective of the fact that the information required is in relation to the Ministry itself or an attached or subordinate office thereto. Where the matter is important and the member feels that it should receive consideration at a higher level, he may address the letter direct to the Minister or the Deputy Minister. In case a member wants to ascertain facts about a case of fraud, corruption, nepotism, bribery, maladministration, etc. which might have come to his notice, he may address the Minister concerned direct under copy to the Minister of Parliamentary Affairs, or discuss the matter with the Minister concerned personally<sup>17</sup>.

Communications received from members are given high priority in the Ministries. In the case of such of the communications as cannot be answered promptly, that is, to which replies cannot be given straightaway on the basis of information available, an interim reply is sent. All replies to communications are ordinarily issued with the approval of the Secretary or Joint Secretary concerned<sup>18</sup>.

Civil Servants and the Franchise

As already stated, a civil servant may have his own political views but he does not ally himself with any political group or party. No civil servant can be a member of, or be otherwise associated with, any political party or any organisation which takes part in politics nor can he take part in, subscribe in aid of, or assist in any other manner, any political movement or activity<sup>19</sup>. A civil servant cannot canvass or otherwise interfere or use his influence in connection with or take part in, an election to any Legislature or local authority<sup>20</sup>. If any civil servant wants to stand for election, he must resign before taking any step in that direction. While a civil servant has an unqualified right of vote, he is to so exercise it as to “give no indication of the manner in which he proposes to vote or has voted”<sup>21</sup>.

The courts of law have, however, held that a Government servant is entitled to nominate or second a candidate for election. The policy of the law is to keep Government servants aloof from politics and also to protect them from being imposed on by those with influence or in positions of authority and power, and to prevent the machinery of Government from being used in furtherance of a candidate's return. But at the same time it is not the policy of the law to disenfranchise them or to denude them altogether of their rights as ordinary citizens of the land. —Raj Krushna v. Binod, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 202.

The Civil Service today has become an integral part of the democratic process. Parliament, the Ministers and the Civil Service, together, have important and indeed vital roles to play. None of these three can function independently of the other with any real efficiency, particularly when Government's functions and activities/conditions and the well being go far beyond the maintenance of law and order and include almost everything that has the effect of improving the conditions and the well-being of the people.

It has also been held that a Government servant can be appointed as a polling agent. However, it would amount to corrupt practice if the candidate or his agent abuses the right to appoint a Government servant as polling agent by exploiting the situation for furthering his election prospects.—Satya Dev Bushahri v. Padam Dev, (1955) I.S.C.R. 549.

CHAPTER XLV

Parliament and the Press

In a parliamentary democracy, the Press (Media) has assumed the role of being the principal communication link between the Parliament and the people. It plays a pivotal role in the dissemination of information. In fact, it is generally the Press that provides the background needed to bring the work of Parliament in tune with the demands of time. It is also the Press, which conveys to the people the business transacted in the Parliament, the substance of parliamentary legislation and discussion, thereby enhancing public perception of Parliament. The Press also keeps people informed of what is happening in the Parliament. It is owing to the significant role played by it, that the Press is often regarded as the 'Fourth Estate' in a democratic polity. Both Press and Parliament which serve the public interest are vital for the successful as well as smooth functioning of democracy.

The Press is the standard vehicle for the dissemination of public opinion. It is through the Press that Parliament gathers information which helps it to keep surveillance and ensure the responsibility of the Executive to it effectively. Often called an extension of Parliament, the Press unearths administrative lapses; gives expression to public grievances and hardships, omissions and commissions by the Government and reports on how policies are being implemented and administration is affecting the people.

Much of the basic information required for parliamentary questions, motions and debates comes from the Press and this is an important tool on which a member often relies. Though what appears in the Press may influence the members and provide them with necessary background, the material itself does not form an authentic record of facts and exclusive reliance cannot be placed by a member of Parliament on the matter as reported. Thus, it has been ruled by successive Speakers that questions, motions and other notices which are merely based on Press reports may not be admitted. The member may be required to produce some other primary evidence on which his notice is based.

It is of paramount public and national importance that the proceedings of Parliament are communicated to the people who are interested in knowing what transpires within its walls because on what is said and done there depends the welfare of the community<sup>1</sup>. The Press can discharge this function effectively only if it enjoys what is termed as 'freedom of the Press'<sup>2</sup>.

2. In the words of Patanjali Sastry J., "...Freedom of speech and of the Press lay at the foundation of all democratic organizations, for without free political discussion, no public education, so essential for the proper functioning of the processes of popular Government, is possible". Romesh Thappar v. State of Madras, (1950) S.C.R. 594 (602).

In the judgment delivered in the Bennett Coleman & Co. case, the Supreme Court quoted: "Freedom of the Press is the Ark of the Covenant of Democracy because public criticism is essential to the working of its institutions..." A.I.R. 1973. S.C. 106(150).

Freedom of the Press

The expression, “Freedom of the Press” has been defined as freedom to hold opinions, to receive and to impart information through the printed word without any interference from any public authority<sup>3</sup>. But freedom carries with it responsibilities and cannot be absolute in a democracy or for that matter in any organised human society<sup>4</sup>. In the words of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, freedom, like everything else, and more than everything else, carries certain responsibilities and obligations and certain disciplines, and if these responsibilities and obligations and disciplines are lacking then it is no freedom, it is the absence of freedom, whether an individual indulges in it or a group or a newspaper indulges or anyone else<sup>5</sup>.

Freedom of the Press has not been expressly provided for in the Constitution, but is implicit in the fundamental right of the “freedom of speech and expression” guaranteed to the citizens under the Constitution<sup>6</sup>. Further, it has been settled by judicial decisions that freedom of speech and expression includes freedom of the Press<sup>7</sup>. Under the Constitution, freedom of the Press is not higher than the freedom of an ordinary citizen and is subject to reasonable restrictions being imposed by law in the interests of the sovereignty and integrity of India, the security of the State, public order, decency or morality, or in relation to contempt of court, defamation or incitement to an offence<sup>8</sup>. The term “freedom of speech and expression” includes the liberty to propagate not only one’s views but also the right to print matters which have been borrowed from someone else or are printed under the direction of that person<sup>9</sup> and also includes the liberty of publication and circulation<sup>10</sup>.

3. Report of the Press Commission, 1954, Part I, p. 358.

4. In the words of Blackstone, the liberty of the Press consists in laying no previous restraints upon publications, and not in freedom from censure for criminal matters when published — Blackstone’s Commentaries, Vol. V, pp. 151-52.

5. P. Deb., 16-5-1951, cc. 8823-24.

6. Art. 19(1)(a).

The non-reference to the liberty of the Press in art. 19(1)(a) was due to the fact that the express mention of the liberty of the Press was considered unnecessary. This was explained by Dr. B.R. Ambedkar in the Constituent Assembly in the following words

“...The press has no special rights which are not to be given or which are not to be exercised by the citizen in his individual capacity. The editor of a press or the manager are all citizens and therefore when they choose to write in newspapers, they are merely exercising their right of expression, and in my judgment therefore no special mention is necessary of the freedom of the press at all.”

Parliamentary Privileges and the Press

The question of privileges of Parliament vis-a-vis the Press arises mainly in two ways: the publication of the proceedings of Parliament, and comments casting reflections on either House, its committees, members or officers<sup>11</sup>.

Absolute immunity from proceedings in any court of law has been conferred under the Constitution on all persons connected with the publication of proceedings of either House of Parliament, if such publication is made by or under the authority of the House<sup>12</sup>. This immunity does not extend to the publication of reports of parliamentary proceedings in newspapers, whether published by a member of the House or by any other person, unless such publication is expressly authorised by either House<sup>13</sup>. However, statutory protection has been given to the publication in newspapers or broadcasts by wireless telegraphy of substantially true reports of any proceedings of either House of Parliament, provided the reports are for the public good and are not actuated by malice<sup>14</sup>. This protection has been accorded within the overall limitation that the House has the power to control and, if necessary, to prohibit the publication of its debates or proceedings and to punish for the violation of its orders<sup>15</sup>. Normally, no restrictions are imposed on reporting the proceedings of the House. But, when debates or proceedings of the House or its committees are reported mala fide or there is wilful misrepresentation or suppression of speeches of particular members, it is a breach of privilege and contempt of the House and the offender is liable to punishment<sup>16</sup>. Further, the Press is forbidden to publish any part of the proceedings or evidence given before, or any document presented to, a parliamentary committee before such proceedings or evidence or document has been reported to the House<sup>17</sup>. It is also incumbent on the Press not to disclose the proceedings or decisions of a secret sitting of the House, until the ban on secrecy is lifted by the House. Any 14. The protection was initially given in 1956 vide the Parliamentary Proceedings (Protection of Publication) Act, 1956. The said Act was repealed vide the Parliamentary Proceedings (Protection of Publication) Repeal Act, 1976. The protection was, however, restored to the Press by enacting the Parliamentary Proceedings (Protection of Publication) Act, 1977, in April 1977. Later, this provision was added to the Constitution of India by insertion of Art. 361 A.

According to parliamentary practice, usage and convention, it is improper for any person, though technically not a breach of privilege or contempt of the House, to give premature publicity in the Press to various other matters connected with the business of the House. For details, see Chapter XI—'Powers, Privileges and Immunities of Houses, their Committees and Members'.

such publication or disclosure is treated as a gross breach of privilege of the House<sup>18</sup>. Similarly, publication of such portion of the debates as have been expunged from the proceedings of the House by order of the Speaker is a breach of privilege and contempt of the House, and accordingly punishable<sup>19</sup>.

The Press has also to guard itself against printing or publishing any libels casting reflections on the character or proceedings of the House or its committees, or on any member for, or relating to his character or conduct as a member of Parliament, as such publication would constitute a breach of privilege and contempt of the House<sup>20</sup>.

However, it is considered inconsistent with the dignity of the House to take any serious notice or action in the case of publication of every defamatory statement which may constitute a breach of privilege or contempt of the House. In deciding such cases of libel, the extent and circumstances of the publication of the libellous statement as also the standing of the person making such statement are taken into consideration<sup>21</sup>.

Though it is obligatory on the Press to take notice of the expunction and not to publish the portions ordered to be expunged/not to go on record, the Press is kept advised as a measure of extra precaution about the expunction or portion not recorded and asked to check up with the Secretariat the exact portions expunged or not gone on record. Further, full facilities are given to the Press both in the matter of identification of members<sup>22</sup> and in resolving doubts by referring to the official record of the proceedings<sup>23</sup>.

The other facilities provided to the Press are briefly described in the following paragraphs:

Press Gallery Facilities

Press correspondents representing newspapers/news agencies/non-governmental Indian electronic media accredited to the Lok Sabha are admitted to the Press Gallery as per the discretion of the Speaker<sup>24</sup>. While exercising this power, the Speaker,

23. A notice regarding the portions ordered to be expunged/not to go on record is displayed on the notice board. Copies of the notice are also provided in the three Press Rooms informing the media not to publish the same.

24. The Press Gallery was open to the Press as usual even during the sessions held in the period of Emergency (1975-77). They were admitted to the Press Gallery on the orders of the Speaker. The however, takes into consideration the recommendations of the Press Advisory Committee<sup>25</sup> appointed by him every year from amongst the senior representatives of the Press having Press Gallery Passes. These passes are issued by the Secretary-General for a period of one year<sup>26</sup> in accordance with the general orders of the Speaker.

The Press Advisory Committee performs the following functions:

- (i) To recommend the issuance of temporary passes to the representatives of the Newspapers/News Agencies/Media intending to attend and cover the proceedings of the House from the Gallery and/or any other Parliamentary event or activity.
- (ii) To recommend the issuance of permanent passes to the representatives of the Newspapers/News Agencies/Media intending to report the proceedings of the House.
- (iii) To examine the complaints made against the representatives of the Newspapers/News Agencies/Media and to recommend to the Speaker, Lok Sabha, for appropriate action.
- (iv) To recommend to the Speaker, Lok Sabha, the kind of facilities that may be given to them to discharge their duties.
- (v) To do such other things which are related to their functions.

The Press Gallery of the Lok Sabha has a seating capacity for hundred correspondents and the seats are connected with simultaneous interpretation system. Besides, twenty-five additional chairs have been provided in the Press Gallery. Fifty-seven seats in the first two rows, provided with small writing desks and headphones connected with the simultaneous interpretation system are allotted to Speaker in his discretion extended Press Gallery facilities to certain Press Correspondents, whose accreditation had not even been renewed by the Government. The Press Correspondents were also permitted to take down the verbatim proceedings of the House. Press censorship imposed in the country by the Government was not applicable to parliamentary proceedings and the Censor Office of the Government was not allowed to function in Parliament House.

- 25. The first Press Advisory Committee consisting of seven members was appointed in 1929. In 1933, its name was changed to the Press Gallery Committee with enhanced membership of 9 members, which continued to be called so till 1993-94. In 1970-71, the membership was raised from 9 to 10, which was further increased to 12 in 1974-75. However, after the constitution of the Committee for the year 1993-94, the Speaker renamed it as the Press Advisory Committee instead of the Press Gallery Committee and the membership was also increased from twelve to twenty-one. In 2004, the membership was again raised to twenty-seven to give representation to all parts of the country. The Speaker nominates 27 members to the Committee, including four office bearers, viz. Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary and Joint Secretary. However, the number may vary, subject to the discretion of the Speaker. While nominating the members of the Committee, it is ensured that all parts of the country and correspondents of various language newspapers and the electronic media accredited to the Press Gallery are represented in the Committee. It is also kept in view that the members being nominated have adequate experience of reporting of the proceedings of Parliament and/or of State Legislatures/Foreign Parliaments.
- 26. Radio Frequency Tags are issued to the correspondents accredited to the Lok Sabha Press Gallery for a period of one year since the year 2004. As of September 2008, 385 Media personnel have been issued with Lok Sabha Press Gallery Passes which are valid for one year.

specific newspapers and news agencies in consultation with the Press Advisory Committee. The remaining sixty-eight seats are for free seating. Four large screen television sets have also been kept in the Press Gallery. Sufficient number of parliamentary papers, including Lists of Questions, Bulletins and Synopses are kept in the Press Gallery for consultation by the media persons.

Any misrepresentation of the proceedings of the House, advance publication of questions and answers or publication of any matter which is not intended for the public may be considered a sufficient ground for withdrawal of a Press Gallery Card<sup>27</sup>.

Supply of Parliamentary Papers

Parliamentary papers such as Lists of Business, Lists of Questions, Bulletins, copies of Bills as introduced in the House and reports of parliamentary committees and statements made by Ministers in the House are provided to the media persons covering the Lok Sabha proceedings. Copies of other papers laid on the Table, viz. Annual Reports/Memoranda of Understanding are photocopied and supplied to media persons on request.

Press Room Facilities

Three rooms furnished with sufficient number of chairs and desks are provided to enable the correspondents and supporting staff of news agencies, leading newspapers and Government electronic media to work and prepare their reports.

Press Library and Reference Facilities

A small Press Library maintained in the Press & Public Relations Wing contains books generally referred to by the Press correspondents. One set each of the debates of the various sessions, Reports of parliamentary committees, Bills as introduced and important Papers laid on the Table, etc., and books on parliamentary practices and procedure, are also maintained in the Press Library for the use of the media persons.

Media persons having Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Press Gallery Cards are also allowed to make use of the Parliament Library for reference purposes. Photo copies of chapters/portions of the book/document needed by correspondents are made available to them free of cost.

Central Hall and Lobby Facilities

Press correspondents with experience of reporting the proceedings of Parliament and/or of and of State Legislatures/Foreign Parliaments for at least ten years are given the privilege of admission to the Central Hall of the Parliament House on behalf of their respective newspapers/agencies under certain conditions.

---

27. As for the grounds for withdrawal of Press Gallery facilities to the Press Correspondents, see Chapter XXXIII—‘Admission of Strangers to Lok Sabha’.

Journalists of standing and integrity<sup>28</sup> holding Press Gallery Cards of Lok Sabha are being given the privilege of admission to the Lobbies of the House at the discretion of the Speaker. The issue of fresh Lobby Passes to Press correspondents was, however, discontinued from May 1970. In accordance with the decision of the General Purposes Committee taken at their sitting on 12 August 1986, the number of Lobby passes to the Press correspondents has been frozen at 12. However, if any vacancy occurs on account of the death of a correspondent or his leaving the profession, it could be filled up by accommodating another suitable journalist fulfilling the criteria.

Lobby Pass holders can contact the members of Parliament in the Lobby as well as in the Central Hall; whereas, the Central Hall Pass holders can contact members only in the Central Hall.

Media Work Station, Parliament Library Building

A Media Work Station, equipped with ten computers and two printers, a telephone and a Television set, has been provided for the use of mediapersons accredited to the Lok Sabha Press Gallery in the Parliament Library Building.

Issue of Press Releases

To help the mediapersons in preparing their dispatches on the reports presented to the House by the Parliamentary Committees, Press Releases are generally issued by the Secretariat on these reports, highlighting the salient points in the recommendations or observations made therein. Similar Press Releases are also issued about parliamentary conferences, Seminars, parliamentary events, etc. through fax, post and e-mail along with hard copies and images of scanned photographs.

Facilities to Government Publicity Organizations

Press Gallery facilities are provided to four Departments of the Government of India — All India Radio, Doordarshan, Press Information Bureau and the External Publicity Division.

The News Service Division of All India Radio (AIR) functions as a news agency and in order to help its effective functioning it has been given three seats in the Press Gallery. Against these three seats, about fifteen Press Gallery Cards are issued on alternate basis. Two of its senior representatives are granted Central Hall facilities also. Delhi Doordarshan, which also functions as a news agency, has been allotted one seat in the Press Gallery, against which six Press Gallery Cards are issued on alternate basis. Two of its senior representatives are extended Central Hall facilities.

The Press Information Bureau (PIB), whose officers are attached to different Ministries of the Government of India and who have to perform functions analogous to those of correspondents in giving publicity to the proceedings of the House, is allotted one seat in the Press Gallery. Against this seat, thirty-nine Information Officers are issued Press Gallery Cards on alternate basis. The Director-General (Media and Communication), Press Information Bureau is also extended the Central Hall facility. Similarly, the External Publicity Division is allotted one seat in the Press Gallery and its Information and Publicity Officers are issued four Press Gallery Cards against the seat on alternate basis.

Facilities to Press Photographers

Press Photographers and cameramen of electronic media accredited to the Press Information Bureau (PIB) of the Government of India are issued photographers' passes for entry to the Parliament precincts for taking photographs/TV shots of the functions/meetings arranged by the Secretariat<sup>29</sup> in the Parliament House/Parliament House Annexe/Parliament Library Building. Passes are issued to photographers of the Photo Division, print media and cameramen of the electronic media who are permitted to take the film shots of the selected places inside the Parliament Estate, provided the film shots are required for educational purposes and not for commercial use.

Photographers accredited to the Press Information Bureau are, however, permitted to take photographs of high dignitaries and members of Parliament only from Gate No. 1 and 4 of Parliament House and from outside the VIP Gate in Parliament House Annexe on production of their respective PIB accreditation cards.

Facilities provided during Conferences

During international Parliamentary Conferences, Seminars, Symposia, etc. hosted by the Parliament of India in New Delhi, Media Centres are set up at the venue wherein facilities such as computers with internet connections, telephones, fax and photocopy are provided to accredited mediapersons to enable them to prepare and transmit their reports.

Teleprinter Service

In order to keep members posted with the latest developments in the country and abroad, particularly during the sessions of Parliament, Hindi and English teleprinters served by national news agencies, have been installed in Parliament House. Similarly, Hindi and English teleprinters, fed by national news agencies have also been installed in Parliament Library Building. Important news items received on these teleprinters are collected, scanned and displayed on a News Display Board located near the Ground Floor Library at regular intervals throughout the day. Besides, news scanners have also been installed at select places in the Parliament House.

Familiarization Programme for Mediapersons

The Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training of the Lok Sabha Secretariat organizes Familiarization Programmes for the benefit of Media persons which provide them opportunity to interact on various relevant parliamentary themes with the distinguished members of faculty. The Familiarization Programme is so scheduled as to provide the mediapersons a deeper insight into the operational dynamics of the Indian parliamentary system.

Catering Facilities for the Press

Room No. 54 and 73 in Parliament House and G142 in Parliament Library Building have been exclusively reserved for the mediapersons to enable them to have snacks and food. Two television sets and a telephone have been provided in the room. A pigeon-hole has also been provided to keep their mobile phones before entering the Press Gallery.

Access to Mediapersons' Children to the Children's Corner

Children in the age group of 8 to 17 years of Mediapersons, accredited to the Press Galleries of Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha are entitled to access the Children's Corner of the Parliament Library.

CHAPTER XLVI

Telecasting and Broadcasting of Parliamentary Proceedings

The desirability of allowing the entry of the electronic media inside the legislative chambers has been engaging the attention of the Presiding Officers and others for a long time. Concrete steps were taken in this direction by the end of 1989<sup>1</sup>. On 20 December 1989, for the first time, the Address by the President to the members of the two Houses of Parliament, assembled together in the Central Hall, was permitted to be telecast/broadcast live, by Doordarshan/All India Radio.

Subsequently, serious consideration to this issue was given when the Deputy Speaker of the Ninth Lok Sabha mooted for the first time a very comprehensive proposal highlighting the feasibility, technical viability, modalities and the general advantages of telecasting of parliamentary proceedings.

The matter was considered by the General Purposes Committee of the Lok Sabha at its meeting held on 23 August 1990. The Committee authorised the then Speaker to constitute a Joint Sub-Committee of both the Houses to examine the desirability, technical feasibility and cost involved in televising the proceedings of both the Houses and to make suitable recommendations for their consideration. Accordingly, the Speaker, Lok Sabha, constituted a Joint Sub-Committee with six members from the Lok Sabha and three members from the Rajya Sabha<sup>2</sup>. This Committee could not proceed with their work as the Ninth Lok Sabha was dissolved on 13 March 1991. However, the issue of televising parliamentary proceedings remained alive.

After the constitution of the Tenth Lok Sabha, the matter was taken up afresh by the Speaker, who held discussions with the Leaders of Parties and Groups in the Lok Sabha. In a meeting with the Ministers of Parliamentary Affairs and Information and Broadcasting and senior officers of the Lok Sabha Secretariat and other concerned Departments held on 18 November 1991, it was unanimously agreed that televising of the Question Hour might begin on an experimental basis. The matter was considered in depth on 26 November 1991, first by the General Purposes Committee of the Lok Sabha<sup>3</sup> and then at a joint sitting of the General Purposes Committees of both

1. The speeches made in the House, as early as on the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi, were however, recorded and later Broadcast by All India Radio. In the Budget Session 1946, a question was tabled by a member suggesting to the Government to consider the advisability of installing loud speakers outside the Chamber to enable the public to hear the proceedings of the House. Speaker Mavalankar did not favour the idea and the question was answered accordingly by the Leader of the House on 26 February 1946.
  2. The Members from the Lok Sabha were Satya Pal Malik (Chairman), Basudeb Acharya, Sontosh Mohan Dev, Indrajit Gupta, Jaswant Singh and R. Muthiah and those from the Rajya Sabha were Dr. Bapu Kaldate, P. Shiv Shanker and Atal Bihari Vajpayee.
  3. The following points/decisions emerged out of the discussion on various aspects of the proposal:
    - (i) The proposal to televise the proceedings of the House was laudable;

the Houses<sup>4</sup>. It was decided to record the proceedings of the Question Hour in the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha. These recordings, after adding the question in the text form, voicing it over and then superimposing the names of the members who asked questions and the Ministers who answered them, were to be telecast the next morning. It was also decided that the Question Hour in the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha might be telecast during alternative weeks.

Soon after the above decision was taken, the Question Hour of the Lok Sabha was telefilmed on 2 December 1991 and telecast on the following morning from 7.15 to 8.15 hours. Thus, the Parliament of India joined the select band of those Parliaments all over the world that permitted telecast of their proceedings. This experiment continued throughout the Winter Session of 1991. On 1 January 1992, the Speaker, Lok Sabha, constituted a ten-member Parliamentary Committee<sup>5</sup> to suggest improvements in the lighting and audio systems. On the recommendations<sup>6</sup> of this Committee, necessary modifications/changes were effected in course of time.

- (ii) At the initial stage, telecasting might be confined to the proceedings of the Question Hour only. Later on, matters raised under Rule 377, important points raised during the so-called 'Zero Hour' and legislative and financial business should also be telecast;
  - (iii) A small committee may be set up under the Chairmanship of the Speaker, Lok Sabha to decide about the occasions, issues and events to be telecast;
  - (iv) As the members would like to watch the proceedings being telecast, the timing of such telecast should not clash with the timing of the sitting of the House. Several members, including the Minister of Information & Broadcasting, favoured telecast of the proceedings on the next day during morning transmission;
  - (v) The Committee agreed that only the recorded version of the proceedings as approved by the Speaker may be telecast.
  - (vi) Framing of guidelines in consultation with the Leaders of various Parties/Groups in Parliament in regard to editing of the proceedings was suggested; and
  - (vii) A review of the proceedings of Parliament during the week might be telecast on weekends, i.e. on Saturdays and Sundays.
4. The following points/decisions emerged out of the discussions during these meetings:
    - (i) There was near unanimity in regard to the proposal to telecast the proceedings of the two Houses;
    - (ii) At the initial stage, proceedings of the Question Hour may be televised. At later stages proceedings relating to legislation, financial and other important matters may also be televised;
    - (iii) The timing of the telecast should not clash with the timings of the two Houses; and
    - (iv) In view of the infrastructural constraints, it was felt that to begin with, the pre-recorded proceedings of the two Houses might be telecast on alternate weeks.
  5. Members from the Lok Sabha were Sunil Dutt (Chairman), Arvind Trivedi, Mohan Singh, Saifuddin Chaudhry, D. Venkateswara Rao and Geeta Mukherjee; members from the Rajya Sabha were Suresh Pachauri, Shankar Dayal Singh, Sarala Maheshwari and Sushma Swaraj.
  6. The Committee stressed the need to ensure glare-free lighting arrangements without disturbing the aesthetics of the Chamber. The Committee also wanted the height of the microphone stands to be reduced so that a full view of the Minister/member is not blocked from the eye of the camera. It was also suggested to have the pillars and walls in the Chamber painted in white colour, so that better light effect could be created. The Committee reiterated the need to procure more sophisticated cameras and other allied equipment so that the need for high intensity lights as was provided in the Chamber could be obviated.

With a view to making further improvements in the televising arrangements, the Speaker deputed a Parliamentary Study Group to visit U.K., France and Germany in June 1992 to study the technological and procedural aspects of televising parliamentary proceedings. A seven-member team, led by the Minister of Information and Broadcasting, studied the technology and design of the individual systems and collected information on the procedures being followed by the three countries in implementing the same and submitted a comprehensive report incorporating therein several recommendations.

Encouraged by the public response to the initial phase of televising the Question Hour, the General Purposes Committee of the Lok Sabha decided not only to continue with it but also to expand further the scope of telecasting. Accordingly, besides the Address by the President on 24 February 1992, the presentation of the Railway Budget and the General Budget were televised live for the first time on 25 February 1992 and 29 February 1992, respectively<sup>7</sup>. Further, important speeches of the Prime Minister, Leader of the Opposition and leaders of other parties during the discussion on the Motion of Thanks to the President for his Address, general debate on the Budget and discussions on the Demands for Grants of the Ministries like Human Resource Development, Agriculture, Food, Rural Development, Civil Supplies and External Affairs were telecast in capsule form in order to project the views of various parties for the benefit of the viewers<sup>8</sup>. Doordarshan used to telecast these speeches on Mondays when there was no telecast of the Question Hour. The first such telecast was made on Monday, 23 March 1992. The complete discussions on the Demands for Grants of the above Ministries were also telefilmed for archival purposes. A meeting of the leaders of Parties and Groups in the Lok Sabha on 7 July 1992 decided that the excerpts from the proceedings could be shown in the Doordarshan news bulletin(s) the same day<sup>9</sup>.

Since 18 April 1994, the entire proceedings of the Lok Sabha are being telefilmed<sup>10</sup> for archival purposes.

A major step towards the live telecast of the entire parliamentary proceedings was taken on 25 July 1994 when a 100 Watt VHF transmitter was installed in the Parliament House. With the help of this Low Power Transmitter (LPT), live telecast of the Lok Sabha proceedings within a radius of 15 kilometres from Parliament House was formally started from 25 August 1994<sup>11</sup>. The telecast was available on Channel 11 Band 3. The live telecast of the Rajya Sabha was started on 7 December 1994 on Channel 9 Band 3 through another LPT, also installed in the Parliament House.

Besides, since 7 December 1994, the proceedings of the Question Hour of both the Houses are being telecast live on alternate weeks throughout the country on the primary channel of Doordarshan from 1100. to 1200 hours.<sup>12</sup> In addition to the Question Hour, the Address by the President, Railway and General Budgets and Debates on the Motions of Confidence/No-Confidence in the Council of Ministers are being telecast live on the primary channel. The first such live telecast of the discussion on a Motion of Confidence in the Council of Ministers took place on 27 May 1996.

On 1 August 1997, it was announced<sup>13</sup> in the Lok Sabha that due to the inadequate reach of every segment of the House by the existing big cameras and also because of their inability to take the desired shots from different angles, it was decided to instal a Remote Control Camera System for each House after studying such systems in various countries. The robotic cameras, eight in number, were then installed and made operational by remote control from a state-of-the-art studio set up in Room No. 50, Parliament House. These cameras could cover all areas of the Chamber. The system became operational during the Winter Session of Parliament in 1997<sup>14</sup>.

Broadcasting

On 6 July 1992, the Speaker, Lok Sabha directed that the proceedings of the Question Hour should also be broadcast. In pursuance of this decision, technical arrangements were worked out in consultation with the officials of the All India Radio for the broadcasting of the Question Hour beginning from the Monsoon Session of 1992<sup>15</sup>. The first broadcast of recorded version of the Question Hour was made on 21 July 1992 on the national hook-up at 2130 hours on Delhi 'B'. According to the decision then taken, when the Question Hour in the Lok Sabha was broadcast, the Question Hour in the Rajya Sabha was to be telecast and in the following week it was to be broadcast and vice versa. The recording of the day's proceedings by the All India Radio is broadcast the same night.

Guidelines for Telecasting the Proceedings

On 22 June 1994, the Speaker issued the guidelines regarding telefilming and telecasting of the Address by the President and the Lok Sabha proceedings.

As per the guidelines, the telecasting of the Address by the President is to commence with the reception of the President at Gate No. 5, Parliament House. Long and wide-angle shots of the entire Presidential procession are taken from time-to-time. To ensure the solemnity and dignity of the Address by the President in the Central Hall, the cameras are focused most of the time on the President and occasionally on the high dignitaries. Only wide-angle shots of members of both the Houses are taken occasionally. Cameras are not to be focused on the Press and Public Galleries and on any interruption, disorder or walkout.

Besides the Address by the President, other important Addresses such as those by visiting high dignitaries from abroad to the members of both Houses and other special invitees, Parliamentary awards, functions, anniversary of Lok Sabha functions may also be telecast live as per specific decision taken on each such occasion by the Chairman or the Speaker. The telecasting of such Addresses may be covered on the lines of guidelines as in the case of the Address by the President.

While telecasting the Question Hour, only the proceedings pertaining to questions and answers are shown. However, the following items of business transacted during the Question Hour are also shown at times: (a) obituary reference on the passing away of any member/dignitary; (b) welcome to a visiting foreign Parliamentary Delegation; (c) oath taking by a new member; (d) special mention by the Chair; and (e) any other item as directed by the Chair from time-to-time. Telecast of the Question Hour should not include: (a) anything that is unparliamentary; (b) anything that is repetitive in nature; (c) anything that is expunged or disallowed by the Chair; and (d) supplementary questions to which no answer is given as per directions of the Chair.

Since the so-called 'Zero Hour' is not governed by any rule in the Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business in the Lok Sabha, the U-matic/Betacam / Dvc Pro/ tapes containing the proceedings of the 'Zero Hour' are not shown/made available to anyone without the express prior permission of the Speaker. However, since 5 July 2004, the proceedings of the Zero Hour are being included in the live telecast and are also being supplied on request.

Important debates may be telecast later, after due approval, in capsules of one to three hours. For preparation of capsule(s) of important debate(s), the total time available is apportioned to various Parliamentary Parties/Groups broadly in proportion to their strength in the House. The concerned Party/Group Leader may be informed about the time allotted to his Party/Group for particular capsule(s). After a decision made is known by the concerned Party/Group leader about the name(s) of the member(s) whose speech(es) would be included in the capsule(s), the concerned member(s) may be requested to suitably edit the speeches within the time allotted to them by their Party/Group.

During the live telecast of the General/Railway Budget, cameras are focused most of the time on the concerned Minister. Occasionally, shots of the Chair and wide-angle shots of the House are taken.

The portions of each day's proceedings which are not permitted by the Chair to go on record or which are expunged subsequently are erased from the U-matic/Betacam / Dvc Pro / tapes the very next day to bring the same in conformity with the written record. The U-matic/Betacam / Dvc Pro /tapes are sent to the Library/archives only after erasing such portions.

Greater care is exercised in showing the occupant of the Chair. Shots of the Presiding Officer are taken while he is giving a ruling or making an observation/intervention. Shots of the Presiding Officer giving any instructions to the officers or receiving any paper from them are not taken.

Shots of the Officers at the Table of the House (other than Secretary-General) and attendants/messengers in the Chamber are not normally shown unless they happen to form part of any wide-angle shot of the House. Occasional group shots, mid-shots and close ups are taken either for the purposes of showing the reaction of a group of members, or in order to establish the geography of a particular part of the Chamber. Galleries occupied by the Press, public, officials and other guests, not being directly related to the proceedings, are not shown. An exception has, however, been made in the case of foreign Parliamentary Delegations seated in the Special Box. On occasion of any grave disorder or of unparliamentary behaviour, the cameras are focused on the occupant of the Chair until order has been restored. Occasional wide-angle shots of the Chamber could, however, be taken during such period.

Revision of Guidelines

The telecasting guidelines were later revised in May 2005 in which as per the direction of the Speaker, the following amendments were carried out. The telecast of Lok Sabha proceedings should be a true reflection of what is happening in the House including the scenes of disorder, walk-outs, coming to the Well of the House, etc. On occasions of such disorder in the House, the cameras will focus on the spots of disorder in the Chamber. In such situations, short glimpses of the occupant of the Chair may be shown occasionally. As per the revised guidelines of 2010, the live telecast shall commence as soon as the Speaker, Deputy Speaker or the Chairman enters the Chamber and will continue till such time as one of the following happenings takes place: (i) An adjournment is announced from the Chair; (ii) the Chair presses the button specifically provided for indicating to the control Room to switch off the cameras or live telecast; (iii) The Chair gives verbal directions for switching off the cameras or live telecast and on the occasions of disorder in the house, the cameras shall focus on the occupant of the Chair.

Recording of Parliamentary Proceedings

The entire proceedings of the Lok Sabha are telefilmed. The portions that are expunged under the orders of the Speaker are later erased from the recorded tapes. The tele-record of the proceedings of each day is preserved in the Audio Visual Unit of the Lok Sabha Secretariat. Recording of parliamentary proceedings was being carried out by Doordarshan/All India Radio till the inception of Lok Sabha Television (LSTV) Channel. From July 2006 onwards, the recordings are being done by LSTV Channel/All India Radio. Doordarshan may take signal from LSTV and All India Radio may directly broadcast those proceedings as may be decided by the Speaker. Other television and radio broadcasting/telecasting agencies are allowed to make use of recorded excerpts of the televised/broadcast proceedings with the prior approval of the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Private agencies which are permitted to use audio-visual footage in their programmes are required to ensure that their telecast/broadcast—

- (a) provides fair and accurate reports of the proceedings of Parliament;
- (b) gives a balanced representation of all shades of opinion expressed which may broadly be in proportion to the strength of various Parliamentary Parties/Groups in the House;
- (c) is not used for satire or ridicule;

- (d) is not utilised for political party advertising and election campaigns or commercial advertising;
- (e) does not contain remarks in respect of which a member of Parliament claims misrepresentation or otherwise seeks withdrawal, and which are subsequently ordered to be withdrawn, or are voluntarily withdrawn;
- (f) does not contain any such portion(s) which are not permitted by the Chair to go on record or which are expunged subsequently; and
- (g) complies strictly with the rules framed for telefilming and telecasting of parliamentary proceedings both in letter and spirit.

Robotically Controlled Multi-Camera System

A Robotically controlled multi-camera system and Production Control Rooms were set up on 9 December 2004 in GMC Balayogi Auditorium and BPST Main Committee Room, Parliament Library Building for the purpose of coverage of the Parliamentary functions/events. A Mobile Robotically Controlled Multi-Camera Unit was also procured for the online production of the programmes/events/functions to be held in other Committee Rooms of the Parliament Library Building, Central Hall, Parliament House and out-door shooting of LSTV programmes in Parliament House Complex. Two Electronic News Gathering (ENG) cameras are also used for getting news from outside location. These items initially held by the Audio Visual Unit have been taken over by LSTV on 9 May 2008.

Dedicated Satellite Channels for Live Telecast

On 14 December 2004, Vice-President of India and Speaker, Lok Sabha launched two separate dedicated satellite channels for telecasting the Live proceedings of both Houses of Parliament viz. Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha. The entire proceedings of the two Houses of Parliament are being telecast live through two separate dedicated satellite channels by Doordarshan since 14 December 2004. With the launch of dedicated Satellite Channels, the telecasting of Parliamentary Proceedings on Low Power Transmitters have been discontinued.

Lok Sabha Satellite Television (LSTV) Channel Unit

The Speaker in consultation with Leaders of Political parties in Lok Sabha, took the historic decision in August 2005 to start a 24-hour television channel of Lok Sabha, independent of Doordarshan, that would be carried by cable operators all over the country. On 24 July 2006, with the commencement of the Monsoon Session, Lok Sabha Television began continuous 24-hour broadcast. This monumental development has placed the Lok Sabha on a unique pedestal making it one of the selected Houses in the World which owns and operates a TV Channel. The Lok Sabha Channel is also available throughout the country on the Doordarshan DTH platform. Thus, the vision of the Channel is “an extension” of the Visitors’ Gallery. To further enhance the reach of the Channel, a website of Lok Sabha TV Channel was launched by the Speaker, Lok Sabha on 9 May, 2012. The website (www.loksabhatv.nic.in) has placed the LSTV Channel on the internet domain to extend its reach to wider, younger audience on the one hand and to help people seeking to address their concerns on the other.

As part of setting up the Lok Sabha Television Channel, a studio equipped with modern recording and telecasting facilities was set up in the first basement of the Parliament Library Building. The studio was initially set up by Doordarshan and later handed over to Lok Sabha Television. Accordingly, the old Robotic Cameras in the Parliament House were replaced and ten new Robotic Cameras were installed in strategic locations for better visibility of the proceedings. A second studio was also set up with High Definition (HD) equipment to further facilitate the recording and telecasting of LSTV proceedings. Besides, modern and latest edit and graphics equipment are in place which give LSTV Channel a technical edge in the broadcasting domain.

An Earth Station has been installed for LSTV Channel so that the Channel can be directly linked up with the Satellite. With the installation of the Earth Station, the Channel has achieved the distinction of first of its kind i.e. a Parliamentary Channel which has its own earth station.

In addition to the live and recorded telecast of proceedings of the Lok Sabha, the Channel also features various informative, interactive and substantial value-added programmes of general interest and on issues relating to democracy, governance, social, economic and constitutional issues and citizens concerns.

The Speaker has constituted an Advisory Council for Lok Sabha Television to aid and advice on the programme-related matters of Lok Sabha Television<sup>16</sup>. The functions of the Advisory Council are as follows:

- (i) To indicate guidelines for programmes to be broadcast;
- (ii) To consider new programming concepts;
- (iii) To suggest ideas for the effective functioning of the channel; and
- (iv) To discuss any other matter relating to the functioning of the channel.

To ensure proper distribution and monitoring of LSTV Channel, fifteen Distributors have been appointed all over India at the regional level so that the LSTV Channel is carried by all the Cable operators across the country. Besides, an amendment made in the year 2007 by the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting (vide Notification, S.O. 1881(E) dated 6 November 2007) in Sub-section (1) of section 8 of the Cable Television Network (Regulation) Act, 1995, (7 of 1995) makes it compulsory for every cable operator to carry the LSTV Channel in their Cable service. As a result, LSTV has been able to get a viewership, far and wide, cutting across the regions.

16. The members of the Advisory Council for Lok Sabha Television are :

1. The Speaker, Lok Sabha – Chairperson
2. The Deputy Speaker – Vice Chairperson
3. The Minister of Information & Broadcasting – Vice Chairperson.
4. Leaders of parties in the Lok Sabha that have 10 or more members, or their nominees.
5. Secretary-General, Lok Sabha.

Audio-Visual Unit and Telecasting Unit*Audio-Visual Unit

As part of the modernisation of the Library and Information Services, an Audio-Visual Unit with a Viewing Room comprising four small cabins has been set up in Room No. 46, Parliament House. With the shifting of Parliament Library in the year 2002, the Audio-Visual Unit is now functioning from Room No. G 140, Parliament Library Building, having viewing and editing rooms. Facilities for viewing/listening to video records of the Lok Sabha Debates, programmes of LSTV, proceedings of national and international parliamentary conferences/seminars, parliamentary films and language courses are available to members of Parliament in the Viewing Room. The proceedings of the Lok Sabha, parliamentary films and other events are also shown to dignitaries from India as well as abroad. Accredited correspondents of the Lok Sabha can also make use of the facilities available in the Viewing Room<sup>17</sup>.

The Unit preserves<sup>18</sup> video (U-matic, Betacam, VHS DVC Pro) and audio

17. Previously, if a member wanted to listen to particular portion of the recorded speech of any other member, he had to make a written request to the Speaker within three days of the speech so made, indicating the particular portion of the speech which he would want to listen to and the reasons therefor. Only when the Speaker gave permission, the member was allowed to listen to that portion of the recorded speech.

18. The tape-recording of the proceedings of the Lok Sabha was introduced in August 1956. The recorded tapes are normally preserved till the expiration of a week from the day to which they are related, after which they are erased and recycled for use. However, tapes of proceedings which are the subject matter of contention, such as privilege matters, are retained for a longer period till the matter is disposed of. The Address by the President to members of both the Houses of Parliament and Addresses to members by visiting dignitaries, which do not form part of the proceedings of the Lok Sabha, are also tape-recorded. Tapes which are of sufficient historical interest are preserved permanently in the Audio-Visual and Telecasting Unit since 1992. These include:

Address by the President to members of both the Houses of Parliament assembled together.
Addresses to members by visiting dignitaries.

Important speeches by the Prime Minister, including reply to the debate on Motion of Thanks on the Address by the President.

Proceedings relating to matters of historical importance.

Proceedings relating to Constitution (Amendment) Bills passed by the House.

Railway Budget speech as delivered by the Railway Minister. Reply of the Railway Minister to the debate on the Railway Budget.

Budget speech as delivered by the Finance Minister.

Reply of the Finance Minister to the General Discussion on the General Budget. Speech of the Finance Minister moving the Finance Bill for consideration.

Reply of the Finance Minister to the debate on the Finance Bill. Important speeches of the Leader of the Opposition.

Discussion on No-Confidence Motions.

Discussion on important Bills and Motions. Discussion on Confidence Motions.

Question Hour.

Swearing in of members.

Since April 1994, recordings of entire Lok Sabha proceeding are preserved in broadcast quality video cassettes. Previously, the tapes relating to swearing in of members of a particular Lok Sabha were being preserved only for the duration of that Lok Sabha.

cassettes/tapes of all parliamentary proceedings, other parliamentary functions, LSTV Programmes, etc. The Unit also provides blank cassettes/DVDs/VCDs to the LSTV Channel for recording of various programmes. The Unit is looking after the work of selection and collection of material, accession, classification and preservation of cassettes on important parliamentary functions and events like conferences, seminars, symposia, workshops and telefilms on different aspects of parliamentary practice and procedure. Arrangements have also been made for dubbing of speeches of members of Parliament into VHS cassettes/VCDs/DVDs on payment.

The Audio-Visual Unit has acquired language Courses (audio and video cassettes) in various Indian and foreign languages and classical instrumental music and patriotic songs for the use of members of Parliament and for use at various parliamentary functions. The following language Courses (audio and video cassettes) are available for listening/viewing in the Viewing Room:

Audio Cassettes:

- (i) Language courses in Kannada, Malayalam, Tamil and Telugu through English;
- (ii) Hindi language course through commentaries in Assamese, Bengali, English, Kannada, Malayalam, Odia, Tamil and Telugu;
- (iii) Language courses in 23 foreign languages, viz. Arabic, Chinese, Danish, Dutch, Finnish, French, German, Greek, Hebrew, Icelandic, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Malay, Norwegian, Persian, Polish, Portuguese, Russian, Serbo-Croatian, Spanish and Swedish through English;
- (iv) Language courses in Hindi language through English;
- (v) Language courses in English language through Hindi.

Video Cassettes:

Language courses in four foreign languages, viz. French, German, Italian and Spanish through English.

VCDs of Rajya Sabha Proceedings

VCDs of Rajya Sabha proceedings are also being procured by the Unit for archival and library purposes since March 1992.

Telecasting Unit

This Unit coordinates with the Doordarshan/All India Radio and other official agencies for the telecasting/broadcasting of proceedings of national and international conferences/seminars, besides other important parliamentary functions held in the Parliament precincts and elsewhere. The Unit makes all necessary arrangements for effective and uninterrupted telecasting/broadcasting by providing infrastructural and other assistance to the concerned agencies. Liaison with official/private agencies for transferring the proceedings from U-matic tapes/Betacam Tapes/VHS/ DVC-Pro/VCDs/ DVDs and vice versa is looked after by this unit.

As an extension of telefilming and televising of parliamentary proceedings, video films are being prepared on different parliamentary practices and procedures and related parliamentary topics for new members of Parliament and State Legislatures. These films facilitate in educating students, media persons and others about various facts of the functioning of Parliament<sup>19</sup>.

In pursuance of a resolution<sup>20</sup> adopted at the Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies held in October 1996 in New Delhi, the Speaker, Lok Sabha constituted a Committee<sup>21</sup> of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies on Telecasting of the Proceedings of the State Legislatures. At its first meeting, on 18 December 1996, the Committee decided that pending approval and installation of infrastructure for the live telecast of proceedings of State Legislatures, the Address by the Governor, the presentation of the Budget and the Question Hour of the State Legislative Assemblies may be recorded and shown the same evening. Accordingly, the Doordarshan has commenced telecasting the Address by the Governor and certain important proceedings (e.g., Finance Minister's Budget speech in some State Legislatures) with effect from the Budget Session of 1997. A proposal for telecasting the proceedings of the State Legislatures was adopted during the Sixty-Seventh Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India held in Kolkata in October 2004. The proposal is under active consideration with the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting and Planning Commission, Government of India.

Supply of Video Cassettes of the Proceedings of the Lok Sabha

Video cassettes of the proceedings of the Lok Sabha are presented/supplied on complimentary basis to constitutional functionaries/dignitaries in India and foreign countries; Press Correspondents (print/electronic media) accredited to the Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha; Ministries and Departments of Governments of India/State Governments; State Legislatures; established news agencies having PIB accreditation/eminent producers in the field; libraries, teachers, research scholars of recognised educational institutions/universities; parliamentary political parties and others as may be decided by the Lok Sabha Secretariat.

Whenever a request is received for providing a cassette containing speech of a member in a regular debate of any proceedings of the Lok Sabha, the same is arranged by the Audio-Visual Unit and supplied (after necessary editing) on nominal payment,

19. Six parliamentary films have so far been prepared, viz. "Private Members' Bills"; "Parliamentary Questions"; "Parliamentary Etiquette and Manners"; "Financial Committees"; "Enriching the Debates in Legislatures"; and "How to be an Effective Parliamentarian?"

20. The resolution inter alia includes the following recommendations:

As telecasting has wide-ranging implications in operational terms, a Committee of Presiding Officers headed by the Speaker, Lok Sabha, should examine all aspects of the matter and make report, giving its considered recommendations.

21. The Committee was headed by the Speaker, Lok Sabha, P.A. Sangma, and the members were: Hashim Abdul Halim, Speaker, West Bengal Legislative Assembly; Dattaji Shankar Nalwade, Speaker, Maharashtra Legislative Assembly; Ramesh Kumar, Speaker, Karnataka Legislative Assembly; Kaul Singh Thakur, Speaker, Himachal Pradesh Legislative Assembly; Srinivas Tiwari, Speaker, Madhya Pradesh Legislative Assembly; Jingson Dringwell Rymbai, Speaker, Meghalaya Legislative Assembly; and Ch. Mohd. Aslam, Speaker, Jammu and Kashmir Legislative Assembly.

as may be decided from time-to-time. Since 5 July 2004, the proceedings of the Zero Hour are being included in the live telecast and are also being supplied.

If the audio-visual recordings of parliamentary proceedings are intended to be utilised for any other purpose than personal use, such use would be subject to the same conditions as are applicable to private agencies which are permitted to use audio-visual footage in their programmes as outlined earlier.

Breach or violation of any of these conditions would involve action under the relevant provisions relating to breach of agreement, misconduct and/or breach of privilege of the House.

The Lok Sabha Secretariat ensures the following—

- (i) The tapes selected for sale do not contain any defamatory matter or other matter regarded as actionable under law.
- (ii) The recordings, as far as practicable, are consistent with the printed version and do not contain portions ordered by the Speaker/Deputy Speaker/ Chairman to be expunged or portions not to go on record.
- (iii) The recordings carry at the beginning a recital of (reference to) the date of the proceedings as that would help to authenticate the tapes being privileged under article 105(2) of the Constitution.

CHAPTER XLVII

Inter-Parliamentary Relations and Exchanges

The establishment and development of relations among Parliaments constitutes part of the regular activities of national parliaments. Although promotion of inter-parliamentary relations has, for many years, been a significant part of the work of parliamentarians, recently it has received a new thrust due to the increased inter-dependence of nations in a global environment. It is imperative that parliamentarians join hands to safeguard democracy and work in synergy to confront the challenges before the world and convert them into opportunities to facilitate peace and prosperity in their countries and globally too. Parliamentarians from different parts of the world therefore, have a forum where they can meet to discuss and find out solutions to their common problems and where also some sort of cross-fertilization of ideas can take place not only between the older and the younger Parliaments, but also between parliamentarians working under different parliamentary systems. These problems are no doubt discussed in inter-governmental conferences but those discussions are not so frank and free as they can be at a conclave of legislators.

Inter-parliamentary relations, thus, assume great importance today when the whole world is beset with many pressing problems. The problems which are faced by one Parliament today may confront another tomorrow. It is, therefore, essential that a link should exist between the various Parliaments of the world. This link is maintained by India through the exchange of delegations, goodwill missions, correspondence, documents, etc. with foreign Parliaments through the machinery of the Indian Parliamentary Group (IPG) which acts both as the National Group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and also as the India Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA)<sup>1</sup>.

1. The Inter-Parliamentary Union has its headquarters at Geneva (Switzerland) and the headquarters of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association is in London. The Inter-Parliamentary Union is the national organization of the Parliaments of Sovereign States. It aims to work for peace and cooperation and for firm establishment of representatives institutions, foster contacts and coordination among Parliaments and Parliamentarians, consider questions of international interest, defend and promote human rights and strengthen representative institutions. It supports efforts of United Nations and cooperate with other international organizations, which are motivated by same ideals. The CPA is composed of Branches formed in Legislatures in Commonwealth countries which subscribe to parliamentary democracy. For a Branch to qualify, it must be a legislative body; thus, both national and State or provincial Parliaments and the Legislatures of dependent territories may be its members.

Inter-Parliamentary Union meets in Assembly bi-annually. The first Assembly is held in the first half of a year hosted by a member country and normally lasts for five working days. The second Assembly normally lasting for three working days is held in the second half of a year in Geneva unless IPU Governing Body decides otherwise. Till May 2014, one hundred and thirty IPU Assemblies have been held. India hosted Fifty-seventh and Eighty-ninth IPU Assemblies in New Delhi in October- November 1969 and in April 1993, respectively. Besides, India Group also hosted specialized IPU conferences on "Towards Partnership between Men and

Indian Parliamentary Group

The Indian Parliamentary Group is an autonomous body formed in the year 1949 in pursuance of a Motion adopted by the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) on 16 August 1948.

Membership of the Indian Parliamentary Group is open only to the members of Parliament. Former members of Parliament or of Provisional Parliament can become associate members and are entitled to limited rights<sup>2</sup>. To encourage bilateral relations, IPG constitutes Parliamentary Friendship Groups with other countries in the Parliament. Each Friendship Group consists of at least twenty-two sitting members of Parliament (15 from Lok Sabha and 7 from Rajya Sabha) in proportion to the strength of Parties in Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha. The aims and objectives of the Group are to maintain political, social and cultural contacts between the countries and to assist in having exchange of information and experience on issues relating to parliamentary activities<sup>3</sup>. The management and control of all affairs of the IPG are vested in the Executive Committee consisting of a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Treasurer and sixteen members. Some members/ex-members are also nominated as Permanent Special Invitees to the meetings of the Executive Committee. The Speaker is the ex-officio President of the IPG and the Executive Committee. As per the IPG Rules, the Women in Politics” in New Delhi in February 1997, the Regional Seminar for Asian Parliaments on “Preventing and Responding to violence against Women and Girls from legislation to effective enforcement” in New Delhi in September, 2011 and seventh Meeting of Women Speakers of Parliament on Gender Sensitive Parliaments in New Delhi in October 2012 under the joint auspices of the Indian Parliamentary Group and the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

Gurdial Singh Dhillon and Najma Heptulla were presidents of Inter-Parliamentary Union representing India during the period 1973-1976 and 1992-2002, respectively.

Earlier, Plenary Conferences of the CPA used to be held biennially in various capitals of the Commonwealth countries, but since 1961, it has become an annual feature. So far sixty Conferences have been held since 1948. India hosted the Fifth, the Twenty-first, the Thirty-seventh and Fifty-third Conferences in New Delhi in 1957, 1975, 1991 and 2007 respectively.

2. Each member (including associate member) is required to pay a fixed subscription for life-membership of IPG.

An Associate member is not entitled to representation at meetings or Conferences of the IPU or the CPA or to the travel concessions provided to members by certain Branches of the CPA.

3. Each Friendship Group is headed by a President and two Vice-Presidents (one from Lok Sabha and the other from Rajya Sabha) who are appointed by the Speaker, Lok Sabha from amongst the members of the concerned Group. Parliamentary Friendship Groups as on 31.12.2013 are: 1. Afghanistan 2. Algeria 3. Australia 4. Azerbaijan 5. Bahrain 6. Bangladesh 7. Belarus 8. Bosnia & Herzegovina 9. Botswana 10. Bulgaria 11. Canada 12. Chile 13. China 14. Croatia 15. Cuba 16. Cyprus 17. Czech Republic 18. Estonia 19. European Parliament 20. Finland 21. France 22. Georgia 23. Germany 24. Ghana 25. Greece 26. Hungary 27. Indonesia 28. Iran 29. Iraq 30. Israel 31. Japan 32. Jordan 33. Kazakhstan 34. Kuwait 35. Lao PDR 36. Latvia 37. Lebanon 38. Malaysia 39. Maldives 40. Mexico 41. Mongolia 42. Morocco 43. Nepal 44. Pakistan 45. Panama 46. Peru 47. Philippines 48. Poland 49. Portugal 50. Republic of Korea 51. Romania 52. Russian Federation 53. Saudi Arabia 54. Slovak Republic 55. Spain 56. Sri Lanka 57. Sweden 58. Trinidad & Tobago 59. Tunisia 60. Turkey 61. Ukraine 62. United Kingdom 63. United States of America 64. Venezuela 65. Vietnam 66. Yemen 67. Bhutan 68. Oman 69. Thailand 70. Uruguay 71. Mauritius 72. Democratic Republic of Congo 73. Egypt 74. Slovenia 75. Singapore 76. Ethiopia 77. Lithuania 78. Myanmar 79. Uganda.

Deputy Speaker of Lok Sabha and the Deputy Chairman of the Rajya Sabha are the Ex-Officio Vice-Presidents of the Group. The Treasurer and other members of the Executive Committee are elected at the Annual General Meeting from amongst the life members of the Group<sup>4</sup>. The Secretary-General of the Lok Sabha functions as the ex-officio Secretary-General of the IPG and its Executive Committee.

The meetings of the Executive Committee are held from time to time as may be necessary.

The annual general meeting of the IPG is held during a session of Parliament every year. However, the President of the IPG may summon a special general meeting if a requisition in writing, signed by not less than twenty members of the IPG, is received for the purpose.

With a view to developing contacts with members of other Parliaments, parliamentary goodwill missions and delegations are sent to foreign countries and received in India, on behalf of the IPG<sup>5</sup>. It also sends Parliamentary Delegations to the Conferences of the IPU and of the CPA, where diverse questions of public importance likely to come up before national Parliaments are discussed.

As per decision of the Indian Parliamentary Group, an 'Award for Outstanding Parliamentarian' was instituted in the year 1995 to be given annually to the most Outstanding Parliamentarian who will be selected by an Award Committee, consisting of Speaker, Lok Sabha, Deputy Chairman, Rajya Sabha, a senior Parliamentarian from each of the two Houses of Parliament and a senior Journalist. The recipients of the award so far have been : Chandra Shekhar (1995), Somnath Chatterjee (1996), Pranab Mukherjee (1997), Jaipal Reddy (1998), L.K. Advani (1999), Arjun Singh (2000), Jaswant Singh (2001), Dr. Manmohan Singh (2002), Sharad Pawar (2003), Sushma Swaraj (2004), P. Chidambaram (2005), Manishankar Aiyar (2006), Priya Ranjan Dasmunshi (2007), Mohan Singh (2008), Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi (2009), Arun Jaitley (2010), Dr. Karan Singh (2011) and Sharad Yadav (2012).

Seminars on Parliamentary Practice and Procedure for the CPA Branches

India Branch of CPA had organised four Regional Seminars on Parliamentary Practice and Procedure for the CPA Branches in Asia and South-East Asia Regions

4. Election of the Treasurer and other members of the Executive Committee— Normally, at the Annual General Meeting of the IPG the General body authorizes the Speaker, Lok Sabha (President of the Group) to nominate the Treasurer and members.
  5. Invitations from the Presiding Officers of foreign Parliaments for visits to their countries are received by the Speaker, Lok Sabha and the Chairman, Rajya Sabha, through the Ministry of External Affairs. The Speaker, in consultation with the Minister of External Affairs and the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, decides whether to accept the invitation or not.

Proposal for inviting a Parliamentary Delegation from a foreign country to visit India is first made to the Secretariat by the Ministry of External Affairs. In suitable cases, the Speaker may himself make such proposals.

Details of the visit such as the number of delegates, duration of the visit, etc. are settled in consultation with their Embassy in New Delhi and the Indian Embassy in that country.

of the CPA. Of these, three Seminars were organised in New Delhi in October 1980, January 1982 and January 1984. The fourth Seminar was organized in December 1986 in Bangalore (now Bengaluru). Delegates from the CPA Branches in Asia, South – East Asia and Africa Regions participated in the last three Seminars. Participation in these Seminars was limited to two members each from the main Branches of the Regions and one delegate each from four State CPA Branches of Countries having State Branches. The State Branches in India were requested to send two delegates each and Union Territory Legislatures one delegate each. The subjects for discussions were selected by the Executive Committee of India Branch. The discussion was held after keynote address was delivered on each subject.

The object of the Seminar was to promote contact among parliamentarians and strengthen the parliamentary systems and bonds of friendship among the Commonwealth countries.

Annual CPA Seminar

The CPA holds an annual Commonwealth Parliamentary Seminar, hosted jointly since 1989, with different Branches on a regional rotation. The annual Commonwealth Parliamentary Seminar usually focuses on the Parliamentary Practice and Procedure. India has also hosted three annual Parliamentary Seminars in India in coordination with CPA Secretariat, London. The Sixth Commonwealth Parliamentary Seminar was held in New Delhi from 17 to 25 January 1994 under the joint auspices of the Indian Parliamentary Group and the CPA Secretariat. The Fourteenth CPA Seminar was hosted by Andhra Pradesh CPA Branch in Hyderabad in October 2002. India Union CPA hosted the twenty-second Annual CPA Seminar in New Delhi from 24 to 29 November, 2011 in which 21 delegates from member Commonwealth Countries attended. Dr. William F. Shija, Secretary General, Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, members from Parliament of India and delegates from State CPA Branches also attended the Seminar.

India Region Seminar

India Region CPA has organised a Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians (CWP) Seminar on the occasion of International Women's Day on 8 and 9 March 2013. The theme of the Seminar was "Gender Justice and Responsive Governance". Thirty-eight delegates/CWP members from CPA Branches of India Region attended the Seminar. Two topics for discussion taken up at the Seminar were, (i) Gender and Criminal Justice System: Challenges to understanding Crimes against Women in Society, and (ii) Need for a special programme for creating awareness of Legal Rights among Women.

Conference of Speakers and Presiding Officers of Commonwealth Parliaments

The first Conference of Speakers and Presiding Officers of the Parliaments of the Commonwealth was held in Ottawa and Toronto from 8 to 12 September 1969 following the decision taken by the Speakers at an informal meeting of the CPA held in Ottawa in 1966. So far, twenty-two<sup>6</sup> such Conferences have been held. Of these, three Conferences have taken place in New Delhi - Second in 1970-71, the Eighth Conference in 1986 and the Twentieth Conference in 2010.

Membership

Membership of the Conference is restricted to the Speakers and Presiding Officers of the Parliaments of the sovereign nations of the Commonwealth. A Deputy Presiding Officer may, by prior notification to the host Parliament, attend the Conference as a substitute for a Speaker or a Presiding Officer of his Parliament and any such substitute shall enjoy the same status as a member of the Conference.

The Speaker of the Lower House of the host Parliament is the Chairperson and the Clerk or Secretary of the Lower House is the Secretary-General of the Conference. Two Vice-Chairpersons are elected by the Conference. Nominations for the Vice-Chairpersons are proposed and seconded from the floor of the Conference. If more than two candidates are nominated, election are conducted for the posts.

The host Parliament, at the discretion of its Speaker or Presiding Officer, may invite any person who can make a contribution to the Conference as an Observer.

The Conference provides an opportunity to Speakers and Presiding Officers to meet, get acquainted and discuss matters of mutual interest. The Conference is held by rotation in various countries of the Commonwealth. The normal practice is to hold the Conference every two years and it lasts for three days.

The Conference may refer any matter arising out of an item on the agenda to an ad hoc Committee for consideration. Normally, the Conference decides the terms, reference and composition of the ad hoc Committee; the Chairman is elected from amongst the members. The Conference may discuss the report of the Committee should it consider proper.

6. First Conference was held in Ottawa and Toronto (Canada) from 8 to 12 September 1969; Second in New Delhi (India) from 28 December 1970 to 1 January 1971; Third in Lusaka (Zambia) from 24 to 28 September 1973; Fourth in London (United Kingdom) from 7 to 10 September 1976; Fifth in Canberra (Australia) from 28 August to 1 September 1978; Sixth Conference in Ottawa (Canada) from 23 to 25 April 1981; Seventh Conference in Wellington (New Zealand) from 9 to 11 January 1984; Eighth Conference in New Delhi (India) from 6 to 8 January 1986; Ninth Conference in London (United Kingdom) from 20 to 22 July 1988; Tenth Conference in Harare (Zimbabwe) from 8 to 12 January 1990; Eleventh Conference in Kingston, (Jamaica) January 1992; Twelfth Conference in Papua New Guinea from 3 to 7 January 1994; Thirteenth Conference in Nicosia and Paphos (Cyprus) from 4 to 9 January 1996; Fourteenth Conference in Trinidad & Tobago from 5 to 11 January 1998; Fifteenth Conference in Canberra, Australia Capital Territory, (Australia) from 5 to 8 January 2000; Sixteenth Conference in Kasane (Botswana) from 8 to 13 January 2002; Seventeenth Conference in Montebello, Quebec (Canada) from 9 to 12 January 2004; Eighteenth Conference in Nairobi and Mombasa (Kenya) from 3 to 8 January 2006; Nineteenth Conference in London (United Kingdom) from 2 to 6 January 2008; Twentieth Conference in New Delhi (India) from 4 to 8 January, 2010; Twenty – First Conference in Port of Spain (Trinidad & Tobago) from 7 to 12 January, 2012; and twenty-second conference is Wellington (New Zealand) from 21 to 24 January 2014.

Standing Committee

A Standing Committee<sup>7</sup> consisting of fifteen members from nine regions are elected by the Conference at a General Meeting. The Committee has three ex-officio members representing the last host, the current host and the next hosting members. The Chairperson shall be the Speaker or Presiding Officer of the host parliament. The term of office of the Committee is from the end of one Conference to the end of the succeeding Conference. The quorum is five members of the Committee.

The meeting of the Standing Committee is held to decide dates and venue of the next Conference; to propose subjects for discussions at the next Conference and to prepare a draft agenda; to propose draft amendments to the rules for the consideration of the Conference; and to consider all matters concerning the organisation and conduct of the Conference, including financial arrangements.

The meeting of the Committee is generally held before the Conference. Decisions taken at the meeting are circulated to all Speakers and Presiding Officers of Commonwealth Parliaments for their information and consideration.

India Region of Commonwealth Parliamentary Association

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association has grouped Commonwealth Countries into nine Regions. India Region of CPA came into existence as a ninth Region on its separation from Asia Region in September 2004.

The control and management of the Region is vested in the Executive Committee of the Region. The Executive Committee comprises the Chairman and six members. Speaker, Lok Sabha is the ex-officio Chairperson of the Executive Committee.

The Constitution of India Region of CPA was adopted by the Executive Committee of India Region of CPA on 25 September 2007 at New Delhi. The Constitution was drafted by the Committee of Secretaries, constituted on 20 March 2005 by the Executive Committee of India Region of CPA in their meeting.

So far, India Region of CPA has held four joint India-Asia Region Conferences in 2004, 2005, 2007 and 2010 at Hyderabad (Andhra Pradesh), New Delhi, Islamabad and Raipur, respectively.

The Fifty-Third Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference, hosted by the Parliament of India at Delhi, in September 2007, was held under the auspices of India Region of CPA. The Conference was attended by approximately 800 persons from Commonwealth Countries comprising Speakers, Presiding Officers, members of Parliament, observers, spouses and accompanying persons. This was the fourth occasion for the Parliament of India to host a Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference. Prior to this, Conference was held in New Delhi in 1957, 1975 and 1991.

7. The rule for constituting the Standing Committee was adopted at the General Meeting of the Conference of Commonwealth Speakers and Presiding Officers held in New Delhi in 1970.

India Region of Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians

The Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians (CWP), a group of Women Parliamentarians, is a part of CPA, which provides Women Parliamentarians opportunities to discuss ways to increase female representations in Parliament and work towards mainstreaming of gender considerations in all CPA activities and programmes. On the lines of CWP (International), an India Region CWP was formed. A Steering Committee has also been constituted. The Committee comprises of six women members, that is one each from the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha and four women legislators, representing four regions in which State Branches have been grouped. The representative from CPA India Region to CWP (International) Steering Committee is the ex-officio Chairperson of the Committee.

On the occasion of International Women's day, a two-day CWP, India Region Seminar on "Gender Justice and Responsive Governance" was organised in New Delhi on 8 and 9 March 2013.

The Association of SAARC Speakers and Parliamentarians

In pursuance of the decision of successive Summits of the South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation (SAARC) stressing the importance of a greater degree of people-to-people co-operation, the Speakers of the Parliaments of the SAARC countries (Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka), at a meeting held in Kathmandu (Nepal) in 1992, resolved to establish the Association of SAARC Speakers and Parliamentarians with its headquarters at Kathmandu.

The Charter of the Association endeavours, among other things, to promote, coordinate and exchange experience among member Parliaments; to supplement and complement the work of SAARC and enhance knowledge of its principles and activities among parliamentarians; to provide a forum for exchange of ideas and information on parliamentary practices and procedures and for making suggestions; and to cooperate in international forums on matters of common interest.

The First Conference of the Association of SAARC Speakers and Parliamentarians was hosted by the Parliament of India in New Delhi from 22 to 24 July 1995.

The Second Conference was held in Islamabad, Pakistan from 25 to 28 October 1997.

The Third Conference was held in Dhaka, Bangladesh from 18 to 22 March 1999.

The Fourth Conference was held at Colombo, Sri Lanka from 28 March to 3 April 2003.

The fifth conference was held at New Delhi, India from 9 to 12 July 2011.

The sixth conference was held at Islamabad, Pakistan from 4 to 6 November 2012.

Relationship between Parliament and State Legislatures

Under the Constitution each House of Parliament or a State Legislature has the power to make rules for regulating its procedure and the conduct of its business<sup>8</sup>. All the Legislatures have, by and large, adopted similar rules of procedure for the conduct of their business, except with slight variations to suit their local needs. This uniformity has been brought about by the constant contact and interaction which Parliament and the State Legislatures have maintained among themselves through conferences, discussions, correspondence, etc.<sup>9</sup>.

8. Arts. 118 and 208.

Conferences are held periodically by the Presiding Officers and the Secretaries of legislative bodies and by the Chairperson of Parliamentary Committees. The agenda of the Conferences of Presiding Officers and Secretaries is decided by the Standing Committee of the All India Presiding Officers' Conference. The Agenda of the Conference is decided by the Secretary General, Lok Sabha and Chairperson of the Conference in concurrence with the Secretary General, Rajya Sabha, who is Co-Chairperson of the Conference. The agenda of the Conference of Chairperson of Parliamentary Committees is prepared by the Secretariat with the approval of the Chairperson of the concerned Conference, in consultation with the Secretariats of the State Legislatures. The Conferences are held in private, except that the Press and a few distinguished visitors are invited to attend the opening session of the Presiding Officers' Conference. No votes are taken and, as a rule, no formal resolutions are passed at any of these Conferences. On an important issue, however, a resolution may be adopted by the Conference and it may be sent to all concerned.

The opinions are, by their very nature, recommendatory and the discussions serve a useful purpose as these become an important source of information for arriving at decisions on complicated questions of practice and procedure. The conclusions arrived at these Conferences are treated as confidential and are not cited in support of rulings in the House or communicated to any outside authority.

Verbatim record of the proceedings of such Conferences is kept, and is printed later and circulated to all State Legislature Secretariats. The secretarial functions are performed by the Lok Sabha Secretariat, under the guidance and supervision of the Secretary-General.

Conference of Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies

The institution of the Presiding Officers' Conference is as old as the Central Legislative Assembly. The first Conference was held on 14 September 1921, at Shimla, under the chairmanship of Speaker Frederick Whyte. The Conferences were held frequently thereafter, though not at regular intervals, but of late they have become an annual feature. The Conference provides a valuable forum of discussion where experience is exchanged and procedural problems thoroughly analysed. The object of the Conference is to see that the parliamentary system of Government grows on proper lines, that proper conventions and traditions are developed in that direction and that, as far as possible, uniformity is established in the practice and procedure in Parliament and State Legislatures.

9. See Subhash C. Kashyap: "Parliament and State Legislatures—A Look into their Participatory Relationship" in the Silver Jubilee Souvenir of the Himachal Pradesh State Legislative Assembly, 1988, pp. 16-19.

The Speaker, Lok Sabha, is the ex officio Chairperson and the Secretary-General, Lok Sabha, the ex officio Secretary of the Conference. The points discussed at the Conference generally relate to procedural matters in respect of various subjects connected with the business of the House or its Committees. The agenda of the Conference is decided by the Standing Committee of the All India Presiding Officers' Conference.

The Conference is held in various States<sup>10</sup> and at a time when Parliament or the State Legislatures are not likely to be in session, thereby enabling all the Presiding Officers to take part in the Conference. The normal practice is to hold the Conference once a year and it lasts for two or three days.

The Conference may set up a Committee to examine in detail an important matter and to report for further consideration. Normally, the Conference decides the terms of reference but the composition and the appointment of the Convener or Chairperson of the Committee is left to the Chairman of the Conference. The Committee ceases to function after it has presented its report.

Conference of Secretaries of Legislative Bodies

The object of the Conference of Secretaries<sup>11</sup> is to discuss administrative, procedural and other matters; to bring about uniformity of organization in Legislature Secretariats throughout India; to consider and report on any matter referred to it by the Conference of the Presiding Officers; and to recommend to that Conference any points requiring their consideration. The agenda of the Conference is decided by the Secretary General, Lok Sabha and Chairperson of the Conference in concurrence with the Secretary General, Rajya Sabha, who is Co-Chairperson of the Conference.

The Conference is generally held on the day preceding the Presiding Officers' Conference and as in the case of the latter, no votes are taken nor any formal resolution passed. At the end of the discussion, the Chairperson sums up the position stating briefly the unanimous opinion or consensus expressed. Important decisions taken at the Conference are separately circulated to the State Legislature Secretariats for implementation and the progress is watched by the Secretariat.

Conference of Chairpersons of Parliamentary Committees

Conferences of the Chairpersons of Parliamentary Committees are in the nature of a 'get-together' for discussing questions of mutual interest relating to these Committees and for exchanging views on individual questions of practice and procedure with a view to evolving a uniform approach to such questions both at the Union and

10. Till 1950, the venue of the Conference was either Delhi or Shimla.

11. The idea of holding Conferences of Secretaries of Legislative Bodies in India was first mooted by Speaker Mavalankar at the Presiding Officers' Conference held in New Delhi in 1950.

in the States<sup>12</sup>. They are intended to facilitate the growth of healthy parliamentary conventions. All these Conferences are held in Parliament House Annexe, New Delhi and the Chairperson of the concerned Parliamentary Committee of the Lok Sabha functions as the Chairperson of the Conference. The decision regarding holding of any such Conference is taken by the Speaker after ascertaining the views of the Chairperson of the concerned Committees of Parliament and the State Legislatures. The points relating to the scope and, functions, composition, rules of business, implementation of recommendations, etc. of the Committees are normally discussed at these Conferences.

The decisions arrived at each Conference are, if so decided by the Conference, forwarded to the State Legislatures for their information and implementation before the printed proceedings are sent.

Apart from these Conferences, members of State Legislatures visit Parliament, attend the various Committees in session and exchange ideas in informal discussions with the Speaker, the Chairman, the Secretary-General and members of Parliament.

A large number of references are received from the Secretariats of the State Legislatures on matters of parliamentary practice and procedure. Whenever a State Legislature finds any difficulty in interpreting a particular rule or an article of the Constitution or a question of privilege, they write to the Secretariat for advice and guidance. These exchanges between the State Legislatures and the Secretariat help them to know the problems which face each other and to evolve a common procedure to tackle them.

In order to acquaint their officials with the method of working of the Secretariat and also to inform them of the practice and procedure followed in Parliament, the State Legislatures send them to the Secretariat quite often for training and study.

12. The Conferences held so far are:

- (i) Conference of Chairmen of Public Accounts Committees (April-May 1955, March 1959, April 1966, December 1971, December 1978, February 1983, September 1986, March 1997 and January 2001. A Conference of PACs in SAARC Parliaments was also held in New Delhi on 30 and 31 August 1997).
- (ii) Conference of Chairmen of Estimates Committees (November 1954, April 1958, April 1965, April 1975, December 1982, December 1988 and December 2002).
- (iii) Conference of Chairmen of Public Undertakings Committees (March 1975, April 1982).
- (iv) Conference of Chairmen of Committees on Subordinate Legislation (April 1960, March 1975, July 1981, November 1986 and October 2005).
- (v) Conference of Chairmen of Committees on Government Assurances (March, 1976, August 1981, August 1987).
- (vi) Conference of Chairmen of Committees on the Welfare of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (January 1976, April 1979, August 1983, March 1987).
- (vii) Conference of Chairmen of Petitions Committees (April 1979, August 1986).
- (viii) Conference of Chairmen of Library Committees (November 1976, March 1983).
- (ix) Conference of Chairmen of Committees on Private Members Bills and Resolutions (May 1982).
- (x) Conference of Chairmen of Committee of Privileges (March 1992).

These officials are imparted training in the different branches of the Secretariat. They are also attached with certain concerned Branches and are afforded opportunities for personal discussions with the officials. Officers from the Secretariat have also been sometimes deputed to the State Legislatures to assist them in reorganizing their Secretariats.

Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training

The Bureau of Parliamentary Studies and Training (BPST) was set up in 1976 as an integral division of the Lok Sabha Secretariat to meet the longfelt need to provide institutionalized opportunities for systematic study and training in disciplines of parliamentary institutions, processes and procedures to the legislators, officers and other stakeholders of parliamentary democracy.

Ever since its inception, the BPST has been organizing various training programmes in parliamentary and legislative fields, with a view to imparting professionalism, expertise and orientation to those who are involved in the working of the parliamentary system.

The Bureau's activities include holding of Orientation Programmes and Seminars for members of Parliament and State Legislatures; Lecture Series for members of Parliament; Prof. Hiren Mukerjee Memorial Annual Parliamentary Lecture; Round Table Discussions on topical issues; Training and Refresher Courses for Officers of the Secretariats of Parliament and State Legislatures; Appreciation Courses for Probationers of All India and Central Services and Senior and Middle Level Officers of the Government of India.

The Bureau also conducts two International Training Programmes for foreign Parliamentary officials, viz. (i) 'Parliamentary Internship Programme' and (ii) 'International Training Programme in Legislative Drafting'.

In addition, the Bureau organizes short duration Study Visits for members of foreign Parliaments, government officials, scholars, students and others. It also conducts Attachment Programmes for parliamentarians and parliamentary/government officials of foreign countries. The BPST has also been entrusted with the task of conducting the 'Lok Sabha Internship Programme' which was launched in January 2008.

Orientation Programmes for Members of Parliament/State Legislatures

With a view to familiarizing the newly elected members of Parliament and State Legislatures with parliamentary practice and procedures, conventions, etiquette, and traditions, the Bureau organizes Orientation Programmes for them. Each Programme is of one week's duration. These Programmes seek to promote a proper appreciation of the constitutional role and position of the Parliament and the State Legislatures as representative institutions in our democratic framework. It is expected that this Programme will help the members of Parliament in making the best and most effective use of the precious time of the House for more informed and fruitful discussions. During the Programme, members are addressed by eminent parliamentarians, senior parliamentary officials and other experts on various aspects of parliamentary practices and procedures.

Lecture Series for Members

The BPST has been organizing Lectures by experts and specialists on subjects of topical interest for members of Parliament since 2005. These Lectures help them in gaining valuable insights into the subjects under discussion and help the members to share their views with the subject specialists. Domain experts from different fields, including various international bodies, have shared their views with members of Parliament through these Lectures.

Prof. Hiren Mukerjee Memorial Annual Parliamentary Lecture

Starting 2008, an Annual Parliamentary Lecture in honour of the eminent parliamentarian, Prof. Hiren Mukerjee, was instituted by the Lok Sabha. The Inaugural Lecture was delivered by Nobel Laureate, Prof. Amartya Sen in the Central Hall of Parliament House on 11 August 2008 on the theme, “Demands of Social Justice”. Prof. Muhammad Yunus, Nobel Laureate and Founder/Managing Director of the Grameen Bank of Bangladesh, delivered the second Lecture on “Social Business: A Step towards creating a New Economic and Social Order”. The third Lecture was delivered by Prof. Jagdish Bhagwati, Professor of Economics and Law at Columbia University and Senior Fellow in International Economics at the Council on Foreign Relations, USA, on “Indian Reforms: Yesterday and Today” on 2 December 2010. The fourth Lecture was delivered by His Excellency, Lyonchhen Jigmy Y. Thinley, Prime Minister of Bhutan, on “Gross National Happiness: A Holistic Paradigm for Sustainable Well-being”, on 20 December 2011.

Seminars and Workshops for Members of Parliament/State Legislatures

To enable the elected representatives to have a thorough insight in to various issues before the Parliament and other topical issues before the nation, the Bureau organizes Seminars and specialized Workshops on various topics of parliamentary and current importance, to help them acquire a thorough understanding of such issues.

Computer Awareness Programmes

The Bureau periodically organizes Computer Awareness Programmes for members to assist them in discharging effectively their duties such as constituency management functions, office automation activities, personal information management, etc. Computer Awareness Programmes are also organized for officials of Lok Sabha Secretariat as well as the personal staff of the members.

Familiarization Programmes for Media Persons

The Bureau periodically organizes Familiarization Programmes for media persons covering the proceedings of Parliament.

Programmes for Foreign Parliamentarians

Customised Attachment Programmes and Study Visits for Presiding Officers, parliamentarians and parliamentary officials from abroad are organized by the Bureau on request. The Programmes are ad hoc in nature and are specially tailor-made to suit the special requirements of the visiting delegates enabling them to have a first hand knowledge of the working of parliamentary institutions in India.

The two International Training Programmes, i.e. the Parliamentary Internship Programme and the International Training Programme in Legislative Drafting for foreign parliamentary/government officials are month-long programmes organized every year since 1985. Participants are drawn from countries covered under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) and the Special Commonwealth Africa Assistance Plan (SCAAP) and the Colombo Plan which are funded by the Ministries of External Affairs and Finance. The Programmes are open to others also in case the sponsoring authority or the participants are prepared to meet the expenses on boarding, lodging, travel, etc.

The aim of the Parliamentary Internship Programme is to provide the participants an opportunity to exchange ideas in the context of their own experiences in their Legislatures and to make them aware of the environment, tradition, culture and working of the parliamentary institutions in India. The International Training Programme in Legislative Drafting is designed to equip parliamentary officials with the basic concepts, skills and techniques required for drafting legislation.

In 2013, two Specialized Training Programmes in Arabic and Spanish languages were organized by the Bureau for Parliamentary Officials from Arabic and Spanish speaking countries.

Appreciation Courses for Probationers of All India and Central Services and Government Officials

The BPST regularly organizes Appreciation Courses in Parliamentary Processes and Procedures of 3-5 days' duration for Probationers of All India and Central Services and also for middle and senior level Officials of the Government of India. These Courses provide the much needed direct exposure to the environment, culture and traditions of parliamentary institutions so as to enable them to appreciate better the nature of their role and place in the overall context of the parliamentary system, leading to a more informed response to their work in relation to Parliament.

Courses for Parliamentary and State Legislature Officials

To sharpen the functional skills of the officials working in the Secretariats of Parliament and the State Legislatures, Foundation Courses, Refresher Courses and Specialised Courses are organized by the Bureau. These Courses seek to develop the right perspective and qualities essential for parliamentary officials like a sense of dedication to service, precision and promptness, objectivity of approach, the highest respect for the elected representatives of the people and unfailing courtesy. The Bureau also facilitates customized programmes for officers and staff of the Secretariat in various training institutions in India and abroad, and Study Visits to foreign Parliaments.

Starting 2013, the Bureau is organizing a two-week long Training Programme in Legislative Drafting for officials of Central/State Governments and Indian Legislatures.

Study Visits

The Bureau organizes short duration Study Visits for officers of the Government and Legislature Secretariats, as well as scholars and students, both from India and abroad. During such Study Visits, the participants are given the requisite orientation to enable them to understand notable aspects of parliamentary institutions followed by a visit to the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha Chambers, the Central Hall and the Parliament Museum. They are also enabled to witness the proceedings of the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha if the Houses are in session.

Meetings of various stakeholders including academicians/ schools/ colleges students with the Speaker of Lok Sabha are also being organized regularly by the Bureau.

Lok Sabha Internship Programme

A one-year long ‘Lok Sabha Internship Programme’ was launched in January 2008 to provide an opportunity to young men and women with outstanding academic and extracurricular achievements to acquaint themselves with the working of parliamentary democracy and democratic institutions in general and specifically about the Indian parliamentary system. The Programme is aimed at imparting the requisite skills and knowledge to enable five selected Interns to develop a proper perspective about the role of the Legislature in our parliamentary system which, in turn, would help them while working in their own chosen fields in the future.

The Bureau functions under the overall control and supervision of the Secretary-General of Lok Sabha. Housed in the Parliament Library Building, the Bureau is equipped with modern infrastructure and training facilities<sup>13</sup>.

The authors of the work are the two eminent former officers of Lok Sabha. Late Shri M. N. Kaul was the first Secretary of Lok Sabha (1952-1964) and also a member of Rajya Sabha from 1966 to 1972 and Late Shri S.L. Shakdher was the successor of Shri Kaul to the Office of Secretary/Secretary-General of Lok Sabha (1964-1977), who later became the Chief Election Commissioner (1977 to 1982).

The editor of the Seventh Edition, Shri Anoop Mishra, is the Secretary-General of Lok Sabha. An erudite scholar and a distinguished civil servant, he has wide experience in governance.

Excerpts from Reviews of the Previous Editions

“This work gives a complete description of the nature and powers of the Indian parliament and of the procedure of Lok Sabha. The text is readable to a degree surprising in such a study and supported by a wealth of foot-notes and Appendices.”

(The Table, XXXV, London)

“This volume will undoubtedly be an authoritative handbook of Indian parliamentarians and others interested in Lok Sabha for generations to come.”

(Harvard Journal on Legislation, Vol. 6, No. 133)

“This is a timely publication. The book undoubtedly takes its place as a standard exposition of parliamentary procedure in India and will be indispensable to legislators as reliable guide through its mazes and complexities.”

(Bombay Law Reporter)

“This book is a standard one on the subject and may be referred to as an Indian authority on Practice and Procedure of Parliament.”

(The Hindu)

“An indispensable reference for legislators, scholars and students who need a comprehensive and detailed knowledge of the working of India’s legislature.”

(Hindustan Times)

“This work provokes a host of... thoughts and reactions, assisted by the clarity and straight forwardness of its presentation, which are faithfully preserved by the present editors from the earlier editions. It is a fitting tribute both to the formative role of its original authors and to a vibrant, vigorous parliamentary system... a true classic.”

(The Parliamentarian, Vol. LXXII No. 3 London)

“...A real treatise and a definitive reference work in its field... It is easy to consult, thanks to the clarity of the text, its structure which carries on the tradition of the previous editions and its indices by contents and by case. It is extremely useful for legislators, specialists and students as well as for interested readers.”
